The Rivoli presented a wealth of educational and semi-educational material, including as "A" and "B" numbers "Where the Clouds Come From" and "White Water and Windy Willie"—Bruce scenics from the Educational Films Corporation of America. The former presented scenes in Glacier Park, northwestern Montana. There was a wonderful view from the top of the third divide "looking into a land of mystery." And when the traveler had penetrated that land of mystery he came to a little lake, and "the place the clouds come from." Here he found dense groups of clouds that hung over the peaks of the mountains. In the quiet of the day they settled to rest at the feet of the mountains, but when the evening breezes came to chase them they flew back to the mountain peaks. This was a delightful number. "White Water and Windy Willie" was less interesting, but still entertaining. It presented a man who had aspired to make an aeroplane, but who had to content himself with the fashioning of an aero motorboat. The scenes of this picture, which contains considerable comedy in its sub-titles, take place on the Flathead River in Montana. The features of the Rivoli Animated Pictorial were an interesting bit from the Finley Nature Studies, showing the sand piper with its eggs and young, the eggs and young of the night hawk or bull bat, and the European partridge, and "Harvesting Natural Ice" at Lake Hopatcong. This latter subject was credited to the Natural Ice Association of America, 18 East 41st street, New York City, and is a fine illustration of how the great blocks of ice are made ready and transported to the 92,000-ton storehouse at Lake Hopatcong. Special interest also centered about the life studies of Rodin, the famous sculptor.

Interesting Educationals

One Industrial Subject, Two Topical, One Scenic, One Botanical, One Military, One Agricultural, and One Scientific Subject.

"Women in the World of Work"—(Paramount-Bray).

THE second of this series of interesting subjects appearing in the Paramount-Bray Pictograph will be found in Issue 105. It deals in an attractive way with the conversion of pine needles into useful articles. Mrs. Ida Kuhl Smith, of Brooklyn, seems to have been the pioneer of this art, and is shown in the picture with her pupils, manufacturing articles of beauty and endurance of the pine needles, which are made pliable by immersion in water. After being removed from the water they are bound together with colored raffia and woven into an infinite variety of pretty things. These articles retain the delightful fragrance of the pine. Close-ups of the weaving of the pine needles will be found useful to those who would follow the example set by Mrs. Smith.

"People and Their Pets"—(Paramount-Bray).

A short subject to be found in Pictograph 105 shows Royal Dixon, author and naturalist, with some of his pets. The wild red bird is seen flying about him in a totaly fearless manner. Then there is also the canary, which he is breeding for detective work in the trenches because of its susceptibility to the effects of poison gas.

"Magic For Home Use"—(Paramount-Bray).

The second of the demonstrations of how certain sleight-of-hand tricks are accomplished will be found in the 105th issue of Pictograph. It is fully as interesting as the first instalment of the subject and shows how garden seeds planted in the crown of a silk hat are reproduced in a few seconds of time in the shape of a posey of roses. It also explains a sleight-of-hand card trick, and a trick in which a certain number of pennies placed in a box mysteriously adds to its number when recounted.

"Along the Riviera"—(Pathe).

A tinted half-reel containing some magnificent views taken along that famous stretch of the Mediterranean coastline extending from Nice to Spezia. The hamlets and towns, beautiful hills and splendid bits of architecture, orange and lemon groves and cloudless skies combine to charm the observer.

"Watching Flowers Bloom"—(Pathe).

An attractive subject in which is shown the actual blossoming of the campanula, the larkspur and the petunia. The process by which the action of the blooming of the flower is shown is speeded up to 15,000 times faster than in the actual opening. The picture is tinted and forms a part of the reel on which "Along the Riviera" appears.

"American Arms"—(Pathe).

The change in firearms since early pioneer days is demonstrated in an interesting half-reel. Guns used during the Revolution, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War and others down to the present day are pictured. The various processes of loading the weapons are also shown.

"Harvesting Pineapples"—(Universal).

In the 58th release of the Screen Magazine will be found an interesting series of views photographed on the table lands of Hawaii, where large fields of pineapples are cultivated. Here pineapples by the millions are harvested by Chinese and native Hawaiians and are shipped to all parts of the world. The subject is well illustrated and presents the industry in detail from the preparation of the soil for planting to the slicing and placing of the ripe fruit in cans for shipment.

"X-Ray Examination of Teeth"—(Universal).

A series of views presenting X-Rays of the jaw bone in which abscesses have formed at the roots of teeth, jaw bone and teeth in normal condition and also affected with necrosis are shown in the 58th issue of the Screen Magazine. This subject has been treated in such a manner as to be enlightening to the thousands of persons who will view the magazine. Various truths in connection with the teeth and the keeping of them in good condition are told and illustrated.

A Message to Boys

Ten-Reel Production, Presented Under Auspices of Boy Scouts of America, Handled by Universal.

THE first public showings in America of Baden-Powell's ten-reel motion picture in which he personally appears, supported by clever juvenile English actors and his British Boy Scouts, will be made in New York theaters coincident with the big national campaign of the Boy Scouts of America, commenced February 8, for one week, and is being extended for one week longer by the Greater New York Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

"Boy Scouts to the Rescue, Or Aids of the Nation," the motion picture which has just arrived in this country from England, where it was produced under the personal supervision of Lieutenant-General Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, as a message to the boys of the world, is a dramatic story, cleverly introducing in its plot the work of the Boy Scouts and the training provided its members, enabling them to aid themselves, others and their country.

The picture will be shown in this country, under the auspices of the Boy Scouts of America. The distribution is being handled by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and will be part of a nation-wide drive to increase the membership of the Boy Scouts of America.

Of Interest to Astronomers

Clearly Photographed Illustration of Telescopes and Their Mechanism, Released by Educational Films Corporation of America.

THE Mount Wilson Solar Observatory with its wonderful telescopes is the subject of a 1,000-foot film, which is being released by the Educational Films Corporation of America. This observatory is situated at an altitude of 5,714 feet in the Sierra Madre Range of Southern California. A winding road nine miles in length leads up to it, over which we see weighty pieces of machinery being transported. The buildings in which the telescopes are housed is shown and also the machinery in operation which manipulates the dome of the observation tower and instruments. An interesting explanation, fully illustrated in close-ups of the mechanism of the telescope, its mirrors, and the method of polishing these mirrors, which, by the way, is a matter of years, is given. In addition to this there are also shown pictures photographed through the powerful lens of the telescope, of the Milky Way, two globular star clusters, the nebulae in the different constellations, Saturn, and other wonders of the skies. The film is one of great value in an educational way.

Metro-Drew Propaganda Film

Creditable Patriotic Number Reminds Us Once Again That We Should Knit Our Bit.

THE Metro-Drew comedy, "Help Wanted," is really a Red Cross propaganda film, and it is a good one. Besides containing those elements of refined comedy common to the pictures enacted by the Sidney Drews, it reminds us that this is no time for frivolity; it behooves us rather to take up our knitting needles and knit for the boys "over there." We have also discovered via this Drew comedy that if a mere man desires sincerely to be useful the knitting machine which turns out socks with joyous rapidity is always at hand for the willing worker. A full review of this picture will be found in our issue of February 16.

Items of Interest.

The seventh issue of Pathe's Argus Pictorial contains, among other things, a microscopic study of the amoeba, the smallest form of animal life. This is found in a drop of water and is magnified on the screen 30,000 times. There are also studies of the thrip and other minute insects found under garden leaves.

According to the February bulletin of the Affiliated Committees for Beter Films, the following feature films have been used satisfactorily for special programs in theaters: Artcraft—"A Modern Musketeer," "Rose of the World;" Metro—"Blue Jeans," "An American Widow;" Goldwyn—"The Cinderella Man;" Edison—"The Small Town Guy;" Paramount—"Son of His Father," "Tom Sawyer," "The Seven Swans," "His Mother's Boy," "The Fair Barbarian;" Fox—"Unknown 274;" Select Pictures—"Shirley Kaye;" Paralta—"Madame Who?" "A Man's Man;" Triangle—"Until They Get Me;" Universal—"My Little Boy," "The Scarlet Car," "Bucking Broadway;" Pathe—"Runaway Romany;" World—"The Volunteer."

Branches of the National Federation of College Women have been developing a plan for special better films performances, which illustrates how such entertainments may be made to contribute to the attainment of a number of desirable ends. The better films, patriotic, community welfare, and music committees share in the plan. The better films committee secures the co-operation of an exhibitor whose theater is recognized as being among the best in the community, by offering to give him special publicity if he will allow the organization to join forces with him on the night in the week on which his patronage is poorest. He is to give to the Red Cross the receipts above the maximum ordinarily received on that night. The committee selects through him a program that will have a patriotic character. A four-minute address on some subject of social importance is given by a woman well known in the community, and the music committee furnishes a good local singer to the program. The special performance is then advertised by the branch as being one at which good pictures may be seen. Although the plan has been in operation for only a few weeks, it is reported that the Red Cross has already gained to the extent of more than $3,000.

HE GOT IT RIGHT THE SECOND TIME.

While Goldwyn's screen version of "Thais" was being played at the Strand theater in Evansville, Ind., a woman patron telephoned to ask what was the bill for the day. It was morning and two negro porters were the only persons on duty. The following conversation ensued:

Patron—What is playing at the Strand today?

Porter—Mary Garden in "Them Is.'

Patron (indignant)—What?

Porter (after conferring with other porter)—I was mistaken, lady. The other fellow says it's Mary Garden in "They Is."

HOLMES TO APPEAR FOR RED CROSS.

Taylor Holmes will turn over to the American Red Cross all money given to him by managers of theaters in which he will appear during the next several months. An itinerary of Chicago theaters for these visits is now being laid out. Mr. Holmes will address the audiences during the showing of his George K. Spoor pictures.

As his hours in the studio are long, it was only when the Red Cross agreed to accept the money thus realized that Mr. Holmes decided to respond to the frequent request of the theater people for a personal appearance.

How It Is Done at the Strand

A Discussion of Methods Which Have Actually Been Worked Out Successfully.

By Harold Edel, Managing Director.

WHAT is the other fellow doing and how is he doing it? Mostly every exhibitor asks himself these questions. In the rush of business, however, he often neglects ascertaining this information. It is well worth the while of every manager to keep in personal touch with what the other fellow is doing. There is no better way to know what to do and what not to do than by seeing the results of others. When seeing another manager's show, however, the exhibitor should not do so with the idea of seeing how much he can copy the successful ideas of another. Rather he should go with the idea of carefully viewing the effects of different things so that he can see what NOT to do at his own theater.

If the other fellow should have a good idea, don't be satisfied with merely copying it and letting it go at that. If you see an idea that has proved successful, try to use that idea merely as a basis for something better to present in your theater. For instance, if you should drop into a theater and decide that singers are just the thing to make your show a better entertainment, do not stop wih the installation of the singers. Figure out lighting effects, drop curtains, etc., to put over these singers and their songs in a new manner.

It is no particularly easy task to criticise your own bill. Some of your pet ideas in your own theater may prove ineffective, and yet to you they appear to be "great stuff." By seeing these ideas worked out in another theater, you are more susceptible to their psychological effect, and if there is a flaw you will readily notice it. You are also in a position to judge how new ideas work out in other houses, thus ascertaining what you should not do.

Visiting other theaters is one of the best ways of curing yourself of habits. We are all creatures of habit, and it is no easy task to overcome this condition, even in the show business, where the art of doing things different brings the greatest success, as a rule. For instance, as I sat in a fair sized theater in 125th street recently, I noticed that the vocal numbers were announced only on the left hand side of the stage by means of a handsome sign. Strange as it may seem, there was no announcement made from the right hand side of the stage. The singers entered and made their exit and rendered their numbers all on the left hand side of the rostrum. It then struck me that I myself had fallen into the habit of having my artists enter and exit from the left. I could have viewed my own show every day in the week and the chances are that this would never have occurred to me. It was right and proper that they should enter and exit left. However, the fact that this theater only made the announcement from one side gave me food for thought. At my very next show I had my singers enter from the right hand side of the stage and to my great surprise received several comments on the idea of getting away from the cut and dried methods. This was a very small matter and yet the fact that several persons took the trouble to mention it to me provided that it was appreciated.

In another theater one evening recently there appeared a vocal artist with a beautiful voice which was evidently achieved only after diligent training. In the final rendition of her song the curtain was slowly lowered and her voice became softer to give the impression that she was walking away. Yet she stood still in the center of the stage. With the final few bars the curtain was down and it was only then that the impression that she was walking away could be had. Why not have her actually walk off the stage and around the back as far as possible, I thought? Why keep her standing in one spot, thus conflicting the optical impression with the imaginative. The following week I presented a duet of girl artists. Toward the conclusion of their number the stage was gradually darkened as they slowly walked off. Thus the eyes of the audience actually saw them walking away, and as soon as they were out of sight the imagination was given logical opportunity to continue the trend of the thought of their continuing to walk into the far distance. With both light and sound diminishing, the desired effect of the song was obtained. The singers walked as far back stage as possible, thus actually complying with the laws of nature. When they were as far back as they could go they continued to lower their voices until with complete darkness on the stage the song died down to a murmur. The applause was tremendous at every performance and here I had received another idea through the ineffectiveness of another.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Window Work.

EVIDENTLY some Exhibitor has been reading the funny papers again for he writes that his town is so small that he cannot get windows enough to use all the window suggestions offered in the new advertising aids department. In the first place, it is not supposed that he will use all of the suggestions, because it is not humanly possible to use all of the releases for any one week in a single house. In the second place he probably will use none, because he doesn't realize what good advertising he can get for practically nothing. Window display costs nothing but a little persuasive argument. It should not cost much of that, for most storekeepers are alert to the value of a window attractor and will be glad to work in with Exhibitors. Many storekeepers pay a small sum weekly for the news pictures they paste on their windows. They do this because they know that something not germane to their display will attract ten times the attention that their own wares will command, and get attention to their sales articles to boot. They know that the motion picture excites widespread interest. If they can hook up their own display with the local theatre, most of them will be glad to do so and say thanks. If they are not ready to add the thanks, they will, after a trial. Take the book stores, for instance. Generally they have boods and toys and the usual run of stationer's novelties to sell. If they have one or more copies of a book done into a play, the average store man is intelligent enough to give space to a picture of the star who will appear in the screen version of that book. He does not have to get a whole window display of "Les Miserables," for example, to hook up. If he has a single copy, he can put this in front of the portrait or scene photographs, with a card telling that he had the book and you have the play. He will probably sell a few copies of the book on order, and he assuredly will attract attention to whatever else he has in the same window. It is the same way with the dry goods stores. They may have a handsome gown that is not like that in "The Gown of Destiny," yet handsome enough to be used with a card reading, "This is not the Gown of Destiny, but it might work as great wonders. The Gown of Destiny made two women happy, won a battle and saved from death the father of its creator. See the play at the Grand all this week." That gown now has a personality. It is something more than a dress the merchant is trying to sell. It is a garment of rich possibilities. It is regarded with greater respect. Probably the merchant will sell other dresses through the play, because it teaches the lesson that pretty clothes win masculine hearts. Both house and store profit from the display and the sole cost is the card lettered for the legend. All of this has been treated in this department time and again, and will be used again and again in the future. Meantime, if you see a chance to get into a window do so, whether you find the suggestion in stunts or not. Until your house is the center and circumference of the universe, you will profit by spreading your advertising as widely as your house will draw and not concentrating your entire attention upon the lobby. Advertising is not always something that takes money. It is more often something that takes brains and hustle. You can have valuable window displays at no cost every week, if only you'll take up the trouble to think of something that will link the store's goods to the entertainment you have to sell. If you had to pay $25 for the rental of a window, and you knew it would bring you $50 worth of business, you would do it. Then why not take a chance on something that costs nothing more than the slight expense of a card and its lettering? Don't despise it because it is cheap. Value it the more on that account.

A New V. P.

The Columbia Theater, Phoenix, Arizona, offers a new idea in vest pocket programs with a card 2¼ by 4 inches. It is printed on one side with the cut of some star and on the other is headed.

Pocket Memorandum
COLUMBIA THEATER
Lest you forget, we show

There follows eleven attractions, covering two months. The card is small enough for a woman's pocket book as well as a man's vest, it is clear and distinct and will be carried on account of the portrait. It is the smallest calendar card to date, but it is not precisely that, since it lists only the featured attractions. Still eleven titles and three "coming" on a card this size is enough to gain space in the Hall of Fame.

Weak Combination.

The Aurora Theater, Philadelphia, should have a talk with its printer. He is about as bad as they come. The program is printed in what is probably meant to be red and blue. The blue is a strong ink, but the red is thin and looks as though it had been put into a fountain not completely cleaned of black ink, or perhaps dirty rollers were used. To make things worse, the printing is done inside a flossy little frame that is too light where it is not filled in with dirt, and what little chance the color had is lost. The cost of the second printing is completely wasted and instead of getting a better effect, the reverse is true. The second color actually hurts the job. In using two colors, unless the colors blend well or are strongly opposed, it would be better to use but one. A strong red and weak blue or the reverse is worse than a weak blue or a weak red with no standard of comparison.

In Combination.

Gordon F. (100%) Fullerton sends in a sample of the scheme tried by the Greater Theaters Company, of Seattle, on Thanksgiving Day. He does not report on the success of the scheme. It is a four seventeens, listing the three houses owned by the Jensen and von Herbert interests there. Usually the Liberty alone takes as much space, if not more, but the holiday business is pretty certain, and about all that is necessary is to tell them what shows are in town. It is supposed to be poor policy to advertise more than one attraction in a space, and it is, if the stuff is all jumbled together, but here each house takes what would amount in some instances to a good display and then builds it up with white space, helping each of the advertisements with the extra space the other two bring. The same lay-out could be used to advantage with three changes for a week, but we gather that it was used only through the holiday week, since it is not repeated in later samples. The fullerton advertising is varied and seldom repeats too closely, and for once or twice this idea is novel and good. That not more than one thing should be advertised at one time is an excellent general rule, but it is no more hard and fast than any other rule. All rules are made to be broken if, by breaking them, better results accrue, and the real test of advertising skill is to know when to run by rule and when to fracture the rule in order to gain a better effect. It is not possible to say that a certain thing cannot be done. It is possible to say that, as a rule it should not be done, and the intelligent advertiser knows when to break the rule.

Inside Ears.

"Ears," or side tabs, are familiar on the title pages of the daily papers and some programs, but the Mystic Theater, Petaluma, Calif., uses what might be termed "inside ears" to advertise the Hill Opera House, which runs pictures but four days a week. The full size of the sheet is only 6 x 7, folded once, to give four pages, yet the house manages to give room to the sister enterprise by running one two-day title across the top and a similar strip across the bottom for the other two days. The same idea could be used in advance work for some extra big feature, for the Mystic gets ample display for its own needs through clean make-up.

Worked It Different.

The Arcade Theater, Paducah, Ky., a vaudeville and picture house, swung the war tax in a different manner from others. They ran along for a few weeks, paying the impost itself, then announced, through the medium of a page advertisement, that they could not keep it up, and would be compelled to advance prices by five cents on the four days they show vaudeville. They come out with a frank discussion of the reason, and do not blame the admission tax alone for the extra charge, but tell just why it is necessary to charge five cents more instead of merely the admission tax. In most instances we believe the best results came from a straight admission tax increase, but by delaying the advance for a little the Arcade gets the whole nickel with no hard feelings on the part of the patrons. In his program, Mr. Wheelis announces himself "and the employees who have helped to make the Arcade the Brightest Spot on Broadway." An announcement like that certainly does not have a dampening effect upon the loyalty of the staff. Too many managements regard their assistants merely as hired hands. Put it up to them to work for something more than the money they get Saturday night, and you'll have more money for the bank after you've paid them off.

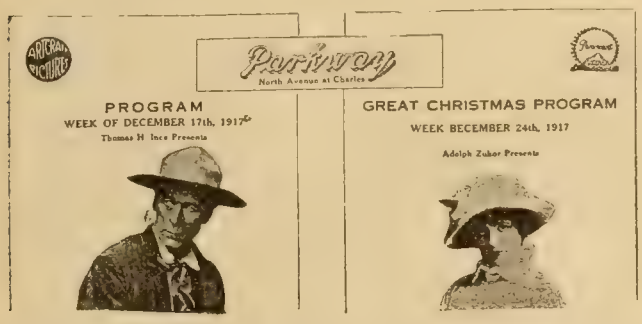
Neatly Done.

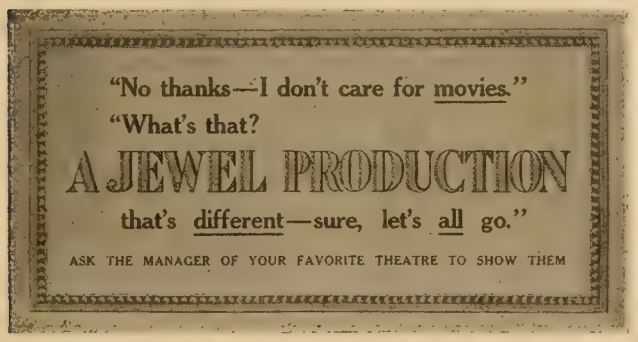
This upper half of the program of the Parkway, Baltimore, Md., shows a neat use of rule work, a hairline rule being used. It is the top of the inside pages of a four page folder, working two weeks. The name of the house, paneled between the two pages is not only ornamental, but it identifies the sheet. You do not have to look on the back to see what it is. This is a mistake too many program publishers make. They take it for granted that the name, appearing once on the front page, is established. It cannot be shown too often within reason.



But rule work, unless it is neatly done, is unsightly in the extreme, and unless you are assured a good lock-up, it will be better to look to something that does not require such nicety of justification. It is nothing that a qualified printer cannot do, but it is something that a lazy printer often will not do.

Car Cards.

Here is a better-than-usual car card from Jewel. In the original the lettering is in brown on a buff background, harmonious and yet sufficiently contrasty to attract. But the color scheme is nothing without a



"No thanks—I don't care for movies."
"What's that?
A JEWEL PRODUCTION
that's different—sure, let's all go."
ASK THE MANAGER OF YOUR FAVORITE THEATRE TO SHOW THEM

proper argument, just as a good voice is valueless, save as it gives expression to good ideas. Note that this legend does not baldly proclaim that "Jewel photoplays are the best." No one would be interested in that. Instead, the impression is created that, of course, you think the Jewel plays are in a class by themselves. It does not arouse your antagonism by seeking to compel you to agree. It takes it for granted that you are in agreement, and therefore you are more apt to be willing to assent. Consciously or otherwise, you accept the suggestion that that is what you think, and you accept it as your own thought and not the suggestion of the advertiser. On the surface there is nothing strikingly brilliant in the phrase. It does not impress you as being particularly clever. And that is precisely the reason why it is clever.

Unusual.

Herbert D. Todd, publicity man for the Macon Photo Theaters Co., of Macon, Ga., operating the Capitol, Princess, Palace and Macon theaters, sends in a late copy of his Princapalace, publication of which was interrupted for a time but is now resumed. It is an eight pager on hard paper with a tint block for the cover and a type dress and general appearance of a high-class magazine. Mr. Todd wants to know what we think of it. He knows darned well what we ought to think. It's more than merely good. We note that he gets his tint block effect by a very fine stipple, which gives him the tint and the color at the same impression. It's worth remembering if you go in for two color work. The stipple is so fine that it looks like the tint of the positive color and not the color itself. A publication like that costs money, but it gives the suggestion of class that will make for patronage among those who might not be attracted by paper or even newspaper advertising. And it is worth the price if it can do this.

Programs Cheaper.

J. O. Merchant, of the Isis, Alice, Texas, writes that he finds programs cheaper and better than heralds, and he uses Hennegan covers, at that, which boosts the price slightly. He is handicapped by a small town printing equipment that does not give him a very good type display, but the printer might have done much worse. At least he errs on the safe side and leaves the program spaces readable instead of stuffing them with type too large. But a single page is used for the program, the second and fourth being sold to local advertisers. We think that Mr. Merchant can get just as much from the four advertisers if he puts them all on a single page, and that will let him use some house talk. Mr. Merchant writes that he has subscribed for the Cahill-Igoe Screen Opinions, taking the tip from this department, and finds it very handy for the man who has not the time to prepare his own copy. He will find our new department handier still, we think, but Screen Opinions is a useful supplement.

A Threat.

If Larry Hayes keeps on improving his Colonial Clarion, we'll clip some of his stuff to replace Bill Wright's lost joke department.

With Enclosure.

One of the signs of the times is the enclosure in a recent program from the City Theater, Newark, N. J. Accompanying the program is an appeal for girls to work in a large manufacturing plant, with the promise of a bonus for steady attendance. And it advertises for "girls between the ages of 16 and 40." That flattery should fill the pay roll. The City, just now, is using a tasteful combination of lemon and brown, and the brown ink shows to better advantage than on a deeper yellow. And here is a suggestion for a heading. The mask is a Mission Toy costing twenty cents and the two twentieth century lions cost fifty cents the pair. They work up as well as some drawn designs. You have a choice of hundreds of designs in sizes to suit. Borrow your printer's type book some time and look over the back pages. It will be worth your while.

Fine for the Kiddies.

The stunt has been worked before, but it is always a good idea when there is a picture that appeals particularly to the kiddies, to make certain that they all see it. George A. Bleich, of the Grand and Empress, Owensboro, Ky., has "Jack and the Beanstalk," and in addition to the usual advertising he ran this on the same page, but in the shape of a two threes at the bottom of the page:

Don't Cry "Kiddo" If You Can't Rustle the Price to See
"JACK AND THE BEANSTALK"
At the Empress Friday

> If you find that you can't get a dime for this big picture come and see me about it and I will sneak you in some way without anybody knowing a thing about it. Try and rake up two nickels —try hard. Then, if you find you can't, come on around anyhow. But don't come any time except during the afternoon of Friday. I'll be watching for you. —MR. BLEICH.
> P S.—Bring little baby brother or sister along, too, if you have one.

That's good advertising, no matter from what angle you look at it. And in a late issue of the local paper there is an editorial on the falling theatrical business and an analysis of the causes that resolves itself into a matter of prices too high. It winds up with:

> The public needs amusement, particularly in war time. The movies are providing excellent entertainment at low prices, and contributing immensely to the patriotic spirit of the country, and Owensboro is fortunate in being provided with the cream of the film productions at prices that everyone can afford.

Coming in the editorial column it is a tribute that will do the house far greater good than anything the management could have printed.

Bully.

We don't know whether this is original or lifted from the company press work, but we take it from the program of the Fenray, Martin's Ferry, Ohio. If Mr. Woods wrote this, he declares in on the Hall of Fame when we build one. It can be changed to fit any picture or pictures in general:

YOUR DREAM HAS COME TRUE AT LAST!

Were you ever a child?

Do you remember how you used to sit by the fire on cold, stormy nights at the feet of Someone who read to you from a big flat book?

She told you all the marvels of the world, and all the dreams that are too happy to be realized in the world. And you listened, rapt.

And when She would turn a page you would jump to your feet at once, and put your hand on Her arm, and ask in your child voice: "May I see the picture?"

Then She would show you a wonderful thing of red and yellow and green and blue, which contained all the fairies of the universe, and the giants and dragons and dwarfs. And you would look at it lovingly, and whisper to Her: "I wish there was a picture of the whole story, don't you?"

Like the hero in the story to which you listened, your wish has now come true.

You can see a picture of the whole story—a picture filled with all the elusive charm and mystery which pervaded the reading of the story on that cold, stormy night. The master mind of William Fox has discovered that you wanted to see this tale, and has transplanted it to the realm of screenland.

Jack, the Princess, the Giant, even the titanic beanstalk are there before you, tangible things.

You can see "Jack and the Beanstalk" in the being at this theater on Thursday of this week—de luxe day.

But it seems unnecessary to ask if you were ever a child. Most persons are willing to admit guilt on that point. It would read better if it began,"Do you remember, when you were a child, how you used to sit by the fire, &c."

Good News.

Edward L. Hyman, manager of the Victoria, Buffalo, N. Y., has been good enough to arrange for a special program for us, printed on white paper. The Victoria uses many novel kinks in make-up, but it has been impossible to reproduce on account of the color scheme, and it is not always possible to describe the ideas. We reproduce a couple of the pages. On the right you will note the boxed date to which we recently referred. We do not like the Cloister type, but the idea otherwise is unusually good, and the general layout is something your own printer should see. It may not help him much, but it will if he knows his game.

Wrong Idea.

Sam W. B. Cohn, who follows Ruff as manager of the Liberty, Spokane, sends in a folder on the new house policy. On the back page appears this phrase:

> No longer will you have to pay two-bits for Doug Fairbanks or any other star—if the management can help it. There will be, however, an instance or two where an advance admission is forced upon us, as in the case of "Intolerance."

We think this is a mighty bad time to start cutting prices. If Spokane people won't pay a quarter to see the stars, there is not much use trying to do business at fifteen cents. And it will be harder getting that ten cents back again than it was raising to it in the first place. Much better is a series of three stories he planted in one of the afternoon papers, telling of the work the pictures do for the public. The last of the three, telling of the various ways in which the pictures help in the war, will do real good.

Premium Pennies.

To meet a temporary shortage in pennies, the Rowland and Clark theaters, Pittsburgh, recently offered a free admission (including the tax) to any person bringing fifty pennies to the theater—and a half dollar for the pennies, as well. Can't you see the kiddies burglarizing their toy banks? And their Film Forecast prints their service flag with the names of those who have gone to the colors. It is a graceful act.

Straight Talk.

Instead of worrying about the tax and letting your patrons see you worry, look for the bright side of things and show them that. W. S. McLaren has some excellent talk in his house organ for his Jackson (Mich.) houses that reads:

ONE DOLLAR AND TWENTY CENTS.

> Do you recall the time, not long ago either, when big productions were going in for a New York run at prices from twenty-five cents to a dollar? You read about them in the magazines or in the newspapers and no doubt wished that your local theater would give you productions of that size. You even told yourself that you'd be willing to pay a little more, didn't you now? All right. Here they are. Last week you saw "The Honor System." Wasn't it worth twice or even three times the admission price asked? Of course it was. And this week—help yourself to any of the shows. You'll find them all worth while. That's what we are doing. Getting all the big worth while pictures and showing them to you at a set admission price—15c and 20c. Twenty cents is the highest price asked at any time. In these days of conservation when you can see a dollar show for twenty cents—well, it's worth while, isn't it? Get the Majestic habit. Always worth while and always the same price.

That's the way to talk to a man who is grouching about the two cent tax. Tell him he is getting more for his money than New York is. Then he will forget about the tax in his exultation. And that back page miniature paper is going stronger than ever. Lately it told of a country exhibitor who sent back "Barbary Sheep" because his patrons did not care for animal pictures.

Good Work.

We take this from "The Movie Fan," the house organ of the Swanson enterprises in Greeley, Colorado:

> The management of the Sterling and Rex theaters will duplicate the exact war tax at both theaters Wednesday as a gift to the Y. M. C. A. war service fund. The war tax amounts to a neat sum each day, but it, of course, all goes to the Government. For every cent you pay as war tax at each theater, the management will add a like amount to the Y. M. C. A. contribution.

It is not only a good idea, but we like the choice of the beneficiary. We believe that more of the money sent the Y. M. C. A. actually is spent for the soldier than any other of the numerous funds. Little is diverted for costly executive expenses. It goes where it works. And hooking the idea up with the war tax is an inspiration. It emphasizes the fact that the war tax is doing its work. It's good management.

With Poetry.

E. Richardson, assistant manager of the Orpheum, Clarksburg, W. Va., sends in a special Christmas program he got out, and adds that he marks each special season with a distinctive program. The program is a ready-print and is well laid out, but Mr. Richardson exercises an editor's privilege of printing his own poetry and we would point out that "realm" does not rhyme with "film." Outside of the poetry, Mr. Richardson has produced a gay little issue that certainly has its value. It pays to mark all special seasons and then whoop up for it.

Get Ready Now.

This year Memorial Day will mean more to most persons than it has since the Spanish-American War and, perhaps, even more than it did then. Get ready to do your share, and if there is no movement already started in your town, be the man to go to the newspapers and enlist their co-operation in starting something. Begin now and you'll have plenty of time to do things right.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

4. Henry meets Lawyer Denture in the library and completes the purchase, paying $2,000 for her; he goes to meet Cassy in the garden; tells her he loves her and will befriend and protect her; Cassy confesses her love and goes with him willingly.

5. Henry is noble and kind and loves Cassy dearly; he installs her as the mistress of his beautiful home; gives her servants, dresses, horses, etc.

6. Cassy becomes enceinte; broods over it and seeks an interview with Henry in which she begs him to marry her and legitimatize the issue; Henry kindly but firmly reviews the situation and points out the irreconcilable conventions; he convinces her that while he cannot give her the name of wife, he will remain true and that their relation is a marriage in the sight of God anyhow.

7. Her son is born; Henry loves the child dearly; they live happily until Gerald, Henry's cousin, comes to visit them.

8. Gerald immediately covets Cassy; her instincts are instantly in wild opposition; but, to please Henry, she is considerate of Gerald's comfort; Gerald takes mean advantage of his opportunities, and fills her with a vague and restless fear.

9. Gerald finally learns that Cassy cannot be beguiled nor won; he more than ever desires her and determines to possess her, and to accomplish this he plans the ruin of Henry.

10. Gerald inveigles Henry into night absences, and Cassy suffers in fear.

11. He teaches Henry the mysteries and fascinations of the gambling table and Cassy feels the pinch of shortened funds.

12. He fixes upon Henry the wine bibbing habit and thereafter Cassy ministers to maudlin lapses, in sorrow and grief.

13. The climax to Gerald's perfidious campaign lands Henry in the arms of a fascinating intriguing woman, and Cassy senses a change of heart. She complains not, nor does Henry complain; but she knows his love is gone and her heart begins to break.

14. The horror which puts the blight upon Cassy's soul comes when Henry sells her and the boy to Gerald—to satisfy gaming debts!

15. Henry kisses her and the child with yearning tenderness and goes away ostensibly upon business; Cassy, though silent, is not deceived, and awaits the unknown but fully expected blow. It comes when Gerald comes in and shows her his bill of sale; Cassy is dazed but fights like an enraged tigress, but—to no avail.

16. Gerald takes them to his plantation; he tells Cassy, in brutal triumph, how he had planned it all; and quells her rebellion by threatening to sell the boy and send him away.

17. You can do anything with a woman, while you hold her child.

18. With servile patience, Cassy submits to brutality and harshness, in the vain hope that it will keep her boy, but in the privacy of his library Gerald sells the boy to a slaver called Butler, and takes Cassy driving to give Butler a chance to spirit the boy away.

19. When Cassy returns she misses the boy and Gerald discloses the sale and shows her the blood money. Cassy becomes an infuriated animal; her fierceness frightens Gerald; he masters her by telling her he still has control over the boy and will order him killed if she does not behave.

20. One day Cassy approaches the calaboose and her little son breaks away from his keepers and seizes her skirts, begging her to save him from the knout; Cassy pleads but they tear the boy away and take him into the whipping stable; Cassy is helpless; she runs wildly back to Gerald and begs him to save the boy; Gerald is callous, and contemptuous, and brutally declines to interfere. Cassy sees a bowie knife on the table; she makes a ferocious attempt to kill Gerald with it; he succeeds in striking her senseless.

21. Gerald is now afraid of Cassy; her manner is that of a wild caged fierce animal; he grooms her for sale; men come and are repelled by her gloomy and fierce aspect; but finally a planter named Stuart buys her cheaply and takes her to his home.

22. Stewart is kind; he draws her story from her; she is deeply grateful for his consideration; she bears him a son; when it is two weeks old she gives it laudanum and watches it die, kissing it with the pangs of suffering motherhood, yet gazing in exultation for that thus the babe escapes slavery. Stuart dies and Cassy is again sold.

23. Simon Legree, one of the most brutal and savage and hated slave owners of the South, buys her.

24. Cassy's human heart is dead; there lives in her only a fierce wild untamed thing, that blazes from her eyes. Her uncanny courage and biting scorn imbues Legree with a superstititous fear, yet he is fascinated by her wild beauty and untamed spirit and will not part with her.

25. Legree is brutal to her, but Cassy is utterly void of fear; the seems to court rather than to avoid death; and Legree does not yet dare to have her flogged. He orders her into the cotton fields with the other slaves, and she goes in a scornful, contemptuous manner, supremely careless of what may happen to her.

26. An incident of the cotton fields serves Cassy importantly at a later time. Lucy is exhausted; Tom aids her by putting his cotton into her basket; Cassy warns Tom he will be beaten; overseer Sambo sees Tom helping Lucy and reports to Legree; at the weighing of the baskets Legree declares Lucy's basket to be under weight and orders Tom to beat her; he refuses; and is himself beaten half to death; Cassy sneaks into Tom and ministers to him; she sees a little leather bag tied around his neck; Tom shows her the contents; a silver dollar, which he explains was given him by the son of his beloved first master; a long spiral curl of hair, which he explains was given him by Eva, his beloved little mistress, as she lay on her death bed; reverently Cassy replaces the articles and puts the loop back over his neck.

27. That night Sambo finds the Voodoo bag on Tom's bleeding chest; the frightened overseer takes it headlong to Legree; Legree tears it open; the silver dollar falls and rolls away; the long clinging curl winds itself around Legree's forefinger, and he yells in terror; he tears the curl loose in violent haste, as though it burnt him, and cast it into the fire, disclosing a terror beyond belief.

28. Cassy sees him do these things and she understands the reasons.

29. That night in his bedroom Legree is obsessed with uneasy haunting fear, he recalls that just such a curl wound itself around that same finger, as it fell from a letter from his sister announcing his mother's death, and that this came from his mother's head; he recalls the scathing arraignment in that letter, lashing him for his brutal neglect and criminal robbery; and again he recalls the superstitious fear he suffered when his sister's letter blared the fact that this curl wound wind itself around his neck and strangle him—dead!

30. Legree cannot stand it; he jumps up and goes downstairs; calls in his black overseers and commands them to stay with him; they carouse in a wild drunken orgy. Cassy views it through a window from the outside; and smiles bitterly and contemptuously, as she understands.

31. Thereafter Cassy plays upon this fear; it is to be the basis of her great plan for escape. She campaigns to make Legree afraid of the garret.

32. She calls his attention to strange noises in the garret and makes him believe it is haunted; by moving her own room away from it and other subtle insinuations, she fills him so full of fear of the garret that he will not approach the stairs.

33. Taking Emmeline, a young mulatto girl, into her confidence, Cassy then begins to cautiously stock the garret with food; crouching beneath the slanting shingle roof, they complete their plans for escape. They make up two small bundles and sneak out through the quarters, taking care, however, that they are seen. Just exactly as Cassy had cunningly promised, they are immediately reported to Legree as runaways.

34. The girls enter the swamp just as Legree runs up shouting commands to halt; they continue and penetrate deeply into the swamp, and Legree is not able to follow; again Cassy's cunning foresight is verified, for Legree, believing them to be safe in the swamp, returns to quarters to organize a posse for pursuit; during the time the runaways enter the shallow creek, thereby breaking the scent, and return to the house by a back way.

35. The house is empty; Cassy takes a key from Legree's coat pocket and opens his desk; she takes a roll of money; then she and Emmeline takes to the garret, where through a knot hole under the eaves they watch the preparations of men and dogs for the hunt; they see the start; and they see the dispirited return, which, of course, is bootless.

36. Cassy begins a campaign to terrorize Legree.

37. She puts things on the stairs, to which is attached a black thread; when Legree approaches she overturns them, and they crash down to his feet.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

An Explanation.

W. H. Shephard, Davenport, Washington, explains certain things as follows:

> Have been operating more or less for the past five years. One of Spokane's best operators turned his first crank while working under me. I do not consider myself the "best ever," but do have faith to believe I can project as good a picture as the best, and a lot better than some whose work I have viewed. Have always been interested in the revolving shutter problem, and have myself done quite a little experimenting with shutters, with varying success. Have just read "Interesting Experiments" in December 15 issue. It listened good to me. I would like to give my views as to why shutter A gave better results than shutter B, without claiming to have solved the problem. Simply want your opinion as to whether I have or not.
> First, there is some difference in width of light openings in the shutters, B having three openings all the same, while A has one of 35 degrees and two of 60, the 3-inch space coming between the two 5-inch blades. Now here is my "big idea." As B shutter revolves there are three flashes of light, all the same width, with two dark periods of equal duration and one of longer duration than either the light periods or the other dark periods. This unbalances things to such an extent and in such way that there is bound to be some flicker at normal speeds. Shutter A has two equal periods of light and two periods of darkness, the periods of light and darkness being the same. On one side of the shutter is a very wide blade and directly opposite it an opening a little less than half the width of the wide blade. My theory is that the two 60 degree blades and the two 60 degree openings balance each other perfectly, and that the narrow opening directly opposite the wide blade acts to balance its effect by splitting it up.
> I am a very poor hand to explain my ideas on paper. If I had you here I could make you understand my idea better. Might add that I recently constructed a dissolver and installed it in my "office." Friend manager did not think much of it at first, but has changed his mind. Have just received a set of "Hawkins."

I see your point. That the narrow opening, being exactly opposite the center of the wide blade, acts to split up the effect of the wide blade. And maybe you are right. It does not look unreasonable to me. Anyhow the theory is worth consideration. Come again, neighbor. The latch-string is always on the outside for men with ideas.

Better Late Than Never.

Under date December 15 we received, from Harry K. Lucas, Atlanta, Georigia's live wire supply dealer, the following. We are late in giving it publicity, but 'tis said that it were better to be unpunctual than not to arrive at all, so here goes in the doing of justice to Friend Lucas:

> Dear Mr Richardson: You are earnestly requested to attend the opening of our new miniature demonstration theater, the Lucas Baby Grand, Friday evening, December 21. This little theater, seating 40, is conceded to be one of the most complete of its kind in existence. It is on the ground floor of our building, and is for the convenience of local film exchanges, affording opportunity for demonstrating weekly releases to prospective customers under the most inviting conditions. A "dutch lunch" will be served at ten thirty.

Yea verily, I said it before. Lucas is one live wire. Grass groweth not under his pedal extremeties, nor do his joints get rusty from inaction. When in Atlanta and desirous of locating Harry K. Lucas, just look for a cloud of agitated dust, and in its exact geographical center Harry K. will be found. Sorry I was unable to attend, Brother Lucas. Hope you hadda bully good time, and that the Baby Grand has proven the success it ought to be.

Hallberg Voltage Regulator for Mazda Lamp Projection.

The United Theater Equipment Company, acting as distributors in the U. S. and Canada for the Hallberg appliances, have placed on the market a complete and remarkably compact motor generator equipment for use with Mazda "C" projection lamps. A glance at the picture will show how the thing looks, and how it is connected to 110 volt direct current supply lines. As I remember it, the whole motor generator occupies but little more than one square foot of floor space, and is correspondingly modest as to height. The Tungsten filament (Mazda) lamp operates at 30 volts, and requires exactly 20 amperes. The motor receives its supply direct from the lines, through (if the supply be 110 volts) six ampere fuses. If the line voltage is 220, then 3 ampere fuses are large enough. There need be no switch between the generator and lamp, therefore it is quite practical to use the machine table switch as a line switch to control the motor. There is, of course, a starting box, which automatically resets itself for another start when the switch is pulled to stop the motor. To start the lamp we merely close the line switch, shove the lever of the starting box over slowly and—there you are. To extinguish the lamp, just pull the switch open. An installation of these devices may be seen at the exhibition rooms of the Universal Manufacturing Company, 1600 Broadway, New York City. An ammeter can be had with the outfit, at a separate charge. I would by all means advise its purchase. The machine runs very smoothly and I see no reason why it will not "deliver the goods."

HALLBERG MOTOR GENERATOR FOR MAZDA "C" PROJECTOR LAMP

A Two Thousand Dollar Projector.

Well, men, we have been calling for a high-priced, high-class projector for quite some time, yea, verily for lo these many years. And that demand seems about to be realized, for the American Standard Motion Picture Machine Company has completed and is about ready to place on the market a projection machine which it is expected will retail for about $1,200 for the single machine or $1,800 to $2,000 for the double projector. The machine will be made single or double, and will have very many new and unique features, all of which will be described in detail in good time. It is to be known as the "Robin" projector and is, as I understand the matter, the invention of J. E. Robin, formerly connected with the Precision Machine Company, later with the Baird Company, and still later and now connected with the American Standard. I have given the new machine a hasty look-over. Its design is radically different from anything now on the market. It has but one lamphouse, which is stationary—does not slide sidewise—but has (in the double design) two mechanisms, which switch places with each other by swinging around, the action of swinging automatically stopping the driving motor, disengaging it from the used machine, reversing its direction, connecting it with the machine coming into action and starting it. Sounds complicated but really is quite simple. It uses very large upper and lower sprockets. Star and cam 5.5 to one movement. Has shutter either between condenser and film, or in front of objective, at will of operator, with three available and easily-switched shutter systems, including the 1½, the ordinary and two-shutters-revolving-in-opposite directions. The operator may use either he chooses, at will, substitution of one for the other being but the matter of a few months' time. The machine is built in units. It is very massive. I watched it project a steady picture at very high speed, with but very slight tension. I will have more to say when I have gone over the new projector carefully. Meanwhile, Mr. Robin is certainly to be congratulated on his achievement, the more especially that he vows, asserts, affirms and swears (it was necessary to do all that to make me believe it) he designed the machine completely, all by his lonesome, and completed the first model in five months' time.

Machine Runs Hard.

Lee Whitaker, Fillmore, California, orders a handbook and says:

> Am operating a Power's Six, and have trouble with it running hard. Have overhauled it, but there is no improvement. Can you suggest what may be the seat of the trouble? Is the takeup device on the Power's 6-B adaptable for the machine I have? I own a set of Hawkins and find them to be very handy. What other books would you recommend?

With the third edition of the handbook and Hawkins you are pretty well equipped for the present. When you have absorbed what you can get from those books it will be time enough to look for others. Books of that kind are not merely to read and look at. They are to STUDY. There are few others having any large value to the operator. As to the machine running hard, why it might be due to any one of a number of things, or to a combination of several. First see if the machine runs hard without the film in. If it is O. K. without a film, then examine tension and test film to see where the strain is; also run a few feet with takeup belt off. If machine runs same with film in or out, then with machine standing still, gently rock all gears back and forth, one at a time, until you find one which binds. If all gears rock easily, then see to it that the intermittent is not set up tight enough to bind. It is also quite possible that the automatic fire shutter governor is the seat of the trouble. In this connection see instruction No. 6, page 493 of handbook. Very likely springs 741, plate 8, page 506, have become weakened. This trouble will be indicated by the automatic fire shutter coming up too soon, and remaining up against considerable effort with the finger to push it down when the machine is running at speed. Remedy: new springs, or stretch the old ones. I would also refer you to instructions 22 and 23, page 499. Sometimes the cause for a hard-running machine is found in the toggle gear. Usually, however, where this is the case the machine will run harder when the framing lever is central than when clear up or down. The setting of shutter shaft collar 638, plate 4, page 500 of the handbook, up too close, so that it binds on the casting will make the machine run hard. The binding of the shutter shaft in its bearings by tightening up screw holding hook at lower side of revolving shuter shaft supporting bracket (733, plate 5, page 502 of the handbook) while upper part of bracket is not shoved clear in, into place, is quite possible, and you must remember that it requires very little binding in high speed parts to make your machine run hard. I think that in one of the foregoing you will find the seat of your trouble. Incidentally, are you using good oil? DON'T use 3-In-One or sewing machine oil. See general instruction No. 1, page 457 of handbook.

Dry Film.

William M. Grew, Oakland, California, has some old film which is drying up. He asks what is best to do in order to remoisten it:

> Have an outfit, for home purposes, consisting of an old Edison Kinetoscope and about 50 reels of film. Have kept these reels plentifully supplied with water, as per your recommendation of four or five years ago. I now find, however, that the film is drying out. I am told it can be rejuvenated by putting oil of eucalyptus on a cloth or sponge, placing same in the cabinet; also that a little spirits of camphor added would be of material benefit. Kindly let me have your views on this subject. What, in your opinion, is the best way to go about preserving the film?

The matter of film preservation is one concerning which there is still much to learn. I have not personally tried the plan you name, but have heard it recommended. If the film were mine I would still adhere to the old plan of a glycerine bath, as described on page 204 third edition of the handbook. Glycerine has the property of absorbing moisture, hence tends to keep film soft and pliable. The handbook instruction reads as follows:

> Moistening Dry Film.—Traveling exhibitors often find that a reel which has been a long time in use has become very dry and brittle. It may be remoistened and rendered pliable by unwinding into a large metal can, in the bottom of which water has been placed, with a wire screen over it to keep the film from contact therewith. Cover tightly, set in a moderately warm place until the film is soft and pliable. Watch closely, however, since if made too moist the emulsion will stick to the back on the film when it is removed.
> It is even possible to give a film a glycerine bath, as follows: In a long, shallow pan place a solution of 30 parts of clear water to one part of glycerine. Make a drum of slats about six feet in diameter and about six feet long (for one thousand feet of film), and by revolving the drum draw the film very slowly through the liquid, winding on the drum with the emulsion side out. After the film is all on the drum, revolve it rapidly to throw off the surplus liquid, then continue to revolve the drum slowly until the film is dry. It should not be used for two or three days. Perform this operation in a room entirely free from dust, or you may seriously injure your film.

I would also suggest that those who have had actual experience in the preservation of film communicate their findings to this department and to the correspondent. His address is 2203 Twenty-first avenue, Oakland, California.

Some Considerable Expert.

Wisconsin arises to bounce his hammer on the dome of an expert (?) who "fixed" his machine, as follows:

> The aperture plate track of my Power's Six A is wearing faster one one side than on the other. Had the mechanism repaired two months ago by an "expert" (????). Had a new intermittent sprocket, upper guide rollers, aperture plate, feed sprocket (meaning upper sprocket I suppose.—Ed.) and tension springs and shoe put on. It is all satisfactory except for the uneven wearing of the track. The only thing I can see which seems wrong is that gate latch screw 722 is out too far. Does not bring the track (Gate, I suppose you mean.—Ed.) square with the aperture plate. I have taken out the old track (Aperture plate, you mean, of course.—Ed.) and installed a new one, without adjusting the gate latch screw. I asked this "expert" geezer if it, the gate latch screw, is set right, to which he rereplied: "My Gawd, yes! Don't monkey with it!" So I thought: "allright," but when I got home I found the revolving shutter shaft collar was not set up close, also the intermittent roller bracket was not set right. So I adjusted screw 719 and set the roller two thickness of a film away from the sprocket, and it was "jake" (Slang of north middle west operators for "all right."—Ed.) What do you think about the track? What do you mean by Question books, both for forty cents? I have no idea.

If you will read notice at front of department each week you will understand. From your use of machine part numbers I assume you have a Handbook, Third Edition. If so, look at instruction 17, page 497, and you will find your query answered fully. It reads as follows:

> No. 17. Adjusting Gate Latch Screw.—The right-hand edge of the face of the gate and its left-hand edge should set an equal distance away from the face of the machine casting, since otherwise the tension on one shoe will exert greater pressure than it will on the other. This is regulated by gate latch screw 722, P. 2. This screw should be set in a sufficient distance to bring the entire gate square with the face of the mechanism casting, and the lock nut thereon should then be set up tight to prevent any possibility of change in this adjustment.

Next time you would do better to send your mechanism to the Power's factory, where it will be repaired right. The factory is the only place to have a projection mechanism repaired. It is to the interest of the manufacturer to make repairs in the best possible way. They will usually loan you a head (you making a suitable deposit, which is returned to you upon return of the loaned head) for use while your machine is undergoing repairs. I would strongly advise all exhibitors to make a practice of sending their projector mechanism to the factory at least once a year for thorough overhauling. It will pay in the long run. The right practice is to have an extra mechanism, so that one head may be repaired and kept in reserve.

Why Sprocket Holes Wear on One Side.

Cecil G. Parker, Shreveport, La., offers the following solution to Cleveland's problem:

> With regard to sprocket holes wearing on right hand side more than on left, as per Cleveland's complaint, first: the Power's upper magazine may be adjusted sidewise, and if placed out of line with upper sprocket would cause the feeding to be done by one side of the sprocket entirely, hence placing all the strain on one set of sprocket holes. Again, if there is even so much as one one-hundredth of an inch play (wear) in either of the sprocket bushings it will allow the sprocket to be just that much out of level, with result that the strain will all, or very nearly all, come on one set of holes. Then, too, regardless of make of projector, in time there is wear in lower magazine spindle (presumably take-up spindle is meant.—Ed.) which allows left hand side to give back to the film, with result that the right hand side pulls all the load and, as most operators have quite a little tension on take-up, the strain is quite heavy. Also, if this is the cause, you will find most of the damaged sprocket holes in the first 400 or 500 feet of the film. (Don't quite get your idea in this latter. Don't believe the reel would cant over enough to set up the condition you name, unless the wear be very pronounced.—Ed.) Moreover, if there is wear in both upper and lower sprocket bearings (in machines in which these sprocket shafts have but one bearing, then the whole work of feeding from upper magazine (sometimes very heavy work, due to jerks and tension) and pulling back against take-up tension will be done by one set of sprocket holes, which will, in time, wear a film of iron.

Brother Parker's solution of the matter is set forth, not because I believe it supplies the answer, but because the conditions he names are to be found in altogether too many machines, and they certainly do help to injure sprocket holes, by placing an undue strain on one side, whereas the strain should be, and would be, equally divided were everything as it should be. Anyhow Friend Parker has "done his bit" in setting forth his views.

Will Try Mazda.

Perry J. Sherman, Corpus Christi, Texas, orders a Handbook sent to a friend in Ireland and says:

> I could send presents which would cost more, but know of none which would be of greater value to an operator. And say, don't you pull any more funnies like that in a November 17 caption, which reads: "Halberg's D. C. to A. C. Econemizer." What about it, huh? (I'm not saying a word.—Ed.) It may interest you to know that I have received orders from friend owner to make a Mazda installation in one of our theaters, and to test same out thoroughly. Am selecting the best equipment procurable and as soon as installation is complete will write fully details regarding same, if you want it. Kindly advise as to what special points you want particularly observed.
> And now let me say that I hold no personal malice toward anyone of or in the San Antonio local union. Have personally investigated things there and find one man to be really the backbone of the whole thing, and that is R. Abbey. He certainly is there with the push, and is working hard to get things running smoothly. Wish you would go further into the shutter problem. If you do you will discover surprising things and find out a lot more about light rays and their action. I have built a device which allows of shutter adjustment while the machine is in motion, i. e., as to correct time, as to width of shutter blades and as to distance from lens. No, I'm not intoxicated. If you'll send me description of your projector in the basement and paper copy of shutter will be glad to send you small model for your own use, but don't care to publish, as may conclude to patent it.

Hum, friend Sherman, show me Have no projector working at present, but model for any machine, say Power's 6-B, will serve to illustrate. Possibly the thing might be done, but it surely would be rather complicated and subject to considerable wear. At least, it looks that way to me. As to San Antonio local, it is usually the fact that just a few men, sometimes only one, are the "back-bone of the whole thing." I could name you a large city here in the east where one man absolutely dominates the operators' union, and that man is not himself an operator, but a stagehand. But he is the whole, entire show just the same, and according to all reports orders the men around at will; they jump through the hoop when he holds it up. But in justice let it be recorded that he has used his power to fairly good purposes; also, so far as I know, he is straight as the proverbal string. But the condition is not one of the best, nevertheless. I was myself told, while in San Antonio, and saw pretty well that it was true, that the local contained, at that time at least, only a very few active members. My recollection is that the number was three, with two of them comparatively inactive when the third was absent. Personally, I believe the San Antonio men mean well, but that for years they have just drifted. In fact, there is no denying that statement. I know it is true. But there is excellent timber in the local just the same, and the men are now waking up and—there you are.

Will be glad to have report on Mazda. The three points are: (A) Life of lamps and comparative cost of lamp renewal vs. carbon consumption. (B) Ease of manipulation. (C) Comparative screen results, compared with which A and B are as trifles.

Tampa, Florida.

Earnest G. Kemp, Tampa, Florida, says:

> We wish for you a joyful Christmas. May the coming year be liberal with you in prosperity and greater knowledge of our vast industry. Your visit to Tampa last spring has accomplished far more good than you probably expected it to. Yes, we needed it, and needed it bad. It is useless to deny that fact. Your three-hour lecture seemed to me to last but a few moments. I could and would willingly have listened all night to the gospel truth you so generously gave to us. I am glad to say we have tried to profit by your words of wisdom. We have, for instance, started our school again, and intend to dig through Fellow Richardsons' Handbook, chapter by chapter.
> We have just presented contracts for the coming year to the managers. The majority have not as yet signed up (December 22.—Ed.), but I think they all realize that we are striving to be better men than the irresponsible who thinks only of pay-day, caring nothing whatever about the grade of service given in return for what pay-day brings. I read the article concerning speeding up the Simplex intermittent and thoroughly agree with the company that unless the machine were in capable hands the movement would not stand up. I want you to put Tampa on your list whenever you make another trip; also trust you will be able to remain with us longer next time.

I enjoyed my brief visit in your city, Brother Kemp, and there is now the added pleasure of knowing that, after almost a year to think it over, the Tampa men still regard my visit as worth while. The running of a local school is hard, because it often happens that points arise concerning which no one has very clear understanding, which is discouraging. However, I want you men to feel free to consult me whenever knotty problems arise. Don't know when I will get down to Southern Florida again. And I'd like to, too, for it is beautiful; also the boys are hospitable and the ladies charming, witness Mrs. Grapefruit Barnhill, Miami—and others. But it's a long, long way to the Land of the Everglades, walking is poor, I have no aeroplane, trains are expensive and it's most too far for Nancy Hanks, the Go Devil, considering the sand. Hum, by golly, come to look it up, Tampa is less than a thousand miles from New York, might be done via go-devil sometime. Yessum. Mebby, mebby! What kind of roads are there from Jacksonville to Tampa and Miami?

As to the contract, why, I am not well enough acquainted with local conditions to comment intelligently, except as to clause ten. I do not, myself, approve of forcing the running a union slide. This for several aerssno. I prefer the forcing of the placing of a union card in box office window. There are several very valid objections to using a slide. It seems to me there is a too-great difference in salaries in Class "A" and Class "B" houses; also, there is no stiuplation as to when both men must be on duty and when only one is permissible, an important point to cover, it seems to me. Aside from this I could not comment intelligently, and it is too late to make any changes now anyhow. Come again, Brother Kemp. My best to all the Tampa men.

Automatically Automatic.

H. R. Ceever, Elizabeth, New Jersey, proposes to place the projection machines in position to place their Whatever-part-is-equivalent-to-fingers to whatever-part-corresponds-to-nose and wriggle them vigorously, insofar as has to do with change-over. This is his modest claim:

> Are you interested in anything new as applies to projection? (Foolish question No. 968,483,641,278.—Ed.) I take pleasure in notifying you of a patent now pending covering device designed to lessen the operators' burden of toil. With it in use there will be no more listening to the reel grinding in the upper magazine to judge by its speed how nearly the film is "out." No more opening the upper magazine door for the same purpose. All this, and even the very act of bringing the succeeding kinematograph into action will be dispensed with. The device will automatically control the change-over. There is an acoustic device provided for notifying the eventually napping operator (We will then include mattress, sheets and feather pillows in the order for carbons and lenses.—Ed.) that a change of run from one kinematograph to another is being effected and that it is time to adjust the new picture to frame (Might be well to start the arc too, or does the device do that and center the light? Also, does it trim the carbons and wipe off the condensers?—Ed.). Have no working model as yet, but every operator I have thus far shown it to is enthusiastic. Will be pleased to send specification and drawing if you are interested.

Nope, brother, inasmuch as the proposed device does not wash the operator's face when he is done work, or even oil the machine, I don't think it is yet quite complete. Seriously, however, Friend Ceever, I would not be interested in examining the specifications and drawings. When you have one of the devices in actual operation I shall be glad to come over and watch it work, though frankly I have good-sized doubts. If you really can accomplish this stunt, and do it in a practical way, it might be of use in multiple reel releases; but first you will have to show me that you can do it, and do it in a commercially practical way. Incidentally, modern operators do not frame the picture after the machine starts. They frame the picture accurately when threading; also, we don't exactly favor operators "napping" in the operating room. Strange, but true.

I am surprised that but one local has responded to date, though it may be they have remitted direct. If you, brother operator, cannot really afford a dollar, then send in fifty cents. If two thousand of you sent in fifty cents, it would be a godsend to the men who sustained that horrible disaster which literally wiped their homes out of existence. All honor to those who have their names on what amounts to a roll of honor. But YOURS, my brother, should be there. It is not too late. Get busy. Every cent will be accounted for rigidly.

Proper Presentation of Pictures Musically.

The Theme.

IT MAY be that you, too, have suffered. It may have happened that you entered a theater to see Mary Pickford or Doug. Fairbanks earn their paltry stipend. It is possible that after you had enjoyed the Comedy and Review, the feature you came to see was thrown upon the screen and you settled back in your seat, for an hour and a quarter of unadulterated joy. The orchestra opens the picture with a beautiful number as Miss Mary is introduced. The music changes. In a few minutes the first selection is played again. It's a nice number. Two or three short numbers intervene and you hear it again. It's a fair number. An agitato follows, it is repeated and becomes a monotonous number. The third reel is being shown, and again you hear it. You cannot understand why they play it so much. It palls. As the music continues, this poor little number is dragged in by the heels whenever Mary appears in the foreground, until your soul rebels and you hate that music forever. This innocent little musical piece that has caused you so much irritation is called the THEME.

Nevertheless the Theme has a definite and well-defined purpose, and if used properly enhances the picture presentation immeasurably. It should be selected carefully with due consideration for the character, episode, or thought which it represents. It may be given to the hero, heroine, villain, or ingenue, and in pictures where an act is performed frequently for a purpose it may be used to denote that purpose or in an allegorical picture to show the thought for which certain scenes stand. Sometimes two or more Themes are often used, but are totally impracticable for small combinations of musicians, but effective when played by large orchestras because there is always a second man to each instrument. While the first plays, the second turns the pages and ferrets out the particular Theme wanted.

Naturally the selection of a Theme is the most important feature in the setting of the picture. To choose a waltz intermezzo as the motif for Jean Valjean in "Les Miserables" would be ridiculous, and the selection of a dramatic number for Rebecca in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" would be foolish. A careful study of the character represented and for what it stands should be made with due consideration for the dominant feeling of the play.

If the Theme be picked for the star in a heavy drama, and her part in the play is dramatic, the natural selection would be a dramatic Theme, such as Cavatina (Bohm), Prelude (Damrosch) or Prelude (Rachmaninoff). If the plot be heavy and the entire setting cumbersome and labored it would be well to give the Theme to the ingenue or to a lighter role, thus gaining variety of color in the music. Just as photography and lighting plays an important part in picturization, so coloring, varied tempi and shading must be considered in the music.

Of course, all this cannot be done at the first performance of a feature, if the leader has had no opportunity of viewing the picture. In that case he must depend on a furnished cue sheet which may, or may not, suggest a number in his library. On the other hand, the number suggested may be one which he has used recently and is not permissible, but after he has seen the picture, heard his incidental music in the setting, noted the high-lights in the play, and closely sized up the general situation with regard to his orchestral requirements, he can usually add a 50 per cent. value to his musical presentation by a better selection of his Theme.

Speaking for the benefit of the small orchestra playing for pictures (and they are in the majority), the modus operandi should be as follows: After the Theme has been selected it should be placed in its proper rotation with the other numbers, selected to fit the picture. Playing your musical setting in order, you presently arrive at the cue which requires the Theme. You play it until your next cue, then taking it out of the folio, you place it on the extreme left of your music stand, where it is in plain view all the time and continue to play the following number. This necessitates no more retarding of music than the usual turning of a page. As each player gets the opportunity for resting, he can "fix" the Theme exactly as he wants it without interfering with the number being played. In time you reach the cue requiring the Theme again. As you finish your selection leading to it you turn it over to the left of your folio, proceed to play the Theme which is exposed on the further left, until the next change. Then turning back to your folio you find the next number exposed on the right. This process is repeated throughout the entire setting and precludes any searching for the Theme or stoppage of the music. Some progressive orchestra leaders have stiff cardboard sheets printed with Theme and insert these in the folio where the Theme must be played. This is a good idea and makes the setting fool-proof. Fox Trots, One-Steps or Two-Steps make poor themes and are seldom used as such, but are permissible under certain conditions, in a Chaplin comedy or one that runs more than one reel. For example if the comedian's chief stunt is to fall asleep throughout the picture a good Theme would be "Please Go 'Way and Let Me Sleep." Carrying out this principle, it is a simple matter to judge the Theme necessary for a Comedy. Waltzes and Waltz-intermezzos are little used except for pictures in which children are starred. The Moderato movements, Allegros and Allegrettos are chiefly suggested and should be definitely melodious, catchy if possible to establish the association of ideas. Andantinos will fit the more serious character while Andantes, Lentos and Adagios are reserved for the dramatic roles.

As pictures become more psychological, Themes will be chosen to represent the trend of the play and will become in reality a motif, signifying the underlying or hidden objective. "Gold—The Lust of Ages," gives splendid scope for a Theme representing gold and its power. Because it shows a series of episodes picturing the ruination of manhood wrought by the power of Gold, the Theme becomes the logical finish to each episode.

Nothing requires more careful thought than the selection of the Theme in fitting a picture, but the importance of its use cannot be overlooked. In features where the cast is small and the star is really the picture, being always in the foreground, the Theme should not be used frequently but only in the big moments. If it is a bright Theme, and one of the telling scenes finds our principal in tears, it can be played slowly and softly, giving the desired pathos and holding the required atmosphere. The too frequent use of the Theme is a detriment to the musical interpretation of the picture, annoys the patrons of the theater and kills the particular selection for further use. Choose long Themes. Use discretion in their selection. Play them according to the action, and only when a motif is required. The results will amply justify the time and thought given to this most important subject.

Fitting the Scenic.

For sometime the exhibitor has given careful consideration to the musical fitting of his feature picture. It has been with pride that he has pointed to the many detailed effects worked into the scenes by his orchestra. He has hired expert electricians to take care of his lighting effects and regarded the feature as the big moment in his show. So far as the Pictorial Review, the Comedy and the Scenic were concerned, he felt that, by playing a march, a two-step and a waltz respectively, that his musical program was complete.

The day has come when he must look to his laurels again. New ideas prevail and what used to be good enough is now passé.

Scenics are divided into classes, and we prefer to regard educational films in the light of scenics. Thus we have a wide field to cover. There is the panorama of nature, the great Rockies, Alps and Catapaluki, or the mighty Frazer river, the Grand Canyon, celebrated parks and gardens. There is the zoological film, showing animals in their native haunts; fishery scenes, industrial plants, botanical studies, the life of bees, foreign countries, their habits and well-known land marks, and many other varieties. It has been the custom to portray all these by playing a waltz.

A waltz as an accompaniment to the scenic is just that—an accompaniment. The waltz cannot knit the minds of the patrons to the panoramic beauties displayed, neither can it portray the atmosphere of the great outdoors. It usually speaks of love, sensuousness, or a touch of sadness. If it be bright, or an intermezzo, it depicts joy, gladness, piquancy or dance rythm. Wherein do these emotions fit the grandeur of nature, the towering mountains, or sylvan glades? If such scenes were shown in the feature, the orchestra leader would receive severe censure should he play a waltz to fit them. Then why expect the leopard to change his spots? If it cannot fit a nature scene in the feature it surely cannot fit 1,000 ft. devoted entirely to nature.

By the same reasoning it cannot fit animal scenes, Oriental cities, flower gardens, or any situation wherein no physical or mental emotion is portrayed. Therefore we are forced to admit that waltzes cannot further be used with justification to ourselves and our patrons.

What must be used? By the process of eliminating all the musical selections breathing emotion; all marches, one-steps and two-steps, which would be incongruous, and side-stepping waltzes of all kinds, we have but one class of music from which to choose, namely, description numbers.

These are the pieces composed especially to describe conditions, elements or thought.

For example, "Morning Mood," by Grieg, is distinctly pastoral and of sufficient length to fit one reel of quiet nature study, or shepherd stuff. "Berceuse," from "Jocelyn"; "A Shepherd's Tale," by Nevin; "Merry Wives of Windsor," by Nicolai; "Nymphs and Fauns," by Bemberg; "Pastel Menuet," by Paradis, or "Scenes from Switzerland," by Lang, would fit scenes of this kind. By going into grand opera music one finds such gems as "Siefried's Idyl," "Tribut de Zamora" and others, admirably suited to depict nature.

For light breezy scenes use "Murmuring Zephyrs," Jensen, or "April Moods," by Eugene; while for big wind storms at the seashore "Scotch Poem," MacDowell.

For pictures of birds and butterflies, why not play "The Magpie and the Parrot," Bendix; "The Squirrel Parade," Crosby; "Butterflies," Steinke; "Dance of the Moths," Weidt; "Robins' Farewell,' 'Bendix; or "The Gentle Dove," Bendix?

For distant lands the selections should be chosen with a view to their characteristics. For India, Oriental music; for Japan, Japanese music; or for Egypt, Egyptian music. For example, suppose we have an Egyptian picture, a good opening would be the playing of "Salaam Effindina," which is the Egyptian national hymn. Every leader should have an album containing all the national airs, because they are easily procured and are vitally essential. After the picture has been introduced a Mosque is shown with the populace at prayer—"Orientale," Cui, would fit. Oriental dances are plentiful and could be used to bear out the atmosphere. If possible, close the picture by repeating the national hymn so that it finishes with the last bar.

It is just as important to hold the atmosphere of the Scenic as to portray the action in the Feature. The very fact that the program is selected to give variety to your patrons, make it imperative that your music should change with the pictures and emphasize the point that you are trying to make.

Music for "Lest We Forget."

The big dramatic war picture, "LEST WE FORGET," featuring Rita Jolivet, and now playing at the Lyric Theater, is a musical triumph.

Ten weeks, involving considerable research work, were spent in compiling the score. An orchestra of thirty pieces, under the personal direction of George W. Beynon, give a wonderful rendition of the classics of the old masters. The music is tuneful, serious and filled with big moments.

Much credit is due Monsieur Leon Perret, who directed the picture, for his careful collaboration with the composer. During the "shooting of the scenes," Mr. Perret, who is a personal friend of Massenet, and well versed musically, considered the appropriate music and timed his scenes accordingly. For example, when "THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER" is being sung by the American soldiers in the trenches, there is just enough footage allowed to finish it; thus its dignity is maintained and there is no "chopping off" process necessary.

Good music is an insurance policy on your picture, providing against ridicule and burlesque. If more producers realized this and saw to it that their directors and musical director got together on the score, greater box-office receipts would be the reward.

Returning to the feature, it opens with the Marseillaise Hymn, a tribute to Miss Jolivet, one of the few survivors of the ill-fated Lusitania, at the same time carrying with it the suggestion that the story is French in atmosphere.

When the heroine is introduced the orchestra plays the soprano aria from "Manon" (Massenet). Nothing else would fit her introduction, because we are next shown the opera in progress, with Miss Jolivet in the leading role. In the mind of Harry Winslow, the hero, she and the opera are closely connected. The audience feels the same association of ideas and this aria is repeated as the "Theme" throughout.

For the love scene, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from "Samson and Delilah" (Saint Saens), is used, while the German spy system is portrayed by Verdi's "La Forza del Destino." During the French preparations for war, "Le Chanson du Depart" (Lorraine), and "Sambre-Meuse" marches are played to wonderful effect.

Towards the finish of the picture, the "Triumphal March" from "Aida" and "The Stars and Stripes," by Sousa, typify the eventful success of the Allies and the part that America plays in the hastening of peace.

The Pathetic numbers recalled are Asa's "Tod," Grieg's "Elegy"; Massenet's "Adagio Pathetique," Godard's "Adagio Lamentoso," from "Symphony Pathetique," Tschaikowsky's "Adagio Cantabile" from the sonata by Beethoven.

Besides the opera "Manon," before mentioned, we are given a glimpse of "Carmen" and "Cleopatra." The music used is that played for the particular scenes of the opera and is synchronized beautifully.

The big scenes of the battle are accompanied by such dynamic numbers as "La Chevanka," from "La Valkyrie," by Wagner; "The Tempest," from "William Tell" overture, while Grieg's "Storm at Sea" is used for the sinking of the Lusitania.

An unusual idea crops up in the "flash" of American boys whistling. The year is supposed to be 1915 and the orchestra whistles one of the popular hits of that year. It is novel and well done and received considerable applause from an appreciative audience.

Probably the biggest effort ever attempted in pictures is the introduction of the "Liebestod" (Love Death) music from "Tristan and Isolde." Wagnerian music is fundamentally dramatic and this particular selection is most appropriate. A German spy, in love with the heroine, enters her apartment at night and forces his attentions upon her; she becomes desperate and by a clever ruse manages to bind him to a couch with her girdle cord, smothering him to death with a pillow. The music literally carries the action, working up and up to the climax with a stupendous effect and dying away again as she realizes what she has done.

Without a question, the music to this feature transcends anything since "The Birth of a Nation." The Metro is providing a score and cue sheet for the use of exhibitors, prepared by Mr. Beynon, that should certainly be obtained for a proper presentation of "LEST WE FORGET."

Music Suggestion Synopsis.

THE OTHER MAN (Vitagraph)—Theme for Heroine—Valse Lento. Suggest "Sleeping Rose"—Borch, "Dreaming of You"—Lehar, "Destiny Waltz"—Baynes.

This is a comedy-drama, requiring many light numbers. Use intermezzo to vary the waltz movements. You will need a popular two-step for the ballroom scene in the first reel, and agitato in the third, and close with the theme. Cue sheet can be obtained from the Vitagraph Exchange.

THE PHANTOM RIDERS (Universal)—Theme for Hero—Alegro. Suggest "Pitchounette"—Massenet, "Prelude"— Jarnfledt.

Another Western story filled with drama and fighting scenes. Some galops are needed, and "The Earl King" Agitato by Schubert can be used nicely in the fifth reel.

THE BARGAIN (W. H. Productions, Inc.)—Theme for Heroine—Andante. Suggest "Longing"—Floidia, "Meditation"—Drumm, or Visions"—Tscharkowsky.

The story is Western in atmosphere and needs the Mexican tang to the music. "Morning Mood," Grieg, can be used for the opening scene. A few galops are necessary to play for pursuits; a couple of pathetics and two dramatic numbers can be used. For the dance hall use a fox trot or a two step. Cue sheets can be obtained from W. H. Productions Co., Inc.

FLARE-UP SAL (Paramount)—Theme for Heroine—Moderato. Suggest "Melodie"—Karganoff, "Vanity Caprice"—Jackson.

This is a mining camp story dance hall variety. In the first reel you need a good pastoral to open, a couple of Mexican one-steps and an adagio pathetic. The second reel is neutral, requiring moderato stuff. In the third reel you need religioso music for the church scene. A few galops and agitatos are needed. Close with the theme. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paramount Exchange.

LOADED DICE (Pathe)—Theme for the Hero—Andante—Misterioso. Suggest "En Mer"—Holmes, "Quo Vadis"—Nouges, "L'Automne"—Glasnow.

A heavy drama requiring big stuff throughout. A couple of overtures would fit, and you require some light intermezzos to fill in with. Pathetics and dramatics will be in the majority. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Pathe Exchange.

LEST WE FORGET (Metro)—See "Music for 'Lest We Forget'" in this Department.

BROKEN TIES (World)—Theme, none.

This is a society drama, opening up with andante music. You will need lots of heavy stuff, a couple of dramatic agitatos and a few waltz lentos. Cue sheet can be obtained from the World Exchange.

THE EYES OF MYSTERY (Metro)—Theme for the Heroine—Andante. Suggest "Awakening of Spring"—Bach, Dialogue"—Meyer-Helmund, "Evensong"—Martin.

This is a melodrama and calls for big stuff. Many misteriosos are necessary and a few hurrys can be used to advantage. Cue sheet can be obtained from the Metro Exchange.

UNDER THE INFLUENCE (Metro-Drew)—Theme, none.

Light treatment is required for this comedy. Do not use fox trots, as waltzes and light intermezzos are more in keeping with the refined atmosphere.

TARZAN OF THE APES (National)—Theme—Something wierd and uncanny but Allegro. Suggest "Dance of the Harpies"—Hadley.

Many pastoral numbers are needed. Bright intermezzos and a few misteriosos. It would be well to flavor the setting with a little oriental music in the last couple of reels.

Carey in a Western Heads Universal "Wild Woman" Is Its Title—Other Features for February 25 Week Are Comedies and Serials.

UNIVERSAL'S lead-off card in the program scheduled for release during the week of Feb. 25 is "Wild Woman," a five-reel feature on the order of the old Harry Carey subject, "Love's Lariat." It tells the story of the adventures which befell Cheyenne Harry and his partners, following a wild and woolly celebration of the former's victory at a rodeo. In the cast surrounding Harry Carey are Molly Malone, Martha Mattox, Vester Pegg and Edward Jones.

"Watch Your Watch" is the Nestor comedy for the week. It features Eileen Sedgwick and Ernie Shields, two screen favorites who have appeared in many Universal productions. The plot revolves about the efforts of a girl to keep from her fiance the knowledge that another admirer has presented her with a watch. This comedy is said to be one of the most amusing released under the Nestor brand.

The L-Ko comedy is entitled "Ambrose the Lion Hearted," and features Mack Swain. Movie fans will remember Swain as having been identified in former days with the Keystone organization. Swain enacts the role of an enormously powerful but tender-hearted blacksmith, who takes it upon himself to right the wrongs inflicted upon the heroine by a black-hearted "villun." This comedy is in two reels.

The serials for the week include Episode 14 of "The Mystery Ship" and Episode 4 of "The Bull's Eye." In the first "The Masked Rider," the man of mystery, continues to exert his efforts on behalf of Betty Lee, as enacted by Neva Gerber, and Miles Gaston, as portrayed by Ben Wilson. As in previous episodes of this serial a number of unusual photographic effects are introduced.

"Still in the Ring" is the title of the fourth "Bull's Eye" episode. In it Cody is seen following up his pursuit of Sweeney. Like the episodes which have preceded it this chapter closes with Cody in a dangerous predicament. Both Eddie Polo and Vivian Reed continue to do excellent work in this serial.

The Universal Animated Weekly and the Universal Current Events and the Universal Screen Magazine are also included in the week's program. Of unusual interest is a one-reel special. This is a Finley Nature Study subject, entitled "Rambles with a Naturalist." A naturalist takes a party of children on a ramble and shows them through a telescope the things they cannot see with the naked eye. First comes the life of a frog from the egg stage to the development of the full-grown frog. Other interesting subjects are the spotted sandpiper and the baby night hawk or bulbat.

Dr. Garfield Lifts Ban in Eight States, Effective on Lincoln's Birthday and May Go Further.

Washington, D. C.

THE theater closing order, in so far as it affects North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, was, on February 8, revoked by the United States Fuel Administration. This means that exhibitors in those states will be able to do business Lincoln's Birthday and on all succeeding Tuesdays. No mention is made of the other states, but it is possible that the entire order may be revoked if present weather conditions continue. The most serious situation is at present in New England, and fears are expressed that perhaps the raising of the order for that section will be further delayed.

The exhibitors of the East may feel more encouraged over the possibility of the suspension of the Monday and Tuesday closing orders—the former affecting industries generally, the latter affecting theaters and other places of amusement—for in a statement made public on February 6 Dr. H. A. Garfield said:

"It is hoped that with the shut-down on Monday, February 11, and the closing in many states on the day following—Lincoln's Birthday—it will be possible thenceforth to rely upon embargoes and the preference in movement of food and fuel ordered by the Director-General of Railroads."

The exhibitors of the country have been too patriotic to make any organized effort looking to the suspension of this order, but they have felt that the coal saved in keeping the theaters dark on Tuesdays has not been productive of any material saving in fuel, either by cutting off the light, lessening the use of heat, for they had to keep the fires going to prevent freezing of water pipes, or through a lessened use of the transportation facilities of their respective cities.

LINZ.

MISS MACPHERSON ENTERTAINS FAIRBANKS.

Miss Jeanie Macpherson, scenario writer for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and author of "The Woman God Forgot" and "The Whispering Chorus," gave a dinner at her home in Hollywood recently to celebrate the success of Douglas Fairbanks' latest Artcraft picture, "A Modern Musketeer," at which the acrobatic star was the guest of honor.

After the repast the guests provided a unique entertainment. Charles Chaplin gave imitations of English muisc hall artists and a serious imitation of the late Beerbohm Tree. Messrs. Fairbanks, Dwan, Chaplin and Treen collectively offered a variety show that would have startled the heads of the vaudeville syndicate had they seen it.

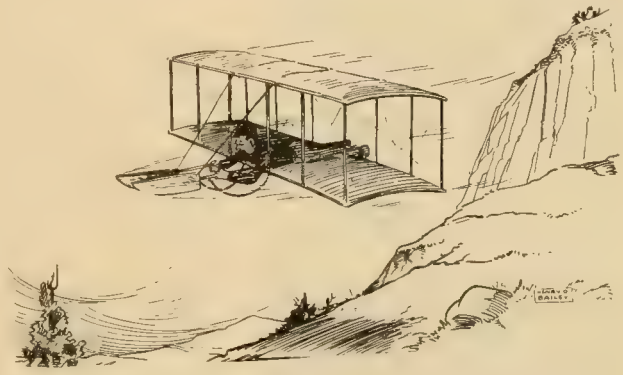
Grand opera was accorded a place on the impromptu program, the same quartette rendering selections from "Rigoletto" and "Lucia," and Chaplin followed with his famous impersonation of Pavlowa, which created merriment. John Browne and Alan Dwan did a thought transference stunt that astonished the audience.

It was a million dollar show.

BRAY ANIMATED DRAWINGS FOR INSTRUCTION.

The Bray Studios, Inc., who for some time past have been doing considerable work for the United States Government, have been assigned to produce for training purposes in nearly all branches of the service, a series of animated diagrammatic drawings through which the Government expects to facilitate training and make clear many points which the screen is best adapted to illustrate.

The Bray Studios, Inc., have released during the past year in Paramount-Bray Pictograph, "the magazine on the screen," a number of subjects done in animated diagrammatic drawings under the direction of J. F. Leventhal. Among these are the German mine laying submarine, the automobile engine, the torpedo, the land and water submarine and the Fiske aerial torpedoplane.



Scene from "The Rudiments of Flying" (Paramount).

One of the important accomplishments of this method of production is that it is possible to show things which are impossible to show through ordinary photography and this is one of the important reasons why the Government particularly selected the Bray Studios, Inc., for this work.

J. F. Leventhal, in taking up the new work, has been assigned to Fort Sill, Okla., where he is gathering data for coming productions. The present work deals with artillery and it is the belief of the Government that by means of this work the theory of big-gun fire can be made so clear that the period of training can be materially reduced.

HULSEY OPENS BRANCH IN OKLAHOMA CITY.

E. H. Hulsey, of Dallas, who controls the First National Exhibitors' Circuit franchise for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, announces the opening of the Oklahoma City Branch of the First National, of which T. E. Larson is president and general manager. Mr. Larson is well known in southwest film circles. He will handle all First National releases, including Chaplin's new Signature Protected Comedies. The new exchange is now doing business.

Parsons Making Comedies for Goldwyn

Producer of "Tarzan of the Apes" to Issue Twenty-six Two-Reelers in the Next Year.

GOLDWYN makes announcement of the creation of Capitol Comedies, starring "Smiling Billy" Parsons, and that twenty-six of these two-reel comedies will be distributed annually through the Goldwyn sales organization in the United States and the remainder of the world. "Smiling Billy" Parsons is none other than William H. Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation of America, who springs full-fledged into pictures as a star.

The contract for distribution was signed last week by Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, and Mr. Parsons as the head of the National. Harry Reichenbach conducted the negotiations. Mr. Parsons left at once for California to begin work in his studios in Los Angeles. A few weeks ago the Goldwyn executives were shown several of the "Smiling Billy" Parsons comedies and their enthusiasm for this new and clean-cut style of screen divertisement was so great that contracts were immediately drawn up and signed.

William H. Parsons.

The story of Mr. Parsons' personal entry into pictures as a star is filled with novelty. Primarily he is a financier and producer of pictures, being producer and one of the owners of the sensationally successful "Tarzan of the Apes." During the making of this picture there were idle moments in which Mr. Parsons read the scenarios of a number of two-reel comedies and racked his brain to think of an engaging male comedian available to be starred under his management.

Having the rotund figure so often associated with comedy roles, an engaging and winning smile that is also a big asset in winning popularity, and being comically bald, persons to whom he admitted his perplexity quickly suggested that he become a screen star himself and make his own pictures. After persuasion and still not convinced that he would take such advice, Mr. Parsons made several of those comedies, with himself as the star. Goldwyn's problem when its executives had seen these was to persuade Mr. Parsons to make twenty-six a year, since no film producer with a big money-making success on his hands in the "Tarsan" property need invite the hard labor that is entailed in the making of a comedy release every second week in a year.

Goldwyn intends placing prints of the first four comedies in all of its exchanges in advance of the first release. Exhibitors will be invited to get in touch with the Goldwyn offices in the principal cities of North America and arrange for showings on or after February 18.

GOLDSTEIN ORGANIZES GWENDOLYN FILMS

Irving E. Goldstein, of the Superior Photoplay Company, has organized new producing company, to be known as the Gwendolyn Films, with headquarters in the Knickerbocker Theater Building, the purpose being to produce feature plays. Emil Johnson, former manager and director of Sunshine Films, Inc., will be manager of productions. Hugo Hamlin, a versatile comedian, has been secured. Mr. Hamlin has worked with such directors as Ralph Ince, Herbert Brenon, Albert Capellani, Kirkwood, Haddock, Baker, and others. Some of his most impressive work will be seen in the Gerard feature, "My Four Years in Germany." The new company now has in preparation "Bleeding Belgium," "For Sale, a Woman's Heart" and "The Judge Higher Up."

George Larkin

GEORGE LARKIN, young and handsome leading man, who has for many years been an idol of millions of screen fans all over the world, not only has the face, physique and dramatic ability necessary to a star, but also is a very gallant and altogether charming gentleman whom fame has not spoiled. He has an agreeable personality with a bearing and greeting which is hard to resist without a smile, and has a host of friends wherever he has been.

George Larkin, Featured in "Zongor," the Dare-Devil of Romance.

Mr. Larkin is most famous for his work in the "Trey o' Hearts" and "Grant, Police Reporter" Series, but in addition has many big features to his credit, most recent of which is "Zongar," a thrilling five-reel athletic drama produced by Bernarr Macfadden, the world-renowned and famous physical culturist.

Mr. Larkin is at present taking much needed rest and preparing for his next big thrilling feature from the pen of Edgar Alan Armand, the celebrated French writer. In this timely subject Mr. Larkin will be given an opportunity to display his dare-devil prowess and he expects to surpass all his previous efforts.

BROWN NAMED CHIEF OF CAMERA STAFF.

The appointment of Harold P. Brown as chief of the camera staff of Screen Telegram, the Mutual Film Corporation's twice a week news reel, is announced by John R. Freuler, president of the corporation. Mr. Brown is a news camera operator of several years' experience. He started turning a crank on news subjects in Minneapolis after he had worked on many of the large newspapers of the Middle West as a photographer. He was for a time the editor of the Northwest Weekly, a moving picture news reel distributed throughout the northwestern states.

He joined the forces of the Hearst International Film Service two years ago, in Chicago. Some of Mr. Brown's most notable work was done along the Mexican border and in the interior of Mexico at the time of the Pershing expedition. Mr. Brown will assist Blaine McGrath, editor of the Screen Telegram, in the direction of the staff cameramen who contribute to the make-up of the news reel.

CHANGE IN SCHEDULE OF CHAPIN SERIES.

An announcement from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation calls attention to a change in the release schedule of Paramount's Ben Chapin series, "The Son of Democracy." The first episode entitled, "My Mother," will be released February 11 as originally announced. The second offering, however, will be "A Call to Arms," in place of "My Father." The second release will be presented to the public commencing February 18. The third offering will be "My Father," on February 25.

The first three releases as mentiond above, are now completely finished and have already been shipped to the various exchanges throughout the country.

DAY TO GO TO CUBA.

Lawrence M. Day, of Washington, D. C., president and treasurer of Metro Film Service, leaves soon for Cuba. He goes there to look over the situation with regard to placing films to better advantage.

Exhibitor Tries to Burn Theater

Was Losing Money and Hoped to Cash In on His Insurance —Confesses to Act.

ROBERT ALLEN, proprietor of the Colonial theater, a moving picture house in Bloomfield, Ind., has confessed to the authorities there that he set fire to his theater recently to obtain the insurance on his equipment. Allen is an electrical engineer and works as a machine man in a coal mine at Jeffersonville, Ind. His family, however, live in Bloomfield and his wife has been operating the show during his absence.

When Allen appeared in court attorneys had prepared an affidavit charging him with attempting to defraud insurance companies. He entered a plea of guilty to the charge and was sentenced to the Indiana reformatory for a term of from one to three years, but Judge R. E. Slinkard later suspended sentence and permitted Allen to go on his good behavior. The original affidavit against Allen charged him with arson, but if he had pleaded guilty to that charge the court, under the law, could not have suspended the sentence.

According to his confession, Allen left Jasonville on Wednesday night, January 23, and went to Linton, Ind. There he hired a jitney bus to drive him to Bloomfield. In his theater, he gathered up all the loose papers he could find, and took them and an old film and placed them under the stage and stairway leading t' the stage and set the mass on fire.

When he closed the stage door the space under the stage was made air tight, and this prevented the building from burning. Although the stage was scorched considerably the fire went out before much damage was done. This was about midnight. He then drove back to Linton without letting Mrs. Allen know that he had been in Bloomfield.

Allen said he committed the act in an effort to obtain the $1,450 insurance on the motion picture equipment, worth probably $1,000.

Allen has owned the show for more than a year, and it is generally known that because of the war tax, high cost of films and increase cost of production he made no money on his investment. Allen is twenty-four years old and has a wife and one child. He is known as an industrious young man and belongs to a highly respected family. He has always borne a good reputation in the community.

Shift Attitude on Censorship

Local Council of Women of Montreal Would Permit Restricted Showing of Subjects Now Banned.

THE Local Council of Women of Montreal has performed a right-about-face in its attitude toward certain classes of moving pictures. A deputation from the council appeared before G. Maxwell Sinn of the Board of Moving Picture Censors for the Province of Quebec at Montreal on January 31. The women declared that they wanted sex pictures for the purpose of educating the public and they asked the censor to permit the showing of several releases, including "Damaged Goods" and "Birth," under certain conditions. The women admitted that these pictures possessed a "moral," but that they were harrowing and should not be presented to mixed audiences.

Censor Sinn agreed that it would be proper to have such pictures shown to adults of either sex and the matter is to be discussed by the Quebec Board upon the return of Sheriff Lemieux, the chairman, from Europe. It is probable that the pictures in question will be approved by the board on the condition that the Local Council of Women or some other organization assume the responsibility for their presentation.

The women in the deputation included Mrs. J. H. Liddell of the National Council of Women, Mrs. John Scott and Mrs. Thomas Watson. They ventured the opinion that "Damaged Goods" should be shown at every camp or barracks in the Dominion and that "Birth" should be presented at universities and other institutions.

IRVING TO DIRECT LOCKWOOD.

Hereafter George Irving will alternate with Fred J. Balshofer, under the dual director system, in the production of Metro subjects featuring Harold Lockwood. Mr. Irving is now in Florida with the Lockwood company. In the acquisition of Mr. Irving for the place of alternate director Metro has secured the services of a man with keen insight of what is required of a director, coupled with the knowledge of how to achieve these requirements which he gained through years of experience, so that he can be relied upon to maintain the high standard of excellence established by past Lockwood subjects.

Leonce Perret

LEONCE PERRET, considered among the premier French directors in this country, is author and director of the pro-ally propaganda picture, "Lest We Forget," which is now enjoying a four-week run at a Broadway house. Mr. Perret came to this country a year ago to direct big features, and made three productions in which Captain Robert Warwick was the star, "The Silent Master," released on the Selznick program, "The Mad Lover," released by Pathe, and "The Accidental Honeymoon," which will be released in the near future.

Leonce Perret.

M. Perret has also written a fictitionized version of "Lest We Forget," which will appear in early issues of both La Vie Parisienne and La Rennaissance du Livre, publications of first importance in France.

At present M. Perret is engaged in writing and directing a series of pictures in which the Dolly Sisters are starred, the first of which has already been completed. Following the cutting and editing of this feature, work will be started at once on the next production. The releasing plan for these Perret-Dolly Sisters pictures will be announced in the near future. In speaking of his production of "Lest We Forget," M. Perret said: "When the war broke out and we in France were all asked to do our utmost, I was solicited to produce propaganda films to stimulate recruiting and inject the war spirit in all classes. After making 22 such productions, I came to the United States, and after the entry of this country into the war, was sought to make a pro-ally production. In 'Lest We Forget' I attempted to show some of the incidends leading up to the sinking of the Lusitania, together with the prior mobilization of French troops, which I had actually witnessed. There was a moral story, rather than a love story used as the theme of the picture, and the climax was the introduction of the child of war, for whom these men were fighting so valiantly. There was also a communal school in France shown in which the future generations were taught the actual promptings which caused the Americans to war side by side with the French, making the United States and President Wilson as much of a figure in the French history as the French troops led by Lafayette are today so prominent in every version of your American history. This is the moral I sought to convey in my story without any resort to sensationalism or melodrama."

JAMES YOUNG DIRECTING HAYAKAWA.

Partially owing to the fact that William C. DeMille is to stop directing for a time in order to write two photoplays for production by his brother, Cecil B. DeMille, James Young has been engaged to direct Sessue Hayakawa in his next Paramount picture by Marion Fairfax, which has as its working title "The Unforgivable Sin."

James Young's career as a director dates back to practically the inception of the photodrama. He has since done much work that has stamped him as possessing imagination and technical skill. At present it is not known whether Mr. Young will remain to do more than this picture, but this will be decided upon long before he completes his first Paramount photoplay.

H. J. SMITH WITH WHOLESOME.

The appointment of H. J. Smith, formerly a representative of Mutual in the Minneapolis territory, to the management of the service department of the Wholesome Films Corporation, is announced by General Manager M. J. Weisfeldt. The executive offices of the Wholesome are now on the fourth floor of the Shops Building, 17 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Foreign Trade News

ROJAS, RANDALL & CO. ENTER FILM TRADE.

The general export house of Rojas, Randall & Co., Inc., of 26 Beaver street, New York, has recently added moving picture films to its many other lines. This concern has been trading with foreign countries for many years, and through branch offices, correspondents and agents keeps in constant touch with the needs of the different countries.

In the downtown section of New York, and as exporters of general merchandise, Rojas, Randall & Co. are considered among the leaders, particularly in connection with the Spanish and Portuguese speaking markets, which they have been covering in a thorough fashion.

J. M. de Aragon is in charge of the new film department, and no better man could have been chosen. Mr. Aragon has had experience as an exhibitor, buyer and exchangeman, and is recognized as an expert in film values. His close acquaintance with the industry and his knowledge of the foreign field will doubtless overcome the many difficulties which obstruct the path of the newcomer in the film business. The unquestionable financial standing of Rojas, Randall & Co., Inc., coupled with the selection of Mr. Aragon as manager of the film department are factors that may be taken as a guarantee for the foreign buyer and an assurance of success for the firm itself.

LANG RETURNS FROM PORTO RICO.

Arthur J. Lang, export manager of the Nicholas Power Company, who has just returned from Porto Rico, reports an unusually interesting installation of a Power's cameragraph 6-B at San Juan. The machine was installed in the Casino, one of the finest clubhouses in the West Indies.

Mr. Lang states that only the latest and best films are shown in the Casino, on Thursday evenings, and the exhibitions are given exclusively for the members of the club and guests.

Mr. Lang further reports that his trip throughout the Island was successful and says that as movie fans the Porto Ricans are hard to beat. The best American and European films are shown in the houses of the island.

FROM BRAZIL, CUBA AND PORTO RICO.

Lambertini-Film is the name of a producing company, with headquarters in Sao Paulo, Brazil, established about a year ago. It has released two pictures, both of them based on historical episodes, which have met with some local success.

Two of the most popular Havana motion picture houses have started contests. The Fausto is trying to locate "the most beautiful eyes" in the island, and the Prado is interested in "the most seductive mouth."

Francisco Maymon, of San Juan and Mayaguez, has secured the sole agency for Porto Rico of the Power's projecting machines. Mr. Maymon owns several theaters and operates a film renting exchange in the island.

Santos & Artigas, of Havana, Cuba, seem to be devoting more time to their circus than to the film business. Their activities during the past months have been somewhat restricted. Two productions, dealing with themes of local interest, made by this firm and recently released, have had some success.

Cinema Films Company, of Havana, under the management of Pedro Rosello, is exploiting the "Jimmy Dale" serial in the Cuban market.

The Campoamor Theater of Havana, owned by the Asturian Club and operated by the Universal interests under a long lease, is the only motion picture house in the West Indies giving continuous performances every day in the week.

Adolfo Roca, a well-known Havana buyer, is pushing Mutual pictures among the Cuban exhibitors. One of the Helen Holmes railroad serials, which he recently released, is proving a great attraction.

Casanova & Co., of Havana, are handling European subjects almost exclusively, although we know that they have made several attempts to connect with American film producers.

According to Cine-Mundial's agent in Northern Brazil, out of over 270,000 feet of new film exhibited in the city of Rio Janeiro during a given month of last year, 246,000 feet represented American brands. The Italian producers supplied about 8,000 feet in the same period.

Dr. Zeno Gandia, in charge of the Havana branch of the Medal Film Company, of New York, has opened an aggressive advertising campaign in the local daily papers. The Medal is handling Pathe, Metro, Essanay and Triangle pictures in Cuba and Porto Rico.

The Caribbean Film Company, with headquarters in Havana, had not released any pictures up to the time of this writing. This company was formed about a month ago for the purpose of establishing several exchanges in Cuba, Porto Rico, other West Indian islands, Venezuela and the Central American republics with the exception of Panama. It controls practically the whole Paramount program and special features for this territory.

J. Verdaguer, the well-known Barcelona buyer and exchangeman, has opened a branch office in Havana. Eudaldo Torres is in charge.

Baby Marie Osborne is the most popular film star in Porto Rico. Judging by box-office receipts, she ranks high above Chaplin, Pickford, Fairbanks, Bertini or any other European or American artist. Her popularity is so marked that just now she is a better attraction than the most sensational serial—and those who know Porto Rico will appreciate what this means.

A new trade paper, Tribuna Grafica, has appeared in Havana. Its editor claims absolute independence, but—.

Cia. Cinematographica Brazileira, the first concern to introduce American pictures in Brazil, is considered one of the most important exchanges in Latin-America. It is doing business with a capital in Spanish equivalent to $1,000,000 in United States currency, besides controlling a reserve fund of about $270,000. This company exploits the four largest theaters in Rio and owns or operates quite a few of the best houses in Sao Paulo. Its stock of film reaches the neighborhood of 18,000,000 feet and its agents are found in every important Brazilian district. Cine-Mundial's agent states that the firm supplies to the exhibitors seventy new subjects a week and controls for the whole of Brazil the product of thirty manufacturers.

AMONG THE EXPORTERS.

Fortoul Ryeman & Co., Park Row Building, New York, are acting as buyers for several film concerns in Latin-America. They also control the rights on some special productions.

J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., 729 Seventh avenue, New York, owns the foreign rights on Billy West King Bee comedies. An active campaign for the introduction of these pictures in the Spanish and Portuguese-speaking markets is being carried on through the advertising columns of Cine-Mundial.

The Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, is offering through Cine-Mundial the rights for Mexico, Cuba, and Central America on World Pictures, Black Diamond and Vim comedies; and "The Manxman." We understand that the company has already disposed of the rights on these productions in other Latin-American territories and Europe.

Western Import Company, 1457 Broadway, New York, controls the rights on Triangle pictures in Latin-America, Spain and Portugal. Morris Winik is in charge of the Rio Janeiro branch and Carlos Vasseur covers Spain and Portugal from Barcelona.

Rafael Cruz Blanco, an exchangeman operating in the West Indies and Mexico, recently bought, for the whole of Cuba and the State of Merida de Yucatan, the sixteen-episode serial "Jimmy Dale or the Grey Seal" and "Enlighten Your Daughter." The purchases were made through the Piedmont and Inter-Ocean companies respectively.

The Simbar Film Export Corporation, 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, is acting as distributor for Triangle and Fox pictures in Central America. It has a branch office in Guatemala City.

"My Four Years in Germany," an adaptation of the sensational story written by James W. Gerard, former American Ambassador to the Kaiser's court, will soon be ready for the Latin-American market.

Frank A. Keeney will start his advertising campaign throughout the Spanish and Portuguese-speaking world in the March issue of Cine-Mundial. He will offer "A Romance of the Underworld," with Catherine Calvert in the leading role.

This company intends to enlarge its activities throughout South America with the booking of first class programmes of American pictures. Mr. Herrera will arrive in New York some time in March.

Lyric Theater, Manila, P. I.

Conducted by Goulette & France—Represents Investment of $25,000—Has Been Making Money Since Its Opening.

ONE of the dominant structures in the amusement line in Manila, P. I., is the Lyric theater. This up-to-date picture house was opened June 3, 1917, by Messrs. Goulette & France, and has been a paying investment for the owners since its dedication. These progressive picture men also operate the Exhibitors' Film Exchange in conjunction with the Lyric, and Frank H. Goulette acts as general manager of both the theater and the exchange.

Lyric Theater, Manila, P. I.

The Lyric represents an expenditure of 50,000 pesos, an equivalent of $25,000 in American currency. With the exception of the balcony, which is built of native hard woods, the construction of the Lyric is of reinforced concrete. The seating capacity is 1,000. All of the chairs are of the tip-up variety, with cane bottoms, and were made especially for the tropics. There are 600 on the parquette floor and 400 in the balcony. A good sized stage has been provided for, and can accommodate comfortably vaudeville acts and small traveling companies. An open ventilator in the roof of the theater and which runs the length of the entire building is the means by which foul air is permitted to pass out. Fresh air is introduced through the medium of an underground ventilation system with fresh air registers in effective places in the orchestra and balcony. The scheme has proved to be a most efficient one, and as a consequence the air is always pure in the auditorium of the Lyric.

A permanent orchestra of from six to eight pieces supplies the musical complement to the picture entertainment. The members are Filipinos and all peculiarly well fitted by reason of their natural talents along this line.

At the back of the orchestra floor under the balcony is the operating room. It is fitted with up-to-date equipment, a part of which is two Simplex projecion machines, supplied by G. A. Metcalfe, of San Francisco, and a Hallberg motor generator. Alternating current is used throughout the house with especially constructed dimmers.

The lobby is of ample proportions, and posters and other advertising matter are arranged with an eye to the artistic. For the accommodations of the Lyric's patrons the owners conduct a cigar and newspaper stand in this part of the theater. Programs are changed two or three times a week and are supplied by the Progressive Motion Picture Company, of San Francisco, and by concerns in London. Paramount and other brands of productions are shown. As to advertising, the Lyric carries extensive and regular announcements in three American and five native and Spanish newspapers. Special display advertisements are used frequently, and these occupy from sixteen to eighty inches.

Acknowledgment is made to David P. Howells, of 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, for the data from which this story is written, and also for the photograph.

Rambles 'Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

WHEN The Rambler was for three seasons three weeks ahead of Buffalo Bill's Wild West, press-agenting the Old Scout, the most interesting letters he ever received in his life came from John Hammell. "Johnny" (as he was known on a circus lot) was in the "red wagon," and the letters contained currency, forwarded because of the press agent's weekly wage and the convincing statements set forth in the P. A.'s "swindle sheet."

Since those days Johnny has gone the limit of pictures from exhibitor to exchange manager. Now he is in charge of the General Film-Paralta exchange in the Masonic Temple Building, New York, with E. M. Dowling as his assistant. Dowling and Hammell were pals and fellow-dispensers of circus tickets, and have stuck well together in the film game, Dowling lately coming up from Pathe's, Washington.

Only Hopp Hadley could negotiate this one: "The reason Frank Hall gets the jump on the other states right purveyors is because of his exalted position in the heart of Filmtown. From his windows on the twenty-third floor of the Times Building there are five bridges, two railroad terminals in Manhattan, every terminal on the Jersey side and every ferry landing in plain sight. Mr. Hall sees the buyers coming into town, and once seen there's nothing else to it."

More, plenty more, music will be free and clear for the use of exhibitors, because Meyer Cohen has established himself as a publisher. For many years Meyer boosted for Charles K. Harris, and for many months ditto Harry Von Tilzer. "I'm eager to have my music played and sung in picture houses," quoth the veteran.

The Pathe Sun, for the reason that it will henceforth be edited by Tom North, will distribute to the Pathe organization much sunshine, but will be no "shine" sun. For Tom knows how. This he demonstrated at the time he had every exhibitor in the upper left-hand corner of the United States and part of Canada reading V-L-S-E Pals, which he edited when he was in Seattle. All of which proves that press agenting for Gentry Brothers' Pony and Dog Show and Ringling Brothers' Circus brought experience to Thomasso that he has not idly flittered away.

Charles Abrams is spending the current days quietly at his home, recuperating from a taxicab tangle that might have resulted far more painfully and seriously than it did. While riding north in Columbus avenue, with Eddie Carewe as his seatmate, the taxi Mr. Abrams had chartered swerved into a pillar of the elevated structure, on an attempt to turn into Cathedral Parkway. Mr. Abrams struck his head violently against the cab door, the glass cutting his scalp and the impact sending Mr. Abrams, insensible, to the pavement. He was soon lifted into an ambulance and taken to his apartments, badly blemished by his mishap.

Charles Wallach, who was, previous to volunteering, one of Jack Cohan's chief aids in issuing Universal's screen magazine, has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant and is stationed at the Medical Museum, Washington, with the Sanitary Corps.

Be it said in praise of a man who can rise to a position of importance from the midst of a big organization that Charles E. Burr has been made assistant general manager of the department of distribution for the Famous Players-Lasky organization with the good will of everybody on the pay roll attending him. Mr. Burr is declared to be the oldest member of the original Paramount office staff, and my informant adds that he well deserved his promotion. Another change in the Famous Players-Lasky executive staff comes in rumor form that Carl H. Pierce will be made special representative, largely devoting himself to travel, while Julian M. Solomon, Jr., becomes manager of the Exhibitors' Service Department.

Clara Kimball Young has her work thus cut out for her: Now working on "The House of Glass," having just finished "The Marionettes," she will next prepare for the screen "The Savage Woman," from a French source "La Femme Sauvage."

Here's a rara avis: Williamson Brothers' Submarine Corporation has no desire for publicity—at present.

Arthur Oliver, director of publicity for Frank A. Keeney's film venture and amusement enterprises, declares that here's the first time the roster of Catherine Calvert's support in "A Romance of the Under World" has been printed: Edgar O'Brien and David Powell, the two leading men, and Edwin Forsberg, the villian in the case—thus far Mr. Oliver claiming an all-star cast. Then, too, there is Cecil Chichester, Henry Lee, Sibyl Carmen and Marcia Harris, all busy at the Biograph studios, Bronxward, under the direction of James Kirkwood

Heredity observation: Madeline Mayer, who fits, glovelike, into the advertising department of the Famous Players-Lasky organization, is the daughter of Joseph Mayer, who has for years and years published the advertising program for the Barnum & Baily and Ringling Brothers' circuses.

When Assistant General Manager Claud S. Macgowan finished with his reconstruction work in Universal's press department Paul Gulick remained as editor of the company house organ and head of the service, with Hal Hodes designated as general publicity inventor. Arthur Jacobson continues in charge of the photograph cabinets.

Garfield Monday, February 11, at 11 o'clock, Manager Harold Edel unveiled, at an invitation ceremoney, a bronze tablet containing the honor role of Strand Theater employees who have joined the colors. The tablet was placed in the lobby facing Broadway. Of the men whose names will appear on the role of patriotism all but two of the twenty-four volunteered. A service flag flies in their honor over the portals of the Strand, and "Old Glory" in electric lights (every Saturday evening) is a part of the outside display.

Nat Rothstein, Universal's advertising manager, is in Los Angeles, called there by the sudden death of his father. The elder Rothstein went to California in search of improved health, but died very unexpectedly soon after his arrival on the Coast.

When the debris was cleared away, following the recent "blow down" in the Universal publicity department, Sam Palmer was discovered safely perched behind a desk in the editorial rooms of the Motion Picture News, where he will hereafter eagle-eye the outpourings of other press agents, while the other fellow jolted off the U's salary list became The Rambler. "It's an ill wind," etc.

Nothing has been said at the home of Harry Reichenbach concerning the demonstration of affection in which he participated in the lobby of the Broadway theater on a recent evening. Keen for the appropriateness of the "bally-hoo," Harry rented a trained chimpanzee, of rugged stature and long reach, to adorn the main entrance to the theatre, where "Tarzan of the Apes" has been holding forth. Harry was dressed with even more than his accustomed dapperness on the night in question, and while he was standing in happy contemplation of the crowds streaming through the main entrance, the chimp reached out its long arms, drew the press agent quickly toward him and then gave its benefactor an affectionate hug—as well as the scare of his life. Such a show of appreciation for work well performed quite overwhelmed Mr. Reichenbach—and sent the chimp back to winter quarters.

The sons of two game sporting gentlemen—Jerry Beatty and Eddie Mullen—have been matched to creep for a second-hand mimeograph offered by The Rambler. Mr. Mullen has been training his entry in the seclusion of Holyoke, Mass., and, as the challenging party, has been compelled to give the "low down" on his lad's record. Eddie declares that his boy can do the kitchen, over and back, in nothing. Mr. Beatty claims that kitchens in New York flats afford no room for even a comparison; all of which adds uncertainty to the outcome.

Burton Rice, whose art work became first known to the trade through the inserts he created for the trade press in advertising Bluebird's, has opened an art advertising studio in the Times Building, where he is associated with Raymond Cavanaugh in designing and writing advertising for film manufacturers.

M. H. Hoffman, just returned from a tour of several of Foursquare's exchanges, declares: "War taxes and Garfield Mondays are the culmination of several cumulative ailments with which the business has been afflicted, and it is my belief that, as in many cases of human illness, the patient is going to be greatly improved because of the attack. Business with the exhibitor is not so bad as he would have us believe. Plenty of showmen who owned one theater a year ago now own a half dozen, and others who had four or five now control chains of fifteen or twenty. The money all came in at the box-office, in most instances."

Alex Goldman has arrived in San Juan, Porto Rico, where he will organize a circuit of exchanges for the Universal.

Maurice Fleckles, vice president of Renowned Pictures, started last week upon a tour of the west in the interest of his firm. He went straight to Los Angeles, where he will remain a fortnight, before taking up his further travels.

Pathe exchange managers are mystifying exhibitors through the medium of a postal card covertly referring to "Wild Cows, Wild Bulls, Wild Horses and Wild Women." It's "The Pendleton Round-Up," in three reels, that's all.

If YOU are not mentioned hereafter, it's your own fault. We want news notes, personal briefs and interesting items. Slip the "dope" to THE RAMBLER.

Among the Picture Theaters

Bijou Grand Opera House, Calcutta

One of Finest and Best Equipped Picture Theaters in Orient—Seats 1,500, and Prices Range from 8 Cents to $1.

SINCE the recent opening of the Bijou Grand Opera House in Calcutta India boasts another splendid moving picture theater. According to our correspondent and David P. Howells, who has just returned from India, the new theater is among the finest in the Orient and compares favorably with the best picture theaters in America and Europe. E. H. Du Casse is largely responsible for the new theater, and it is due to his enterprise that it is up to the minute in many attractions as well as conveniences. Among the attractions are the roof-garden, with marble refreshment tables grouped about the fountain, playing in the center, and the beautifully appointed bar, where patrons go during intermissions for their necessary peg of whiskey. There are also luxurious lounge rooms and smoking rooms and comfortable retiring rooms.

chairs and electric fans. The latter, in connection with the modern ventilating system, makes the theater cool on the hottest nights. The general color scheme is green and cream and gold. Much embossed Australian metal has been used in the decoration. One unique feature of the house is that each division, the pit, the dress circle and the gallery, is separate from the others, with separate box offices and entrances so that the various classes of patrons need not "rub shoulders" with one another.

The house seats 1,500 comfortably. Prices of admission range from 8 cents in the gallery to $1 for a seat in the boxes.

St. Denis Theater, Montreal

St. Denis Corporation Successfully Operates Big Picture House with a Tragic Past, Due to Its Unfortunate Location—Big Pictures and an Excellent Music Program, However, Prove Effective Bait for Public.

A THEATER with tremendous possibilities, nullified by its unfortunate location, is the St. Denis, now being successfully run for the first time by the St. Denis Corporation, Ltd., which also controls the Regent Theater, Toronto; the Flower Theater, Ottawa, and the Regal Film Company. Without a doubt this huge auditorium is one of the largest and most completely equipped on the continent, and yet it is so badly situated that all the gold decorations in the world, the most improved heating, lighting and ventilating systems and the best pictures on the market would not in the past bring the public to its doors. Apparently lacking in knowledge of the lay-out and customs of this city of two races, the original contractors chose a site about a mile beyond the theatrical center, in the heart of the French section of the town. The French-Canadians are not theater-going people, as years of statistics and experience have proved, and were it not for the English and Jewish population, which amounts to about a quarter of the total, theaters of all descriptions would inevitably starve in Montreal. Nevertheless, in the face of this fact, over a million dollars was recently spent on the construction of this playhouse, hidden away in the east end of the city. Every manager that has attempted to run the theater has had to tackle the problem of how to induce a tired and indolent public to take a ten-minute additional car ride, and up to the present time the history of the St. Denis has been a series of tragically empty houses.

This season the efforts of the St. Denis Corporation, Ltd., company are apparently bringing the first signs of fruit. By dint of many super-productions, first-class orchestral and organ music and extensive advertising the public is being gradually trained to realize that it has at its disposal a really beautiful theater. Under these circumstances the fact that the St. Denis broke the records for Canadian attendance during the week of "The Fall of the Romanoffs" may be considered to be quite an achievement.

The seating capacity of this beautiful theater is 2,800, which includes 300 box seats, situated across the front of the balcony and at each side of the auditorium. The boxes are railed off with heavy brass fixtures, carpeted and provided with from four to six cane chairs. As the theater is built on the mezzanine plan there are no posts to obstruct the view. In case of fire fifteen exits are provided, as well as modern fire escapes. The stage is large, and if occasion required it could be equipped for anything from grand opera to hippodrome productions. Pictures are projected upon a gold fiber screen, and a complete system of indirect lighting, including a full range of colored lights, is used. The operating room is situated in the back of the balcony.

The orchestra, which consists of fourteen pieces, is under the direction of Milton Blankstein, a musician of wide and varied experience in the art of putting music to pictures. Every Sunday afternoon and evening a special symphony concert is given by the St. Denis Orchestra, which for the purpose is augmented to twenty-five of the best musicians obtainable, when classical and modern music of the highest order is rendered. A small fortune, amounting to no less than $30,000, was expended on the organ.

The decorations of the St. Denis Theater are pleasing, being carried out in classical style with the utmost refinement and restraint. Instead of having draperies enhancing the beauty of the interior the desired effect is achieved by stucco, worked in bas-relief, painted in cream, gold and blue. On the walls and ceilings a certain richness is obtained by medallions, obtained from the Italian period The great sunbursts over the two main boxes could be characterized as Egyptian, while the general squareness and simplicity of the whole design is Greek. Thus, although no one period of art has been adhered to, ideas have been drawn from every country to form one complete and satisfying whole.

Of interest to moving picture managers in more temperate climates is the problem of heating and cooling a theater in the extreme weather that annually makes it appearance in Montreal. Incredible as it may seem a veritable mountain of some 350 tons of coal is burned in the St. Denis Theater every winter. A system of hot water radiators keeps the temperature of the building at a comfortable warmth throughout the coldest winter weather.

As the severity of the cold in Montreal is only equaled by the heat of the summer special care has been given to the problem of ventilating the auditorium. This has been successfully accomplished by the installation of exhaust fans and water coolers, and the air is thereby changed every three minutes. Roland Robert, manager pro tem of the theater, managed the Regent Theater, Toronto, probably one of the most successful motion picture houses in the country, and the only one that gets 35 cents for 180 orchestra seats at every evening performance.

GRAND THEATER, PETONE, NEW ZEALAND

The Grand Theater, located in Jackson street, Petone, New Zealand, was opened in the latter part of 1917, and is one of the most up-to-date motion picture houses in that city. It is of concrete construction, and has a seating capacity of 900 persons. The seats are upholstered and are of the tip-up type. The floor has a gradual slope to it, giving an unobstructed view of the screen. The Grand is under the management of A. Cassie, who reads religiously each issue of the Moving Picture World. Mr. Cassie says that he finds much data in the Moving Picture World that is of material aid to him in advertising his pictures and running his house.

Australian Notes

By Thomas H. Imrie.

AUSTRALIAN studios are in a state of great activity at present, and a variety of subjects is promised for early release. It is satisfactory to note that local producers are turning their attention to the making of modern sociological subjects and feature comedy-dramas. All recent pictures made locally have been either costume, historical or war plays, and these are certainly not the easiest to produce. The standard of these pictures has been poor in almost every instance, with the result that the public is now very wary of home-made films, preferring the imported article every time. It is to be hoped that the year 1918 will see a new era in motion picture production in this country, and that it will show that good pictures can be made here as well as in America.

Charles Woods is completing "A Coo-ee from Home," a sociological drama in eight parts, which will be the longest and most pretentious photoplay yet made in Australia. Gertrude Darling and Charles Villiers are the leading players.

"The Enemy Within" is under course of production by Roland Staveley. The featured player is Reg. J. (Snowy) Baker, the noted boxer and athlete, who contributes several sensational stunts. The story deals with the workings of the I. W. W. Baker takes the part of a detective who is successful in frustrating their plots.

The Antipodes Film Corporation starts this week on a four-part comedy-drama entitled "Yachts and Hearts." This concern's initial picture, "Flirting with Death," a historical subject dealing with the ill-fated Burke and Wills expedition, will be released during the month.

Another local release this month will be John F. Gavin's six-part production "For the Term of Her Natural Life," a historical subject of convict settlement days, featuring Ethel Basford and Charles Villiers.

Lieut. Jim Anderson, who has been in charge of the Fox Film Corporation's Australian offices since they were opened in the beginning of 1916, returns to America soon.

Australasian Films, Ltd., is starting the new year well. A published list of coming attractions shows that it has secured the Australian rights for many big states rights pictures, in addition to the program features from Triangle, World, Vitagraph, Pathe, First National Exhibitors, Selznick and Ivan. The exhibiting branch of Australasian Films, Ltd., (Union Theaters, Ltd.) is now screening at its first-run Sydney houses, in addition to the brands listed above, all Metro, Fox, Art Drama, and Balboa features. It is therefore easily seen that it gives the Sydney public a good variety.

The Fox pantomime production "Jack and the Beanstalk" has just completed a successful season in Sydney. A special series of matinee performances had to be arranged to cope with the crowds that wished to see the picture. "The Spy" is another Fox picture that has proved a good box-office attraction.

A subject of interest to showmen during the past month was the proclamation issued by the Government under the war precautions regulations directing them to exhibit whatever slides of films in connection with the reinforcements referendum with which they were supplied. As New South Wales is, with the exception of about four districts, very strongly in favor of "No," many exhibitors got themselves into serious trouble with their patrons over the exhibiting of "Yes" slides. In one theater the audience literally howled the roof off the building, and the proprietor had to plead with them to restrain their indignation and tell them that it was no fault of his that the lantern slides in question were being shown.

The Drews "On Vacation" in Florida

The Trade as Well as Picturegoers Will Wish Talented Couple a Most Enjoyable Loaf.

THE DREWS have gone to Florida for a well-earned vacation, after completing their second year as creators and co-stars of Metro-Drew comedies. Forty-seven one-act Metro-Drew comedies were written, produced and released during the year 1916, and forty-two one-act Metro-Drew comedies, with a five-act "thriller" to complete the quota, were done in 1917. The Drew comedies have enjoyed a steady advance in quality and popularity.

Mr. and Mrs. Drew will remain in Florida until March 1. They will visit Palm Beach, Jacksonville, St. Augustine, and other points both known and unknown, but will have no settled habitation while there. "After reading manuscripts and producing them without cessation for ninety-four weeks," says Mr. Drew, "I want my mind to be as nearly a blank as possible." The Drews, like other important Metro stars, will soon vary their work by an excursion into the realm of the legitimate stage, appearing during the spring under the auspices of Richard Walton Tully.

In the two years they have been appearing under the sign of the Metro parrot, the combination of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in Metro comedies has become a household word. The comedies have appealed to normal, wholesome people, the policy of Mr. and Mrs. Drew being to present nothing so extravagant that it might not happen in a normal family. Consequently, the little comedies of domestic life have struck a responsive chord.

Mr. and Mrs. Drew have "done their bit" in placing live topics of national importance before the people in an agreeable way. Their food conservation comedy, "The Patriot," has added many to the ranks of "Hooverites" throughout the country and elicited a letter of appreciation from Mr. Hoover himself.

"Gas Logic," a forthcoming Metro-Drew comedy, takes cognizance of the coal situation, and "Help Wanted," now being shown throughout the country, is a real Red Cross picture.

The first Metro-Drew comedy was "At the Count of Ten," released March 12, 1916. "Pay Day," the Metro-Drew five-act production which will be released as a special, is a picturization of the melodrama by Lottie Meany and Della Bailey which had a Broadway run. In it Mrs. Drew will appear as Doris Fenton, a "poor working girl," and Sidney Drew as Kirke Brentwood, a villain who leads not only a double, but a triple life. The usual Drew comedy is multiplied by five in "Pay Day," and magnified many times.

Mayer Returns to Old Position

Buys Controlling Interest in American Feature and Metro of New England.

LOUIS B. MAYER, one of New England's leading film men, has again assumed control of the American Feature Film Company and the Metro Pictures Corporation of New England, with headquarters at 60 Church street, Boston. It was but a few months ago that Mr. Mayer severed his connections with these concerns, to assume charge of the Select Pictures Corporation of New England. At the time Mr. Mayer, it is understood, purchased a small interest in the Select corporation.

Mr. Mayer now has purchased a controlling interest in the American Feature Film Company and the Metro Pictures Corporation of New England. Mr. Mayer has appointed Thomas B. Spry, whom he took with him when he went to Select, as business manager of the American Feature Company.

Edward J. Farrell, who during the past few years has managed several local exchanges and who recently was in charge of the American Feature Film Company, has been appointed by Louis J. Selznick as general manager for Select Pictures in New England. Samuel J. Steinfeldt, former manager of the Supreme Feature Film Company of Boston and who has traveled at various times for several Boston film companies, was placed in charge of the Select office temporarily, serving three days in that capacity. He was, however, relieved by Mr. Farrell.

William E. Furber, who had been assistant manager of the American Feature under Mr. Farrell, will be retained as publicity manager.

Says Conditions Basically Are Good

S. R. Kent of General Film Returns from Long Trip, Declaring Depression is Only Mental and Will Mend.

AFTER two months on the Pacific Coast and in various distributing centers west of the Mississippi River Sidney R. Kent, sales manager of General Film Company, returned to New York, bringing the latest estimate of the situation as regards the trade in motion pictures. He says it is impossible to deny that business is below normal and pronounces this due mainly to a psychological cause, with the weather as an added reason. Nevertheless Mr. Kent is encouraged to look for a prompt recovery in the industry at large.

"After attending in turn the conventions of General Film Company branch managers in New York, Chicago and San Francisco," says Mr. Kent, "I spent some time investigating conditions on the Pacific Coast. In the Northwest activity is increasing. In San Francisco the conditions are good. In Los Angeles they are extremely good. In Denver they are satisfactory. In Kansas they are unsettled, with, however, a strengthening tone. In St. Louis they are improving. I am confining all my comments to motion picture conditions."

Several additions have been made to the General Film sales organization. R. H. Allen, formerly assistant Paramount-Artcraft manager at Seattle, is to co-operate with L. A. Todd, manager of the Seattle branch of General Film, giving special attention to Paralta Plays. J. M. Cummings, formerly a General Film branch manager, is working in the Kansas City territory in a similar direction. A new branch manager, G. W. Whitney, has been installed at Denver.

CHAPLIN AND LAUDER CO-STAR.

Two Comedians Collaborate on Five-Hundred-Foot Subject to Be Exploited for War Relief.

COMBINING two distinct and peerless brands of comedy for the purpose or raising a million dollars or more, Charles Chaplin and Harry Lauder, the world greatest laugh producers, have been filmed together in a five hundred-foot subject which will shortly be exploited throughout this country and the other allied nations. The net proceeds will be added to Lauder's $5,000,000 war relief fund.

The idea was conceived by the screen star when he was entertaining Lauder at his new motion picture plant in Hollywood, Cal. The plan so strongly appealed to the Scotch humorist that not a moment was lost in carrying it out, and two hours later the camera had filmed what is without doubt the most unique comedy ever made.

Chaplin and Lauder comprise the entire cast and the story is a collaboration of the two performers. There is only one scene in the picture, and during a large part of the pantomime Lauder has adopted the Chaplin style and the screen star takes a fling at the characteristics for which the Scotchman is widely known.

When the story was completed, the two comedians with their personal business managers, Tom Vallance and Sydney Chaplin, took up the subject of turning the film into money, and it was decided that the entire Chaplin organization would be used to further the success of the venture.

Much depends upon the action of the First National Exhibitor's Circuit, the corporation holding the contract for Chaplin's exclusive services. They are the ones who will determine whether it will be a violation of contract to exploit the famous Charles in the manner suggested.

Efforts will also be made to raise an additional sum of money through the sale of fifty thousand photographs of the two comedians. A dozen different poses were taken and plans for the sale and distribution of these will be arranged by the two business managers.

Chaplin is confident that the sale of the film will net at least one million dollars. In raising this amount the comedy king practically assures the success of the gigantic undertaking of Lauder, which is taking the Scotch comedian on a tour of the United States in his endeavor to accumulate $5,000,000 for the world's most worthy cause.

ALEXANDER DEBARY, AUTHOR-PRODUCER.

France has contributed a number of motion picture artists to the industry in the United States. There is Capellini, and Tourneur and Perret, all of whom have made their mark on the American product. Now comes Alexander Debarry from Paris, a French author of some note in his own land, a writer of motion picture stories and a supervising director. Mr. Debary has just landed on these shores and is looking over the motion picture situation with a view to making a connection with some producing company which will appreciate the sort of assistance he is able to give.

Mr. Debary believes, and rightly, too, that it is difficult for any one but the author to place the proper interpretation upon a story. Hence, with the picturing of his stories he finds it necessary to appear as a supervising director or interpreter of the scenes to be portrayed. In the present condition of the business, when so much depends upon the correct interpretation of a story, Mr. Debary believes that his services are indispensable. It is possible that he may render valuable assistance to our already capable producing forces.

Maurice Tourneur

Assistant Director of the M. P. D. A.—An Artist of Many Accomplishments.

MAURICE TOURNEUR was born in Paris, France, in 1878 and was graduated from Lycee Condorcet when he was eighteen years old. After finishing college, he became a designer and interior decorator and has to his credit many illustrations for books and magazines, striking poster, lace curtain and fabric designs as well as a number of original stage settings. He then became associated with the great French artist, Puvis de Chavannes, and did much work with him on the decorations of the Boston Public Library.

The next three years of his life were spent in the French army—as an officer of artillery. When his period of service expired, he was seized with the desire to go on the stage, which he did and at his own salary—90 francs or about $18.00 per month. His rise in this profession was rapid. His first engagement was with a road show playing four one-act plays on one-night stands. In the four plays, Tourneur portrayed nine parts and in one of the plays he found himself first as a servant introducing a character, then after a quick exit and a quicker change, he became the character he had just introduced. His next engagement was with Mme. Rejane, and with her he made practically a world tour, including South America, England, Spain, Portugal, Italy and Africa.

Maurice Tourneur.

After this engagement he became associated with Antoine, the greatest of French producers. During the following seven years, he associated and collaborated with Antoine in the production of over four hundred plays. These plays run the gamut from classics to farce comedy and included Shakesperian, Modern, Russian, German and other foreign productions. During this engagement, Mr. Tourneur covered practically the same tour as he had previously made with Mme. Rejane.

About this time the motion picture was beginning to come into its own and Mr. Tourneur naturally looked to his old friend, Emile Chautard, who was a leading man under Mr. Tourneur's direction on the legitimate stage, but now director general of the Compagnie Eclair, the leading film company of Paris. The tables were now turned for Mr. Tourneur and he became an actor under Mr. Chautard's direction. It was only a matter of a short while until Mr. Tourneur himself was directing for the same company and was sent to Africa to produce war pictures. Here, with the whole French army at his command, he produced several big features, including the fall of Constantinople.

Mr. Tourneur's decision to go to America came quite by accident. He was found reading an English book in a cafe, by Mr. Chautard, who suggested on finding that he could speak English, that he go to America as a producer for the American branch of the Eclair Co. This suggestion became a realization and in 1914 Mr. Tourneur set foot on American soil to again take up his work in the motion pictures.

His rise in this country was meteoric. He rose from practically an unknown quantity to one of the leading producers within a few weeks' time and now has to his credit many masterpieces in the new art.

ELMIRA SOCIAL FEDERATION SHOWS PICTURES.

J. P. Redington of Scranton, Pa., has furnished a complete motion picture outfit for the Social Federation of Elmira, N. Y., of which Mrs. C. M. Bullard is president. The Federation is now giving hree shows weekly with educational subjects.

Goodwin Film Gets $118,348 Damages

Awarded That Amount in Its Suit Against Lumiere Jougla, Celluloses Planchon and Claudius Poulaillon.

UNDER the terms of a decree filed in the United States District Court the Goodwin Film and Camera Company is awarded $118,348 damages against the Lumiere Jougla Company, Cellulose Planchon, Inc., and Claudius Poulaillon.

The plaintiff company filed suit against the defendants several months ago alleging infringement of patent in connection with the use of pellicles in film reproduction work. Ex-Judge George C. Holt was designated special master to take testimony and report on the merits of the controversy.

Judge Holt filed his report recently after taking a mass of testimony recommending that the defendants be directed to pay the plaintiff company $118,348, and upon the application of Archibald Cox, counsel for the plaintiff, Judge Manton of the United States District Court confirmed the report.

The decree also provides that the defendants shall be perpetually enjoined from infringing upon the patent rights of the plaintiff company and that the costs of the litigation shall be borne by the defendants.

McLaughlin Select Manager in Kansas City

IN A. H. McLaughlin Select Pictures Corporation has secured as its new branch manager for the Kansas City exchange not only a man of sound film experience, but a business man of rounded ability as well. Mr. McLaughlin has recently been with the Vitagraph organization as manager of its Cincinnati branch, which position he held with success for more than a year. It was after having been with the V. L. S. E. organization a brief five months that McLaughlin was given charge of the Vitagraph office in Cincinnati, a recognition of the unusual qualities of leadership and executive ability which he had demonstrated in that period. This time had been spent as salesman, attached to the Chicago office.

A. H. McLaughlin.

Mr. McLaughlin received his business training in the newspaper field, having started work as an advertising man on the Pittsburgh Press, a position which he held for nine years. While on the Press McLaughlin made a study of advertising methods followed by the various businesses which used the columns of his paper, and thus gained an intensive knowledge of both sides of advertising.

Continuing in the advertising field, Mr. McLaughlin went to the Cleveland Leader, and afterward to the Chicago Tribune. His next change brought him into an important editorial position, in which he gained knowledge of the motion picture field, for he was selected as editor of Photoplay Magazine. While here he made a deep study of the motion picture industry, and on leaving Photoplay he concentrated his efforts on a campaign of specialty selling, and worked up that salesmanship ability, which led to his present position as manager of Select's Kansas City exchange.

CONSOLIDATING UNIVERSAL'S EXCHANGES.

Joe Brandt, lately shifted on the roster of Universal executives, to the position of General Sales Manager, is finishing a fortnight's travel in the middle West and South, where he has been consolidating in several cities the different exchanges that have been severally handling Universal's product. St. Louis, Kansas City, Oklahoma City, Denver, Dallas, and Atlanta are on his route.

Universal has been handling Bluebirds and Jewel features in organizations complete and apart from the regular "U" offices throughout the country. In New York and Chicago the consolidation of different exchanges first became operative and now Joe Brandt is carrying forward the plan.

Chicago News Letter

By JAS. S. McQUADE

Fuel Order on Coal Deliveries Works Hardship.

The fuel order issued by the local fuel administrator last week worked hardships on several picture theaters in Chicago. This order, signed by Raymond E. Durham, chairman of the Cook County committee of the Fuel Administration, was sent out to the coal dealers of Cook County and the last paragraph read as follows:

"Under this order you are hereby specifically directed to discontinue delivery of coal to saloons, breweries, motion picture theaters, theaters or other places of amusement, or to industries until the class of consumers enumerated in the foregoing and the schools are first adequately provided for."

About five or six specific cases came up last week in which exhibitors were reduced to extremity, having no coal whatever on hand. The fuel administrator explained, however, that sufficeint coal in such cases can be purchased to keep the temperature within the building at 45 degrees and prevent the freezing of pipes.

Get-Rich-Quick Practice Still in Vogue.

W. R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, forwarded me a postal card last week which he had received from Giles P. Cory & Co., bearing the postmark of February 5, last. On the back of this card was printed the following:

"'Birth of a Race' to be a record breaker.

"Do you know that dividends of one thousand per cent. are not unusual in the big feature film business?

"Do you know that each $100 invested in 'The Million Dollar Mystery' made $700; that $100 in the 'Birth of a Nation' made $1,800; that $100 in 'The Spoilers' made $1,000, and that $100 in 'Traffic in Souls' made $3,000?

"'The Birth of a Race,' a mammoth twelve-reel feature, is now being produced by the Frohman Amusement Corporation, New York, and will be on the screen soon. This play, dealing with a big, broad and vital public question, has indorsements from hundreds of prominent men and educational institutes the country over.

"We began placing this issue only very recently, and yet nearly 7,000 discriminating investors have already become our stockholders. The stock will positively be withdrawn from the market within thirty days, so no matter whether you have $50 or $5,000 to invest, sign the attached post card and mail now—today. A delay of a single day means the loss of several hundred dollars.—Giles P. Cory & Co."

Is there any need for comment in this matter?

The great dailies of Chicago should take up this and similar cases, in order to protect the uninformed and unwary investor from loss. The pity of it is that needy women, with only a few hundred dollars laid away, are the chief sufferers by the promises of such big returns from small investments.

Chicago Film Brevities.

At the meeting of Chicago Local, Illinois Branch, M. P. E. L. of A., for the election of officers for the ensuing year, held in League headquarters, in the Masonic Temple, Friday, February 1, the following were elected: President, Joseph Hopp; vice-president, William E. Heaney; secretary, William J. Sweeney; treasurer, Fred W. Hartman, and sergeant-at-arms, William Rohe.

The members of the executive committee elected are: Alfred Hamburger, John Bobeng, Robert R. Levy, George D. Hopkinson, Harry Miller and William D. Burford.

The members of Chicago Local are to be congratulated on the re-election of Joseph Hopp as president. Sidney Smith, who has been the secretary of Chicago Local for many years, declined to be a candidate for re-election owing to his pressing duties as manager of the Kedzie Annex Theater. Mr. Smith was given a rising vote of thanks and three rousing cheers for his efficiency as secretary in the past. William J. Sweeney, who succeeds Mr. Smith as secretary, has held the position of treasurer for the last eight terms. Mr. Hartman, the new treasurer, is an energetic member, and has been assistant manager of the National Exposition in New York, which has been postponed until fall.

The employees of the American Film Company, Inc., both of the factory and offices, this city, recently gave an additional proof of their patriotism by pledging to abstain from meat at breakfast and wheat at dinner for a period of sixty days, and the young women of the factory have also agreed to omit indulging in candy for the same period. Not to be outdone the men in the factory and in the office have promised to contribute a fine of five cents to the Red Cross every time they inadvertently indulge in language that would offend a Bible class. To keep tab on the men Superintendent Silverberg has appointed a number of monitors, who will register all the swear words and also collect the fines.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Van Ronkel left Chicago for a four weeks' stay in Southland last week. Mr. Van Ronkel decided that this vacation was due himself and wife, as it is the first pleasure trip they have taken for the past fourteen years. The happy tourists will visit Hot Springs, Palm Beach and Jacksonville on their tour. Although it had been given out that Mr. Van Ronkel was about to engage in the production of pictures, he asserts that he has made no plans for the future, and, indeed, has given the matter little thought. "Van" says that business will be strictly banned during this pleasure trip.

Nat Rothstein,, general publicity manager for the Universal Film Exchange, New York, spent a few hours in the city last week on his return from the Pacific Coast, where he attended the funeral obsequies of his father. Mr. Rothstein is well known in trade circles here, having formerly lived in Chicago for some time.

Julius Burnheim, formerly manager of Universal's branch office, Minneapolis, has joined the sales force of the Chicago office.

Mary Miles Minter, the popular star of the American Film Company, recently received a letter from Sergeant Hugh Allen, of the National Army Motor Truck Company 354, at Camp Kearney, near San Diego, Cal., requesting her to become godmother to his company. Miss Minter accepted the off r, and will visit Camp Kearney in the near future to greet her brawny family of seventy United States fighting men. The latter had a photograph taken of the entire company, which they presented to Miss Minter, handsomely framed.

A. K. Brown was appointed manager of the Bandbox Theater, 127 W. Madison street, this city, last week, to succeed John Keane, who has held that position for the past year. Mr. Brown at one time owned five theaters in outlying districts, including Evanston, Wilmette, La Grange, Hinsdale and Gary, which he sold out to engage in farm and timber interests. He recently sold these interests, and the liking for the old business prompted him to accept the management of the Bandbox. Remembering the valuable aid afforded him by the Moving Picture World years ago when in the business, he immediately subscribed for that publication.

Bessie Love, accompanied by her mother, spent a few hours in the city one day last week on her way to Los Angeles, where she will resume work at the Paralta studios. She will immediately engage in the production of "The Little Sister of Everybody," her next Pathe feature. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Proctor gave a dinner in her honor, to which a few friends were invited.

Theda Bara spent a day and a half in the city last week on her way to the coast to begin work in a new feature, the title of which is withheld for the present.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. HARLEMAN

Grauman's Theater Opens Auspiciously

Los Angeles' Most Pretentious House Has Imposing Dedication—Many Well-Known Motion Picture Persons Present.

ON Friday, February 1, Grauman's Theater, the latest and by far the most elaborate motion picture theater in Los Angeles, was formally opened to the public. Thousands of people were lined up on Broadway, Third street, Fourth street, and around on Hill street trying to gain admission. Several thousand were turned away.

The theater's premiere was surrounded by a great deal of ceremony. The lobby displayed scores of big floral pieces sent to Manager Sid Grauman by friends here and out of town. Spectators made their way through aisles of flowers, escorted by girl ushers in cadet uniforms and found within not the customary garish light, but a subdued illumination just bright enough to display the beauties of the auditorium.

The interior decoration scheme follows the early Egyptian style of ornamentation. There are many lights, no glare. Alcoves disclose Egyptian figures, the side walls are subdued in tone and the proscenium a triumph of good taste. Draperies and floor coverings added to the artistic tone of the interior effect.

The Rev. Baker P. Lee made a brief introductory speech, in which he took occasion to compliment the builders of the new house and to congratulate Los Angeles picture enthusiasts upon the luxury provided them.

Preceding the talk the audience had been treated to a surprise. A drapery and false proscenium concealed the orchestra pit and spectators had taken it for granted that the stage lay immediately behind it. The draperies parted, however, and revealed the Grauman symphony orchestra, which was enthusiastically applauded. Under the direction of Rudolph G. Kopp operatic numbers and popular airs were given, the first beautifully and with effect, the latter in the dashing style that is now so much in favor. Jesse Crawford, organist, also won plaudits for his music, while Miss Line Reggiani sang "Most Beautiful Bird" and other arias acceptably.

William S. Hart, whose latest play, "The Silent Man," was the main feature of the entertainment proper, was present and received an ovation when, at the close of the screen play, he appeared on the stage in the garb familiar to all admirers of his drama, and recited a poem and told stories of his experiences.

Among those present were Jesse L. Lasky, Cecil B. De Mille, Thomas H. Ince, Mary Pickford, Sessue Hayakawa, Frank Keenan, Jack Pickford, Wallace Reid, George Beban, Mae Murray, William S. Hart, Earl Williams, Lois Weber, Phillips Smalley, Thomas Meighan, Dorothy Dalton, Douglas Fairbanks, Roscoe Arbuckle, Margery Wilson, Vola Vale, Franklyn Farnum, Charles Chaplin, Ruth Roland, Edward Maier, Harry Caulfield, Al Levy, Julian Johnson, Joseph Montroe, Mayor F. T. Woodman, Chief of Police John L. Butler, Edna Purviance, Dustin Farnum, Winifred Kingston, Enid Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Lewis, Charles Ray, Mitchell Lewis, J. Warren Kerrigan, E. H. Allen, Bessie Barriscale, Constance Talmadge, Mary Miles Minter, Wilfred Buckland, Douglas Gerrard, Henry Walthall, Stuart Holmes, William Desmond, Bryant Washburn, Sydney Chaplin, Mack Sennett, D. W. Griffith, Henry Lehrman, David Horsley, Marshall Stedman, Oscar Apfel, Hampton Del Ruth, W. H. Clune, T. L. Tally, Donald Bowles, Carl Walker, Emil Kehrlein, Jr., Fred Miller, Roy Miller, W. T. Wyatt, William Sibbald, Charles Gates, Seymour Tally, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Behymer, Mr. and Mrs. Sparks Berry, Hal Roach, W. H. Clifford, Henry McRae, E. D. Horkheimer, H. M. Horkheimer, Mrs. Rudolph G. Kopp and Harry Leonhardt.

TWO STUDIOS TEMPORARILY SUSPEND.

Due to Fuel and Railroad Conditions Triangle Shuts Down for a Week and Universal for a Month.

A JOLT was given the local photoplay colony last week when the announcement was made that two of the largest studios on the Pacific Coast had suspended production, the Universal for a month and the Triangle studios at Culver City for a week, which, of course, meant hundreds of actors, directors and studio employes without work for the time being. The Universal studios were closed by telegraphic orders from the East and all companies laid off for a month with the exception of two serials now in the process of production.

On the bulletin board of the Triangle studios the following notice was posted: "All actresses, actors and cameramen, and those in the producing department with the exception of scenario writers, will have a week's vacation without pay, starting January 23, but will report for work January 31."

When asked the reason for the action at the Triangle studio, H. O. Davis, vice president and general manager, said: "The main reason for the Triangle temporarily suspending operations is because our film factory in Fort Lee, N. J., is located in the district ordered closed by the National Fuel Administration. Also, owing to the traffic congestion in the East, preference is being given to coal cars and we are unable to secure shipments of raw material from the Eastman Company in Rochester, N. Y."

At the Triangle studios, all of the various producing units are back at work. Things are now running at the Culver City plant on normal schedule, with the probability that several additional companies will be added to the comedy organization.

Twenty-two Exchanges Booking Christie's.

When in September, 1916, the Christie Film Company, Charles and Al Christie, decided to distribute their comedies through independent exchanges, they adopted a slogan "Best Theaters Everywhere," and went ahead to make that slogan good. Slapstick ruled the comedy program at that time, but with the faith that had caused Al Christie to cling to his own brand of light comedy for two years previous, he continued producing comedy as he visioned it. The slap and the stick were entirely missing from Christie's scenes. Instead amusing situations with pretty girls to carry them and exacting care as to settings and details handled with Al Christie's skill offered comedies that soon opened the doors of the best theaters everywhere to their showing.

Where but a few of the independent exchanges were handling these comedies in September, 1916, today twenty-two representative organizations throughout America have yearly contracts for Christie prints. The Gaumont Film Hire Service has recently acquired the rights to distribution for the British Isles, and further negotiations are under way for other foreign markets.

The Rialto, New York; Loew's Theater, New York; the Metropolitan, Chicago; the Knickerbocker, Cleveland; the American, Denver; the New Garrick, Minneapolis; the Parkway, Baltimore, and a score of other of the better houses have incorporated in their programs Christie Comedies.

Dustin Farnum Starts Own Company.

A new motion picture concern which promises results both artistically and financially is Sherman Pictures, Inc., in process of incorporation under the laws of this State, which has as its principal backers Harry Sherman and Dustin Farnum. The product will be known as the Dustin Farnum Feature Plays.

Dustin Farnum.

Mr. Sherman is perhaps best known as the owner of the exhibition rights for fourteen states of Griffith's "Birth of a Nation." Mr. Farnum has a world-wide celebrity as a strong drawing card in photodrama.

No contracts with director or supporting cast will be signed up until a studio has been obtained. The new company eventually will build its own studio, but at present is considering the renting of one, in order that work may be speedily begun. Preliminary organization, it is estimated by Mr. Sherman, will take probably from four to six weeks. "The story will be emphasized in our productions," said Mr. Farnum yesterday, "no inferior stories will be used. So far we have secured Zane Gray's stories and novels for production, and we are negotiating with other writers. We shall not be confined entirely to western stories, though, naturally, since I have been so long identified with them, we shall produce many of these."

Asked whether Winifred Kingston would be his leading woman in the new company, Mr. Farnum said that, while as yet no contracts had been signed, she undoubtedly will be.

Two Girls Injured When Auto Burns.

Pinned beneath an automobile when it overturned on the road between Redondo and Wilmington, Kathleen Clifford and Corenne Grant narrowly escaped being fatally burned when the car caught fire early today. Miss Clifford, Miss Grant and Thomas Blickers, the chauffeur, were all seriously cut and bruised.

The automobile caught fire after it had overturned, pinning the two girls and the chauffeur beneath it. For a minute the flames were near the gasoline tank. Miss Clifford and Miss Grant managed to free themselves with the help of Blickers. Despite their injuries they made desperate attempts to choke the flames by throwing sand on the burning car.

After they had worked for a quarter of an hour the fire was extinguished. A passing automobile carried Miss Clifford, Miss Grant and the chauffeur to a physician.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

J. Gordon Edwards, who has just arrived from the East, is now busily engaged at the William Fox studios in Los Angeles preparing for the arrival of his star, Theda Bara.

Eleanor Fields, who for the past year and a half has been playing leads with the Keystone Company and in Mack Sennett Comedies, on the expiration of her contract with the latter on February 2 signed with the Christie Comedy Company. Bobbie Vernon will play opposite her.

William S. Hart no longer has the sombrero so familiar to his admirers the country over—the hat he has worn in nearly every one of his many screen successes. Hart has donated the hat to the American Red Cross. On the crown, in the handwriting of the actor, is its history, together with Hart's autograph. It is the intention of the American Red Cross to have the hat autographed by every great leader in the world war, following which it will be sold to the highest bidder.

The date of release of the ten-reel feature film "Super Strategy," which has covered a production period of six months, is now announced for April 7. The first prints were shipped from the Hollywood Studios January 26 to the New York offices of the Mena Film Company, and the advertising campaign will be begun February 15, under the direction of Robert Hollister.

Lynn Reynolds has been engaged by the Fox Studios to direct Tom Mix. Mr. Reynolds was formerly with the Bluebird and Triangle Companies.

Neil Burns, the star of many Christie and Selburn comedies, is now rehearsing for a role with Uncle Sam at Camp Lewis. Dean Fifield of the American Film Company, Johnny Meighan of Paralta and Al Santell, the former Universal comedy director, are also leaving to take part in the big show.

Howard M. Mitchell is directing Kathleen Clifford in a five-reel drama of Miss Clifford's own construction. Joe Brotherton is photographing the scenes and Al Reitz acting as assistant director. Miss Clifford has as support: Corenne Grant, Ethel Ritchie, Ruth Lackaye, Mabel Hayde, Gordon Sackville, Neil C. Hardin, Patrick Dennie Calhoun, William Archer, Stanley Pembroke and Bruce Smith.

Funeral services for Franklin Ritchie, former film star, who was killed in an automobile accident near Santa Barbara, were held in Santa Barbara under the auspices of the Elks. Interment was in Santa Barbara cemetery. Ritchie's greatest success was in the original role of the Colonel in the stage production of "The Clansman." Two years ago Ritchie wedded Mrs. Esther Bamberg, a wealthy widow of Brooklyn. Although he was successful in pictures Ritchie gave up that vocation and entered the automobile sales field in Santa Barbara.

Balboa announces the following additions to the scenario staff: Jack Jevne, formerly with Triangle, and Katherine Nelson, recently of the Morosco studio. Jevne is working on a new script for Miss Clifford, and Miss Nelson is working on a story which will be produced by Paul Powell, who came to Balboa from Fox recently.

Al E. Christie took advantage of Will Archie's visit to Los Angeles with the Cohn Revue and gave him the lead in a smart comedy entitled "The Night of His Life," which has just been released. Will Archie will be well remembered as the jockey with Lillian Russell in "Wildfire" and has starred on the legitimate stage for several years.

Adele Blood, who is remembered both for her excellent work in the title role of "Everywoman," is to be the star of a large picture organization, backed by Mrs. Edwin F. Holmes, known as the Silver Queen of Utah, residing at present in Pasadena.

More than $200,000 income tax is to be paid to Uncle Sam by Mary Pickford in Los Angeles next week. As the returns are kept inviolate the exact amount which Miss Pickford will pay into the government coffers was not revealed. It was stated on authority that the total of Miss Pickford's tax would be "something between $200,000 and $250,000."

Ethel Ritchie has returned to the Balboa studios after an absence of six months. Miss Ritchie spent the interim at Santa Barbara, where she did a picture under her old director, Henry King, also formerly of Balboa. Miss Ritchie played a part in the "Who Is Number One?" serial, featuring Kathleen Clifford, and has again been assigned a role in Miss Clifford's new five-reel production, of which the star is the author. Miss Ritchie is the daughter of a San Diego merchant.

Douglas Fairbanks is to stage another rodeo for the benefit of the Red Cross, this time with San Francisco as its locale. The reports of the success of his rodeo in Los Angeles have spread throughout the country and it is more than likely that he will repeat the performance in three or four of the larger cities of the United States so that the local Red Cross of those cities may be benefited in turn.

Reginald Barker, of the Paralta staff of directors, will direct the first Mastercraft film to be produced at the Paralta studios, a screen version of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The One Woman." J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton are engaged in writing the picture version, and F. Eugene Fransworth, who has charge of the Masterchaft interests here, is assembling the cast.

The opening of Crane Wilbur's theater, the Wilbur Playhouse, in Oakland, was a success from every point of view. He presented "Cheating Cheaters" before a S. R. O. audience, and it went over so big he is having to hold it over for another week.

W. H. Clune held over Douglas Fairbanks' latest feature, "A Modern Musketeer," at his Broadway theater in Los Angeles for the third week, establishing a record for a continuous run for a photoplay at the Broadway.

Henry King, the American director, was a recent visitor in Los Angeles. He came down with his wife, Gypsy Abbott, to take in the theaters, and enjoy a little vacation.

Santa Ana, one of the garden spots of Southern California, wants Roscoe Arbuckle. The Chamber of Commerce of that city recently sent a delegation to confer with the comedian at the Balboa Studios. According to these business men Santa Ana is determined to make such an attractive offer that Arbuckle will decide upon that city for the location of his new studio. It is estimated the proposed studio at Santa Ana will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Morosco Sounds Optimistic Note

Big Producer Pleased with Financial Returns of Business—Speaks with Far-Sighted Wisdom of Chaotic Conditions.

WITH the wisdom of one who has been tried by fire, the placidity of the prophet, and more than this with the courage of the "good sport," Oliver Morosco advances as his opinion of the present chaotic condition of the moving picture business that it presents no startling phase, but is merely a readjustment of things in general to the places where they belong, which means in the end "the survival of the fittest." He strikes an optimistic note against the tremulous chord of the symphony and states that he is delighted with the financial returns of his interests. And having looked him square in the eye I know that he meant what he said and that he has decided to be among the "fittest" when the roll is called.

Oliver Morosco.

We all agree that one of the most important essentials in the make-up of the successful business man is the faculty of foresight; therefore it is not surprising that Oliver Morosco should declare that the secret of the whole situation is the ability to keep just a little ahead of the times—to be able, in other words, to foresee the demands of the public. The growth of the art and the demand of the public for better things has ousted a certain class of picture, such as the old-fashioned one-reel comedy, for instance, in vogue a few years ago.

He talks interestingly also of the screen versus the legitimate stage. Unlike other opinions on the subject which we have heard voiced, Mr. Morosco believes that the one has been mutually beneficial to both spheres. The moving picture has gained an added quota in facilities for the proper interpretation of screen dramas, while the legitimate stage having lost for a period the services of many of its stellar lights has chosen the wise medium of presenting plays with well-balanced or all-star casts.

In reply to the old question "Has the moving picture interfered in any respect with the business of the legitimate stage?" he states that only the galleries have suffered. And while he does not wish to be misunderstood in this particular, believing that the moving picture is pulling a more intelligent audience every day, the screen drama in his opinion is not destined to hold an equal place with the spoken drama in the matter of prices. Therefore the moving picture will eventually find its allotted place just as the spoken drama has done; and each will travel its own path with success and without interference with its sister art.

Mr. Morosco has been in the East now for a period of nine months and purposes returning to the coast, which he calls his "camping ground," about the first of May. It is there that he tries out most of his stage productions before presenting them to New York audiences; and it is there that he from time to time renews familiar relations with picture productions as it is practiced the year round in the canyons of California.

Putting "Tarzan" Over

Reichenbach Scores Another Victory with Feature Attraction Against Great Odds.

METROPOLITAN filmdom has been awakened to a realization of rare enterprise in "putting over" a feature film on Broadway by the interest that has been aroused among ticket-buying New Yorkers in presentations of "Tarzan of the Apes" by the National Film Corporation at the Broadway. This attraction, now entering upon its third week at the Broadway theater, is attracting crowds that pay a scale ranging from 25 cents to $1, find an intensely interesting entertainment and, evidently, go away and talk about it. This personal "boost" by satisfied spectators is evidenced in an attendance that is maintained at a standard promising, for one of the few times to make a Broadway film introduction a source of profit to its promoters.

"Tarzan of the Apes" was introduced to New Yorkers at a time when local advertising conditions were in a state of chaos absolutely unprecedented in the history of the town. The newspapers having raised their prices found a newsdealers' strike on their hands and press work and daily paper advertising was getting, practically, nowhere at all. Harry Reichenbach, intrusted with the task of "putting it over," was at no loss to circumvent the stringency of the great appeal of printers' ink; he simply used his inventiveness and won the day against a tremendous handicap.

William Parsons, the directing head of the National Film Corporation, must have been gratified by the results attained. The chimpanzee Mr. Reichenbach dug up from the menagerie of the circus animal man's preserves, when installed in the lobby of the Broadway theater, provided an "outside bally-hoo" that was not alone appropriate, but sensationally effective. The stringent city ordinances against "bannering" (except when politicians are running for office), was fractured by Reichenbach's cunning, and a cloth sign stretched across Broadway, in front of the theater, told how "Tarzan of the Apes" was donating a percentage of receipts to the patriotic fund that was providing smokes for "Our Boys in France." People who could not buy newspapers to read "Tarzan's" advertising, and the extremely favorable comment of the daily papers' film reviewers, had this great spread of canvas to "nail" them in the eye as they passed under the banner or looked down Broadway from Times Square.

Lesser moves in the publicity game were advanced by the inventive and indomitably industrious Reichenbach to get the crowds coming—and when they came the "mouth to mouth" expressions of satisfaction spread to all parts of Greater New York. The daily papers began once more to flow free from stands and carriers, and it readily may be assumed that Mr. Parsons and the National Film Corporation will have some unusual methods to advance in following up the fine start "Tarzan of the Apes" has made on Broadway under opposition and against extraordinary odds.

Meanwhile the success attained at the Broadway theater has halted prearrangements for the marketing of "Tarzan of the Apes." Just how the feature will be marketed is still under consideration and the date when it will be offered for general distribution remains to be determined. Mr. Parsons, having "landed" the picture, is taking his time to consider his next move.

"Big Bill" Steiner Completes Trip

WILLIAM STEINER, better known in the film industry as "Big Bill," has returned from a tour of the United States in the interests of the Jester Comedy Company, of which he is the founder. Mr. Steiner spent little over a month in making this trip, and touched at all the important film centers, and says he was surprised to find so many of the old boys still on the job, both from the exchange and the exhibitors' end.

"I would not have missed making this trip for anything. It gave me a great opportunity of sizing up the country, and at the same time renewing friendships of old standing. Before I left New York I listened to many of the pessimistic film men, who said the country was shot to pieces, and that the war had brought around conditions that made it impossible for buyers to pay proper prices for good films. This, more than anything else, made me desirous of making the trip, and, further, as I had not been over the country for years, I was rather glad of having the opportunity to go.

William Steiner.

"My first stop was Philadelphia, where I found independent exchanges and exhibitors looking for films that would meet present-day conditions. The same applies to Cleveland, Chicago, Kansas City, Denver, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Dallas, and, in fact, every city that I touched.

"This talk that there is not a market for films is all a mistake. Evidently this feeling that has cropped up among many of the manufacturers in the East has been brought about by their figuring that the exchange man is looking for him. Very true—they are! But today the exchange man has risen into a position of prominence, and he has to be treated on the same lines as the commercial industry is treated by the manufacturers. They have learned that they are the buyers, and if a man has goods to sell let him present his wares and demonstrate the quality of his goods on the home ground.

"In the future all films that I manufacture shall be sent through the country under the same policy that I have adopted for the Jester Comedies, and that is to show goods on the home grounds."

Speaking of the Jester Comedies, which feature Twede-Dan, Mr. Steiner states, with the exception of a few small territories, the country has been sold for the period of one year—12 in number.

ADDITIONAL PATRIOTIC FILMS FOR FOURSQUARE.

M. H. Hoffman is determined that Foursquare Pictures shall do its share in aiding the Government. Already he is distributing the Whartons' serial, "The Eagle's Eye," which is an expose of the German Government's spy system in this country.

He has also made arrangements to distribute for the Naval Relief League through its president, Mrs. Moffett, a film entitled "Our Boys and Your Boys," showing the work that is being done at the Great Lakes Relief Training Station, Illinois; also by arrangement with the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company to handle the one-reel subject, "Food Will Win the War."

"People are just beginning to awake to the fact that food is one of the vital elements in our combat with the enemy," said Mr. Hoffman. "Food and munitions and men—all of the utmost value. Foursquare exchanges everywhere are getting behind this film with push and vim."

"Grain of Dust" for Europe

Robertson-Cole Company Contract for All Crest Picture's Productions.

DURING the past week a deal was consummated by which the Robertson-Cole Company, European distributors, secured the Crest Picture Corporation's film version of David Graham Phillip's novel, "The Grain of Dust," starring Lillian Walker, for distribution in all foreign countries. The contract also includes the foreign rights for all pictures produced by the Crest organization, and was handled by Miss Edna Williams, general manager of Robertson-Cole Company's film department, and Carle E. Carlton, president of the Crest Pictures Corporation.

It is announced that an elaborate trade showing of "The Grain of Dust" will be given at Albert Hall, London, England, at which a symphony orchestra will be employed to render special music.

This is the second Crest picture handled by the Robertson-Cole Company, as they previously secured rights to "The Lust of the Ages," in which Lillian Walker was also featured.

SUPER-FEATURES OPENS WESTERN BRANCHES.

In order to give subjects released by the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation features, "The Zeppelin's Last Raid," "Those Who Pay" and "The Belgian," wider distribution in Western Canada, Super-features, Ltd., one of the largest independent concerns in the Dominion, has expanded its system to the coast. Offices have been established in Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

Mr. Stevens, general manager, who has spent the last few weeks in the western section of Canada, declares that exhibitor conditions are rapidly improving and that milder weather will surely see a return to normal. "There is far more optimism in Western Canada," he states, "than we find in the Eastern section. The hand of the war has not fallen with such serious effect in the west as in the east."

The Super-Features, Ltd., also has launched a drive in the Eastern section of the Dominion, and Charles Berman has been appointed representative in that territory to succeed R. P. Madden, who has returned to New York and will be assigned to another post in the near future.

"THE CRUCIBLE OF LIFE" FOR CAMP UPTON.

Following the private showing of "The Crucible of Life," at which the Camp Upton Quartet was present, arrangements have been made to show the film at the Long Island cantonment. It was through the courtesy of Colonel George Vidmer, commanding officer of the 306th Infantry of Camp Upton, that Messrs Sawyer and Lubin, who are handling the picture, were enabled to secure the services of the soldiers' quartet for their showing and in a desire to reciprocate this kindness, "The Crucible of Life" has been offered for special screening to entertain the National Army quartered at that camp. Inasmuch as the picture of General Enterprise, Inc., deals with the present war, containing many views of our army's activities both in America and France, it should carry a special appeal to to the boys in khaki.

HOFFMAN BACK IN NEW YORK.

M. H. Hoffman, president and general manager of Foursquare Pictures, recently returned from a two weeks' trip to the Foursquare exchanges of the Middle West. He reports that he found conditions are improving, and while everyone, producers, distributors and exhibitors alike, have suffered, he finds nothing to justify the alarm felt in certain quarters; and that the exhibitors appear to be a body of men determined to stand firm for the good of the industry.

Mr. Hoffman further states: "Now is not the time to pull a long face and crawl inside one's shell. Economies are in order, the development of efficiency to its highest possible point. But not pessimism or the curtailment of expenses legitimate and essential to progress. Let the deadwood be cut off, by all means. Stop the monetary leaks, but do not cut advertising appropriations below the point of reasonable conservation."

Mr. Hoffman also reports great interest is being shown by exhibitors and public in the Wharton serial "The Eagle's Eye," with its strong patriotic appeal. He also advises that bookings are starting with a rush on George Backer's picture, "The Cast-Off," with Bessie Barriscale and Howard Hickman; produced under the direction of Thomas H. Ince.

Goldburg Back from Tour

Eastern Representative of State Right Owners Closes New Contracts—Will Shortly Release One and Two-Reel Comedies.

JESSE J. GOLDBURG, state right distributor of Independent attractions, has returned from a tour of the United States investigating the state right market and forming connections with independent exchanges, to act as their exclusive buying and Eastern representative.

Contracts were signed whereby Mr. Goldburg for a period of one year is constituted sole buying representative for A. H. Blank, of Des Moines for the territory of Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska; the Consolidated Film Corporation of San Francisco for the territory of California, Arizona, Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands; the Consolidated Film Corporation of Seattle for the territory of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana; the Unity Photoplay Company of Chicago for the territory of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, and the Standard Film Corporation of Minnesota, Standard Film Corporation of Missouri and Van Dyke Amusement Enterprises of Illinois jointly for the combined territory of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and Oklahoma, Minnesota, North and South Dakota.

Mr. Goldburg has also made arrangements to represent Sidney Lust of Washington. Mr. Lust operates in the territory of Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and North Carolina. Negotiations have not yet been completed for Mr. Goldburg representing exchanges covering the remainder of the United States, but such contracts, Mr. Goldburg states, will be consummated within a fortnight. On this tour Mr. Goldburg also placed the undisposed of attractions of the Ivan Film Productions, Inc.

As Eastern representative of exchanges Mr. Goldburg will keep his correspondents informed of state right attractions and act as Eastern representative on all matters requiring attention in New York. In addition he is acting as exclusive sales agent on independent attractions and will shortly announce the exclusive release of one one-reel comedy a week and one two-reel comedy every two weeks.

Mr. Goldburg reports that his investigation of motion picture conditions throughout the country revealed a startling state of affairs.

HILLER & WILK HANDLE BIG DEAL FOR LYNCH.

In our last issue we published a list of forty-five Hart, Fairbanks, Keenan and Talmadge reissues to which the state rights has been sold by S. A. Lynch Enterprises to the following concerns: De Luxe Feature Film Company, Seattle; All Star Feature Film Company, San Francisco; Boston Photoplay Company; Quality Film Company, Pittsburgh, and Masterpiece Film Company, Philadelphia. Further developments indicate that this transaction, engineered by Hiller & Wilk, is of even greater proportions, and is clearly one of the largest in the history of state rights. The value of the pictures involved, which have been distributed through Triangle Exchanges and will now be handled by the state right organizations, is said to be in excess of $1,000,000.

The additional state right buyers who have secured rights to these pictures include Jones, Linick & Shaefer and Asher Brothers, Chicago, for Illinois and Indiana; Sidney B. Lust, of Super Film Attractions, Inc., Washington, D. C., for District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia.

OLGA PETROVA'S FOURTH PICTURE.

In the fourth offering produced by her own organization, Madame Olga Petrova interprets the role of Lucille Caruthers, daughter of a Southern gentlemen of the old school, with strong feministic ideas of her own, and the individuality to place them into effect.

A strong cast will support her. Thomas Holding, who has appeared opposite Madame Petrova in a number of her previous pictures, will portray the leading male part, while J. Herbert Frank, well known "heavy," who has been seen in various Goldwyn and Famous Players pictures, will have a role suited to his talents. Matilda Brundage and Edith Hinkle, who have also appeared with Madame Petrova, and E. J. Radcliffe, a newcomer from the stage, will have important roles.

"THE WARRIOR" DOING GOOD BUSINESS.

Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, executives of General Enterprises, Inc., which concern is handling "The Warrior" on a state rights basis, are in receipt of reports which indicate that this picture is playing to large audiences. It was shown for three days at the Regent theater in Pittsburgh, two days at Princess theater in Jeannette, Pa., and three days at the Empire theater in DuBois, Pa., and it is announced that each of these houses rebooked this picture for additional runs.

"KING BEE WALTZ" FREE.

King Bee Films Corporation advertises that it will gladly supply a copy of the "King Bee Waltz" to anyone who desires it, and requests that communications be addressed to E. Rosenbaum, Jr., publicity director, Longacre building, New York, inclosing a stamped envelope.

Ethel Burton With King Bee

BECAUSE of her success in some of the earlier productions, the King Bee Films Corporation announces that Ethel Marie Burton will again appear in its productions, starring Billy West, playing opposite this comedian. Miss Burton was born in New York City of American parentage. She is five and a half feet in height weighs 118 pounds, has a fair complexion, blonde hair and blue eyes. She is the wife of A. E. Gillstrom, the King Bee director, and has never appeared on the stage.

Ethel Burton.

In 1915 Miss Burton made her screen debut in "Two For a Quarter," and has since appeared in a number of ingenue and soubrette roles with the Vitagraph, World Film and Vim companies, some of the pictures being "Ambitious Ethel," "He Winked and Won," "Fat and Fickle," and "Strangled Harmony."

Miss Burton is fond of sports and athletics, and finds her accomplishments along these lines to be of great assistance in her work. In addition, she is a hard worker, and is always willing to undertake whatever difficult and dangerous stunts her role may require.

The reappearance of the actress in King Bees with Billy West will be made in "The Rogue," which was released February 15.

"MICKEY" A CHARMING LOVE STORY.

In a recent editorial in one of the trade papers it was stated that comedy and society dramas were wanted of the "best seller story" variety and supported by heart interest, and that particularly for light dramas, there is an unusual demand; that people will want to be amused this year and that producers would do well to bear this fact in mind. The foresight of the Western Import Company along these lines is clearly shown when they acquired the rights to Mabel Normand in "Mickey."

In analyzing the present conditions an official of the Western Import Company concluded that the public would want to be amused and entertained and their minds kept clear of the horrors of war, so therefore "Mickey."

"There is not much about ancient history or bloodshed in 'Mickey,' he said, "just a sweet, charming love story about a little girl you will never forget, a story with a lot of action and 'go,' and Mabel Normand in a part that gives full scope for her beauty and charm. Her characterization of this lovable child shows a depth and an incisive appreciation of art that Miss Normand has never had a chance to show before."

NOVEL TITLING IN "CRUCIBLE OF LIFE."

A novel feature in "The Crucible of Life," the Author's Film Company production handled by General Enterprises, Inc., featuring Grace Darmond, Jack Sherrill and Frank O'Connor, is the main title which represents the exterior of a motion picture theater with a brilliant electric sign on which is flashed in rapid succession the title of the picture and names of the featured players and other leading members of the cast. In addition, animated subtitles of a patriotic and symbolic nature are used throughout and at the close of the picture is a tableau representing the Goddess of Liberty surrounded by fighting representatives of all the Allies.

TERRITORY FOR "THE WHIP" ALL SOLD.

With the sale of the rights to "The Whip" for Louisiana and Mississippi to the True Film Company, of Dallas, Hiller & Wilk advises that the entire territory in the United States has been disposed of. A majority of the foreign territory also has been sold.

FILMING OF "MORAL SUICIDE" COMPLETED.

President Ivan Abramson of the Graphic Film Corporation and the entire cast of principals have returned to New York from Palm Beach, Fla., where a number of the scenes for "Moral Suicide" were filmed. This picture is now complete and is being cut, assembled and titled at the Biograph studios. Illustrated titles are being prepared.

MOLLIE KING WITH IVAN.

Mollie King, star of the Ivan Film Production's feature picture "Human Clay," the scenario of which was so written by L. V. Jefferson as to be particularly well suited to her personality; although one of the youngest screen stars, not being quite twenty, is already well known to moving picture as well as stage audiences. She has had experience more than commensurate with her years, as her initial public appearance occurred about eighteen years ago, when she was seen in an "infant" role in a stage production.

Mollie King.

Born in New York City, she was educated in the public schools, and has been almost interruptedly before the public. One of her first "real" parts was with Maxine Elliott in "Her Own Way," and after appearing in several dramatic productions, when fifteen years of age she understudied Elizabeth Brice in "The Winsome Widow." She later appeared in vaudeville with her sister Nellie, and is a charming singer and dancer. Her stage appearances also include engagement at the New York Winter Garden, and with Sam Bernard in "The Belle of Bond Street."

Since her debut in moving pictures she has been seen in World Film productions, and more recently under the Pathe banner in "Kick In," also in serials released by this company, including "The Mystery of the Double Cross" and "The Seven Pearls."

Miss King attributes much of her success to hard work, and states that "temperament" has no place in moving pictures; and is confident that in "Human Clay" the public will find that she is "there" the same as she was in serials.

ARROW TO HANDLE "TODAY" AND "MAD LOVER."

Through arrangements recently concluded between J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, and W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, the Arrow will act as exclusive agents for Pathe on the sale of states rights on the Pathe pictures "Today," with Florence Reed, and "The Mad Lover," with Robert Warwick.

The teritory still unsold consists of North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, northern Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas Oklahoma, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Mississippi.

VON RINTELEN DEPICTED IN "EAGLE'S EYE."

Of timely interest are the fourth, fifth and sixth episodes of "The Eagle's Eye," ex-Secret Service Chief Flynn's patriotic serial exposing the German spy system, made by the Whartons, and distributed through Foursquare Exchanges. Prominent in these episodes is Captain Fritz von Rintelen, who was convicted in the United States court on February 5, and sentenced to a fine of $2,000 and imprisonment in the Federal prison at Atlanta, for eighteen months for conspiring with other plotters to destroy the English ship "Kirk Oswald."

The part of Von Rintelen in this production is played by Wellington Playter, who is said to closely resemble him.

THIRD JESTER COMEDY COMPLETED.

The third Jester comedy, "All 'Fur' Her," which is to be released in April, is completed, and as soon as the cutting and titling has been finished will be given a trade showing.

"All 'Fur' Her" shows Twede-Dan in a different line of comedy from that of "The Recruit" and "His Golden Romance." It is said to be full of amusing situations, and, unlike many comedies, to possess a plot and a story.

"A ROMANCE OF THE UNDERWORLD" (Keeney).

Catherine Calvert, who is to be featured in "A Romance of the Underworld," shortly to be released by the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation, is being exploited as "The Girl With the Wonderful Eyes," also as "The Lady Beautiful of the Screen."

Miss Calvert appears in the role of Doris Elliott, which is the part in which she was seen a few years ago on the stage, when she was starred in the play of the same name under the management of Paul Armstrong, the author.

An unusual circumstance in connection with this photoplay is that it calls for two leading men, Richard Elliott and Thomas McDonald. Eugene O'Brien, formerly leading man for Norma Talmadge, is cast as McDonald, and David Powell, who has played opposite Mary Pickford, Edna Goodrich, Ann Murdock, and Olive Tell, as Elliott. Additional members of the company include Edwin Forsberg, now appearing in "Seven Days' Leave" at the Park theater; Sybil Carmen, the "Moon Girl" in Ziegfeld's "Midnight Frolics"; Cecil Chichester, Harry Lee, and Marcia Harris.

"THE BIRTH OF DEMOCRACY" (Export and Import).

Loew's New York Roof Garden was recently the scene of the premier public presentation of "The Birth of Democracy," a seven part production, handled by the Export and Import Film Company, dealing with the French Revolution, and the stirring days of the reign of terror, the upheaval of the Commune, and the final establishment of the republic. This subject was well received by the audience and should be of timely interest, because of the similarity between conditions presented and those existing in Russia at the present time.

The leading role is handled by Lydia Borelli, an actress of excellent artistic ability, and stately beauty, who appears as Theresa; while A. Fabiani is cast as Robespierre.

Successful in her divorce from the Comte de Fontenay, Theresa leaves Paris for Bordeaux. Her lover, Guery, visits her there, and his boldness in coming into the province where Robespierre's agent, Tallien, is instituting the Reign of Terror, is the means of making him practically a fugitive. He is discovered in the home of Theresa. She encourages the advances of the agent in order to save her lover. Tallien, fascinated by Theresa, follows her advice and formulates a plot for the downfall of Robespierre. As Guery has been called for the guillotine, the plans must be quickly carried out. Tallien and his followers denounce Robespierre at the convention. They lead the mob to violence against him. Robespierre is executed and Guery wins his freedom and his sweetheart.

This picture has been booked for the various houses on the Marcus Loew circuit, as well as those of the Independent Exhibitors Association of Pennsylvania and Maryland, and will begin a week's run at Shay's Hipodrome, Buffalo. The Boston Photoplay Company has also booked it for a run of the same length at a large theater in Boston, and the M. & R. Feature Film Exchange has also arranged for its presentation for a week at the Rialto theater, San Francisco.

W. H. CLOSES TERRITORY ON HART FILMS.

W. H. Productions Company announces that the first of the two-reel Mack Sennett comedies which it is handling, entitled "A Small Town Bully," will be released February 15. The story deals with the difficulties of a district school teacher, Mabel Normand, and her troublesome pupils, Mack Sennett and Roscoe Arbuckle. Owen Moore appears as her city sweetheart.

This company, which has only been in business a few months, advises it has disposed of rights of twenty-eight Mack Sennett comedies for most of the territory; and for a series of fifteen two-reel Hart subjects, and the three features "The Two-Gun Man," in "The Bargain," "The Bandit and the Preacher," and "The Hell Hound of Alaska," the entire territory of the United States has been sold.

SHERRILL TALKS OF "BIRTH OF A RACE."

As announced in our last issue, William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, has returned to this city from the corporation's Tampa, Fla., studios. For the past four weeks he has been supervising the production of "The Birth of a Race," on which the entire Frohman production staff and supers numbering more than three hundred in its directorial, technical, and art departments has been engaged for more than three months under the direction of John W. Noble, assisted by Charles Horan, Arthur Vaughan, and Ralph Dean.

Mr. Sherrill advises that this picture is being made by the Frohman Amusement Corporation under contract as manufacturers with the Birth of a Race Photoplay Corporation, of Chicago, and, in speaking of the progress made and magnitude of the production, expresses himself as "confident that with the completion of 'The Birth of a Race' once more the abilities of the Frohman production staff will be ably demonstrated, and we are positive that we will turn over to the Birth of a Race Photoplay Corporation a finished product which will warrant the confidence placed in the Frohman Amusement Corporation when we were employed to produce this spectacle for the Birth of a Race Photoplay Corporation."

Director Noble expects that an additional three or four months will be necessary to complete the production.

RIALTO TO PRESENT "THE LIGHT WITHIN."

During the week commencing February 10 the second Petrova picture, "The Light Within," will be shown at the Rialto theater, New York. This is the second picture starring Olga Petrova which has been presented at this well known house within two months, the "Daughter of Destiny" being shown during week of December 23.

Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld, leader of the orchestra, has composed "The Petrova Waltz," which will be a feature of the musical program, and considerable space in the Rialto Revue will be devoted to the play and the star.

This production is being released throughout the country by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

ANOTHER EXCHANGE FOR NEW YORK.

New York Exhibitors will be interested to learn that a new independent exchange, the Magnet Film Exchange, at 71 West 23rd street, New York, has been organized, and have already acquired the rights to W. H. Production Co.'s first Hart feature, "The Two-Gun Man" in "The Bargain," which will be shown during week of February 11 at the 81st Street theater.

Another Producer Joins "Direct Sales" Plan

Lawrence Weber Photodramas the New Member—Brenon's "Passing of the Third Floor Back" to Be First Release.

IN ADDITION to the seven manufacturers of motion pictures referred to in our last issue, the L. Lawrence Weber Photodramas, Inc., has joined the Independent Producers-Exhibitors Affiliated, in its "direct sales" plan, making eight independent producers who will furnish the necessary fifty-two pictures a year to be distributed direct to the exhibitors in accordance with the plan already outlined.

C. C. Pettijohn, in charge of the actual working out of this plan, reports that letters and telegrams are being received from all sections of the United States, indicating that the exhibitors are very much interested, and that they are organizing so as to be in position to pledge the necessary number of days' booking to avail themselves of this service.

"The Passing of the Third Floor Back," a Herbert Brenon production, has been selected as the first release, and C. C. Pettijohn and Harry Rapf left New York on Sunday, February 10, for a ten days' trip, during which time they will visit Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Indianapolis, Louisville, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia for the purpose of conferring direct with the exhibitors and showing this picture and a smaller one.

On Tuesday, the 12th, Louis L. Levine and Joseph Golden left for a week's trip to Baltimore, Washington and Greensboro, N. C., taking with them prints of "The Struggle Everlasting" and a smaller picture. Herbert Brenon and E. I. Chadwick, whose producing organization will be known as the Rialto Pictures Corporation, will visit Philadelphia and Newark, taking two pictures with them.

TRADE SHOWING FOR "MICKEY."

Western Import Company have received the negative of "Mickey," the seven-part feature starring Mabel Normand, and arrangements are being made for holding a trade showing within the next few days.

ATTRACTIVE ADVERTISING FOR JESTER COMEDIES.

Attractive line of advertising matter has been prepared by the Jester Company for its productions featuring "Twede Dan" and lithographs of special design made by the artist, John Ranck, including one, three and six sheets, together with lobby displays, and other helps are being forwarded to exhibitors who have booked the initial release, "The Recruit."

UNIVERSAL TO CO-OPERATE WITH BOY SCOUTS.

Universal is preparing for a big campaign in co-operation with the Boy Scouts of America for a five-part, two reels to an episode, boy scout serial "Boy Scouts to the Rescue; or, Aids of the Nation," produced in England under the supervision of Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, chief scout and founder of the British Boy Scouts, and, in fact, the father of the world's scout movement.

The serial is a dramatic thriller with a plot of interest to everybody—old or young—and entertaining, even to those not associated with the scout movement. It is designed for the 10,000,000 boys of scout age in the United States and their parents.

The aid and co-operation of the Boy Scouts of America, with its 300,000 boys and 78,000 adults divided into 13,000 troops throughout the country, will be provided exhibitors showing the serial, and the enthusiastic boosting of the boy scouts is assured in getting other boys and adults not members of the organization to see each episode.

The picture with 400,000 Godfathers has a strong story of general interest, the scout work being cleverly introduced into the plot. The scenario is by Bannister Merwin, who has written many successful screen plays, and was directed by Percy Nash.

LEES WORKING ON STRAIGHT DRAMA.

Jane and Katheine Lee have commenced work on a production, their fourth as stars, under the direction of Kenean Buel. The scene this time is laid in a city of about 100,000 population, and the children, orphans, under the guardianship of an aunt, are kidnapped. Eventually they succeed, with police assistance, in breaking up a band of yeggmen. The production is said to be quite different from anything the Fox "Baby Grands" have yet done, the action being of a decidedly tense nature throughout.

The supporting cast has not been completed, but, except for Jane and Katherine Lee, will be comprised of adults. Among those already engaged and appearing in scenes thus far taken are Sarah McVicker, Henry Clive, William Pike, Edward Sturgis, and Tammany Young.

The latest completed Lee picture, "American Buds," will be released February 24. The one now under way, which has not been titled, probably will not be ready before April.

FOX-LEHRMAN COMEDY IS SATIRICAL.

Another of the Fox-Lehrman Sunshine Comedies was released February 17. It is titled "Are Married Policemen Safe?" and is reported to be a satire on human nature as evidenced in the administration of justice. A crusade against women wearing clothes which are more abbreviated than the law allows results in policemen and jurists being captivated by their captives.

The action ranges all the way from the United States to Mexico, with trouble of several sorts developing in both countries. A Mexican who has fallen into the lap of the law here struggles out, and finds the way opened to revenge when his American tormentors go to Mexico on business. It develops then that he is chief of police of a Mexican city, and that he knows how to make the most of his authority. A railroad train running straight through a station is one of the incidental phases of the action.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

Shirley Mason in a Jap Role

Edison Will Present the Little Star as a Nippon Bride in Japanese Play.

MISS SHIRLEY MASON, the piquant heroine of "Seven Deadly Sins," and the erstwhile "Appletree Girl," whom admirers of rural comedy loved, is being starred by the Edison Company as Kiku-San in a novel Japanese production now nearing completion in their Bronx studio. Provisionally called "Aliens" or "Weavers of Dreams," the play awaits final titling, but the work has progressed so far that a resume of it should prove interesting.

Kiku-San is a flower-like girl whose family oppose her marriage to a white man. Nevertheless, Dick Tower, a young American collegian, marries her. Anglo-Saxon ideals and Japanese prejudices are outraged, with social ostracism on the one hand, and on the other the stirring of vengeful Jap passions. As the result of a tragic conflict, the Nippon tradition triumphs and the girl is obliged to dismiss her alien husband. The latter is absolved of blame and seeks a new tie among his own people. The powerful ending contrasts the poignant mystery of race severance with the happiness of obedience to Nature's law.

The actress has spent most of her waking hours in and around the fictive scene, performing the quaint tasks of Japanese maidens or laboring with the intricacies of Oriental toilette. To heighten the illusion, only Japanese actors are employed for the other native parts. When the big scenes in front of the bungalow were played, fifty Jap extras—men, women and children—filled the picture.

Miss Mason in her new production is supported by Matt Moore as Dick Tower, the young American; Frank O'Connor, as his friend, Thompson, and Miss Ormi Hawley in the role of an attractive widow in the white colony. The Jap principals include T. Tomomoto of "Iron Claw" fame and Messrs. Oskima and Wada, who have had experience in the native theatrical stock in the old country. The guidance and the almost priceless objects d'art of wealthy Japanese living in New York have been freely lent to the resourceful and ambitious director. The star's costumes presented a vexing problem till a prominent Japanese artist-designer solved it by offering his services. No less than fourteen changes of costume were required, all of them picturesque, and some of an exquisite rarity, to which nothing in European costuming is comparable.

There has been no restriction on footage, and the six reels when completed will represent the careful selection of the best photographic achievement, more than 12,000 feet having been already taken. The play is scheduled for special release by Perfection Pictures. Before its release date, however, it is likely to be introduced by a metropolitan run at a Broadway theater. The scenes are laid in "cherry-blossom time," and it is in the spring that New York will see it.

Two Triangle Features for Feb. 17

"Keith of the Border" and "From Two to Six" Head the Week's Program.

LIFE on the Texas Border and the exploits of the "Wolves" are vividly portrayed in Randall Parrish's famous tale, "Keith of the Border," a new "thriller," in which Jack Keith (Roy Stewart) routs the notorious leader of the "Wolves" and rescues the charming little Southern girl whom the bandit has kidnapped. The subject is released February 17. It abounds in dramatic incidents, and the element of mystery caused by two girls who are counterparts is maintained throughout.

Scene from "From Two to Six" (Triangle).

Josie Sedgwick, last seen as Clarice Phillips in "The Maternal Spark" is given her first opportunity to appear in a dual role. Norbert Cills, Pete Morrisson, William Ellingford, Wilbur Higbie, Alberta Lee, and Clara Horton also are in the cast. Alvin J. Neitz made the screen adaptation of the story.

"From Two to Six," the second release of the week, has been adapted from Arthur Stringer's story, "The Button Thief," which deals with the workings of the German spy system in the United States. The play is what the title implies, a rapid action drama transpiring within four hours, and events move forward in rapid and logical sequence to a dramatic climax. Winifred Allen is supported by Robert Fisher, Forrest Robinson, Earl Fox, Reilly Hatch, Clarence Handyside, and Margaret Greene. This picture was made by Albert Parker under the supervision of Allen Dwan. A suite of luxurious rooms of the Ritz Carlton was copied for this picture, and a wedding breakfast table was appointed by a noted New York caterer.

Ray Griffith's head has been turned by success, success in obtaining a wife, two mother-in-laws, one father-in-law, and nine children. The amusing complications which ensue when he tries to marry an heiress are depicted in "His Double Life," the Keystone comedy released for the week of February 17, featuring Ray Griffith, Claire Anderson, and Dorothy Hagar.

"Their Undercover Capers" and "A Full Dress Fizzle" are one-reel Triangle Komedies also released the same week.

DE LUXE BUYS A RINEHART STORY.

The first feature to be presented by the new producing firm, De Luxe Pictures, Inc., starring Doris Kenyon at the head of her own company, will be "The Street of Seven Stars," by Mary Roberts Rinehart. The subject appeared in serial form in a magazine and proved a "best-seller" in book form, attaining a sale of 250,000 copies.

"Miss Kenyon's beauty, her girlishness, and her personal charm, together with her marked dramatic ability, will be important factors in tending to the great success of her appearance as the heroine of 'The Street of Seven Stars'," declared Mrs. Rinehart. "I consider it my most beautiful and artistic story."

The purchase of the rights of the Rinehart subject follows the announced policy of Mr. Deitrich for presenting Miss Kenyon in clean, wholesome and artistic productions. No expense will be spared in making this feature a de luxe production in every sense.

Pathe To Use New Exploiting Method

Will Be Applied in Furthering the Wider Circulation of "The House of Hate."

A NEW method of handling a serial will be instituted by Pathe in the releasing on March 3 of "The House of Hate," starring Pearl White and Antonio Moreno. The practical business brains of the big distributing organization are concentrated on setting this picture before the exhibitors in a way which retains the good points of the old system and introduces others which from long experience Pathe has learned.

Prints of the first episodes are being shipped to the thirty branch offices, where showings, preceded by a special reel, will be arranged. Details concerning "The House of Hate" will be given to exhibitors by means of a most striking trade paper advertising campaign. The releasing plan calls for many practical aids to exhibitors. The things that count in putting over a picture are first complete information, strong patron-pulling paper, and plenty of press matter.

The advertising matter available for exhibitors will be an advance twenty-four-sheet Pathe art portrait of Pearl White in ten colors, special portrait of Pearl White, general herald with space for the exhibitor to print any advertising he desires, advance announcement slide, photographic lobby display for each episode consisting of six 11 by 14 photographs and two title cards, one column newspaper cuts of Pearl White and Antonio Moreno, two column newspaper cut of Pearl White, black and white photographs of Pearl White and Antonio Moreno, novelties, campaign book containing press matter, reproductions of advertising matter and ideas of putting the serial over.

VIRGINIA PEARSON MAKING BIG WAR DRAMA.

Virginia Pearson has begun work in what will be one of the most stirring war dramas yet made for the screen, according to an announcement from the William Fox offices. Edmund Lawrence, whom Mr. Fox recently engaged, makes his directorial debut with the Fox forces with this production.

Hugh Thompson, who plays opposite Annette Kellermann in the marine spectacle, "Queen of the Sea," and who had the leading male part in "The Forbidden Path," appears in an equivalent role in this picture.

The production will enlist the services of a large number of players. Prominent in the supporting company are Herbert Evans, George Moss, Ethel Kaufman, Anthony Merlo, Maude Hill, and Naida Gary.

"A Daughter of France" is being filmed at the former Victor studio. William Zollinger is in charge of the photography. The settings are noteworthy. Especial emphasis is laid on the interiors of the French chateau, where most of the action takes place. At the Fox offices it is declared that because of the depth of the scenes in the chateau living room more lights of all kinds are being used to insure the recording of detail than have been required at the studio for months. The present intention is to release the subject March 24.

FOX STORY FOUNDED ON RECENT MURDER.

Since it was announced that the mysterious picture on which R. A. Walsh has been working is a production founded on a recent society killing and subsequent New York City murder trial the policy of reticence at first pursued by the William Fox interests has in part been abandoned. Mr. Fox himself is now the author of a statement regarding the photoplay in which he argues that all of the publicity the case received in the press will redound to the advantage of the exhibitor—may, in fact, it is claimed, be considered as so much preliminary advertising.

"The profits which will accrue to the exhibitor through the interest aroused in this case by the newspaper accounts of it are incalculable," says Mr. Fox. "Mr. Walsh and I talked over the matter at the time, looked at it from all angles, and then decided it would furnish the material for a photodrama notable in the annals of the screen. Then Mr. Walsh was given a free hand.

PARALTA BEGINS WORK ON DIXON STORY.

Work has been started in the Paralta studios in Los Angeles on the first Mastercraft production, which will be a screen version of Thomas Dixon's famous novel, "The One Woman." The scenario was prepared from Mr. Dixon's book by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton. The picture is being directed by Reginald Barker and the management of the production is in charge of F. Eugene Farnsworth, who has charge of the Mastercraft interests in California.

"The One Woman" is the first of the series of special productions to be issued by the Mastercraft company, which will be taken from the best of Mr. Dixon's literary works.

LOEW INCREASES PATHE SERIAL BOOKINGS.

It is understood that the Marcus Loew circuit of theaters has increased its original booking of the Pathe series, "The Price of Folly," starring Ruth Roland with Frank Mayor, and additional reports throughout the country are that this picture is proving an interesting means of rounding out the exhibitor's bill.

Paralta Has Completed Ten Pictures

These Comprise Three Walthalls, Five Barriscales and Two Kerrigans.

That Paralta has a firm foothold upon the motion picture industry with a series of unusual feature pictures is certain from the fact it has already completed and has ready for release ten elaborate and gripping productions, starring the foremost dramatic artists of the screen. All of the pictures are seven reels in length and have been staged at the Paralta studios in Los Angeles.

Henry B. Walthall, whose first Paralta, "His Robe of Honor," attracted such wide attention, has finished two more features, "Humdrum Brown" and "With Hoops of Steel."

Bessie Barriscale has five completed pictures ready for the exhibitors. They are "Madam Who," "Within the Cup," "Rose o' Paradise," "Blindfolded," and another production yet unnamed.

J. Warren Kerrigan has two pictures, a melodrama and a comedy drama, which are now booking. The first is "A Man's Man" and the second is "The Turn of a Card."

MISS STOREY WORKING ON "THE CLAIM."

A frontier hotel of the sort that is "all things to all men" is shown in Metro's "The Claim," a screen version of the Broadway success of the same name by Charles Kenyon and Frank Dare. "The Claim" is being produced at Metro's West Coast studio at Hollywood, with Edith Storey as star.

This hotel, around which the life of the little mining town of El Dorado centers, is dwelling-place, gambling house, saloon, village store, post-office and vaudeville theater.

In the role of the dancehall entertainer Miss Storey wears an effective costume of satin, edged with lace and embroidered with butterflies. The dress is of the kind described as "ankle-length," Miss Storey not believing it necessary to wear the short skirts of the average motion picture dancehall artist. Completed by a handsome embroidered Spanish shawl, the costume is most becoming. "The Claim" abounds in colorful scenes and rapid action.

WINTER BACKGROUNDS IN "BROADWAY BILL."

"Broadway Bill," Harold Lockwood's newest Metro All Star Series Production, which is released Feb. 11, promises to afford the screen with what is characterized as one of the most impressive pictures set in the North.

Staged for the most part in northern Maine in extremely cold weather, with the ground covered with a four-foot depth of snow and with a blizzard raging, the background thus formed in "Broadway Bill" not only lends color to the drama but takes on a distinguishing feature in the way of rare scenic views as well.

Among the players are Martha Mansfield, Stanton Heck, William Clifford, Bert Starkey, Cornish Beck, W. W. Black, Raymond C. Hadley and Blanche Davenport.

"THE BELL BOY" LAID IN OUCHGOSH.

Main street in Ouchgosh, the hitherto sleepy village that will shortly be made famous in Fatty Arbuckle's coming Paramount comedy, "The Bell Boy," is a perfect replica of the usual small town's chief thoroughfare. There are no reflections upon the country town because Fatty Arbuckle himself was born at Smith Center, Kan., and he cherishes the memories of a boyhood spent in Santa Ana, Cal. But the quaint humor of typical American country environment is deftly transferred to the screen by the big comedian in the funniest kind of travesty.

Everything peculiar to Main street in every small town is satirized in "The Bell Boy." Most prominent in the architectural pride of Ouchgosh is the Hotel Elkshead and the Last National Bank.

NEW ORDER FOR "JUDGE BROWNS."

Because of unforeseen mechanical delays in the production program of the Boy City Film Company at Los Angeles, there has been a slight change in the order in which the subjects already completed are released. The new order, as announced by General Film Company, the distributor of these two-part "Stories of Youth," is: "Tad's Swimming Hole," "Marrying Off Dad," "The Preacher's Son," "Thief or Angel," and "The Accusing Toe." With this new alignment the release of the Judge Brown stories will be continued without interruption. The tremendous demand for these subjects has compelled the producers to work at capacity in order that enough prints might be supplied to General Film exchanges. The list given herewith brings the subjects up to eight.

BESSIE LOVE RETURNS TO LOS ANGELES.

Pathe's West coast producing forces have been augmented by the arrival in Los Angeles of Bessie Love, who will immediately begin work on "A Little Sister to Everybody," by William Addision Lathrop, at the Paralta Studio. She was preceded by Frank Keenan and his director, Ernest Warde, who, on January 28, turned the crank on the first Keenan Pathe Play to be made on the Pacific Coast, and she will be followed by Fannie Ward.

William Duncan will shortly start work on a new type of Pathe serial by Gilson Willetts at one of Pathe's West Coast plants.

NIGH TAKES LAST SCENES OF GERARD STORY.

With the taking of the final scenes at Camp Upton, in the presence of Ambassador James W. Gerard, the big feature adaptation of Mr. Gerard's world-known book was completed and is now being cut, titled and assembled by Director William Nigh.

"My Four Years in Germany" is not a war film. It will be one of the most lavishly produced pictures of the year and will tell with fidelity the inside story of Prussian intrigue against America and the world, from the viewpoint of the one man best fitted to tell it—Ambassador Gerard.

The picture begins with the famous Zabern incident in Germany, when a Prussian officer cut down a lame shoemaker in the little German town. From then on follows the whole story of the rape of Belgium, the entry of England into the arena, the scenes at the embassy, the sinking of neutral ships and the violation of American rights and the entrance of America into the war.

One of the most dramatic moments of the picture is the scene of the banquet given in Gerard's honor at the Chamber of Commerce. It was a love feast at which America was toasted and the Ambassador lauded. Germany presumed that Gerard knew little and suspected less, while at the time he was being feted he had with him the proofs that Germany had ordered the resumption of ruthless submarine warfare, knowing it would mean war with the United States.

IN EASTERN FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY STUDIOS.

At the Famous Players-Lasky 56th street studio, the production of "The Lie," starring Elsie Ferguson, is well under way, and the interiors will be completed this week, after which the outside scenes will be taken. J. Searle Dawley, the veteran producer, is directing this subject.

In Ft. Lee, N. J., Director Maurice Tourneur is heaping imprecations upon the weather man for the arctic weather with which he has surrounded the Famous Players-Lasky studio. The production of "Prunella," with Marguerite Clark as the star, is going on under difficulties.

'Tis an ill wind that blows no good, however, for at the Fifty-sixth street studio Director Edward Jose hailed the drop in the mercury with delight. He had begun the production of "The Resurrecton," with Pauline Frederick as the star, and had started on interiors when the blizzard arrived. This picture will contain Siberian scenes which he had contemplated taking in the extreme northern part of the state, near the Canadian border, where the temperature at this time of the year is about 20 degrees below zero. Mr. Jose dropped the interior scenes and immediately arranged for the filming of these Siberian pictures near New York City before moderate weather should melt the snow and ice.

Miss Billie Burke worked on interiors last week at the Fifty-sixth street studio in the satire, "Let's Get a Divorce." In addition to the comedy situations, the subject contains terse, humorous titles, and the taking of these scenes have livened the studio, as the famous comedienne is enthusiastic over the story by Anita Loos and John Emerson. Charles Giblyn, who had just completed "Sunshine Nan" with Ann Pennington, took up the direction of this subject following the illness of the late Joe Kaufman and left last week for Miami, Fla., to film the exteriors.

"HIS COLLEGE PROXY" A GOOD SELBURN.

Neal Burns and Gertrude Selby, two of the screen world's best-known light comedians, are featured in the one-reel Selburn comedy, "His College Proxy," released this week by General Film Company. This is the fourth of the Selburn comedies, and it maintains the high standard for wholesomeness and entertaining qualities established by the first subjects.

PORTER OF SIMPLEX MAKES FLYING TRIP.

"When you can't do what you want to do, it's up to you to want to do something else." That is the way General Manager E. M. Porter, of the Simplex Company, reasoned when the fuel administrator imposed a five-day shutdown upon industry.

Immediately he wanted to make a flying trip and get face to face with some of his distributors. He particularly wanted to do this in order to get more first-hand information on the working of the exclusive-territory plan of distribution which was inaugurated Nov. 1, 1917.

So much had happened to discourage motion picture men—closing one day per week, the fuel famine, the weather you wouldn't chase a dog out into—that he wondered how the new plan had withstood that severe test. Well, he found that it had been equal to the occasion. While fewer orders had been booked than in December, the falling off was slight; and it proved that the zone system, with an exclusive distributor in each zone, is the logical way to sell projection machines.

One thing Mr. Porter again discovered was that you can't get away from the weather, no matter where you go. He found a considerable amount of it, and of a kind that beat several hotels out of a guest. For eight days in succession he had to satisfy himself with a hotel on wheels—a Pullman sleeper. But in spite of that he succeeded in having a splendid visit with his distributors in Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and Kansas City, and not only is he none the worse for it, but he says that trip was just what he needed.

TRIANGLE'S "SMOKE" NEARING COMPLETION.

Gloria Swanson has the leading role in "Smoke," a society romance which is nearing completion at the Triangle studios under the direction of Jack Dillon. The subject is a picturization of Norman Sherbrook's recent magazine story of the same title, adapted for the screen by Charles Mortimer, and shows the initiation of a young girl into the ultra "smart set" of a large city, and the triumph of her ideals over the pitfalls and temptations which beset her. Several faces new to the Triangle lot are seen in "Smoke." Edward Peale makes his initial appearance as Miss Swanson's leading man. The cast also includes Jim Cope, Grover Franke, Darrell Foss, George Hernandez, Claire McDowell, Jack Richardson, Kitty Bradbury, Bliss Chevalier and Iris Ashton.

MISS YOUNG DONS PRISON GARB.

Clara Kimball Young in prison garb is the novel sight which will greet this screen star's many admirers when the "House of Glass" is released by Select Pictures Corporation within the next few weeks. Miss Young has created many roles during her life on the screen, but it remained for "The House of Glass" to present her in stripes and lock-step—or the modern equivalent which present-day prison reform has substituted for these time-honored earmarks of the jailbird.

In "The House of Glass" Miss Young plays the part of a young girl who, believing herself on the threshold of a happy marriage, finds herself landed in the Tombs, so charged with complicity in a major robbery that proof of her innocence is impossible. It is while serving the resultant prison term that Miss Young—discarding for once the beautiful habiliments in which she has made so many notable screen pictures—appears in one reel in the drab garb of a Blackwells Island inmate.

While the picture is being cut by Director Chautard the star is engrossed in preparations for her production of Elinor Glyn's successful serial, "The Reason Why."

"The Reason Why" will be directed by Robert G. Vignola, and Louis Physioc will do the camera work.

Goldwyn Announces Another Garden

It Is "The Splendid Sinner" and Will Be Released April 7—Three Pictures Precede It.

GOLDWYN, in making public the names of four new productions for immediate release to its exhibitor patrons, will take exhibitors everywhere by surprise with the announcement that it has a second Mary Garden production fully completed and includes this among its regular releases at the same price that Goldwyn exhibitors pay for all other Goldwyn pictures. The title of Miss Garden's second picture is "The Splendid Sinner," from an original story by Kate Jordan—a big, modern, melodramatic society story.

The next four Goldwyn releases following Madge Kennedy in "Our Little Wife," which was released beginning Feb. 10 throughout the world, are:

Feb. 27—Mae Marsh in "The Beloved Traitor," from the novel of the same name by Frank L. Packard.

March 10—Mabel Normand in "The Room Below," by Blaine Sterne.

March 24—Madge Kennedy in "Powder-Nose Annie," by Roy Somerville.

April 7—Mary Garden in "The Splendid Sinner," by Kate Jordan.

"The Beloved Traitor," Mae Marsh's next production, ranks with "Polly of the Circus" and "The Cinderella Man" in the opportunities it gives the star. In it she has the best emotional role afforded thus far by any of her Goldwyn screen stories.

Good news for exhibitors is found in the fact that following the success of her first Goldwyn picture, "Dodging a Million," Mabel Normand is brought back. "The Room Below," her second Goldwyn picture, is, like her first release, also a mystery story, but of a different type. Besides being packed with dramatic action and incident, it contains a tremendous amount of fun, laughter and pathos, with a corking love story thrown in for good measure.

"Powder-Nose Annie," Madge Kennedy's next production, has a surprise in store for the public that so quickly applauded and liked this star. To date, her screen productions have been farce comedies, but "Powder-Nose Annie" is an entirely different type of dramatic picture—a type of role that Madge Kennedy has never had before, either on the stage or screen.

Last Fall, while "Thais" was still being assembled and arranged for showing, Mary Garden plunged into the making of her second Goldwyn Picture. Not more than 100 persons in the entire industry—and most of those were on the Goldwyn pay roll—knew that Miss Garden was to make a second Goldwyn production so quickly. This second picture was completed even in advance of the release of "Thais," and has been held back as a surprise for Goldwyn customers. This production, "The Splendid Sinner," was directed by Edwin Carewe and is a powerful emotional drama. Miss Garden drew capacity audiences into theaters everywhere with "Thais," and exhibitors who profited by the presentation of her first picture are now given another opportunity at the same rental they pay for other Goldwyn productions.

"WEAVER OF DREAMS" (Metro).

Viola Dana, the star of the forthcoming Metro picturization of Myrtle Reed's novel, "Weaver of Dreams," is supported by a capable cast in this All Star Series production, which is being produced at the Metro West Coast studio at Hollywood, California, under the direction of John H. Collins.

Clifford Bruce appears "opposite." Bruce was Miss Dana's leading man in "The Winding Trail," her first California-made production. Russell Simpson plays Martin Chandler. He played Jacob Tutwiler, grandfather of June (Viola Dana) in "Blue Jeans," and is well known for his sterling portrayals of strong character roles.

Others in the cast are Vera Lewis, Cora Drew and Mildred Davis. The subject is to be released Feb. 18.

DRAFT BOYS IN GAUMONT-MUTUAL WEEKLY.

Five months ago the boys who were caught in the first draft were mere civilians. At that time the Gaumont-Mutual Weekly pictured them as they left their homes and as they arrived in awkward squads at the training camps. In succeeding issues they have been shown as they were initiated into the intricacies of drill, trench digging, artillery practice, and the many other essentials which go to make up the capable fighter.

In No. 7 of the Gaumont-Mutual Weekly, released on Feb. 10, is shown the most impressive demonstration of the efficiency of the selective draft in making soldiers. The 308th Infantry, National Army, is pictured in its parade down New York's Fifth Avenue with all the snap and spirit of seasoned regulars while the weather was hovering near the zero mark.

Scenes in this number from the war zone show how Pershing's "pets" were taught to handle big guns. Since this picture was taken the news dispatches have told us how these same soldiers demolished Hun trenches in their first battle.

Other foreign views show how the French and Italian soldiers have stopped the Prussians on the Piave River; the training of war dogs at the front, and ex-Premier Caillaux, who conspired to overthrow France, and his wife, who gained unwarranted sympathy when she killed the editor of Figaro, one of the first to accuse Caillaux of villainy.

Among the many subjects photographed in the United States, one of the most interesting is that which exposes the secrets of the "great white way." For the first time the press agents who have made Broadway the most famous thoroughfare in the world are shown on the screen for the edification of the thousands who have read their effusions.

BILL HART DOUBLES IN "TIGER MAN."

The titles of two Thomas H. Ince productions on which work is now in progress were received at the New York office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation last week. William S. Hart's vehicle following "Blue Blazes Rawden," which will be released by Artcraft on Feb. 18, has been named "The Tiger Man." In this production "Big Bill" is now appearing before the camera as Hawk Parsons, an outlaw of the desert who is redeemed by the love of a good woman. The story is by J. G. Hawks. A troop of cavalry plays an important part in the picture. In staging one of the big cavalry charges last week, the players did not seem to present the necessary punch in their riding. It was suggested that if Hart would lead them there would be a different kind of a showing. Changing his buckskins for a faded blue cavalry uniform, the popular star led the charge and the desired result was immediately evident. This is perhaps the first time in his film career that Hart has doubled in a photoplay. The charge, however, was taken at a long-shot, so that the leader will not be recognized in the picture as the same person who portrays the starring role.

Dorothy Dalton's Paramount picture on which she has been working for the past few weeks has been titled "Tyrant Fear." This story is being staged by R. William Neill under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, from the scenario by R. Cecil Smith. John Stumar is responsible for the photography. The story is one of primitive passions unloosed and a woman's struggle against fate, with her triumph when she has once thrown off the shackles of fear.

FILM HYLAN'S FIRE PREVENTION PROCLAMATION.

The proclamation on fire prevention recently issued by Mayor Hylan of New York City has been vividly illustrated in motion pictures by the Industrial Department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. This first link in an educational campaign on fire prevention, which is eventually to spread from coast to coast, is to be shown to the public in one of the early issues of the Universal Animated Weekly.

This campaign is receiving the personal attention of Harry Levey, manager of the Universal's industrial department. Governors of many states, fire officials and fire underwriters are giving the movement their whole-hearted support.

One of the incidents mentioned in the Mayor's proclamation, and impressively shown in this first film of the campaign, is the usual result of carelessness on the part of a workman who believes he is employed in a fireproof building which is deemed safe from any sort of conflagration. It also shows the necessity of having a properly equipped watchman to prevent disaster which may arise from carelessness of this nature. Of particular timeliness is the preventative methods suggested as a means of combating the spread of havoc caused by the Kaiser's arson fiends, who are now proving themselves so effective in hindering the production of war necessities.

SILBAR GIVES WHOLESOME HIS FULL TIME.

A. Silbar, one of Chicago's fashionable garment makers, has transferred his interests to the Wholesome Films Corporation, in which he has been a stockholder, and from now on will associate himself entirely in the producing end of the film business.

Mr. Silbar's knowledge of styles and designing will prove a big asset in costuming Wholesome productions, and forthcoming releases will show his handiwork.

Brady-Mades Up to May

World Film Announces Titles of Subjects Completed for Future Release.

THE World Film Corporation is able to announce to exhibitors the titles of all the World Pictures Brady-Made completed and scheduled for release up to the middle of May. Inasmuch as the chronological order of the pictures is not determined, no release dates are given and the following order is only approximate.

Kitty Gordon in "The Divine Sacrifice" leads the list. Associated with Miss Gordon in this picture is Jean Angelo, who is leading man for Sarah Bernhardt in the present American tour. The succeeding picture is "The Whims of Southy," with Ethel Clayton.

Montagu Love, June Elvidge and Arthur Ashley follow with "Broken Ties," which is directed by Mr. Ashley and possesses a complication of the tensest sort, involving no less than six persons and the solution of which is accomplished by the sacrifice of the victim. Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley are co-starred in "His Royal Highness," in which picture Mr. Blackwell performs a feat of marvelous athletic dexterity. Alice Brady reappears on the World program in a most sympathetic role in "The Spur of Sybil," a comedy drama. In this picture Miss Brady portrays a very ambitious girl who surmounts all kinds of obstacles, both serious and ludicrous, in order to win her spurs.

Kitty Gordon's next picture is called "The Wasp," and contains a number of startling mob scenes and exciting episodes which indicate some deviation from her previous roles.

"The Cross Bearer," in seven reels, with Montagu Love and Jeanne Eagles, is prepared for publication. This is the much-discussed World-Picture picturizing the conditions in Belgium at the opening of the war. Montagu Love portrays the masterly figure of Cardinal Mercier in his role of protector of the oppressed Belgians. A delightful love story is bound up with the sterner duties of the prelate and relieves the harrowing details. Several military scenes of surpassing interest are included showing the German attack on Belgium which are in keeping with the massive scale of the production.

Madge Evans is co-starred with George MacQuarrie in a picture with the thought-provoking title, "Wanted, a Mother." The story revolves about the vicissitudes of little Madge as the motherless child of an ambitious surgeon who endeavors to renew the affections of her father and at the same time find a suitable mother. Some of the scenes are of marked beauty, having been photographed in the Magnolia Gardens of Savannah, Georgia.

Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge appear in "The Way Out," Ethel Clayton in "The Witch Woman" and Kitty Gordon in "Devil's Dice," all of which titles are not permanently decided upon. Evelyn Greeley and Carlyle Blackwell appear together in "Leap to Fame" and Ethel Clayton plays an unusual role in "A Soul Without Windows," which has the Shaker life as a portion of its background. "Journey's End," which is also an Ethel Clayton picture, has John Bowers as leading man. The scenes are of great natural beauty, being laid in Florida. Another Alice Brady release called "Nether Currents" is listed for publication.

The release sheet also contains an "Announcement Extraordinary." Inasmuch as such pictures—previous to their being permanently titled—as "Mothers of France," "Rasputin" and "The Cross Bearer," were unveiled to the public under this impersonal caption, the natural implication is that another superpicture is to be released on the World program.

Ether Clayton is scheduled to appear in "A Modern Girl," and another all-star production entitled "Helene" is about completed. Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge, Montagu Love, George MacQuarrie and John Bowers are among the long list of World players participating in the picture.

GOOD CAST FOR "THE UNBELIEVERS."

In "The Unbelievers," an Edison subject, Raymond McKee gives a natural and ardent portrayal of Philip Landicutt, the wealthy, well-born young American who enlists in the Marine Corps. Marguerite Courtot is Virginie Harbrok, the young Belgian refugee. Kate Lester is Margaret Landicutt, Philip's mother. Frank de Vernon is "Uncle Jemmy" Landicutt. The part of Lefty, the loyal, generous private of Marines, who saved Philip's life, and, in doing so, gave up his own, is played by Darwin Karr. The role of Lieutenant Kurt von Schnieditz, the brutal young German officer, is a difficult and unsympathetic one. Karl von Stroheim presents the brutal military tactics of the Hun in a realistic manner.

Other parts are equally well cast, and, with the authentic military atmosphere imparted by participation of well-drilled marines at Quantico, Va., "The Unbeliever" has an artistic finish that is most satisfying.

NATALIE TALMADGE WITH ARBUCKLE.

Natalie Talmadge, third of the trio of Talmadge sisters, was drafted by Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle for his new picture, "The Bell Boy," to be released by Paramount. Natalie didn't aspire for film honors, but Arbuckle said he needed her eyes to complete the beauty and charm of the film. There are lots of types in the comedy, and among them Natalie Talmadge will stand out strongly.

"THE DOCTOR AND THE WOMAN" (Jewel).

Twenty prints of "The Doctor and the Woman" have been ordered by the New York branch of Jewel Productions, Inc., as the result of the requests for bookings that have already been forthcoming from exhibitors in that territory.

Announced as the companion picture to "The Price of a Good Time," the newest Jewel release has aroused the anticipation of those exhibitors who have already run its predecessor. Both were produced by Lois Weber, and feature Mildred Harris.

Scene from "The Doctor and the Woman" (Jewel).

According to Harry M. Berman, sales manager of the Jewel organization, the feature will be released on March 4, and every effort will be made to have all the first-run houses in the New York territory show it within the thirty days that follow. Should more than twenty prints be required to fill the demand they will be ordered.

A special trade showing is now being arranged and will be held within the next two weeks. It is likely that a run at Carl Laemmle's Broadway theater will be given prior to its general release.

That True Boardman will be co-starred in the Mary Roberts Rinehart story will be welcome news to exhibitors who have shown pictures in which this player was featured.

"THE LANDLOPER'S" CAST IS CHOSEN.

The names of a number of well-known film players appear in the cast engaged to support Harold Lockwood in Metro's screen production of Holman Day's popular novel, "The Landloper," the making of which has just been begun, under the direction of George Irving, in Florida, where Mr. Lockwood and his company are quartered for the coming months.

In the leading feminine role will appear Pauline Curley, who returns to Mr. Lockwood's company because of the pronounced success she achieved upon the occasion of her first appearance with the player as his chief support in "The Square Deceiver."

The "heavy" character will be enacted by Stanton Heck, who played the same type of part in Mr. Lockwood's current Metro release, "Broadway Bill."

Bert Starkey has been selected for an important character part. Like Mr. Heck, Mr. Starkey was a member of the cast of "Broadway Bill," and his highly creditable performance led to his re-engagement.

Another member of the cast whose name is well known to picturegoers is William Clifford, who has prominently supported Mr. Lockwood in his last four pictures.

JAXON FINISHES ITS PATRIOTIC SERIAL.

General Film announces that the final scenes of the twelfth and last episode of the thrill serial, "A Daughter of Uncle Sam," are completed. This is far ahead of the release date. The work of assembling, titling and printing the final chapter of the serial is now well under way at the Providence studio of the Jaxon Film Corporation, insuring that there will be no hitch or delay in getting the various episodes to the exhibitors. Reports which have reached General Film since the release of the first episode on Jan. 19 indicate that the patriotic serial has scored a tremendous success.

WIDE DEMAND FOR EMPEY FEATURE.

Many of the leading exhibitors of the country are bidding for "Over the Top," the Vitagraph special in which Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey, soldier, lecturer and author, is to be featured. According to a statement by Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph distributing organization, first run requests are reaching the home office of the company from all the important cities of the United States and Canada, New York City theater men being in the lead.

"SCHOOLS AND SCHOOLS" (Broadway Star).

Jean Paige, an attractive star who has appeared in a number of important O. Henry successes, reappears in a new O. Henry vehicle, "Schools and Schools," the current General Film release. This is the delightful story of the Western girl who came to New York to live with her city relatives, and who found society life deadly dull until Gilbert Ross came into her life. Nevada Warren (Jean Paige) is one of the most likeable of the famous O. Henry's characters, and the process of immortalizing her for the screen has been well managed.

A dramatic touch is added to the story when the heroine reveals for the first time that she can neither read nor write. She hands a note from the artist Ross to her cousin to read for her and suddenly discovers that she is loved, proving thereby that love is no respector of the "Three R's." Miss Paige is ably supported by Charles Hutchison, Frances McHenry and Herbert Pattee.

"AMARILLY" IS NOW COMPLETED.

Mary Pickford has completed "Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley" for Artcraft release, to follow "Stella Maris." Her latest vehicle was adapted by Frances Marion from the novel by Belle K. Maniates, and the production was directed by Marshall Neilan.

In " Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley," Mary Pickford will be seen in a character of particular charm. Amarilly is a girl who "makes 'em stand around," as her mother expresses it.

The cast is a lengthy one and includes William Scott, Norman Kerry, Ida Waterman, Margaret Landis, Kate Price, Thomas H. Wilson, Fred Goodwin, Herbert Standing, Wesley Barry, Frank Butterworth, Antrim Short, George Hackathorne and Gertrude Short.

THREE HUNDRED CHINESE IN DE MILLE PICTURE.

Cecil B. DeMille took one of the big scenes of "The Whispering Chorus" recently, with three hundred Chinese celebrating their New Year. A replica of a village in China was constructed, with all its lights and brilliant colors, and the scene was photographed at night. Lanterns hung from the rafters and swung across the street on ribbon streamers, and Chinese dragons, spitting fire, were dragged along by prancing Celestials. There was considerable excitement at the Famous Players-Lasky studios in Hollywood the day these scenes were taken. The Chinese were brought from San Francisco and were costumed at the studio.

HART TAKES ON MORE STUDIO SPACE.

Sixteen acres in the heart of Hollywood, five blocks from the William S. Hart studio, have been secured for the use of the Ince star in Artcraft pictures, so that in many instances it will be possible to erect large sets without going a great distance to find the necessary space.

When Bill Hart first worked with Mr. Ince, Inceville was placed at his disposal, and when, later, the star came under the Artcraft banner, he missed the space to which he had been accustomed. The studio now used is large enough for all interior work, and for some exterior purposes as well.

LOWRY SUBJECT GOING STRONG.

Up to the close of the first week in February, the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation announces Ira M. Lowry's production of "For the Freedom of the World," Edwin Bower Hesser's drama of love and the Great War, had been played to capacity business by more than 1,000 exhibitors in every section of the United States and Canada. Inspection of the booking records reveals that more than a thousand additional theaters have contracted for this spectacle at an early date and that contracts are coming in excess of 100 a day.

BEACH STRONG FOR AUTHENTIC LOCATIONS.

When the Rex Beach Pictures Company sets out to picturize one of the author's many famous novels there is never any question about "locations" that will look enough like the locality which is the background of the story to make it appear that the scenes were taken in that locality itself. If the scenario calls for New York City, as in "The Auction Block," New York City it is, not a West Coast studio representation of famous New York places; or if the script prescribes Mexico, as in "Heart of the Sunset," players and technical staff are whisked off to Mexico. All of which is preliminary to saying that members of the "Heart of the Sunset" company have just come back from nearly three months of wild adventures in southwestern Texas and northern Mexico.

Details of Mexican life are faithfully depicted in the film, which is now being cut, titled and assembled at the Beach laboratory in New York City. Upon its completion, the picture will be released throughout the world by the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation as a Rex Beach special—which is to say that it will not be rented to exhibitors as part of the regular Goldwyn program, as was the case with "The Auction Block," but will be handled as a production separate and distinct, such as "The Manxman" and "For the Freedom of the World."

"REVELATION" IS METRO'S BEST, SAYS ROWLAND.

"Revelation," the initial screen production under the Metro banner, starring the great Russian actress, Mme. Nazimova, will be shown on a circuit of all the Loew theaters beginning Monday, Feb. 25. Half of the Loew houses will show "Revelation" beginning the first half of the week, and the other theaters will offer the picture to their patrons the second half of the week. Marcus Loew is enthusiastic over the high artistic qualities of the picture, as well as the potency of it as a box-office attraction.

The picture will be the first appearance of Nazimova on the screen in any way since her last stage production, "'Ception Shoals." Her return to artistic activity is as fortunate as it is important, since "Revelation" presents an ideal combination of star, story and direction. The story has been adapted from Mabel Wagnalls novelette, "A Rose-Bush of a Thousand Years." The seven-act special production de luxe has been directed by George D. Baker.

Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro, says Metro considers "Revelation" the greatest picture ever made in the history of the organization.

HOLMES MOVES FAST IN "A PAIR OF SIXES."

Taylor Holmes shows his ability to move rapidly in his forthcoming production, "A Pair of Sixes." This production gives him the most strenuous and perhaps the funniest role he has yet assumed for the movies. As T. Boggs Johns, degraded to the caste of butler, as a result of a card game with his business partner, Mr. Holmes is speeded on in his action by the relentless love of "Coddles," the haggard and aged housemaid.

Production of this Edward Peple play adaptation is now in its fourth week and has several weeks yet to go before the script is all checked off.

Mr. Holmes' wife, Edna Phillips Holmes, a former member of Mr. Holmes' famous stage vehicle, "The Million," occupies a role of conspicuity in the picture and demonstrates her full right to the name of "Holmes." Director Windom is in charge of the production.

BEBAN'S "ONE MORE AMERICAN" READY.

George Beban's next production for Paramount release, entitled "One More American," has been completed at the Hollywood studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for Paramount release. The scenario was adapted for the screen by Olga Printzlau from William C. DeMille's successful stage play, "The Land of the Free."

In this subject Beban again portrays an Italian immigrant, a character which he created on the speaking stage and later transferred to the screen, and which has caused immeasurable tears and laughter. The scenes are laid in Little Italy, New York, and on Ellis Island.

The supporting cast includes Helen Jerome Eddy, Marcia Manon, May Giracci, Raymond Hatton, Jack Holt, H. B. Carpenter, Hector Dion, May Palmer, Ernest Joy and Signor Buzzi. The production was directed by William C. DeMille.

BIG DEMAND FOR CHAPIN SERIES.

Reports from exchanges all over the country indicate a tremendous demand for the Paramount series, "The Son of Democracy," written, directed and produced by Benjamin Chapin, the famous portrayer of Lincoln, it was announced at the Famous Players-Lasky New York headquarters last week.

The first of the series, entitled "My Mother," showing dramatically the log cabin birth of "The Son of Democracy," the gentle influence of Lincoln's mother, developing the boy who became the president, will be released the day before Lincoln's birthday, thus offering a particularly auspicious opening date for this subject.

BIG PART FOR STATUE IN "BELOVED TRAITOR."

Second only in importance to the actors themselves is an inanimate member of the cast in "The Beloved Traitor," Goldwyn's latest Mae Marsh production. The inanimate member is a life-sized statue, a counterpart of the star, Mae Marsh. It is not a rough, careless suggestion of her, but a painstakingly executed replica of the elusive "whim girl of the screen." The figure is entitled "The Beacon," and represents a girl in the garb of a fisher girl, with arms outstretched, as if welcoming home the returning mariners. The idea runs through the play, first in the toy figures which the fisherman-sculptor fashions for the village children, then as the vision he sees of the great masterwork through which he will achieve fame, later as the realization of the dream when he actually chisels the statue.

In the powerful climax of "The Beloved Traitor" the sculptor fights with a rival and this figure is overturned. In an effort to save the precious effigy from destruction Mae Marsh struggles to her feet and staggers toward the combatants just as the statue falls forward. She receives the full force of its weight, and her slim frame crumples beneath it, buried under the debris.

The director's problem in accomplishing this scene was a difficult one. It was impossible to rehearse the episode for, once demolished, the statue obviously could not be recreated and used again. Once it had played its most important part in the play, the figure could not be employed to "act" once more. The director could only instruct Mae Marsh and E. K. Lincoln, her leading man, in the bare essentials of the situation, trusting to chance and the players' skill to accomplish the scene effectively. That this was done seems unnecessary to say, but with what degree of realism and lack of constraint only the finished production will reveal.

"THE GUILTY MAN" COMING FEBRUARY 18.

The screen presentation of A. H. Woods' theatrical triumph, "The Guilty Man," produced under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, Inc., will be released by Paramount on Feb. 18. When this subject appeared on the stage in 1916, it scored a tremendous success. The screen version, it is stated, is practically an unchanged version of this play.

Written by Ruth Helen Davis and the late Charles Klein, author of "The Lion and the Mouse," "Daughters of Men," "Next of Kin," "The District Attorney," etc., Mr. Woods' production was conceded to be one of the strongest, most-vitally gripping plays ever staged. The story deals with the life of a Parisian dancer and her illegitimate daughter, who, murdering her stepfather, is prosecuted for the state by her own father.

The picture was directed by Irvin V. Willat, under the supervision of Mr. Ince, and presents an exceptionally able cast, including Gloria Hope as the daughter and Vivian Reed as the wronged mother, the remainder of the cast consisting of William Garwood, J. P. Lockney, Charles French and Hayward Mack in the important characters.

MOTHER GOOSE TALES ADAPTED TO SCREEN.

Old Mother Goose and her entire family are busy at the Chicago studios of the Wholesome Films Corporation. Having found that the public wants to stay young, that it appreciates the screen versions of childhood's literature, Wholesome has outlined a schedule of releases that will include "The Cow Jumped Over the Moon," "Humpty-Dumpty," "Cat and the Fiddle," and "The House That Jack Built."

The announcement of the first Mother Goose release will be made soon.

ESSANAY COMING THROUGH WITH COMEDIES.

"Check Your Hat, Sir?", a one-reel Essanay comedy, featuring the famous Ziegfeld Follies comedian, Don Barclay, has been furnished and will be released on the General Film program Feb. 16. The picture required a longer time to produce than is usually given to those comedies, not only because Don had some matinees to attend in a Loop theater, but because Director A. D. Hotaling wanted to extract some of the best gems from the pantomimic genius of the comedian.

All of the action takes place in a cafe, and Don wears one of his famous makeups, including the laughable zig-zag part in his hair. Considerable expense was gone to in obtaining suitable support for this picture, including a classic dancer, whose grace Don mimics.

In Essanay's one-reel comedy, "Our Little Nell," exhibitors can give their patrons all the thrills of a Western melodrama, plus the most valuable thing in the world today—a good laugh. The picture is a satirical burlesque on Western thrillers, including all of the well known characters—the villainous outlaw, the courageous (?) hero, the dainty ingenue (she weighs two hundred pounds) and a wealth of dance-hall colors and types.

GENERAL RELEASES "THE TRIMMED LAMP."

"The Trimmed Lamp," a powerful and dramatic story of New York life, revealing O. Henry's skill for character delineation in its most attractive form, forms this week's release in General Film Company's Broadway Star Feature series. Mildred Manning and Alice Terry, two well-known O. Henry favorites, with a capable cast, give the story a real life interpretation.

This O. Henry story is one of the most refreshing and faithful pictures of life given by the noted author. Lou and Nancy can be found by the thousands in the shops and factories of a great city.

"THE WOMAN BETWEEN FRIENDS" (Vitagraph).

Alice Joyce's first feature of the new year, "The Woman Between Friends," is announced for release Feb. 11. This Blue Ribbon feature is a pretentious five-reel subject and one of the strongest dramas in which Miss Joyce ever has appeared. The play was adapted from the Robert W. Chambers novel, "Between Friends," and was produced by Tom Terriss. Marc MacDermott appears opposite Miss Joyce in the principal male role, and the rest of the cast is exceptionally strong, including, among others, "Mother" Mary Maurice and Robert Walker.

WALLACE REID AND KATHLYN WILLIAMS CO-STAR.

The next production to be released under the Paramount trade-mark presents Wallace Reid and Kathlyn Williams in "The Thing We Love," picturized by Harvey Thew from the story by H. B. and M. G. Daniel, which sounds a powerful patriotic note. It shows the cunning of the country's enemies, and how they work in the dark and strike down a man from behind. The story is particularly timely, although it shows none of the war's horrors. The scene is set in the period just prior to our own entrance in the great world war, and deals with German plotters who attempt to injure the manufacturer making war munitions for the Allies. Wallace Reid as Rodney Sheridan and Kathlyn Williams as Margaret Kenwood, in a series of sensational incidents, are able to avert an explosion which would have wrecked the plant.

The co-stars in "The Thing We Love" played opposite each other in "Big Timber," which was well received throughout the country. The supporting cast includes Tully Marshall, the noted heavy of the stage and screen; Mayme Kelso, Charles Ogle and Billy Elmer. The latter again appears in the role of a detective, in which character he has been seen to advantage. The production was directed by Lou-Tellegen.

Ann Murdock Heads Mutual Feb. 18

Will Be Seen in "My Wife," Directed by Dell Henderson—Billie Rhodes and Mutual Weekly Complete Program.

ANN MURDOCK will be seen in a screen production of "My Wife," released by Mutual on its star production series February 18. The picture was made under the direction of Dell Henderson at the Empire All-Star studios. It is an adaptation of the play by Michael Morton, which had an extended run both in America and London, and achieved a tremendous stage success with Billie Burke when first produced in New York. Originally it was a starring vehicle for John Drew, but in the film version the play was altered to provide a stellar part for Beatrice Hammond, who is "My Wife."

Scene from "My Wife" (Mutual).

The story presents the amusing and interesting complications developed by a marriage of convenience.

It becomes embarrassing and decidedly uncomfortable for the guardian when he falls in love with his wife, and he repents of his bargain. The comedy element is dominant throughout in spite of the seriousness which involves the unusual position of the husband.

Miss Murdock is thoroughly at home in her role, giving it a lightness of touch and vivacity that are charming. She wears some stunning gowns of the ultra-fashionable mode.

Rex MacDougal reveals some fine acting in the part of the husband, a part created by John Drew in the stage production. The supporting cast includes Amy Veness, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Hubert Druce, Grace Carlyle, Dudley Hill, and Carl Sauermann.

Billie Rhodes in a Strand comedy, "Miss Cinderella," is scheduled for release February 19. Mary has an idea that the son of her father's old friend who is coming to visit them is the usual spendthrift and pampered scion of wealthy parents. To prove her assertion she poses as a poor working girl, and manages to have him meet her when she is apparently starving. He proves a real fellow when he rescues her from some black-handers who are about to blow up the house.

Mutual Weekly is released February 18. A surprise is in store for exhibitors on this Weekly, as it is said to contain some "scoops" and some striking scenes resulting from the tie-up in railroad freightage.

Louise Glaum Starts Work for Paralta

Talented Actress Will Be Seen in "The Snapdragon" in a Role That Has Nothing of the Seductress.

LOUISE GLAUM, who is widely known as the "Lady of the Peacocks," has started work on a production in which she will make her debut as a Paralta star. Paralta has recognized in Miss Glaum a talent for dramatic and emotional acting which has to a great extent been confined to a small scope because of her continued appearance as a screen vampire. The executives of Paralta Plays, Inc., have decided to take Miss Glaum out of the vampire character and to give her an opportunity to gain fame in a new field.

Her first picture, "The Snapdragon," is a straight drama full of strong action and gripping situations which has nothing of the seductress in it. Miss Glaum is quite pleased with the change that takes her from the morbid, unpleasant type of woman and that places her on the plane which offers unlimited possibilities for her to display her versatility. Prior to going on the screen Miss Glaum did no vampire work whatever and even played ingenue when in stock companies.

"The Snapdragon" was written especially for Miss Glaum by Monte M. Katterjohn. It is a drama of international intrigue with many sympathetic touches.

Two more productions already have been arranged for by Paralta. Thomas J. Geraghty has just finished the second and Julian Louis Lamothe is writing the third. Both are of the melodramatic nature.

What Triangle Offers For March

Under the Lead of Olive Thomas, Company Will Present Eleven Diversified Subjects.

DURING March Triangle will release eleven pictures, which will in every way substantiate its policy of diversified program features. Olive Thomas opens the month's program in "An Heiress for a Day," a new comedy drama directed by Jack Dillon, in which she is supported by Joe King, a leading man new to Triangle colors. Miss Thomas has a role as a manicurist with whom fickle fortune trifles. The second feature for the week of March 3 is "The Shoes That Danced," an adaptation of John A. Moroso's magazine story dealing with life on the fringe of New York's underworld, in which Pauline Starke, Wallace MacDonald and Dick Rosson are featured.

A story by Frederic Bechdolt, "The Hard Rock Breed," is the first release for the week of the 10th, showing J. Barney Sherry and Jack Curtis as the two typical hard rock men, and including in the cast Margery Wilson and Jack Livingston. The other feature is "The Sea Panther," an elaborate costume picture with William Desmond in the title role, as a swashbuckling pirate of the days of Captain Kidd. Mary Warren makes her initial appearance as leading woman.

For the week of March 17 Roy Stewart stars in a new Western thriller, "Faith Endurin'," by Kenneth B. Clarke—said to be the strongest vehicle for a two-gun hero in which Stewart has ever been cast. Supporting the cowboy star are Miss Fritzi Ridgeway and a carefully selected cast. "The Answer," a socialistic drama starring Alma Rubens, is the second release. The supporting cast also includes Joe King, Claire Anderson, Francis McDonald, Jean Hersholt, Wilbur Higbee and Betty Pearce.

"Nancy Comes Home," Jack Dillon's latest subject, features Myrtle Lind and Jack Gilbert. Myrtle Rishell appears as a society matron. The second release for the week of the 24th is "Innocent's Progress," a society drama featuring Pauline Starke, and numbering in the supporting body Lillian West, Jack Livingston, Charles Dorian and Curley Baldwin.

Dorothy Dalton is seen in a two-reel feature, "The Unfaithful," released March 31, a play with an intensely dramatic plot. In "The Marriage Bubble," a diverting three-reel comedy-drama, William Desmond apears in a dual role. "Another Foolish Virgin" completes the month's progrem. This picture is based on W. Carey Wonderley's story of the same title, and has been adapted for the screen by Charles J. Wilson. It is described as a society drama. In the cast are Margery Wilson, Texas Guinan, Mildred Delfino, Francis McDonald, Lee Hill and George Pearce.

A telegram received at the William Fox offices from the Western studios at Hollywood announces that Director Frank Lloyd has completed the divorce propaganda production on which he has been engaged for some time. The film is now en route to the Eastern offices for cutting and editing, and the present expectation is that it will be released until March 10 as a Standard Picture.

Bertha Mann is cast as Ethel Langdon, the neglected wife of a rich man who is divorced by him and subsequenly becomes Claire, the proprietor of a fashionable gambling resort. The role of John Langdon, her husband, is played by Charles Clary, and Rhea Mitchell has the part of the couple's daughter, Florence, who has been raised in the belief that her mother is dead. Bertram Grassby as Stanley Merrill is a former sweetheart of Mrs. Langdon, and the unnamed co-respondent in the husband's divorce case. He demonstrates his character by taking a train for a quieter neighborhood until after the Langdon troubles have been aired in court. Others in the cast are Marcus Robbins, Willard Louis, Al. Fremont, and Fred Church.

The production, the name of which has not been announced, represents Director Lloyd's development of his own idea, he having written the scenario, and had entire charge of the picture from the outset.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE IN "THE SHUTTLE."

Out at the Morosco studios in Los Angeles final touches are being placed on Constance Talmadge's Select production, "The Shuttle." In this Miss Talmadge has combined the lighter touches of comedy with the heavier demands of drama, as in her earlier release, "Scandal." Unlike "The Honeymoon" and "The Studio Girl," "The Shuttle" provides her with an impersonation of unusual force in which her deeper vein of dramatic ability is given ample opportunity for expression.

The story is a film adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's well known novel, "The Shuttle," and tells a tale of romance and international entanglements which furnishes excellent material for the screen. In it the star, as Bettina Vanderpoel, brilliant and resourceful young New Yorker, comes to the rescue of her older sister, who had, years before, married a dissolute English peer, but in rescuing Sister Rosy she, herself, falls victim to the wiles of Cupid. The play is filled with tense moments and the action moves rapidly.

Work on "Up the Road With Sallie," Miss Talmadge's next production, is well under way and promises a return to her lighter comedy vein.

"Naulahka" Leads Pathe February 24

Interesting Variety in Week's Program, Which Includes Pairs of Serials and Comedies.

PATHE'S program announced for the week of February 24 is one of unusual magnitude, including Rudyard Kipling's "The Naulahka," one serial episode; a two-reel series drama, "A Bombshell of Joy," starring Toto; a Lloyd comedy, and an Argus pictorial as the outstanding features.

Antonio Moreno and Doraldina, the famous Hawaiian dancer, are starred in Astra's six-reel production of "The Naulahka," a story of romance and adventure in West and East by Rudyard Kipling and Wolcott Balestier made under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

Doris Kenyon is starred in the fourteenth episode of "The Hidden Hand" under the title of "The Unmasking," with Sheldon Lewis, Arline Pretty, and Mahlon Hamilton.

Ruth Roland is starred in the sixth drama of "The Price of Folly" series called "In Poverty's Power," with Frank Mayo.

Toto is starred in "One Night's Stand," a two-reel comedy produced by the Rolin Film Company. The famous comedian of the New York Hippodrome appears as the property boy in a little tank town theater, and his antics resulting from the appearance of a slight of hand artist and hypnotist, played by Budd Jamison, bring many laughs.

Harold Lloyd appears in "Beat It," a one-reel comedy produced by Rolin.

The Argus Pictorial No. 8 is an animated magazine in one reel produced by Argus Laboratories. This issue contains remarkable scenes of a Peruvian sheep ranch, an interesting demonstration of specific gravity, unusual pictures of Trinidad's asphalt lake, several brief and well photographed scenes of the beaver, and a brief article featuring the Sun animalculae.

"Around Central Auvergne" and "Clermont-Ferrand" form a split-reel Pathe colored travel picture showing beautiful scenes in picturesque untrampled France.

There are an International Cartoon and educational split-reel and Hearst-Pathe News No. 18 and No. 19 on this program.

UNUSUAL DOUBLE EXPOSURE IN FOX FEATURE.

Photography of a decidedly unusual nature, a feature of which is a perfect double exposure kiss, is claimed for "The Moral Law," starring Gladys Brockwell. The production will be the William Fox Special Features release for February 17.

From a dramatic standpoint the drama is declared to be specially interesting because Miss Brockwell has the role of half-sisters of very dissimilar dispositions. One of the girls has been raised in an atmosphere of refinement in New York, and the other has been reared in a gambling house conducted by her mother in South America. One is American through and through; the other has considerable "bad blood" in her veins. The two meet when their father dies, and the complications that result are said to make a most unusual drama.

As the action centers principally about the two young women, they being the chief characters of the play, the director was called upon constantly to resort to double exposure. The two appear on the screen at the same time on numerous occasions, and in no instance, it is claimed, is there even a suggestion of a division in the film. The kissing occurs at the time the two girls meet in South America, and is declared to be done with such exactness as to register perfectly and realistically.

Those in the cast besides Miss Brockwell are Rosita Marstini, Cora Rankin Drew, Colin Chase, Bertram Grassby, and Joseph Singleton. The story was written by E. Lloyd Sheldon, and the scenario is by Charles Kenyon, author of "Kindling," who recently has joined the Fox organization in the West. Bertram Bracken directed the production.

PARALTA ANNOUNCES THREE RELEASES.

Three releases, carrying the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation's distribution calendar for Paralta Plays up to March 15, are announced. These are "The Turn of a Card," with J. Warren Kerrigan, which is released February 15; "Within the Cup," with Bessie Barriscale, released March 1, and "Humdrum Brown," with Henry B. Walthall, released March 15.

The fortnightly release plan would have moved all of these plays up two weeks, as the third of the Paralta Plays, with Henry B. Walthall in "His Robe of Honor," was released January 15. Owing to the shutdown of industry for the conservation of fuel, however, the printing of the second Kerrigan picture, "The Turn of a Card," was held up so that it was decided to move the whole series ahead two weeks to give the laboratory ample time for thoroughly good work. There will, however, be no further postponement, as the other pictures announced are already in work. The releases on the 1st and 15th of the month will be continued.

The three pictures announced this week complete the second "round" of the three Paralta star series. The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has further announced that there are ten Paraltas already finished and on the shelves or in the cutting rooms.

GENERAL'S SPY SERIAL GOING OVER.

Reports received from branch managers by General Film Company indicate that "A Daughter of Uncle Sam," the spy exposure thrill serial starring Jane Vance, has gone "over the top" with a rush. Important bookings have been reported from many territories.

TRIANGLE TO ISSUE UNDERWORLD STORY.

The Apaches of Paris have been written in song and story the world over. Their haunts have been described by master writers and their queer characters and desperate deeds painted in lurid colors. But New York surpassed Paris in its own gangsters about the time of the Rosenthal murder. In the new Triangle drama, scheduled for the week of March 3, "The Shoes that Danced," which has been adapted from the magazine story by John A. Moroso, many angles of life on the fringe of the New York underworld are seen. Wallace MacDonald is the "Harmony Lad," a slim, closely-dressed gangster, with a wonderful voice which wins for him on the vaudeville stage when he decides to "go straight." Little Pauline Starke, whom Director Frank Borzage is featuring in her third straight production, is Rhoda Regan, whose love for the "Harmony Lad" makes him renounce his old haunts. Dick Dosson is "Stumpy" Darcy. The supporting cast also includes Anna Dodge, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Anne Kromon, Edward Brady and William Dyer.

HEARST-PATHE SHOWS MODERN CRUSADERS.

In the Hearst-Pathe News No. 12 are to be seen some pictures which will thrill every American, whether Jew or Gentile. These pictures show the Allied troops before Jerusalem, this being the first time since the Crusades that armed men not Moslems have walked the streets of the Holy City. The cameraman succeeded in getting some beautiful scenes showing the troops outlined against the sky. One notes that the victorious army is made up of British, French and native forces, and seeing the infantry laboring through the sands, gets a new conception of the difficulties of campaigning in the East.

In the same number are scenes of highest interest. They show the parade of the 308th Infantry in New York City, this being the first opportunity given to compare the stoop-shouldered conscripts of a few short months ago with the trained soldier of the National Army of today.

THREE CHANGES IN FOX SCHEDULE.

Three changes in the schedule of Fox Special Features releases were announced last week. The Tom Mix production, "Six-Shooter Andy," originally set for February 24, and later moved along to March 3, has been restored to its original place on the calendar. The March 3 release will be "The Girl With the Champagne Eyes," in which Jewel Carmen is the star. This had been set for February 24, and now changes places with the Mix drama.

The third change is the elimination from the present schedule of a George Walsh comedy titled "The Kid Is Clever," and set tentatively for March 31 release. There are no changes in the other March releases. "The Debt of Honor," Peggy Hyland's first picture for Fox, will be available March 10; "Woman and the Law," an R. A. Walsh production having an all-star cast, March 17, and Virginia Pearson's drama, "A Daughter of France," March 24.

STRONG SUPPORT FOR EDITH STOREY.

Edith Storey, the athletic star, is supported by a distinguished cast in the forthcoming Metro production "Revenge," which is a picturization of Edward Moffatt's novel of the West, "Hearts Steadfast." H. P. Keeler and William Parker adapted the book for the screen, and it was directed by Tod Browning.

Wheeler Oakman is her leading man, playing "Dick" Randall. Oakman has signed a long-time contract to appear opposite Miss Storey. Ralph Lewis, the well-known heavy, plays "Sudden" Duncan. He is best remembered by picture-theatergoers for his strong work in "The Birth of a Nation." He has played for Fox, Fine-Arts and other companies.

The role of "Tiger Lil" is in the capable hands of Alberta Ballard, a player well known for her work with companies on the West Coast. Miss Ballard presents a sterling characterization of a Western "bad woman."

MALACHI KELLY MAKING GOOD.

While the uninitiated might consider it a hardship to be called upon to portray numerous types of villains and "heavies" during the course of one production, Malachi Kelly, versatile character actor, supporting Jane Vance in "A Daughter of Uncle Sam," the Jaxon thrill serial, considers himself to be a lucky man. Since the first of the twelve episodes of the patriotic serial was begun he has appeared in several important roles in the story. During the exciting expose of the activities of German secret agents and incendiarists in this country actor Kelly has made frequent changes, each and all of which stamp him as one of the genuinely good "heavies" in the eastern film studios.

HAL ROACH IN NEW YORK.

Hal E. Roach, managing director of the Rolin Film Company, left New York for Los Angeles last week after a visit at the Pathe offices. Mr. Roach, who discovered and developed Harold Lloyd, who has won favor on the Pathe program, is enthusiastic about Toto, whom he has recently launched as a screen comedian. He says that Toto is the result of a search which he made for two years to find a true comedian who would be absolutely different from any working in pictures.

"DADDY'S GIRL" TO BE RELEASED MARCH 3.

Baby Marie Osborne is announced by Pathe as the star of "Daddy's Girl," a Gold Rooster Play, which will be released on March 3. This is the picture previously spoken of as "Any Home." The story, by John W. Grey and M. Ramirez Torres, affords the Baby excellent opportunities to display the winsome pranks and remarkable talent which have made her, within two short years, one of the most popular little ones before the public.

Associated with her in the cast is little Sambo, the pickaninny who convulsed audiences with his huge battered trombone in "The Little Patriot." Sambo has been rewarded for the hit he has scored by being given a part in this picture which virtually makes him "second lead" to the Baby.

VIRGINIA PEARSON TWO YEARS WITH FOX.

This week marks the second anniversary of Virginia Pearson's joining the William Fox film forces. Miss Pearson, now one of the brilliant cinema emotional stars, has made thirteen feature productions in that period, and is engaged upon a war photodrama, "A Daughter of France," which, it is declared, will prove to be the most notable production of her entire career.

Miss Pearson's first Fox picture was "Blazing Love," released May 1, 1916. Her most recent film was "Stolen Honor," a story of intrigue in Washington society.

Miss Pearson is a member of a distinguished Southern family, the Galloways, of Kentucky. She was born and lived in Louisville until she left to accept a small part on the stage. Her first important characterization was done in "A Gentleman from Mississippi."

Trade News Brevities

The Week's Film Trade News from Boston

Palace Theater Burns Again—Pertinent Personal Notes of Film Men and Theaters—Business Jottings—Notable Features.

By Richard D. Howe, 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Palace theater, a moving picture house located on Sudbury street, this city, took fire from some unknown cause early one morning recently. The blaze was confined to the theater. Manager Lavangi estimated the loss as $5,000. The theater was practically destroyed by a similar fire several years ago.

Dorchester's Hamilton Gives Benefit.

Boston.—The soldier or sailor boys that belong to Saint Peter's Court, M. C. O. F., of Dorchester, will not be forgotten. A successful "movie night" and entertainment was conducted at the Hamilton theater, Dorchester, by the organization. The theater was given free of charge. A considerable sum of money was taken.

John M. Casey Honored.

Boston.—John M. Casey, moving picture censor for Boston, and a great friend of the motion picture exhibitors, has been made an honorary member of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island branches of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Mr. Casey served four years as License Secretary for Boston under former Mayor James M. Curley, and has commenced another four-year term under Mayor Andrew J. Peters, who formerly was assistant secretary of the United Treasury.

Abraham Barry Gets Call.

Boston.—Abraham Barry, former booker in the local office of the Famous Players, who enlisted in the naval branch of the service a few weeks' ago, has been called for active duty, and has been assigned to Chaplain Stone's office at the Charlestown Navy Yard as a second class seaman. Mr. Barry expects an appointment shortly to be business manager of the New England Bureau of the United States Official Government War Films. His services will be loaned to that bureau as long as they are needed. He will work in cooperation with Mrs. Alice Rice Carroll, film executive of the local bureau.

H. B. Perry Buys Newport Theater.

Newport, R. I.—H. DeMotte Perry, general manager of the three moving picture theaters in Bellows Falls, Vermont, has bought the Lafayette theater in this city. The Lafayette is one of the most fashionable moving picture houses in the state, and is patronized by society leaders. Mr. Perry has installed a high class Symphony orchestra, and has made several noticeable alterations on the house.

Camp Devens' Theater Opens.

Camp Devens, Mass.—The Liberty theater, largest in New England, constructed at this camp for the entertaining of the drafted men, held a very auspicious opening here last week.

"It was a very creditable performance," said Brigadier-General William Weigel, commanding general, at the conclusion of the opening show. "The acts were bright, and the men ought to be happy to have such a fine theater for their entertainment. It will be a great addition to the camp."

Advance Photoplay to Start Production.

Boston.—Dr. Charles Fleisher has been elected president of the Advance Photoplay Corporation, a new film company to produce feature pictures. David G. Fischer has been appointed director-general, and William J. Reid will be treasurer. The new company is backed entirely by local business men. A studio has been rented in New York City for the production of films. It is stated, however, that some exterior scenes will be taken in Greater Boston for some pictures. Work on two subjects already chosen for picturization will commence within a few weeks.

Federal Gets "Will You Marry Me?"

Boston.—The Federal Feature Film Corporation, of No. 16 Piedmont street, this city, has obtained the New England state rights for "Will You Marry Me?"

Grandun Buys Two Features.

Boston.—General Manager Johne E. Dunne, of the Grandun Film Company, of this city, announces that he has secured the New England territorial rights for "Winning Back" and "Whither Thou Goest." Mr. Dunne has also bought the New England distributing rights for four reels of exclusive films depicting the training of Uncle Sam's National Army at Camp Devens, Mass., photographed by Joseph Reed.

Goldwyn Takes On Two New Salesmen.

Boston.—Manager William H. Bradley, of the local Goldwyn exchange, has engaged two new salesmen. A. E. Penn, formerly of the Metro, is "covering" eastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and E. F. Haley, of Des Moines, Iowa, has been assigned to the Maine territory.

Pine Tree State Letter.

From J. P. Flanagan, Bangor, Me.

Screenings at the Bangor General.

BANGOR, ME.—Earle B. Tinker, branch manager of the General Film Company, is arranging the interior of the local offices for a projection room for the benefit of exhibitors. The room, while small, will serve the purpose. This will be the first exchange in Maine to have a private run-off room.

Business around the General is fast picking up. The present manager is installing new booking systems and many ideas that will assist in making General service a winner.

E. A. Schuster, of the accounting department at the home offices of the General Film, was at the local office several days recently. Mr. Schuster expressed himself as greatly pleased at the great strides the office has made in the past few weeks.

W. S. O'Brien Visits Bangor.

W. S. O'Brien, long and favorably known to Maine exhibitors, was a visitor in Bangor last week. Mr. O'Brien is representative of the Fox Film Corporation. Fox pictures are used in Bangor at the Graphic theater.

Moxley Blumenberg Wants a New Name

Portland, Me. — Moxley Blumemberg, local manager of the Famous Players Film, has petitioned the Probate Court that his name, and also the names of his minor sons, aged 13 and 16 years, be changed to Hill. It is set out in the petition that the petitioners did not desire to bear a German name any longer.

The petitioner has been connected with the theatrical business of Portland for some years past.

New Waterville Theater Opens.

Waterville, Me.—Maine Theater Company, Inc., opened its new Haines theater in Waterville on February 7 with "The Whip" and three acts of vaudeville. Mayor Meader and members of the Waterville city government visited the building on the invitation of General Manager Block of the company and Manager Engley, who will have charge of the house. The Haines is a modern theater with all the up-to-date comforts. A more detailed description will be printed later.

Baltimore Trade Letter.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

G. C. Brown Helps Uncle Sam.

BALTIMORE, MD.—George C. Brown, who has been connected with the film industry in Baltimore for some years and has many friends in Baltimore, has now joined the forces of Uncle Sam. Mr. Brown has a position with the Ordnance Department of the United States Army and is stationed at the Aberdeen proving grounds in the purchasing department. Prior to his present occupation Mr. Brown was the assistant manager of the Nixon-Victoria theater, 415 East Baltimore street. For some time previous to that association he managed the Ideal theater in Hampden.

Margaret Lee to Paramount.

Baltimore.—It is now being reported that Margaret Lee, who for some years has been on the staff of the Baltimore News in the photoplay department, will shortly give up her position with this paper to accept an offer from the Paramount Film company in New York, to become a member of their publicity staff. Miss Lee has done excellent work while on the News.

Baltimore Personal Notes.

The week of February 4 being anniversary week for the Garden theater, Lexington street at Park avenue, Baltimore, Manager Woods booked the Thomas H. Ince spectacular feature, "The Zeppelin's Last Raid," in addition to his regular vaudeville.

On Sunday, February 3, Charles S. Anderson, manager of the Grand theater, Highlandtown, arranged a concert for the benefit of the Knights of Columbus War Camp Fund.

George H. Floyd, a selected man from Philadelphia, who before his entrance into the National Army was one of the stars of the old Lubin Company, and who has been at Camp Meade for several weeks, will soon leave this camp for Leon Springs, Texas.

Maritime Province News

From Alice Fairweather, "Standard," St. John, N. B.

Delegation to Ottawa Returns.

ST JOHN, N. B.—The delegation of theater men who left St. John to interview the Government at Ottawa on the question of closing the motion picture houses were delayed in Montreal in company with the Toronto delegation. The message brought back from the Government was to the effect that if any measures had to be taken they would be in line with a general conservation of fuel movement, would not be drastic, and plenty of notice would be given.

Theater managers and exchange men will fall into line with any measure deemed necessary by the Government, but the shortness of this notice given (in the telegram received from Toronto two days ago) caused consternation all over Canada, and thousands of telegrams poured into Ottawa from all over the Dominion.

Lower Prices at the Lyric.

St. John.—The Lyric has reduced its prices, making the matinees for adults fifteen, children ten, and in the evening the balcony fifteen and downstairs twenty-five instead of twenty-five all over the house. The Lyric will show "The Submarine Eye" the second week in February as a substitute for "Damaged Goods," which is delayed in transit.

Alfred Gaudet Managing the Gem.

Fredericton, N. B.—Alfred Gaudet, formerly manager of a theater at Campbellton, later with Messrs. Torry and Winters at Moncton, and recently traveling for the Famous Players, has accepted the position of manager for F. G. Spencer at the Gem, Fredericton.

Business Notes of Interest.

A. Mason, of the Wolfville, N. S., opera house, has been playing big productions with good success. He had the best business with "Joan the Woman" of any picture since "Intolerance."

The vaudeville policy at the Empress theater, at Amherst, N. S., has been very successful here, as well as at Truro. "The Freedom of the World" and "The Fall of the Romanoffs" were both very popular pictures in these houses. Improvements are to be made in the Empress. Another floor is to be put over the arcade, making a new space for thoroughly up-to-date waiting rooms and smoking rooms. The Empress was only opened in September, and is a very convenient, handsome theater of which Amherst people are very proud.

The Imperial at St. John scored another success with "The Little Princess." It was held over for Saturday, and has created much favorable comment.

The "Bloodiness" of serials and the showing of "a certain kind of picture" only too popular was attacked from the Pulpit by one of St. John's foremost Anglican preachers lately.

The Unique theater, St. John, has started the Pathe serial, "The Hidden Hand," and is also showing a Chaplin picture, "Cruel, Cruel Love."

Manager Rogers, of the Peoples theater, Yarmouth, has signed for the Famous Players service, for Mack Sennett comedies, and for the Arbuckle comedies.

The Imperial, St. John, has contracted for the Mack Sennett comedies. At St. Andrews, N. B., E. W. Davis has booked Paramount service, while J. J. Gaudett, of Summerside, P. E. I., has taken the entire 138 productions.

The Imperial, Halifax, will play the Paramount serial and the Arbuckle comedies.

At the Academy of Music, Halifax, "Parentage" was such a success that the run was extended for a whole week.

F. G. Spencer's theater in Charlottetown, P. E. T., was closed for one week, as films were so delayed it was impossible to run.

Newark Theaters Hit by Two-Day Closing

Committee of Exhibitors Visits City Hall and Enters Protest—Cannot Run Sundays or Tuesdays and Must Close at Ten Nightly.

By Jacob J. Kalter, 25 Brandford Place, Newark, N. J.

NEWARK, N. J.—"We would rather close down entirely than close Sundays, Tuesdays and at 10 o'clock nightly," Thomas W. Miner, president of the Theatrical Managers' Association of Newark and Essex County, is quoted as telling Mayor Gillen and Director of Public Safety Brennan. He headed a committee composed of John B. McNally, of the Newark theater; George W. Jacobs, of the Paramount; Lewis R. Golding, of the Proctor's Palace, and Morris Schlesinger, of the Broad Street theater.

The committee visited the City Hall to enter a protest against the closing proposal of Fuel Administrator Richard C. Jenkinson. Mr. Miner stated that the theaters could not stand the two-day closing proposition from a financial viewpoint.

Mayor Gillen told the delegation that the City Commission would give the matter further consideration. It is understood on good authority that a majority of the commissioners are opposed to the closing proposal. It was pointed out to them that the closing of the theaters would not save any appreciable amount of coal, since the showhouses must maintain a certain degree of heat to prevent the freezing af pipes and sprinkler system. Also the theaters close normally at 10.30 or 11, and the fires are banked before then, so the 10 o'clock closing would result in more hardships than the saving would warrant.

Interstate Film Co., Incorporated.

Newark, N. J.—The Interstate Film company has filed papers of incorporation. Joseph Siegler, 27 Clinton street, is named as registered agent. The concern, which is authorized to produce moving picture films, is capitalized at $100,000. The incorporators are Samuel O. Siegel, formerly of the Newark Film exchange; Sigmund Liebstein and J. Siegel.

Dr. Hespe Files Trade Name.

Jersey City, N. J.—Dr. H. Charles Hespe, of 388 Central avenue, president of the New Jersey Exhibitors' League, has filed the Cortland Exhibiting Company as the trade name of the company controlling the theaters located at 339-343 Summit avenue, 388 Central avenue, and 3795 Boulevard.

Miss Stewart at Civilization.

Newark, N. J.—Miss Bertha Stewart has assumed charge of the office work of the Civilization Film, Strand theater building. Manager Herman Heidelberger reports that business prospects are brighter now than before the new year. He now controls, among others, "A Modern Lorelei," "The Warrior," "Italian Battlefront" and "Persuasive Peggy."

Philadelphia News Letter

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Theaters Are Signally Honored.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—J. M. Graver, manager of the Liberty theater, received the following letter from Washington, D. C., last week: "We have the honor and pleasure to announce that the Committe of Public Safety of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, with the approval of the Bureau of Public Information, of Washington, D. C., has placed your theater upon the roll of honor, in appreciation of and recognition of the generous, loyal and patriotic service it has rendered to the Government. On Monday, February 4, one of our speakers will be at your theater for the purpose of presenting to you the official certificate awarding your theater its place on the roll of honor."

The Stanley theater was also presented with the official certificate of honor on Monday, February 4, by the Committee of Public Safety of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and with the approval of the Bureau of Public Information, of Washington, D. C., in appreciation of and recognition of the generous, loyal and patriotic service it has rendered to the Government.

Lafayette Theater Changes Hands.

Philadelphia.—Title to the Lafayette theater, 2914 Kensington avenue and 2119 to 2127 E street, was conveyed last week by Cornelius W. Vanartsdalen to the Kensington Amusement Company. The property occupies a lot 18 feet on Kensington avenue by 144.3 feet, and 90x 90 on E street. The assessed valuation is $45,000.

Masterpiece Film Closes for Films.

Philadelphia.—B. Amsterdam and L. Korsen, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, announce that they have completed negotiations for the Douglas Fairbanks and William S. Hart reissues. They also have secured the rights for "Shorty Hamilton's" series and Jester comedies for this territory.

Special Screenings of Pathe Plays.

Philadelphia.—A trade showing of the latest Pathe plays was held Sunday night, February 3, at the Belmont theater, to which the local exhibitors and the members of the Press were invited. The pictures screened were "Innocent," starring Fannie Ward; "Loaded Dice," with Frank Keenan, and the comedy, "One Night Stand," with Toto, the famous New York Hippodrome clown, in the leading role. Both of the stars who made their debut in the Pathe plays were highly praised, and the comedy was roundly applauded.

Eastern Pennsylvania Notes.

Philadelphia.—Stanley V. Mastbaum, director of the Stanley Company, has just returned to his desk after a period of three weeks' illness.

W. T. Jones, well known in motion picture circles in Philadelphia, has been appointed the captain of the military guards at Hog Island, where he has been situated for some time past.

Coatesville, Pa.—Manager Brook, of the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium, has just taken over the Rialto theater in West Chester. Paramount and Artcraft pictures have been contracted for, and will be presented here.

Charles Henchell, of the Paramount and Artcraft at Philadelphia, returned from an extended trip through the Cumberland Valley, where he secured a considerable number of bookings on "The Son of Democracy."

Sablosky and McGuirk, of Philadelphia, have been compelled to keep closed their Dix theater in Wrightstown, N. J., owing to an epidemic of measles which existed in the soldiers' camp nearby. The quarantine, which has already lasted three weeks, is expected to be lifted in the very near future. The Army theater, recently completed, has also been closed.

Mable Normand was at the Stanley theater, Philadelphia, in her first Goldwyn picture, "Dodging a Million," and delighted her many admirers more than ever. Her new vehicle drew laugh upon laugh, and at the same time proved that the Keystone favorite was capable of attaining great heights as a screen star.

Cincinnati Universal Exchanges Combined

Samuel Sax Now Has Charge of Universal, Bluebird, Jewel and Buckeye Exchanges—Will Lessen the Overhead Expenses.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank, Cincinnati, O.

CINCINNATI, O.—The consolidation of the Universal, Cincinnati-Buckeye, Jewel, and Bluebird exchanges in Cincinnati resulted in one man, Samuel Sax, being placed in charge of the four local exchanges named, and taking the place of three former managers, Messrs. Penrod, Hite, and Harris.

Mr. Penrod came up to the Universal from the Bluebird office following the consolidation of the two companies, while Mr. Hite was in charge of the Jewel, going there only a short time ago, and Mr. Harris was with the Universal.

Samuel Sax came to Cincinnati from Indianapolis, where he was formerly sales manager of the Universal, and handled the consolidation of the three companies there.

I. Lisbon Heads New Exchange.

Cincinnati, O.—A new film company, the Intercity First National Exhibitors' Company, has been organized to handle the new Chaplin releases, as well as some special attractions. I. Libson, the widely known film man, is president of the company. Mr. Libson is now manager of the Family, the Strand and the Walnut theaters, and the new Palace Amusement Co. The new company will handle the releases of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit in Cincinnati, Columbus, Hamilton and Dayton, and besides these will have exclusive rights in cities named to the new Petrova pictures, Herbert Brenon's "Empty Pockets," Edgar Lewis' "Sign Invisible," and other pictures from the First National. The company is incorporated for $10,000.

Theaters at Cumminsville Flooded.

Cincinnati, O.—The Liberty theater in Cumminsville was among the sufferers when an ice gorge, which jammed the Ohio, caused Mill Creek, at Cumminsville, to flood that part of the city. There were several feet of water in the theater, which remained there for several days, and caused considerable damage to the house. Much distress resulted from the flood, which was combined with a scarcity of fuel and freezing weather.

Youngstown, O.—One of the few exceptions to the general enforcement among picture houses of the Tuesday closing required under the Fuel Administration's order was the Dome, which, on January 29, was permitted to remain open by the express permission of the Administration in order to show pictures of life at the army cantonments. The field secretary of the National Military Training Camps Association, who was in charge of the pictures, had the matter taken up with Washington through the Youngstown fuel authorities, and received this telegram in reply: "Your wire received, and military training camp association may show the pictures mentioned in telegram next Tuesday."

Dayton's Warm Sunday Brings Out Crowds

Theaters Full and People Waiting in Line for Tickets Were the Rule—Local Personal Notes of Interest and Business Briefs.

By P. J. G., Dayton Correspondent.

DAYTON, O.—Sunday, February 3, turned out the best Sunday matinee audiences for the winter. The weather was warm, and the people came in large numbers. There were more people on the streets, and all the theaters prospered.

At the Orpheum many were standing to see Toto in his first Pathe comedy supported by Kathleen O'Connor, former Dayton girl. From there I went to the Apollo, where I saw a crowded house for a Metro production. In the last row of seats what looked like a censor board in minature turned out to be Teddy Chifos and L. C. Pollack. From the Apollo I visited the Ideal, and watched Mrs. Vernon Castle and the Dayton favorite, Antonio Moreno, in "The Mark of Cain." This house was crowded and had many standing in line. John Siefert told me he will use Pathe pictures indefinitely.

It was something of a surprise to see a standing line at the Columbia for the "Whip," now playing its second week. A square away is the Majestic, and this house had a standing line at the time of my visit to see "The Lone Wolf" (played here before). The surprise of the afternoon, however, was at the Strand, where, for the first time, it was necessary to open two ticket offices in order to handle the business. The line at this house was almost a square long, with the lobby jammed. Clay Brehm wore a smile that spoke prosperity.

I then visited the Elite, the Woods, the Alhambra, the Mecca, the Midget, People's, and the Old Glory. None of these but were crowded.

Pertinent Dayton Brief Notes.

Although it had been advertised, "Poppy," with Norma Talmadge, did not show up at the Midget, Sunday, February 3, with the result that a Metro picture, "Dorian's Divorce," was used, thanks to L. C. Pollack. To add to the misery, Monday's show did not arrive, and Metro's "Child of Destiny" was used.

I read in the Photoplay Journal that the Comique is to be closed, and will go the sheet one better—it is closed.

Many Dayton exhibitors were included in last week's Pilgrimage to Cincinnati.

The East Majestic here is closed till further notice. It had been operating for four days a week previous to the closing.

Keith's headline attraction this week is Eva Tanguay. T. Chifos cashed in on Eva's popularity, and booked "Firefly" last week; result, good business. Miss Tanguay told yours truly she liked picture work.

Jack Needham, former Dayton Pathe representative, is doing good work with the Government picture made at Camp Sherman, Ohio.

Chas. Gross has nothing more to do with the Majestic here.

Al. Kinsler and Clem Kerr are in a new enterprise, official announcements to be made later.

Harry Wessel's elevator story was exceptionally good. Harry is one of those who would fit in well as the "Old Gentleman" in "Way Down East."

North Carolina News

By D. M. Bain, Wilmington, N. C.

Soldier Tickets Are Half Price.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—There is one place in the United States where the theaters are not endeavoring to reap a mint from the khaki boys. The Howard-Wells Amusement Company has announced through the local committee in charge of entertainment for the soldiers that in future half tickets would admit anyone in uniform to any of the Wilmington theaters on Saturdays.

While Wilmington has no camps, Fort Caswell, at the entrance to the Wilmington harbor, has some three thousand soldiers who are allowed to come up to the city each Saturday in companies of about five hundred each week.

Guy West Booking "Twilight Sleep."

Wilmington, N. C.—The Wilmington Film and Supply Company, who recently bought the Southern states rights on the "Twilight Sleep" pictures, are playing this attraction on a percentage basis throughout North Carolina territory. The film is presented accompanied by a lecture on the subject by a lady.

Guy West, formerly a theater owner of California, is booking the attraction through this territory and it has already played at Raleigh, Wilmington, Charlotte, Greensboro, Goldsboro and several other large towns of the state.

Buffalo News Letter

By Joseph A. McQuire, 152 N. Elmwood St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Sorry Outlook for Fuel in Bison City.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Buffalo is having the coldest weather of the year, and the exhibitors are experiencing great difficulty in supplying sufficient warmth for their theaters. On the third "heatless Monday" thousands of show-goers preferred to remain at home than to make the trip along the wind-swept streets. However, some of the theaters did a fairly good business on that day, because they had extra good shows. The exhibitors are still worrying over their coal supplies. The local Fuel Administrator does not paint a very rosy picture for them. He says the daily average of coal reaching this city has lessened again. He explains that the fault is chargeable mostly to the railroads and the weather. The shipment of film in and out of Buffalo is slow and tedious these days, because many of the trains are several hours late.

Elderly Theater Man Dies.

Buffalo.—The funeral of John Kreitner, formerly interested in Shea's Hippodrome and Shea's Court Street theater, Buffalo, was held here Wednesday, February 5. He was 63 years old. About twenty-five years ago Mr. Kreitner became a partner of Michael Shea in the theater business. They had the old Shea's music hall at Main and Clinton streets, afterward destoryed by fire, and later the Tivoli in Washington street. Then they opened the Garden theater in Pearl street, which was a success from the start. There they had high class vaudeville which for years they supplemented with pictures. About twelve years ago they opened Shea's theater in Court street, and later Shea's Hippodrome, one of the largest and most elaborate moving picture houses in the country. About a year ago Mr. Kreitner gave up his interests in Buffalo theaters, and retained only his interests in the Shea theaters in Toronto. He was a life member of the Elks. The Rev. Martin Walker, of Cavalry Lutheran Chuch, conducted the funeral services.

Snappy Buffalo Notes.

Rochester, N. Y.—J. J. Farren, manager of the Victoria theater, Rochester, has taken the Hart and Fairbanks reissues.

Buffalo.—"Intolerance" recently drew record business at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo. There were no advance in prices. "Thais," a Goldwyn production, was another successful feature at this house.

Buffalo.—Buffalo's street car service is so crippled that patrons of downtown theaters complain of long delays in traveling to and from the shows. There is additional discomfort because the cars are poorly heated.

Cleveland News Letter

By M. A. Malaney, 218 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland, O.

Theaters Boosting Thrift Stamps.

CLEVELAND, O.—As in all other patriotic movies, the exhibitors of Ohio and their employees have volunteered their organizations to assist in the War Savings Stamp campaign. In Cleveland slides are being shown each day.

A special committee has just been named by the Cleveland director of the campaign made up of prominent film men. It includes B. W. Rueben, of the Superior Advertising Slide Company; E. N. Downs, president of the Screen Club; Henry Lustig, president of the Exhibitors' League, and M. A. Malaney, of the Moving Picture World.

This committee has issued the following statement to exhibitors:

"In addition to securing four-minute men to present the War Savings and Thrift Stamps to the audiences a number of theater managers are offering prizes of Thrift Stamps to the first boys and girls who form War Savings Societies in their neighborhoods.

"It is the intention each week to throw the names on the screen of all persons who have joined the club, and the names of the winners of the prizes. This will stimulate local interest, and will give the exhibitor the credit which he deserves for being a leader in his community in patriotic endeavors."

"Remaking a Nation" Film Liked.

Toledo.—The moving picture production, "The Remaking of a Nation," made at Camp Sherman, O., made such a hit here this wek that it was extended for another week at the Temple theater.

Paralta Plays in Two Cleveland Theaters

Cleveland.—Paralta Plays will be shown in the Metropolitan and Knickerbocker theaters, Cleveland. In fact the Knickerbocker has already shown the first, which was Bessie Barriscale in "Madame Who." Last week this house showed Henry B. Walthall in "His Robe of Honor," while the Metropolitan showed J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Man's Man" a little later.

Both theaters are under one control.

Manager Dan Phillips announced that the new Liberty theater, Youngstown, with 2,000 seats, which will be opened February 12, has contracted for Paralta Plays.

Northern Ohio Business Hit.

Cleveland.—Continuous cold weather has played havoc with the box office receipts of many northern Ohio theaters during the last two weeks.

It seems that every storm or cold wave for months has come on Saturday or Sunday, the best days of the week, and the last two weeks have been no exception to this rule.

The larger theaters, however, are not feeling the weather to any great extent.

Metro Will Open Cleveland Exchange.

Cleveland.—Joseph Skirboll, district manager of Metro, has announced that Metro would open a regular exchange in Cleveland shortly. About the same time W. C. Backmeyer, Cincinnati Metro manager, came to Cleveland to assist in the work of opening the exchange.

"We are here to open a regular first class exchange," said Mr. Skirboll. "We are the only big film company without an exchange in the Forest City, and when we open ours it will surprise the exhibitors of northern Ohio.

"We expect to have three prints of all releases, which will include the regular program of one feature a week, the travel pictures and comedies, and the big productions known as Screen Classics.

"The exchange will be opened about March 1, or sooner, if we are in shape before that time."

Big Features Making Money in Michigan

Exhibitors Are Hopeful of Warmer Weather, Though Fuel Is Still a Problem and the Wise Are Keeping Down Expenses—Features Making Records.

By Jacob Smith, 718 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH.—At the time of writing Detroit is having its first warm spell and it looks as if a real thaw would set in, a combination that is bound to improve the coal situation. However, up until to-day (Feb. 7) the coal and fuel situation has been very serious not only in Detroit, but all over the state, and it has considerably affected the attendance of the motion picture theaters. In fact many have closed down indefinitely, while others are operating two or three days a week. In Detroit, as we noted once before in this column, Detroit exhibitors have been extremely fortunate, eleven of them being able to secure all the coal and fuel necessary to keep their auditoriums warm and comfortable.

Although several times exhibitors have consulted with the state and their respective local fuel admisitrators, no change has resulted to the original order of permitting theaters to operate full time on Monday; closed down on Tuesday, and six hours per day the balance of the week. It is generally believed by leading exhibitors that if warm weather stays any length of time the closing order will be changed and that theaters will be allowed full time as formerly. With all these adverse conditions exhibitors throughout Michigan are optimistic, and they feel that the next few weeks will see a big change in conditions and that the theater business will come back into its own. Exhibitors are holding down their overhead expenses to the very penny and watching the leaks and wastes as never before. It's just a case now of exhibitors being patient another few weeks and then they will surely begin to reap the benefit.

Big Features Getting the Money.

It is a fact that despite adverse conditions at the present time throughout the state especially big features still get the money. The theater-going public may be economizing on account of the high cost of living, fuel and Liberty Bonds, but give them a big picture and they will "loosen up." This is being proven to-day in the state of Michigan more than ever. "The Birth of a Nation" played two weeks at the Washington theater, Detroit, and did an enormous business. It is now playing the state theaters at $200 per day flat rental or 75-25 percentage, and "cleaning up" wherever it shows, with bookings that extend way into April. "Cleopatra," at the Washington theater, Detroit, opened Sunday, Feb. 3, and has positively broken all house records and doing better each day. The engagement may be extended indefinitely. It was 16 degrees below zero the first two days of the engagement, yet crowds stood outside of the theater waiting to buy tickets. This proves that big pictures properly advertised will get money under the most adverse conditions. Through the state "The Whip" is getting a lot of money, and so are any of the big features.

Samuel Goldfish Visits Detroit.

Detroit.—A noted visitor to Detroit the first week in February was Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. Mr. Goldfish told the Moving Picture World correspondent that he was very enthusiastic about the outlook for spring business.

Mr. Goldfish spent two days in Detroit in conference with A. I. Shapiro, the local branch manager, John H. Kunsky, and George W. Trendle, of the Kunsky Enterprises, as well as other leading exhibitors. He also visited the Ford Motor company's factory.

In this connection we might add that before leaving town Mr. Goldfish secured from Messrs. Kunsky and Trendle an extension of the present Goldwyn franchise calling for thirteen more Goldwyn pictures, or a total of twenty-six pictures showing at the Madison theater, Detroit.

Blair McElroy Pays Visit.

Cadillac, Mich.—Blair McElroy, of Fitzpatrick & McElroy, Chicago, operating a Michigan circuit of houses, was in Detroit Feb. 3 arranging bookings for his various theaters. From Detroit he went to Cadillac in connection with the new Lyric theater, which opened officially on Wednesday, Feb. 6. The new house seats about 900 and cost nearly $40,000. It is a very beautiful theater, managed by George Kennedy, formerly at Ludington. Mr. McElroy spent a week at Cadillac in order to have everything in perfect running order before he left.

Sterling Film Exchange Formed.

Detroit.—H. Woodhead and F. Diehl have purchased the Art Drama features and the Christie comedies, formerly handled by the Tri-State, and will hereafter conduct business from 310 Elm building as the Sterling Film exchange.

The Duplex to Reopen.

Detroit.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Duplex theater, Detroit's only two-auditorium house, it was decided to reopen the house with pictures at an early date. The plans for operating are now being worked out.

New Lincoln to Open in April.

Detroit.—S. J. Stoughton, of the Lincoln Amusement company, which will conduct the New Lincoln theater at Fort and Cavalry avenues, was in Detroit this week. The new house is scheduled to open in April.

Among Exchange Managers in Detroit.

Detroit.—The latest at the film exchanges in Detroit is that H. W. D. Ward is now manager of the Universal-Bluebird and Jewel exchange, while J. O. Kent is manager of the Select; Art W. Blankmeyer is in charge of Harry I. Garson Productions; P. L. Smith is the new general manager of the State Film company; J. M. Duncan is still at Vitagraph; Bob Cotton at the World; Jesse Fishman at the Standard; A. I. Shapiro at Goldwyn; Eddie Fontaine at Pathe; Mr. Ross at Paramount, while Joe Horwitz is in charge at the Foursquare, succeeding George W. Weeks; M. S. Bailey has moved from the film building to 23 East Elizabeth street; Bert Weddige in the Film building, has doubled the size of his office since taking on dealers' rights to Simplex machines and Simplex parts.

Michigan Notes of Special Interest.

Detroit.—"Blue Jeans" is having very successful business in Detroit, every exhibitor running it so far reporting big business. It had two solid weeks down town in Detroit—one week at the Madison and one week at the Liberty. It's a Metro picture featuring Viola Dana.

Detroit.—George Rowell, formerly with Pathe and Vitagraph in Detroit, is now selling for George Kleine Pictures, while Bert Graham, formerly with Universal and Pathe in Chicago, is now selling for the General.

Detroit.—Joe Snitzer, district manager for Universal, and Sam Morris, district manager for the Select, have been frequent visitors to Detroit of late in connection with recent changes in management.

Injunction Holds Off Kansas City Censors

George Kleine Office Gets Around Adverse Decision of Local Board—Second Time the Courts Have Been Appealed To Recently.

By Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The local George Kleine office is experiencing the same trouble as the Goldwyn office here in regard to the censoring of pictures, and is seeking relief in precisely the same manner. "I, Mary MacLane, in Men Who Have Made Love to Me" was rejected by the Kansas City Board of Review of the Kansas City Welfare Board. The acts and the association of Mary were given as the reasons for the rejection. The picture opened for a week at the Garden theater here on February 3. An injunction in the form of a restraining order was got to prevent any interference in the showing of the picture.

The hearing or settlement of the case is set for after the finish of the run at the Garden, by which time the picture will have been shown. Thus it is seen that the film office is somewhat the winner on the proposition, however advertising matter was delayed by the controversy. The showing of the picture is something in the way of an adventure for a film office, as the Kleine office is the exhibitor in the Garden showing. The picture will be shown on a percentage basis, the owners of the theater and the exchange sharing in the percentage.

With Traveling Men and Visitors.

Kansas City.—George Bowles, manager of the Kansas City Bluebird office, spent a week in Joplin, Mo., and southern Kansas recently.

Joseph Brandt, general sales manager of the Universal Mfg. Co., New York City, spent several days in Kansas City on and about February 1. From Kansas City he will go to Omaha, Des Moines, and Chicago, from which trips he will return to New York.

Joseph Fox, salesman for the local Jewel office, was a visitor in Kansas City, February 1, after spending three weeks on his territory in Kansas.

Joseph Stout, newly acquired salesman for the Kansas City Goldwyn office, was in Kansas City January 31 and February 1 after a trip of two weeks in southern Kansas.

S. J. Baker, manager of the Kansas City office of the Hoffman Foursquare interests here, spent February 1 and 2 in Independence and Coffeyville, Kan.

B. A. Lucas, manager of the local office of the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, left January 29 for a two-weeks' trip in Omaha, Nebraska, and Sioux City, Ia.

C. E. McDaniels, who for the last three months has been working as assistant manager of the local office of the General Film, has returned to Chicago, Ill., where he will work in the General office there.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Ira F. Mantzke, manager of the Kansas City Mutual office, recently held a trade showing at the Colonial theater, St. Joseph, Mo., on "The Planter," featuring Tyrone Powers. The showing was attended by about fifteen exhibitors in and about St. Joseph. The picture began a run of three days at the Colonial beginning February 3.

Howard Jameyson to Be Bird Man.

Howard Jameyson, assistant manager of the Kansas City Pathe, was accepted for service in the aviation department of the army. He has been with this office for about six months, and was for a while in the Pathe office at New York City. He says that it will only be a short time before he starts his rise in rank, as he is a firm believer that the moving picture man is bound to rise even in war business.

Two New General Film Salesmen.

Kansas City.—The General Film has put on two new men recently following the return of C. W. McDaniels to Chicago.

Larence Maddux, formerly assistant manager of the local Mutual office, will cover a part of Kansas and Missouri.

E. E. Reynolds, formerly office manager for the Southern Triangle Pictures Corporation here, will have a part of Kansas and a part of Oklahoma for his territory.

Louisville News Letter

Managers Appeal to Authorities to Aid.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The Board of Public Safety of Louisville and Building Inspector W. E. Glossop have for some time been after the exhibitors to keep their aisles clear of people at all times, and the exhibitors have been endeavoring to comply with the law. However, patrons of the theaters are so bullheaded that it is almost impossible to comply and the exhibitors asked the Board of Safety for aid in the matter.

The board issued a statement to the public through the press.

Many River Boat Shows Destroyed.

Louisville.—A number of picture show and other theater boats on the Ohio and other rivers of the Ohio Valley have been wrecked or seriously damaged by the breaking of ice gorges and the movement of heavy ice in the streams of the state. During the last week in January it was estimated that more than $3,000,000 worth of damage had been done to packets, tow boats, barges and other river equipment which was swept out of the winter ice harbors.

A Theater for the Community.

Hodgenville, Ky.—F. M. Sparks, head of the Lynn Amusement Company, of Hodgenville, Ky., recently inserted a peculiar notice in the Hodgenville paper, "We are going to have clean, moral, educational pictures and make it a profit-sharing proposition, nationally and locally. To show you my feelings in this matter, will say that I have given my entire profits on the year 1917, equally divided between the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A., and now I want to assure you on behalf of the Lynn Amusement Company that it is our intention to make the show profit-sharing both nationally and locally."

If Mr. Sparks is really endeavoring to conduct a show merely to have pictures in the city, and without profit to anyone, he is doing something that probably was never before attempted in Kentucky, and something that should be considered as unusually generous. Hodgenville is not really large enough to support a show-house, and Mr. Sparks' statement rings true.

Atlanta News Letter

Foursquare Loses Atlanta Manager.

ATLANTA, GA.—Charles W. Harden, one of the best known motion picture exchange managers in the South, has resigned as manager of the Foursquare Atlanta office.

This move was made necessary owing to the increasing business of the E. & H. Film Company, of which Mr. Harden is half owner.

It is with regret that Foursquare Pictures sees Mr. Harden's withdrawal, as he is the type of man whose efforts are constructive.

Film Traveler Falsely Called Deserter.

Macon, Ga.—William A. Daugherty, a well known theatrical man, whose home is in Macon, and who was declared some time ago to be a deserter because he failed to report for service under the draft law, but who later reported, does not have to serve in the army, as he has been granted a discharge on account of physical disabilities. Daugherty registered in Macon, but is practically on the road most of the time. He left word to notify him at a certain address in the North when wanted. When called, he failed to receive the notice, and did not know he had been declared a deserter until several weeks afterwards. Daugherty was sent to Camp Gordon (Atlanta), and word received here today is that he has been granted a discharge.

No Paid Admissions—Rowdy Audience.

Atlanta.—The committee having in charge the Sunday vaudeville and moving picture entertainment at the Auditorium-Armory for the soldiers in training at Camp Gordon and Ft. McPherson are considering the closing of the doors to the civilians who have been attending, for the reason of their rudeness during the entertainment. Official warning has been given the public through the Atlanta papers, and Sunday, February 3, is to decide whether or not the public will be admitted to any of the subsequent entertainments.

Atlanta Trade Jottings.

House records were broken this past week at the Strand theater by the first appearance of Mabel Normand, an old Atlanta girl, in her first Goldwyn picture, "Dodging a Million." The theater was crowded all week.

Interest in "The Birth of a Nation" still is lively. The theater, with four performances daily, played to capacity. If interest and enthusiasm count for anything the second week's showing of the big picture proves it the greatest drawing card of all pictures even at popular prices, and after it had been shown at three other separate times in Atlanta.

Nashville News Letter

By J. L. Ray, Trade News Service, Nashville, Tenn.

War Tax Crook Operating in South.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—A man bent on misappropriation of Government funds is operating among the moving picture theaters and vaudeville houses in the South. Collector Craig and his force are endeavoring to locate the man, who has been collecting war tax revenues from Southern theaters. Government men are on his trail, but nothing has developed thus far which leads to the capture of the crook.

Revenue officials have issued a warning to theater owners to beware of paying war revenue to anyone until assured that the collector is actually an employee of the government, and has with him a properly signed commission and seal, or unless the collector is personally known to be a representative of the Government.

At last reports the man was making his way toward the Tenessee line, having victimized towns in Alabama along his way. He is thought to have also touched Mississippi in his wanderings over the South, and authorities in that state are also on the lookout for the offender.

Nashville Houses All Open.

Nashville, Tenn.—With the coming of more seasonable weather all moving picture houses in Nashville which closed during the extreme winter seasons have again thrown their doors open to the public. The Rex and Alhambra, two houses of the Crescent Amusement Company, located on Fifth avenue, are the only two uptown houses which closed on account of the cold weather, although numerous suburban theaters ceased operation during the excessive cold period.

The negro houses have held up remarkably well under the cold snap. The Southern negro is disinclined to creep out of his shell in cold weather, but much prefers to hug a heated stove.

Sunday Agitation On in Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—A Sunday closing fight has again started in Birmingham which threatens to surpass those of former days. During last year the pastors and other radicals instituted a campaign to close the moving picture and vaudeville houses on Sunday, but permission was granted them to remain open as a test to ascertain just what degree of damage or good would be the result. A committee representing the Birmingham Pastors' Union and the laymen of the various Birmingham churches appeared before the city commission on February 5 and asked that body to discontinue the operation of Sunday pictures in Birmingham.

Indiana News Letter

By Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

O. O. Parks Gets New Lunalite Theater.

MARION, IND.—Oro O. Parks, until recently manager of the Lyric and Indiana theaters of this city, has closed a deal with B. F. Metcalf, and becomes manager of the Lunalite theater, opened recently. Mr. Parks has leased the theater for a number of years. The Lunalite has a seating capacity of over 300.

Orpheum at Clinton Changes Hands.

Clinton, Ind.—Messrs. Stone and Houston, owners of the Orpheum motion picture theater here, have sold the place to Jesse Isgregg. Mr. Isgregg has assumed charge of the theater. The sale was made, it is said, because Mr. Stone will soon be called into the army, and Mr. Houston's other business interests require all of his time.

Offered to Save Coal for Churches.

Goshen, Ind.—R. G. Hanson, manager of the Jefferson theater of this city, is a man with ideas. While the city was facing a serious coal shortage recently, Manager Hanson offered the use of his theater, lighted and heated, to the churches of Goshen for union services on Sunday mornings. The Ministerial Association took up the matter, but before they could reach an agreement the situation improved.

Earl Moore Likes Army Reality.

Bloomington, Ind.—Earl Moore, formerly manager of the Indiana Union theater on the campus of Indiana University, now a lieutenant with the American Expeditionary Forces in France, has written to friends here that he is having more thrills a week there than he saw in the motion pictures in a month. He wrote that he wouldn't miss the experience he is having for anything on earth.

Indiana Business Jottings.

Rochester, Ind.—Clyde and Sidney Wilson, owners of the Paramount theater in this city, were called to their home in Ober, Ind., last week because of the sudden death of their father.

Bluffton, Ind.—Bluffton may have another motion picture theater before spring. A stock company is now being formed with that end in view.

Filmdom Notes and Doings in Twin Cities

Pictures That Have Attracted Attention—Associated Theaters, Inc., Begins Distributing—Other Exchange Notes—Personal Mention.

By John L. Johnston, 719 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—So popular, in spite of very cold weather, was "Dodging a Million" and Fatty Arbuckle's "Out West," a combination presented by the Minneapolis Strand, that Manager Branham held the program over two days longer than he intended.

At the New Lyric, "Alimony" and Charles Ray in "The Hired Man" pleased fairly good houses.

At the New Garrick, Ethel Barrymore satisfied a goodly number of her local admirers in "The American Widow," and George Beban in "Jules of the Strong Heart" was well received.

"The Lone Wolf," playing its third Minneapolis run, did splendidly at the New Garden the first half of last week.

At the New Aster, the last half of the past week, January 27, Wally Reid in "Rimrock Jones" enjoyed good patronage.

G. Carroll Johnston Transferred to American Army.

G. Carroll Johnston, formerly connected with the Lochren Film and several theaters in the Twin Cities, has been transferred from the Canadian Expeditionery forces in England to the American Army in France, and is now a motion picture photographer in the aero division.

Manie Gottlieb Arrives Over There.

Manie Gottlieb, former Feature Film Corp. exchange manager here, has arrived in England with the 117th Aero Squadron, a letter to the World correspondent advises.

Jack Corbett Passes Aviation Tests.

Jack Corbett, manager of the Minneapolis Triangle exchange, has been passed by a local medical board for service in the aviation corps of the United States Army, but Mr. Corbett has not received notice of his acceptance for service to date.

Associated Theaters, Inc., to Distribute.

Minneapolis.—General Manager Thomas J. Hamlin, of the newly organized Associated Theaters, Inc., has returned from New York with the announcement that beginning February 17 the new circuit will begin distributing its products to circuit members. Mr. Hamlin has announced that Herbert Brenon's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" and the Shorty Hamilton series will be released to circuit members shortly.

Among the pictures to be distributed by the Associated upon opening its exchange are "I Believe," "The Deemster," "Glory," "The Witching Hour," "Corruption," "The Struggle Everlasting," "The Eternal Woman," "The Public Defender," "The Little Orphan," "The Soul of a Child," "Little Red Riding Hood," "His Awful Downfall," "Woman and the Beast," "America Is Ready," "Cinderella and the Magic Slipper" and "A Penny Philanthropist." Mr. Hamlin states that a campaign for Iowa members has been begun, and that a special rate of $10 has been made. Membership for Minnesota, Dakota or Wisconsin exhibitors now costs $25.

Julius K. Johnson Heads New Garrick.

Minneapolis.—Julius K. Johnson has been named to succeed Lowell V. Calvert as manager of the New Garrick theater, Minneapolis. Mr. Johnson has been organist and assistant production manager at the New Garrick for over a year, and previously worked with S. L. Rothapfel at the Lyric theater, Minneapolis, and also at the Rialto theater, New York. Mr. Hiller, who acted as temporary manager of the New Garrick, has accepted a position with F. F. Latta at his Austin, Minn., theater.

Standard Gets Keystone Reissues.

Minneapolis—Manager Charles Stombaugh, of the local Standard exchange, has announced the purchase of a number of Keystone comedy reissues, including some of the most successful efforts of Fatty Arbuckle, Mabel Normand, Syd. Chaplin, Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin, and Mack Swain. The Standard has had great success in booking its series of two-reel Hart productions throughout the Northwest.

Minneapolis.—John R. Elliott, of the Elliott-Sherman exchange, has announced the purchase of Italian war films known as "The Isonzo Battlefront," and containing views and pictorial records of Italy's great struggle with the Teutonic forces in the Alps.

Chester M. Sutton Joins Supreme Office.

Chester M. Sutton, formerly connected with the Fox Exchange at Milwaukee, has resigned his position to join the ranks of the Minneapolis Supreme exchange.

Judell Moves to Film Exchange Building.

Benjamin Judell has moved his state rights exchange to the Film Exchange building, and is now in Chicago searching for features to distribute throughout the Northwest.

With the Northwest Exhibitors.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Ruben & Finkelstein have contracted for Pathe plays. They began using their new acquisitions at the New Garrick, Minneapolis, February 3, when Fannie Ward appeared on the screen in "Innocence."

James G. Gilosky, manager of three St. Paul theaters, accompanied by Mrs. Gilosky, has gone to Los Angeles to visit his daughter and his son-in-law, connected with the Triangle comedy company. Mr. and Mrs. Gilosky will be gone about two months. William Sobelman will manage the Alhambra, Gem, and Rex during Mr. Gilosky's absence.

With Twin City Exchangemen.

Minneapolis.—H. S. Lavner, publicity representative from the New York Goldwyn offices, spent several days in Minneapolis recently visiting Manager Bradford and getting acquainted with exhibitors and newspaper people.

R. E. Samuelson, booker for the Minneapolis Pathe exchange, has returned to Seattle, where he will resume work for W. J. Kofeldt at the Pathe Coast office.

Manager Louis H. Koen, of the Metro exchange, showed "Blue Jeans" to Twin City exhibitors Friday, February 1, at the New Garrick theater. Mr. Koen's invitations were printed in two colors, and designed like a pair of pants.

William Johnson, Montana representative for the Friedman Film Corp., visited headquarters recently preliminary to getting a fresh start on a booking campaign with "The Bar Sinister," "The Whip," and other Friedman features.

J. W. Jackson, manager of the Supreme exchange's Sioux Falls, S. D., branch visited Manager Conhaim, of the home offices, and reports good success with Supreme features throughout South Dakota.

R. E. Howe, auditor for the Universal, Chicago, has returned to the Windy City after spending three weeks assisting E. J. Mooney in checking over the accounts of the local Universal exchange. Mr. Mooney, kept in bed for several weeks by rheumatism, is now back at his work.

J. A. Bradley, road man for the Universal exchange, was called to Omaha last week by a telegram stating that his mother was critically ill.

Interesting Brevities About the Film Business in the Southwest—A Sheaf of Personals and Brevities Worth a Passing Glance.

By Douglas Hawley, Times Herald, Dallas, Texas.

Princess Theater Taken by F. S. Ferguson.

VICTORIA, TEX.—The picture business has again claimed F. S. Ferguson. Mr. Ferguson sold out his interests here about a year ago, but has recently come back into control of the Princess theater, which he is now operating.

To Open New House in Honey Grove.

Sherman, Tex.—R. C. Bryan, of Honey Grove, Tex., has purchased from Mrs. LeGrande J. Woods the equipment of the Topic theater here, and has removed it to Honey Grove, where he will operate. Mrs. Woods' son formerly ran the theater, but has entered army service.

"Bill" Oldkno Visits Dallas.

Dallas, Tex.—He once invented a patent milk bottle, which, if paper ever gets cheap again, may come into general use, but now he's a moving picture magnate, and he's visiting Dallas. Who? "Bill" Oldkno, general manager Consolidated Film and Supply Company, with headquarters at Atlanta. He is being entertained by the local manager, Ned Depinet, and he declares business good, with particularly gratifying results in Texas. Mr. Oldkno is also vice-president of the U. S. Booking Corporation, of New York.

Personals of the Texas Trade.

Lufkin, Tex.—Mrs. Nellie Binyon, one of the most popular lady managers in Texas, was on a recent booking trip to Dallas branch houses. Mrs. Binyon operates the Palace theater at Lufkin, and gets along fine with salesmen and branch managers alike.

Dallas.—The face of a former well known Chicago Vitagraph man, Harry Rosenburg, is showing up on some of the scenes in the weeklies taken at Camp Logan, Houston, Tex. He is in training at the Texas camp with the Illinois rookies.

Hugo, Okla.—O. Gill, of the Erie theater, Hugo, Okla., says he's tired of North Pole in the Southwest. Mr. Gill recently was in Dallas, and admitted that the snows have aided the crop and business outlook.

Dallas.—W. A. Godbey, south Texas Vitagraph salesman, says his territory is pretty dry, but that exhibitors generally are doing pretty well, with optimism uppermost.

Dallas.—T. O. Tuttle, of the Kleine-Edison New Orleans office, has been a recent Dallas visitor.

Dallas.—John Luening has been transferred from Chicago to Dallas for the General Film Company in the booking department.

Galveston.—O. Jorgensen has taken over the Crystal, Galveston, formerly operated under Hulsey management. Mr. Jorgensen operates the Crystal Palace, a big beach resort at Galveston.

Dallas.—W. S. Tuttle, formerly with Vitagraph, has gone with Kleine-Edison. Mr. Tuttle was turned back by army examiners after volunteering.

C. W. Batsel, of the King and Queen theaters, of Sherman, Tex., reports some specially fine bookings recently secured by him on a visit to Dallas exchange.

Theater Notes from Nebraska.

LINCOLN, NEB.—As a part of the fuel conservation movement a special committee of the Commercial club arranged for theaters to close at ten o'clock. Most theaters made the opening time about half an hour earlier. The Acme Amusement Company, controlling the Wonderland and Elite theaters, started at the regular time, but closed at ten o'clock, allowing patrons the privilege of seeing the rest of the show the next day.

Lincoln, Neb.—Manager Carman, of the Rialto theater, is going after afternoon patronage by playing up the musical end of the program. The orchestra has been augmented, and a half hour concert is given at the three o'clock performance.

Friend, Neb.—R. A. Gavin has closed the San Carlo theater because of lack of business.

Hartington, Neb.—The Elite theater is now under the management of Mr. Duman.

Spalding, Neb.—F. J. O'Hara has been making plans to open a moving picture theater here.

Niobrara, Neb.—W. W. Ashbaugh has been making plans to operate a moving picture theater here.

Windsor, N. D.—A moving picture theater has been opened by Miller & Thimmesch.

Hazen, N. D.—R. L. Stephens has purchased the Fota Pla theater from C. N. Freer.

Notes Across the Dakotas.

Parker, S. D.—Manager Jekyl has sold the Fad theater to H. Wheeler and Miss Selwyn, who have been directing home talent plays here. The change is effective March 1. The new owners plan to remodel the theater.

Garrison, N. D.—The opera house was destroyed by fire.

Underwood, N. D.—The Star theater, owned by W. L. Brown, was destroyed by fire.

Dickinson, N. D.—F. M. Nicodeme heads the staff of the Rialto theater, which has been opened here. Mrs. Nicodeme will be in the office, A. J. Lane will have charge of the projection, and Laurence Dobson will be doorman.

Among Midwest Theaters.

By Kansas City News Service.

Williamstown, Mo.—O. H. Dickey is building a picture show.

Casterville, Mo.—J. W. Brixey is planning to open a picture show at Rockerville as soon as a building can be made ready for it.

Belleville, Kan.—The White Way theater, of which Barton Davis has been manager for the past two years, has changed hands, and C. A. Chapin is now manager and proprietor.

Iola, Kan.—The Elite theater has changed management, and T. N. Magruder, of Cherryvale, Kan., has taken charge.

Wichita, Kan.—O. K. Mason, Frank Krehbiel, and other Wichita men have purchased the Colonial theater at 117 North Market street, and will remodel it.

Waco, Tex.—Work will begin in a few weeks on a new airdome theater on Washington street near the corner of Sixth. The structure will be erected by A. L. Mitchell and A. H. Simon, who are lessees of the Majestic theater.

Waco, Tex.—Another picture show is to be located on the Arcade walk at Camp MacArthur. Work has been commenced on the building by the B. M. Wilson Lumber Company.

St. Louis Street-Carless—Theaters Suffer

Never Before Have Local Exhibitors Had a More Disappointing Sunday as on February 3 When Car Men Struck and Patrons Failed to Arrive.

By Mary Moore, 6035 Kingsbury Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Sunday night, February 3, found the fourth city of the land, St. Louis, heatless, lightless, and, worst of all, street-carless. 800,000 people had to walk miles, while some 20,000 crowded into busses. Just one form of gayety shone out amid the dullness of a great but sorely beset city. This was in the film theaters, and it is estimated that when the 2,750 street car conductors who struck for higher wages walked out on Sunday at 6 p. m. they also walked out one-half of the patronage of St. Louis' numerous motion picture houses.

Never before in the history of local filmdom have the exhibitors suffered as they did on Sunday night, February 3. To a certain extent neighborhood picture houses proved a haven of solace to the weary, trial-stricken St. Louisans, but the larger houses, where crowds are jammed in on Sunday night to the fullest capacity, suffered a cut in receipts of between 25 and 50 per cent. Legitimate theaters were practically deserted.

President Mogler, of the Exhibitors' League, said the houses would feel the strike greatly, but was hopefull that the strike would be of short duration. "I'm surprised that conditions are not worse," said Mogler. "Our motto is optimism, and we'll fight the situation as we did the necessary conservation of war."

Tax Gets Big Legitimate House.

St. Louis.—Another "legitimate" theater has succumbed to films in St. Louis. The Shubert-Garrick theater, until this week the home of the regular Shubert first class attractions, will be turned into an exclusive motion picture house within a few days. The Fox Film has practically completed a deal to take the theater for exclusive first run pictures and return engagements of feature films. One of the first films to be seen at the theater, it is planned, is Theda Bara as "Cleopatra."

D. M. Thomas, Fox manager in St. Louis, expects the house to be turned over to his company within a few days. The "legitimate" houses for first class productions tried to keep three big houses going in the business center of the city, but failed. Two big houses are all that St. Louis will support. So the Shuberts, after the split with Klaw and Erlanger, decided to move to the Jefferson with "Love 'o Mike" and "Oh, Boy," leaving the Garrick open to pictures.

Pertinent Personal Notes.

St. Louis.—H. D. Naugle, manager for the Western division of the Vitagraph Company, with headquarters in Los Angeles, was in St. Louis for a few days this week on a tour of inspection of the Vitagraph interests.

G. F. Hennessy, manager of the Bluebird distributing forces in St. Louis, has been put in charge of the Jewel Productions also.

Olga Petrova's first Petrova picture, "Daughter of Destiny," was well received in St. Louis. Manager William Sievers, of the National Exhibitors' Circuit, announced that the picture made appreciable increases in the receipts of the New Grand Central, the city's largest first run house.

The Cella-Tate Syndicate, Dave Russell, manager, is happy over results obtained from "Uneasy Money," with Taylor Holmes.

Cecil Mayberry, manager of the Foursquare offices, is touring Illinois and Missouri on business in the adjustment of release dates due to the fuel closing orders.

Joseph Blume, of the Standard office, switched to the Goldwyn forces during the week.

Joseph Desberger, St. Louis manager of the United Booking Exhibitors' Corporation, has just returned from a trip to southern Illinois.

Des Moines News Letter.

By Dorothy Day, Register Tribune, Des Moines, Ia.

Bluebirds Again Back in Laemmle Film Office.

DES MOINES, IA.—The Bluebird office has returned to the Laemmle Film Service offices, at 922 Locust street. Zach Harris, who has been managing the office, has returned to New York City, and D. B. Lederman will conduct the exchange, with F. C. Crawford as acting manager. Mr. Crawford was promoted from the office of traveling representative. All the employees at the other Bluebird office have been retained, and will continue their work in the Laemmle office.

This gives the Locust Street exchange three separate and distinct feature concerns—the Jewel Productions, Inc., the Bluebirds, and the Universal features, serials and comedies, all under the supervision of Mr. Lederman. Nicholas Amos acts as manager for the Jewel Productions.

Mr. Lederman says that the change was made to do away with much overhead expenses.

Des Moines Theaters Have Plenty of Coal.

Des Moines, Ia.—Up to Sunday the 3rd of February the Des Moines picture houses had not been affected in any way by the shortage of coal, not even the hours of running had been cut down in spite of the fact that the retail stores will open earlier and close sooner beginning the 4th. However, there are few of the very small towns in Iowa that have not closed down for a couple of nights or so for lack of heat. In Waterloo the theaters have been ordered to do away with all matinees except Sunday, in Cedar Falls the theaters were closed one Wednesday, but with indications that they would now be allowed to run all seven days.

Iowa Exhibitors in Khaiki.

Des Moines, Ia.—While the writer was at the Pathe exchange, Saturday afternoon, a couple of Iowa exhibitors, now in service at Camp Dodge, came in to visit with L. A. Sheridan, manager. Dennis Cota, of the Cota theater in Waukon, is now corporal. Mrs. Cota is managing the theater during her husband's absence.

Al. Thorpe, who enlisted in the service to look after the entertainment of the Knights of Columbus at Camp Dodge, and left his Plaza theater in Manchester to the management of his brother, announced that the Plaza had been sold to three Manchester citizens.

L. A. Sheridan Boosting "Innocence."

Des Moines, Ia.—L. A. Sheridan returned Saturday from his second extensive trip with the big Pathe play, "Innocence." He has covered Waterloo, Cedar Rapids, Mason City, Ft. Dodge, Emmettsburg, and the outlying towns. He will continue his trips over the state until every one of the principal towns will have seen the picture and know the policy of the Pathe plays.

Well Known Iowa Film Man Dies.

Des Moines, Ia.—C. C. Mendenhall, perhaps one of the best known film men in this territory, died Tuesday afternoon, January the 29th, at the Iowa Lutheran Hospital in Des Moines. His death was brought on from complications resultant from an injury of eight years ago. Mr. Mendenhall has suffered from ill health and serious spells of illness for the past two years.

Mr. Mendenhall has acted as salesman for several different film companies in the Middle West, but for the last couple of years has been the traveling representative for the Kansas City Feature Film Company. Every exhibitor in every town in Iowa knew Mr. Mendenhall and respected him for his pleasing manner of doing business and his reliability.

Berkeley Mothers' Clubs to Censor Films

Sweeping System of Boycott Planned for Unapproved Shows—Local Theater Managers Feel That the Implication Is Unjust.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

BERKELEY, CAL.—A crusade for better pictures has been launched by the women of Berkeley through the Berkeley Federation of Mothers' Clubs, and a sweeping system of boycott has been proposed to take the place of official censorship relied upon in many communities. This proposition was placed before the members of the club recently by Mrs. William H. Marston, who said: "Mothers should know something about every play before they permit their children to attend a performance. If something is known about the plays and the proper are distinguished from the improper performances, the theaters will soon learn that only the proper shows are desired and profitable."

The managers of Berkeley moving picture houses, of which there are six, declare that they are exercising extreme care in the selection of their programs and fail to see on what grounds the members of the club base their complaints in regard to indecent, or improper performances. They insist that the standard of pictures shown here is maintained at a higher level than in any other city of its size in the country. One house has offered a children's matinee on Saturday afternoons for the past two years with such success that other theaters have copied its plan, while all the others book pictures that will be attractive to the students of the University of California, around which local community life revolves.

Hippodrome Circuit Completes Big Deal.

San Francisco, Cal.—The circuit of Hippodrome theaters conducted on the Pacific Coast by Ackerman & Harris is growing steadily in size, and during the present year a number of fine houses will be added, especially in California. A house was recently opened at Fresno, Cal., and this has been doing a huge volume of business. Plans are now being made for the erection of a theater at Modesto, Cal., another city in the San Joaquin Valley that is growing at such a rapid rate that it promises to soon rival Fresno in size. Work is under way on the erection of a big house in a prominent location at San Jose, Cal., and this will be ready for occupancy within a few months. The announcement of still another new theater will be made within a few days, plans for this being completed with the exception of a few details.

Not only have Ackerman & Harris been busy of late closing deals for new houses, but they just closed a contract for film service that has proved to be an eye-opener for some local exhibitors. They have secured from E. M. Asher, manager of the Turner & Dahnken Film exchange, the first-run rights on the next eight Charlie Chaplin releases for this city, paying the unheard of sum of $20,000 for these, or $2,500 for each for a single week. These may be shown at either the Hippodrome or Casino theaters and cannot be shown at any other local house for at least forty days. Negotiations are now in progress for booking these films for other houses in the circuit. Sam Harris recently returned from a tour of inspection through the Northwest, where he found the amusement business to be in good shape.

Marion Kohn to Open New Exchange.

San Francisco.—Marion H. Kohn, president of the Consolidated Film Corporation, left this week for Seattle, Wash., where he will establish a branch film exchange under the name of the Northwestern Consolidated Film Corporation. Ackerman & Harris will be affiliated with this exchange, and the releases of the Educational Film Corporation will be shown in most of their theaters. In addition to handling these releases this new film exchange will also handle the Ivan productions in the Northwest, arrangements to this end having been completed on the recent visit of Jesse Goldburg to this city. During the absence of Mr. Kohn in the Northwest the local exchange will be in charge of Rueben Cohen. Miss Laura Marron has been made secretary of the new corporation, as well as the parent one.

Eugene Roth Home Again.

San Francisco.—Eugene Roth, managing director of the California and Portola theaters, has returned from an Eastern trip, on which he combined pleasure with business. While away he inspected theaters in many of the leading cities.

Progressive Managers Hold Conference.

San Francisco.—The branch managers of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, consisting of C. M. Hill, Portland, Ore.; H. G. Rosebaum, Seattle, Wash., and M. L. Lewis, of Los Angeles, Cal., were here recently, attending a company conference with Herman Wobber, general manager, and J. W. Allen, manager of the San Francisco office. Mr. Wobber returned from the East but a short time ago and called this meeting to impart to his co-workers the information he secured at headquarters in regard to Paramount and Artcraft productions and policies. During the week in which this conference was held two private reviews were given of the big Lincoln film, "The Son of Democracy," this being attended by city officials, educators and leaders in all walks of life.

"Doug" Fairbanks to Head Rodeo.

San Francisco.—Douglas Fairbanks will be in San Francisco some time this month with a party of cowboys, a tribe of Sioux Indians, and a lot of Mexicans, to take part in a rodeo at Ewing Field for the benefit of the National War Camp Community Recreation Fund. His advance agent, Bennie Ziedman, arrived here recently to make arrangements for the show, and a real hot tamale treat is promised. A recent entertainment of this kind at Los Angeles netted $18,000, and there is a suspicion that San Francisco will come through with even more.

Wm. H. Jobelmann Joins Select.

San Francisco.—Wm. H. Jobelman has joined the local office of the Select Pictures, as head of the promotion department, and is now placing into effect some of the original ideas which have made him a leader in moving picture publicity work. He is now handling the correspondence, making up sales-letters and working out new ideas for exhibitors. At an early date he will make a trip on the road to visit exhibitors.

Sol. L. Lesser Buys Triangle Reissues.

San Francisco.—Sol L. Lesser has purchased all of the William S. Hart, Douglas Fairbanks, Frank Keenan, Louise Glaum and Norma Talmadge re-issues of the Triangle, and will take over all contracts made with exhibitors by this concern. Exhibitors throughout the territory are wiring in to learn if their contracts still hold good and are being informed that all will be honored. The All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., of which Mr. Lesser is the head, has renewed its contract for Billy West comedies, and will release one a week. Arrangements are being made for the release of "The Carmen of the Klondyke," for which the Pacific Coast rights were recently secured.

Portland, Ore., Operators Have Auxiliary

Wives of Union Members Plan Festivities for Odd Mondays When the Business Meetings Are Not Held—Other Oregon Notes of Interest.

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Building, Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, OREGON.—The Portland motion picture operators' union is progressing nicely, according to J. S. Haughey, secretary of the organization. The union meets on the second and fourth Mondays of each month, and now the wives of the members have formed a ladies' auxiliary, which attends to furnishing festivities on the first and third Mondays. Usually a feed is arranged for the boys after the show.

The Portland union has always cooperated with the theater managers, and this co-operation has been reciprocated, with the result that there has been no trouble between the union and the managers in the many years the organization has been in existence.

Eleven members of the Portland union are in the Government service, eight in the army and three connected with other Government work. I. J. Vincent and the Evans brothers are the members of the union now with the American forces in France.

Patriotic Film Goes Well.

Portland, Ore.—The Crystal theater, Mrs. Hudson, manager, recently showed "The Man Without a Country" in a novel manner that was very successful. The Crystal is a suburban theater and does not usually run matinees. "The Man Without a Country" was put over with a quartette which rendered patriotic selections at appropriate places in the film, besides opening and closing with patriotic numbers. The result was that on a week-day matinee the Crystal stood 'em up.

Noted Film Quartette in Town.

Portland, Ore.—Usually when film men come to town they stay away from each other as much as possible. Not so with Al Eden, C. J. Kerr, J. S. Woody and Frank Steffy. They're good fellows; they don't knife each other and their companies enjoy good business in the territory as a result of their congenial natures. Eden and Kerr were in Portland to see "Cleopatra" go over at the Majestic; Woody was placing the Select service, and Steffy was placing "I, Mary McLane" and "Brown of Harvard."

Other film men in the city during the week were H. H. Hurn, Triangle, who placed the service in the Columbia, its old stand, and who departed early in the week; also C. F. Hill.

Nick Pierong Goes to Tacoma.

Portland, Ore.—Nick Pierong, former manager of the Strand theater here, has gone to Tacoma as manager of the Hippodrome theater. With him went L. H. Berry, who will be his assistant. Berry formerly was employed in the same capacity in Portland and was also poster clerk at the Film Supply Company.

Mr. Pierong is one of the best known theatrical men in the Pacific Northwest, having managed the Empress theater for Sullivan and Considine.

"Cleopatra" Presented at Majestic.

Portland, Ore.—Portland photoplay patrons had an opportunity to see "Cleopatra" at the Majestic theater during the week of Feb. 2 and they surely did use it to advantage. The picture was presented by Manager J. J. Parker in a manner that has never before been essayed in Portland. The theater was fixed up for the occasion, even to new Egyptian frescoes on the walls, and the house attaches wore costumes in Egyptian regalia.

The picture was presented with twenty-two pieces of music in two complete orchestras. The musicians were divided so that there was orchestra music for each show. There were five performances a day, beginning at 10:30.

Most of the credit for the elaborate manner in which the production was presented is due to Harry D. Green, house manager of the Majestic, whose untiring efforts enabled all the arrangements to be completed on time. The publicity was in charge of Chas. E. Couche, regular Majestic publicity man, and P. S. Mattox, who travels with the show. The Fox representative who handled the business end of the show in Portland was Henry Pierson.

Sperry Completes Successful Trip.

Portland, Ore.—B. J. Sperry, travelling representative for the Progressive, handling Paramount and Artcraft in this territory, recently returned from eastern Oregon, where he reports the picture industry progressing nicely. He brings the news that F. E. Alderman, who formerly conducted the theater at Athena, is now assistant to Guy Matlock at Pendleton, also that J. P. Cotter is making improvements in the Orpheum theater at Baker. Mr. Cotter is one of the most progressive exhibitors in his part of the state and is reported to be enjoying excellent business.

Exhibitor Gets Army Commission.

Portland, Ore.—Lieut. W. L. Cutts, now in the aviation service in Portland, was formerly manager of the Liberty theater in Spokane and was an exhibitor in Butte. He sold his theater interests and was commissioned as lieutenant after a period of training. Now the Government has recognized his ability as a motion picture expert and has delegated him to gather films on aviation service, to be shown in the army camps. The film exchanges in Portland have opened their vaults to him and he is cutting appropriate scenes from weeklies for Government use.

Snappy Oregon Shorts.

Portland, Ore.—E. R. Simpson, Pathe representative in Portland, journeyed to Seattle recently to attend the "Pathe Week" there.

Springfield, Ore.—Ernest Bladen has bought the Bell theater from W. J. White.

Portland, Ore.—Pete Sabo reports that several exhibitors are adding second machines to their equipment, which indicates prosperity in the territory. Among those furnished by Mr. Sabo were: M. B. Donovan, Portsmouth; J. Sullivan, Powell; Frank Biles, Majestic, Roseburg; also added equipment was installed in the Arcade at Warrenton.

Condon, Ore.—Thomas and Plummer, local men, have purchased the American theater from D. H. Cottmyer.

Seattle News Letter.

By J. S. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

G. P. Endert Takes Artcraft Job.

SEATTLE, WASH.—George P. Endert resigned two weeks ago from the managership of the Seattle Pathe exchange to become sales manager for Artcraft-Paramount in the same territory. Until the new manager, W. A. Kofeldt, arrived, W. H. Rankin, Pathe salesman, had charge of the office. Mr. Kofeldt came this week from Minneapolis, where he was manager of the Pathe exchange. He declares that he is glad to get back to the Pacific Northwest after the intense cold of the middle states. Mr. Kofeldt was manager of the Portland Pathe office until that was closed last year. Previous to that he was in San Francisco.

George West, for several years booker in the Seattle Pathe office, went with Mr. Endert to the Artcraft-Paramount headquarters to take up the same work for that exchange.

B. Rubin, former booker for Artcraft-Paramount, is now booker for Pathe.

C. D. Hammer, formerly cashier in the Los Angeles Pathe office and studio, has come to Seattle to assume the cashier's duties in this office.

General Business Conditions in Washington State.

So far as I have been able to learn not a single motion picture theater has closed on account of the recent depression, but quite a number of the small town houses have cut the number of their shows per week down about half. The general feeling among the small town exhibitors is that the coming Liberty Loan and the Thrift Stamps, particulary, will cause more and more people to cut down their attendance at motion picture shows. They feel that patriotic investments are affecting amuesments more than the war tax, because most of the people in this territory are now more prosperous than they have been for several years due to the great shipbuilding activities in Seattle and the Grays Harbor country, and to the high prices the fruit ranchers of eastern Washington are getting for their fruit. The prosperity in the country districts, however, is not enough to counterbalance the patriotic investments made by the people, and the exhibitors are preparing to cut expenses down to a minimum for the next six months; but it is significant that none of them apparently are considering closing their houses.

In Seattle, itself, the motion picture business has not for years been so good. All the downtown houses are making good money, the people having grown accustomed to the raised prices, and the neighborhood theaters are getting their share of the prosperity also. The great numbers of men employed in the ship yards are receiving high wages, and the motion picture business was quick to reflect the general prosperity caused by the increased pay roll.

Jas. M. Tally Brings Bride Home.

Seattle, Wash.—Jas. M. Tally surprised his friends last week by going down to Portland and bringing back a bride. The new manageress of the Vitagraph was Miss Florence Marie Flood, of Portland.

While in the Oregon city, Mr. Tally took time to call at all the 50 theaters there.

Mansfield Theater Opens Again.

Mansfield, Wash.—Mrs. Clara Wright, of the Mansfield theater, has been ill for the last two weeks, and the theater had to remain closed during that time. Mrs. Wright has now recovered sufficiently to open the house.

MORE SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

By T. A. Church.

W. H. (Buck) Massie, until recently manager of Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, and formerly official greeter at Universal City, was in San Francisco a short time ago in the interests of the Fox Film, having charge of the big production, "Cleopatra."

William Steiner, a pioneer in the moving picture business, was in San Francisco a short time ago in the interests of productions he is about to bring out.

John T. Carleton, of Carleton, Inc., a prominent producer of Los Angeles, was a business visitor in San Francisco.

E. H. Emmick, of the Peerless Film, recently returned from a trip to Los Angeles. This concern is now handling the releases of the Educational Film Corporation in the Southern territory.

Joe Partridge has been succeeded as Pacific Coast representative of the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corp. by W. A. Bishop.

Fred Dahnken, Jr., president of the T. & D. circuit, who is now in the East, plans to remain in New York for several months.

Two Bluebird productions on Market street was the showing made by the Universal during the last week in January, "The Grand Passion" being shown at the Alhambra, and "The Girl by the Roadside" at the Jewel. A similar showing will be made during the week of Feb. 10.

In the San Francisco Field.

Corning, Cal.—The new theater of Guy V. Fleming will be ready for occupancy in about thirty days and it is the plan to conduct this house seven days a week. The other house here operates three days a week.

Concord, Cal.—Improvements are being made at the Majestic theater, including the installation of a Simplex machine purchased from Walter Preddey of San Francisco.

Lodi, Cal.—The stockholders of the Lodi Investment Co. have decided to ask for bids for the construction of a theater on South School street.

Oakland, Cal.—The Piedmont theater, which has been closed for the past month, has been reopened by Tom Spies.

San Rafael, Cal.—The Liberty theater is to be reopened by A. G. Eustace.

Honolulu, T. H.—The Consolidated Amusement Company has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $250,000, by Joel C. Cohen, Arthur Coyne, John H. Magoon, Alfred A. Magoon, and Marmion M. Magoon.

Reno, Nev.—Hurst Bros., who recently took over the T. & D. theater, have remodeled and redecorated the house, and will open it shortly as the Rialto theater.

Reno, Nev.—The Premier Film Corporation is preparing to erect a studio near Moana Springs. Particular attention will be devoted to the filming of Bret Harte and Mark Twain stories.

Vancouver News Letter

By James M. Maxwell, 2770 Tenth Ave. West, Vancouver, B. C.

May Form Screen Club in Vancouver.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—At the last meeting of the Film Exchange Managers' Association of B. C. the subject of forming a screen club was brought up, and is now under consideration, while a committee of three members are securing information on this subject. It is proposed to secure sufficiently large quarters so that they could be used for private screening of pictures, as well as for the meetings of the association, and also for the Exhibitors' Association.

Interesting Business Briefs.

W. G. Carruthers has resigned from the staff of the Fox Films, of Vancouver, and will leave shortly to cover Western Canada with the Rex Beach feature, "The Ne'er Do Well."

Miss Quinn, of the Regal Vancouver office, is making a selling trip through the Okanagan Valley.

P. E. S. Doyle, who left for Philadelphia after closing the General Film offices in Vancouver, of which he was local manager, has written the secretary of the Film Exchange Managers' Association that he has arrived, and is starting in on the new field.

It is expected that some announcement will be made by the British Columbia Government regarding a readjustment of the Amusement Tax Act. It is understood that this matter will be taken up when the legislature meets next month. The exhibitors throughout the Province are anxiously waiting for some form of relief from the severity of the tax.

The Geraldine Farrar picture, "The Woman God Forgot," has been rejected by the censor for British Columbia. The picture was viewed by most of the exhibitors of Vancouver after coming from the censor's office, and they unanimously agreed that they could not understand why it should have been rejected.

"Victory" Films Begin Releasing February

Titan Film Company of Washington Promises Its First Scenic This Month—Educational Subjects Will Follow—No Company Stock for Sale.

By S. Clark Patchin, E. 1811 Eleventh Ave., Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, WASH. — Moving picture films bearing the stamp of the Titan Feature Photoplay Company, Spokane, and released as the "Victory" brand are to be issued at the rate of one a week beginning in February. This announcement is made by J. Don Alexander, president of the Titan Company, and head of the Alexander Electric Company, S. 108 Howard street.

"Our company has financed a group of men who are prepared to begin immediate manufacture of films," Mr. Alexander stated, "and the new company, known as the Allied Film Corporation, has fully paid up capitalization with no stock for sale. The incorporators are Charles B. Dreyer, John T. Mulligan, and E. J. Barnard.

"Mr. Dreyer will have control of the new company's offices, and be in general charge of the production. The Allied people will give their time exclusively to scenic and educational films, a field which the Titan decided not to enter, but in this way will be able to care for.

"The first pictures will be of Spokane and Inland Empire news and scenic subjects, and circuited over a route of 35 theaters now under contract. About 15 employees will be hired, some from California studios."

J. P. Cotter Gets Monopoly in Baker, Ore.

Baker, Ore.—The lease and possession of the Baker theater has passed into the hands of Joseph P. Cotter, who now owns and operates the Grand, Empire, and Orpheum theaters of Baker.

Mr. Cotter is making improvements and alterations in the Baker theater which will insure it being an up-to-date and attractive show house, with new screen for the moving picture productions which will be run, as well as housing road shows in the place. The theater has a seating capacity of 1,200.

The theaters are operated under the name of the Majestic Amusement Enterprises, and Mr. Cotter announces that he is running the Paramount and Artcraft pictures in his houses, and will soon run the Chapin's Lincoln, "Son of Democracy."

Liberty Announces Bookings.

Spokane.—Manager Sam W. B. Cohn, of the Liberty theater, has completed bookings up to June 2. These include the regular Liberty favorites in new vehicles and a number of special features selected from the open market. The Liberty will continue to be an exclusive first-run house.

February 17, "On Trial"; February 21, modern version of Edward Everett Hale's "Man Without a Country"; February 24, Douglas Fairbanks in "The Modern Musketeer"; March 3, Norman Talmadge in "The Moth"; March 7, "The Co-Respondent"; March 10, Bill Hart in "Blue Blazes Rawden"; March 17, Fairbanks in "Headin' South"; March 24, "Come Through"; March 28, Enid Bennett in "The Keys of the Righteous," and March 31, Norma Talmadge in "Ghosts of Yesterday."

Clemmer to Run "Lincoln" Pictures.

Spokane.—Dr. H. S. Clemmer, manager of the Clemmer theater, announces that the Chapin "Lincoln" pictures will be offered at the Clemmer at fortnightly intervals beginning February 9. The pictures were made under the personal supervision of Benjamin Chapin, who impersonates Abraham Lincoln in the series which the Paramount is releasing in 10 episodes under the general title, "The Son of Democracy."

Dr. Clemmer has gone to Seattle on a business trip during which he will review a number of new film releases which he is considering booking.

Theda Bara Popular in "Cleopatra."

Spokane.—The presentation of Theda Bara in "Cleopatra" proved so popular at the Casino theater that Manager C. S. Stilwell continued it four days longer than the original booking.

Cheyenne Trade Letter

By John C. Fleming, Box 273, Cheyenne, Wyo., with the Wyoming Tribune.

Coal Shortage Does Not Affect.

CHEYENNE, WYO.—All theaters in Wyoming are running full time, as the recent coal restriction does not affect the theaters of this section of the country.

New Theater in Northern Wyoming.

Basin, Wyo.—Basin's new picture house would have been completed before this had not the collapse of one of the walls caused much of the work to be done over. It is expected that the new Basin theater will be running by the first of March.

Opera House Is to Run Pictures.

Pine Bluffs, Wyo.—The opera house at Pine Bluffs, which was destroyed by fire about four months ago, has been entirely rebuilt and is about ready to open with a program of the better photo plays.

Glenrock Theater Ready.

Glenrock, Wyo.—The new Empress theater here opened for the first night recently. The popularity of Glenrock's theater was proven by the number of oil-drillers and workmen who attended the first night's performance.

Wisconsin News Letter

By F. H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

New Theaters and Exhibitors Notes.

MADISON, WIS.—The American Theater Company has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. Incorporators, Louis Trassen, Herrman Kuethe, and H. W. Burt.

Black River Falls, Wis.—A. F. Werner has purchased the moving picture equipment in the R-K hall from F. E. Keefe, and installed it in the opera house, where he has been giving picture shows.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Miss Hazel Daly, of the Selig Company, appeared in person at the Merrill theater in connection with the exhibition of the film, "Brown of Harvard," in which she appeared. She also selected one man and one woman to be given a try-out at the Selig studio in Chicago.

Janesville, Wis.—N. Stephenson and James Zanias have taken over the interest of W. T. Sherer in the Apollo theater. They have purchased the equipment of the theater, and taken a ten-year lease on the building. Zanias, who has been manager for the last five years, will continue in that capacity. The policy of vaudeville four days a week and pictures three days will be continued.

Kaukauna, Wis.—Alex Conkey & Sons and John Cleland have purchased the Nugent theater, which recently was damaged by fire, and will replace it with a modern structure. The new theater will provide for vaudeville entertainments.

Beloit, Wis.—After seven years in the local field, John Olson has sold the Star theater to the Rex-Strand Theatre Company. The new owners will operate the house only on Saturday and Sunday.

Tri-State Circuit Formed in Pittsburgh

Film Men in Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia Invited to Join New Organization—Has Twenty-eight Members Now.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 405 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Moving picture theater owners of Western Pennslyvania and surrounding territory are completing the organization of a new circuit to be known as the Tri-State Exhibitors' Circuit, with headquarters at Pittsburgh. At a recent meeting the following temporary officers were chosen: H. B. Kester, treasurer, and A. J. Barthell, secretary. Twenty-eight members are on roll and it is hoped to increase this number to forty at a meeting to be held in this city in the near future for the purpose of forming a permanent organization.

The Tri-State Exhibitors' Circuit hopes to work in conjunction with other circuits now being formed throughout the country. All exhibitors of Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia, whether members of any organization or not, are eligible to join. Communications should be addressed to A. J. Barthell, secretary Tri-State Exhibitors' Circuit, 822 Wood street, Wilkinsburg, Pa.

The constitution and by-laws of the new organization are being drafted by a special committee chosen from the following executive committee: F. J. Herrington, Henry Polk, Herman Mewes, Oliver McKee, L. M. Gauding, R. Goldberg, George J. Schweitzer, I. W. Shearer, George Berry, R. S. Jones, M. Bluestone, William Couch and H. B. Kester.

Matthew Teplitz Operating Penn Service.

Pittsburgh.—The Penn Film Service, 938 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, is now under the management of Matthew Teplitz, who succeeds Joseph Spero. The offices have been removed to the fifth floor and will share the quarters of the Specialty Film Company, operated by Mr. Teplitz. The Penn will continue to handle the William S. Hart subjects and a full program of Mutual releases, as well as a line of four and five-reel sensational pictures.

Spero Forms Bell Film Service.

Pittsburgh.—Joseph Spero, well-known local film man, has organized a new concern under the name of the Bell Film Service, and on February 4 opened an exchange at 804 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh. Mr. Spero recently launched the Penn Film Service, from which concern he resigned to undertake the new project. The Bell exchange will offer a program of twelve reels each week, and has completed arrangements for handling a number of big features, it is announced by Mr. Spero.

Western Pennsylvania Briefs.

Pittsburgh.—Manager Friedberh, of the Alhambra theater, East End, Pittsburgh, recently inaugurated a new policy whereby he is offering a change of pictures twice a week, and advanced the admission price to 15 cents. The Alhambra has booked practically all of the William Fox Standard features and will also present the Bluebird attractions.

Pittsburgh.—At the Liberty theater, the largest of the Rowland & Clark houses, East End, Pittsburgh, the latest Metro special, "Blue Jeans," featuring Viola Dana, played to capacity crowds the entire week of February 4, this being its premier showing in this city.

Pittsburgh.—Harry Rees has been appointed manager of the booking department of the Pittsburgh branch of the General Film. He succeeds Thomas Skelton, who has accepted a similar position at the local Pathe exchange.

McKees Rocks, Pa.—Robert Webb, a well known exhibitor of McKees Rocks, Pa., has joined the staff of Manager Bronstetter at the Foursquare exchange, 127 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh. Mr. Webb will have charge of the film and advertising departments.

Pittsburgh.—The attractive Lyric theater, East Pittsburgh, has been sold by J. A. Brown to John A. Weaver, an experienced exhibitor. Mr. Brown is negotiating for another house in this locality.

Butler, Pa.—The Carleton theater, Butler, Pa., has resumed its policy of high-class pictures after having run stock shows since last Autumn.

Pittsburgh.—P. D. Irwin, popular traveling representative out of the Fox exchange in Pittsburgh, resigned recently to become chief inspector for the United States Government at a local plant of the Westinghouse Company.

Pittsburgh.—Manager John McAleer of the Independent Film Exchange, Pittsburgh, reports that the Universal's latest serial, "The Bull's Eye," featuring Eddie Polo and Vivian Reed, is meeting with a phenomenal reception. Already seventy-five bookings have been taken. The first four episodes were screened recently for interested exhibitors.

Pittsburgh.—All feature bookings at the Independent Film Exchange, including Bluebirds, Star Productions and Butterflies, are now in charge of Miss M. Ackenheil. Miss Mullen, who formerly handled the bookings on Bluebirds, has resigned to accept a position with Miller & Buchanan, producers of the Pittsburgh Press Pictorial.

Harry Somerville's Reason for Sticking.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Harry Somerville, formerly manager of the Happy Hour moving picture theater, Buffalo, and now doing the publicity and picture booking for the Miles theater, Cleveland, has a new motto for the new year, according to his letter to the Buffalo correspondent. Of course Harry doesn't mean all he says in his motto. Here it is:

"EVEN AS YOU AND I.

H. Somerville.

"I have been in the show business a long time.
I have been cussed and discussed, boycotted.
Talked about, lied about, lied to, hung up,
Held up, and robbed.
The only reason I am staying in this business is to see what the hell is going to happen next."

Quebec Clergy Unite Against Sunday Shows

Condemn New Ruling of Court that Permits Theaters to Open—Both Protestant and Roman Catholic Ministers Act Together in Matter.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St. East, Toronto, Ont.

QUEBEC, QUE.—All is not sweet and rosy in Quebec City with regard to the permission from the courts for the opening of moving picture theaters in that city on Sundays. A meeting of prominent members of both the Protestant and Catholic clergy of Quebec was held in the courthouse on January 31, with Justice Lemieux presiding, to consider what action would be taken to suppress the Sunday performances permitted by a recent judgment of the Court of Appeals. A letter was read from Cardinal Begin in which he stated that he heartily approved and associated himself with the movement, and that his entire support could be counted upon. So far the manager of the Auditorium theater has refused to open his house on Sundays, but practically all other exhibitors have done so.

Fined for Letting Cold People in Lobby.

Toronto.—Manager J. B. Cronk, of the new Allen theater, and Manager W. G. Mitchell, of the Regent theater, were fined $20 and costs in the Toronto Police Court for performing an act of mercy. On a very cold and windy day recently, Manager Cronk permitted people to enter the lobby of the theater out of the cold until they could be accommodated in seats of the house. The people would not go away, so Cronk allowed them to stand in the lobby, and in so doing they blocked the front exit. A police sergeant noticed this, and Cronk was summoned to court. The accused pointed out that it was more of a crime to compel the people to stay out in the cold than to crowd the lobby, but the judge could not see it that way.

Manager W. G. Mitchell was accorded the same treatment for the same offence at the Regent theater.

Business does not seem to be so bad in Toronto when exhibitors are being fined for not driving the people away.

Regent Theater Changes Hands.

Ottawa.—The Temple Theater Corporation, Limited, which controls the Allen theater, has purchased the Regent theater, Ottawa. The latter is one of the most prominent houses in Eastern Ontario. Manager Moxley will continue in charge of the Regent, but the house is to be remodeled and redecorated throughout. The Regent will have first run Paramount releases in Ottawa, these pictures being controlled in Canada by the Allens, who also are behind the Temple Theater Corporation.

Manager Robson Back at His Theater.

Toronto.—Manager Clarence Robson, of the Strand theater, is now on the job again after being confined to his home with illness for a number of weeks. He signallized his return to business by the presentation of "The Fall of the Romanoffs" during the week of February 4. This picture brought great crowds to the house. This was the second run of the feature in Toronto, the first presentation being as a road show at the Grand opera house three months before.

Manager Stewart's Lobby Changes Often

Toronto.—The lobby displays arranged by Manager Stewart for the Rialto theater, Toronto, are becoming more and more brilliant. For "Excuse Me" the whole lobby resembled the interior of a Pullman car, and when the attraction was Charlie Chaplin's "Work" the front of the theater looked like a tumbled-down wreck. Then, again, the Rialto looked like a church when "The Rosary" was presented. These displays are becoming more finished in appearance from week to week, and Manager Stewart's achievements are the talk of all local exhibitors.

"THE INNER VOICE."

Pathe Releases Five-Reel Russian Art Film Which Features Ivan Mozukin in Story with Tragic Ending.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS issue of the Russian Art Films continues the good record made by these productions in the matter of clear, straightforward drama and artistic presentation. It tells the life story of a man who leaves his country home as an ambitious youth to attend the University of Moscow. He is a bright, popular youth named Ivan, and has a sweetheart, called Nina, who shares his ambitions, and also goes to Moscow.

The early courtship of these two is portrayed in an enjoyable way. But Ivan desires to advance too quickly, and falls a victim to gambling. He is treasurer of an organization of students, and on one fatal night embezzles the funds in order to carry on his play. Nina also informs him that she is about to become a mother, and his troubles accumulate faster than he can take care of them. Eventually the child is born, but it dies, and the mother follows shortly afterward.

Ivan comes to maturity a hard, cold man. He has by this time married, and has a son, but the latter dies after a brief illness. Ivan then, craving election to the Duma, pledges himself to a scheming financier. He achieves election, but the vision of his conscience, which has appeared to him at intervals through the years, appears again, and he breaks down with remorse. He dies after wrestling with the vision.

The story, as will be seen from the above, carries a moral, but the moral is impressed upon the observer by indirection and not in the bald manner indicated by a bare recital of the plot.

The settings for this story are not elaborate, but are entirely in keeping with the narrative. The glimpses of Ivan's country home, the students' quarters at the university, and the streets and bridges of Moscow are very interesting. Mozukin's acting of the leading role is almost flawless, and his makeup for the period of his later years is worth the study of some of our American character performers. The production was directed by I. A. Protozanoss.

"THE SONG OF SONGS."

Poison Mostly Taken Out of Sheldon's Risque Play by Elsie Ferguson.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE heroine, let her be as lovely as one pleases, who never fights back, who is all love, who has no passion of the soul, who slips down the easiest way into muck, may be a convincing, but she is not an inspiring sight. The weakness of the books and plays about her lies in the fact that the reader or spectator may miss the things glossed over and inartistically left out, for the reason that if they have been put in except as a Dostoiefsky could put them in they would have spoiled the work wholly. It seems that only Russian prostitutes make real heroines.

The Artcraft Pictures Corporation has picturized Edward Sheldon's play, "The Song of Songs," with Elsie Ferguson in the leading role. The leading player has left out much of the girl's disreputable experience. She hasn't answered the question as to motives that Sheldon passed up, and she has shown us a perfectly spineless individual in the human form. I don't think the picture will make as good a record financially as the play; but it gives many glimpses of real life. It is splendidly acted and is full of character. The lesser individuals particularly stand out as actual and real to a degree. The photography, sets and general staging are perfect.

The late Director Joseph Kaufmann has done a good director's honest work on it, and there is no doubt that it will interest a good many people. Getrtrude Berkeley, as the girl's drunken mother, and Henry Leone as her artistic unheroic father, open the picture with distinguished character drawing. Corinne Uzell's passionate Ann Merkle, and Cecil Fletcher's worldly-wise and interesting uncle of the girl's last foolish lover, ring as true. Robert Cummings as the fledgling lover, Frank Losee as the senator, and Crauford Kent as the rather peculiar manfriend of the girl, have conventional parts and fill them with intelligence.

"THE BRIGHT LIGHTS DIMMED."

Metro-Drew Comedy in Which Sidney Drew Does Almost a Solo Act in Reminiscent Drunk.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

BACK in the white light district after several years of matrimonial imprisonment, there was demonstrated to Henry Mason a fact that's sad but true—he discovered that Broadway's memory is a curtailed faculty—"out of sight out of mind." The Metro-Drew comedy, "The Bright Lights Dimmed," is based on this idea and presents Sidney Drew in what is almost a solo act, despite the fact that Mrs. Drew looks in on the first couple of scenes, and that an ensemble of white-lighters, including bartenders and restaurant managers, do the fill-in work. And whether you like bar-room scenes or not, you'll have to admit that in this picture Sidney Drew gives one of the best portrayals of the reminiscent drunk that you have ever seen.

As the simple thread of a story goes Henry Mason, who has been married several years, takes advantage of his wife's absence from home to return to his old playground among the white lights, with the expectation that things will be the same for him. He discovers to his great astonishment and chagrin that people recall their recollection of him with difficulty. He is forced to drink alone, and he arrives home from Broadway dark and empty at 10.30 P. M., drunk and disgusted. Very funny.

"THE GUILTY MAN."

A. H. Woods Melodrama of French Life Before the War—Has Dramatic Climax.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

OPENING the recent Paramount picture, "The Guilty Man," made from the A. H. Woods stage melodrama, there is an introductory piece of dancing faun and nymphs, expensive, but without particular pertinency, so it is not astonishing to find the work of its director, able as he shows himself to handle the players through the more obvious climaxes of exciting melodrama, a failure to take account of the more subtle suggestions. For instance, the costume he permits the leading player in the opening scenes affects the whole story. Let us say that this costume is appropriate; then the woman's actions afterward show a strong awakening of the soul. The object of the picture is not to show character, but to provide a situation like any other melodrama, and anything that works against our accepting that situation is an intrusion. So that costume is an intrusion.

These failings do not rob the picture of most of its value as a melodrama. The story, well known, is exciting, and from the time that Claudine's new husband begins to use his stepdaughter, born to Lescuyer, now prosecuting attorney of Paris, as a help in his cafe business, the spectator watches the tale with close attention. Yet the continuity is not perfect even here. The mind is left free to wonder why the characters do not take this or that step to clear up their difficulties easily, and it would not have been hard to satisfy the spectators on these points by explanations. Yet, in spite of all the ability of the players: Gloria Hope, as Claudine; Vivian Reed, as her daughter by her former husband, Lescuyer, played by William Garwood; Flambon, by Charles French, the waiter, by Hal Cooley, and the former cafe owner, by John Steppling, produce a note of sincerity that carries the spectator's attention with ease. There is excellent atmosphere in the cafe scenes, in the living room above, and in the trial scenes. The picture can very safely be recommended as an offering, though it will hardly be a sure hit everywhere.

"JILTED JANET."

Margarita Fischer Well Sustains Titular Role in Five-Part American Comedy-Drama.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

THE story of "Jilted Janet" offers Margarita Fischer numerous opportunities to display her well known powers as a sprightly comedienne. Many of the situations are humorous and out of the ordinary run, and in all of them the star acquits herself well, while the support is always equal to the occasion.

The careful spectator will have his or her pleasure slightly marred by the careless construction of the story in the case of Jules Graham (Jack Mower), the owner of "the house on the hill," which has been borrowed for a night by Janet Barnes (Margarita Fischer). As the story is filmed a mystery surrounds Graham, as his life is in jeopardy twice by a gang of thugs, yet not a word or a scene in explanation is offered. Director Ingraham, even if the script omitted to make things clear, could have easily solved the mystery by an apt subtitle. The whole mistake is evidently due to oversight.

The story is crisply novel. I have never before read or heard of a young woman evening the score on the man who jilted her in such a startlingly novel manner. And Janet Barnes does not only even the score with her former sweetheart; she extends her plot so as to include Susan Reed, the girl who succeeded her in the affections of the caddish Ernest Morgan, and who becomes his wife.

Janet goes out to her brother in California, who is weary of life since he became the owner of a lemon grove. Right across the way from the little cottage on the grove of Frank Barnes is the magnificent country house of the millionaire, Jules Graham, who, at the opening of the story, is in his club in San Francisco. Janet, in her reply to Ernest Morgan, incloses a photograph of the Graham home, incidentally remarking that the palatial pile is owned by her brother, Frank.

The high marks of the comedy are reached when Morgan and his wife, on a tour of California, send a letter stating that they will visit Janet and her brother. Janet succeeds in borrowing the Graham home for a night from the servants in charge, and the owner, himself, arrives at the same time as the guests who have caused Janet such heartburnings. Graham tells his servants to keep his identity secret, while he offers himself to Janet as a butler while the guests from the East remain. The reader can guess the sequel so far as Janet and Graham are concerned.

How Margarita Fischer's Janet evens up old scores with Ernest Morgan will cause great merriment, and the plot in which Susan, his wife, is paid for her meddling is no less amusing. As for the fate of Janet, herself, Graham takes that in his own hands in a way that will be delightful to all lovers.

"You stole my house, my servants, my automobile, and my heart," he accuses. And Janet asks the penalty.

"A life-long sentence as prisoner in the house you stole—with me as jailer," is the reply.

Release will be made through the Mutual Film Corporation, February 11.

"THE WOMAN BETWEEN FRIENDS."

Excellent Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Released February 11, Starring Alice Joyce and Marc MacDermott.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS is the author of "The Woman Between Friends," a five-part Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature directed by Tom Terries, and starring Alice Joyce and Marc MacDermott. The picture is excellent in every respect. It is consistently dramatic in story, has variety of scene, convincing local color, intelligent direction, and a thoroughly capable cast. Artist life in Paris furnishes the background, and the plot is highly romantic.

The friends of the story are John Drene, a sculptor, and Jack Graylock, a painter. Both men swear eternal friendship the night before Drene's marriage. Later on the artist runs away with the sculptor's wife. The couple tire of each other, and the woman becomes an outcast. Then Graylock falls honestly in love with a flower girl, one of those sweetly innocent young women found in romance of the Chambers school. Her name is Cecelie, and she follows the painter back to Paris. He installs her with the housekeeper of the studios where he lives, and introduces her to Drene, who is at once inspired to employ her as the model for a half completed statue posed for by his wife.

Drene, who was present when the runaway woman paid for her folly by being accidentally burned to death, has never suspected his friend, but Cecelie unintentionally betrays him. Drene is filled with a determination to kill Graylock at once. He then concludes that this would not be sufficient punishment, and informs the artist that on a certain day he must shoot himself or be killed. As a further revenge, Drene makes up his mind to wind Cecelie away from Graylock. He starts to put his plan in operation, not knowing that the girl has already fallen in love with him. Her gentleness and devotion softens his heart toward his one time friend, and he tries to prevent Graylock from carrying out the compact. The artist fires the shot as agreed, but only wounds himself, and Drene finds peace and happiness with Cecelie.

Alice Joyce has never done anything better than her playing of the flower girl, whose wistful gentleness and appealing beauty just suit her personality. Marc MacDermott as John Drene, Robert Walker as Jack Graylock, Edith Speare as Drene's wife, and Katherine Lewis as Cecelie's sister are the other names on the program.

"WHIMS OF SOCIETY."

Ethel Clayton in Five-Part World Release Acts the Factory Girl Heroine of Story by William Addison Lathrop.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE struggles of a working girl, as well as the "Whims of Society," are shown in a five-part World photoplay written by William Addison Lathrop and directed by Travers Vale. The author has kept to the familiar road laid out for stories of this class, but sustains the interest with considerable skill. Two strongly contrasted grades of society are pitted against each other, the owners of wealth being sordid and disagreeable, and the factory girl heroine possessing a complete line of virtues. Nora Carey, as played by Ethel Clayton, is a superior type of mill hand who finds it difficult to support herself and a younger sister on nine dollars a week. Hugh Travers, the son of the mill owner, is attracted by the girl, and acts the part of a champion when one of his father's foremen tries to become to familiar with Nora. Hugh also defrays the younger sister's expenses at boarding school, and, when Nora is discharged from the mill, places her in a high class apartment and foots the bill.

A society matron who was anxious to have Hugh marry her daughter, and has arranged a match between the girl and Hugh's father, finds out about Nora's new home, and puts the worst possible construction on the matter. She rushes down to the mill office and tells the elder Travers the scandal. The old gentleman sends for his son, and is informed by Hugh that he intends to make Nora his wife. Travers, senior, threatens to disown the boy, and sends for his lawyers. As he signs the altered will the office is blown up by the foreman, who has also offended the mill owner and been turned off. Hugh's father and the lawyers are all killed, and Mrs. Van Schuyler, the society matron, does not see her daughter make a wealthy match. Although Hugh and Nora have been rather thoughtless of appearances they are properly married in due time. The melodramatic finish is a trifle sudden, and seems an afterthought on the part of the author. Most of the picture is well directed, and the acting is uniformly excellent.

Ethel Clayton displays her never-failing earnestness and skill in the leading role. Frank Beamish as Marlinoff, Jack Drumier as John Travers, Frank Mayo as Hugh Travers, Katherine Johnson as Katherine Carey, Zadee Burbank as Mrs. Van Schuyler, and Pinna Nesbit as Eleanor Van Schuyler have the other important parts. Photographed by Max Schneider.

"THE CAST-OFF."

Bessie Barriscale in Six-Part Thomas Ince Production Written by C. Gardner Sullivan—On Foursquare Pictures Program.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

REVENGE is the main motive of "The Cast-Off," a six-part Thomas Ince production written by C. Gardner Sullivan and released on the Foursquare Pictures program. It is also the last photoplay in which Bessie Barriscale appears under the Ince banner. Two episodes in a woman's life are shown; one, when she is a girl of fourteen working for her living as a servant; the other when she becomes a successful actress and is planning to get even with the man who won her confidence when little more than a child and then attempted to ruin her reputation. There is nothing particularly strong in the story, but the motive for revenge is a very human one. As is usual in such cases time takes the matter in hand and deals out "even-handed justice" to the man the actress detests.

Pansy May is taken from an orphan asylum and put at work in the kitchen and dining room of Mrs. Hendon-Ware's exclusive boarding house, the lodgers being the most consistently disagreeable and snobbish set ever gathered under one roof. This is one of the weak points in author Sullivan's story. Fashionable boarding house life is a great breeder of snobs to be sure, but it seems almost impossible to have housed so many in one building. At any rate, Pansy May does her best to please them all, and when she unintentionally gets into a compromising position with one of the boarders and is denounced by the man who pretends to be fond of her and cast off by Mrs. Hendon-Ware she is filled with a burning desire for revenge. Her chance does not come for several years. She is then a stage star of prominence, and Guy Henley, the object of her hate, the husband of the star boarder in the old days at the Mrs. Hendon-Ware's. Henley recognizes her, and falls madly in love with the ex-waitress. His wife also starts a flirtation with an admirer, and things look dark for a little baby in the Henley home until Dr. Thorpe, a friend of all concerned, interferes. Pansy is determined to lead Henley on to desert his wife then throw him over, but the doctor makes her accompany him to the house, and shows her the baby, asleep in his crib. The child is put in Pansy's arms, and the little one smiles and clings to her. Her heart softens toward its parents, and she drops her plan for getting even. Thorpe confesses his love for her, and Pansy finds she is only too glad to say yes.

Bessie Barriscale acts both periods of Pansy's life with discernment and charm, and is cleverly supported by Howard Hickman as Dr. Thorpe and Jack Livingston as Guy Henley. The picture was directed by Raymond B. West under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

TRIANGLE RELEASES.

"Keith of the Border," Live Western Drama, and "From Two to Six," a Spy Story.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"Keith of the Border."

THERE is plenty of speed in "Keith of the Border," a five-part Triangle drama of the West, taken from a story by Randall Parrish, scenario by Alvin J. Neitz and directed by Clifford Smith. Save for one error in construction, the repeating of a rough-and-tumble fight between the hero and the villain, the action has that steady forward push that makes for real drama, and is only obtained by slashing ruthlessly all non-essential detail and getting down to business. In other words, nothing is permitted to get in the way of the action except an unnecessary subtitle, and the spectator who doesn't sit up and take notice all the time this photoplay is being unwound is devoid not only of imagination but of the average amount of gray matter.

Such a desirable state of affairs is materially assisted by the presence of Roy Stewart in the cast. The more this actor is seen, the firmer is the impression of his exceptional ability. His naturalness in indicating a fine open character absolutely without fear or any other undesirable quality is not surpassed by the whole list of screen actors. As Jack Keith, the leading character in "Keith of the Border," he is wholly and satisfyingly the man created by the author. His method is the psychologic one, and he thoroughly understands the art of making his face mirror the thoughts within.

The story tells of the attempt of Black Bart to rob a young girl of her fortune after he has stolen valuable papers from her father, whom he left for dead on the desert. Bart manages to have Keith accused of the crime and put in jail, but the cowpuncher digs his way to freedom and starts in to champion the girl. From that moment it becomes a lively and engrossing battle of wits and fists, and the end is both happy and reasonable.

Josie Sedgwick is clever in a dual role, and Robert Gills as Black Bart, Pete Morrison as Bill Scott, William Ellingford as General Waite, Wilbur Higbee as Doctor Fairban and Alberta Lee as Mrs. Murphy, complete the excellent support.

"Keith of the Border" was photographed by Steve Rounds and contains an unusual number of picturesque shots.

" From Two to Six."

A story by Arthur Stringer, called "The Button Thief," was the foundation of "From Two to Six," a five-part Triangle picture, directed by Albert Parker and supervised by Allan Dwan. Its action takes place within four hours. During that time the heroine recovers valuable plans stolen from her father by secret agents of the Kaiser and is married to a man she had never seen or heard of before. This argues that events cannot be obstructed by very many side issues. Most of the action takes place in a New York hotel, and the scenes were photographed, both exteriors and interiors, at the hotel mentioned. There is a comedy interest introduced and worked into the story that slows up matters occasionally, but most of the time the attention is fastened on the recovery of the papers and the fate of the inventor's daughter.

"From Two to Six," although of no great dramatic value, is interesting and amusing, and is capitally played by Winifred Allen as Alice Stevens, Earl Fox as Howard Skeele, Forrest Robinson as John Stevens, Robert Fisher as Baron Wiederholtz, Margaret Greene as Madame Elsa, Clarence Handysides as Richard Skeele, Charles B. Wells as George Worth, Madeline Marshall as Margaret Worth, Amy Somers as a French maid and Riley Hatch as a house detective.

"JACK SPURLOCK, PRODIGAL."

Fox Comedy with Dan Mason and George Welsh—Most of It Irresistibly Funny.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

YOUTH and personality are telling factors in making motion pictures. The cakes and ale have been largely set aside for them, and yet long and intimate acquaintance with the laws that govern funmaking and intelligent use of experience are apt, when unhampered by the script, to run away with the picture even in competition with the happiest personal gifts. Youth with its crown pays the tribute of putting the spectators in the frame of mind to laugh from the heart when experience makes occasion.

The best part of the recent Fox comedy, "Jack Spurlock, Prodigal," are Dan Mason's rather than George Walsh's, and that youthful and joyous player's part in it is far from being poverty stricken. Mr. Walsh from first to last is full of contagious lightheartedness and unconscious charm. He plays well, too, and is certainly amusing; but Mr. Mason, when the script gives him a good chance, which is again and again, is delightful. It is partly good luck. Every six-reel comedy is apt to have a best part and Dan Mason, who plays John Spurlock, Sr., drew the best scenes this time; but he knew how to take advantage of them.

The story is by George Horace Lorimer and pictures the adventures of Jack, athletic son of a wholesale grocer. The boy is of the right sort. He gets fired from college and seems to have no business ability, yet is plainly not without qualities. His father, in despair, sends him to the Newark branch of the grocery business, where he buys so many onions that his dad makes him handle them and he joins the Onion Union and leads a strike. After being fired, he has many adventures until he finds a new use for onions and his father slaps him on the back with pride.

In the early scenes there is much that is comical and much that is anything but it. As a whole, and the film is six reels long, it is thoroughly amusing and as comical as can be. The sub-titles are uneven, but most of them are perfect. It is an exceptionally worthy offering.

"THE HEART OF ROMANCE."

Delightful Picture in Which Age Finds Amusement in Youth's Generous Dreams.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

YOUTH is abundantly rich, because it can dream, and it is generous, because it is abundantly rich. Age knows the value of dreams from experience, and it knows the glory of generosity because it remembers. Set wise but not ungenerous age to watching youth struggling in the golden net of dreams and you have the basis of one of the most delightful comedy situations possible. This is just what happens in the recent Fox picture, "The Heart of Romance," played by June Caprice and Bernard Thornton, to the great pleasure of any spectator who has a spark of true humanity left in him.

The picture is so rich in humanity that you can look at it from many an angle and find matter worthy of comment. The hero, played by Bernard Thornton, is a poet living in a garret with manuscripts all over his room, any one of which (if the publishers only weren't so flat-headed) is worth a mint. Frances Crowley, who wrote the story, plainly knows a lot about it, too, and also where a poet can pick up a ten-spot occasionally. The picture is rich in matter along this line.

On the other side of the plot, on this side not quite so well filled out but rich enough, is the heroine, played by June Caprice, worth about four millions and trying to give it all away. Her uncle and guardian is the judge, played by George Bunny (son of the famous John Bunny of happy memory), whose smile, generally, and whose flabbergasted look at impudence are "full of dealings with the world." He had once given the poet thirty days for jumping his board bill and the dreamer forgot it. He is put up to asking the judge to back him financially. That is how the boy gets into the house when June is giving one of her lavish parties. The judge remembers what the poet forgot, but the girl rescues him to recite for her guests. She takes his word about his greatness. Her guardian has rebuked her for spendthriftiness; now she will go into business by backing the great writer and make another million in royalties. He is so rich and so generous that he steps right over the judge's traps to show him up.

A thoroughly amusing love story develops in which the poet is semi-consciously master of the situation every time. It is one of the most pleasing pictures I've seen in a long time.

"THE KEYS OF THE RIGHTEOUS."

Paramount Subject Features Enid Bennett in Remarkable Story of Suppressed Love and Regeneration.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel offering has many unusual qualities, chief of which are excellent character work, a deep emotional strength and a consistent story which leads up to an extremely effective climax.

Enid Bennett, who is cast in the role of a girl of the woods, gives a remarkable study of repression, which later passes away under the dawning of love and affection for her worthless father. She first appears living in a cabin with her sick mother and tyrannical old grandfather, Peter Manning. George Nichols portrays the latter role, bringing out the intense religious bigotry of the old man, whose life was soured by the girl's father.

As the story opens, a young man named Tom Gale appears. He takes an immediate liking to the girl, Mary, but she knows nothing of true affection and at first repulses him. Later her drunken father appears and her dying mother makes the girl promise to love and protect him. She undertakes this task, which soon leads her to Ore City, where her father goes for more liquor.

The court scene, in which the girl and her father are on trial, after a wine room raid, is remarkably staged. It succeeds in bringing real feeling into situations that have frequently been handled with indifferent skill. The number, as a whole, is exceptional.

The story was written by C. Gardner Sullivan and directed by Jerome Storm. Others in the cast are Josef Swickard, Lydia Knott and Melbourne MacDowell.

O. HENRY SUBJECTS.

General Film Company Releases Two Numbers, Each of Which Is Clever Combination of Plot and Humor.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

"Compliments of the Season."

A SIMPLE situation, such as O. Henry liked best, with the action centering about a little girl, a rag doll, a dog and a hobo. The doll is stolen from the child by the dog and recovered by the hobo. That is all there is to the main situation, but around it has been constructed some of the rarest possible sentiment. The child, whose parents are wealthy, pines for the rag doll. Numerous doctors are called in, but cannot remedy her heart ache. A big reward is offered for the doll and when the hobo brings it another turn in the story crops up, for "Fuzzy" has a history and was once a suitor to the child's mother.

The number is handled with delicacy and skill. It makes an interesting addition to the series.

"The Thing's the Play."

This subject is from one of O. Henry's most ingenious stories. It is perhaps not quite so strong in film form as it was originally, but is nevertheless entertaining. It begins with a wedding, following which the groom and best man quarrel. Ten years later both appear, the groom having lost his memory. He is now a famous musician and once more falls in love with his wife. Neither recognizes the other until certain events transpire, which are unfolded in an amusing and satisfying manner. The subtitles carry considerable of the burlesque diction of the original story.

"CARMEN OF THE KLONDIKE."

Selexart Pictures, Inc., Presents a Gripping Seven-Reel Story of the Alaskan Goldfields.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is a dash and an engrossing quality to this tale of the Klondike that carries the interest through the entire seven reels without flagging. It probably does not differ greatly in plot from other stories of this region, but there is an excellent combination of continuous interest and delightful character portrayal which gives the subject strong appeal.

Clara Williams is cast in the name part, a role to which she lends unusual animation. Her dancing scenes at the "Golden Palace" in Prospect City are without doubt exceptional. Herschell Mayall as "Silk" McDonald, a brutal adventurer and gambler, is strong in his role, and Edward Coxen contributes some interesting work as the hero. The latter's make-up, indicating the varying changes in his health and fortunes, is particularly commendable.

Character work of the best type is continually in evidence in this offering. There are some good comedy flashes in the first scenes on shipboard, where the girl, Dorothy Harlan, afterward known as "Carmen," is shown on her way to join her lover in Prospect City. She meets "Silk"

McDonald on the boat and he immediately lays plans to win the girl. On the arrival of the vessel he plots with a woman friend and the latter drugs the hero and poses as "his woman." At first the scheme is a success and Dorothy takes up a career as a dancer, but later events bring the girl back to her rightful lover. There are several situations in this that may be deservedly called big scenes, notably the poker game, the stampede to the new gold fields and the fight in the rain storm. The latter is slightly prolonged, owing to its primitive brutality, and might be cut somewhat.

Monte M. Katterjohn wrote the story and continuity and the direction was in charge of Reginald Barker.

"THE TURN OF A CARD."

J. Warren Kerrigan Featured by Paralta Plays, Inc., in Excellent Production in Seven Reels, by Frederick Chapin.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE events which transpire in "The Turn of a Card" make a highly entertaining subject of the pleasant type. It has moments that are decidedly dramatic and yet the predominating note is one of enjoyable comedy. It is thoroughly workmanlike in construction and worth all of its seven reels.

J. Warren Kerrigan plays the hero. Mr. Kerrigan has had a fine schooling in screen work and seems born to such a role as the one he portrays here, that of Jimmy Montgomery Farrell. In this he appears as a young man who strikes oil in California, risks his gains against the gambler's luck of "Ace High" Burdette and wins the latter's Long Island home. Jimmy comes East to look the place over after the supposed suicide of Burdette. He finds the latter's daughter in charge. The girl mistakes Jummy for her new chauffeur, a part which the hero proceeds to carry out in a humorous way. It would be hard to devise better light comedy scenes than the ones in which the girl finds herself falling in love with the supposed chauffeur. The story moves on to a pleasing conclusion, in which Jimmy is charged with having tricked the girl's father out of the property. He offers to return his holdings to the girl, but the father appears unexpectedly and absolves Jimmy of all trickery and the love affair continues.

David M. Hartford gives a finished impersonation of "Ace High" Burdette, and Lois Wilson is delightfully attractive as the girl. Numerous minor characterizations are pleasing. Thomas J. Geraghty adapted the story for the screen and Oscar Apfel had charge of the direction.

"MORGAN'S RAIDERS."

Five-Reel Bluebird Production Features Violet Mersereau in Entertaining Story of Civil War Period.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

VIOLET MERSEREAU gives an interesting variation of her familiar role of the girl of the woods in this number. She is the daughter of a Kentucky mountaineer at outs with their more civilized relatives, and while her real name is Betsey Dawley, she is more commonly known as "The Wildcat." The cognomen fits her quite well, particularly in the scene where she suddenly drops from a tree and frightens a picnic party of her proud kin almost to death.

The story itself, written and directed by Bess Meredyth and Wilfred Lucas, contains much that is familiar to Civil War fiction so far as the main situations are concerned. But there are many amusing and some exciting special developments. The atmosphere surrounding the mountain regions where Colonel Morgan recruited his men, among whom is Betsey's father, is very well suggested. The girl, an ardent patriot of the confederacy and a good hater of what she terms the "damn Yankees," attends a midnight meeting of the raiders in boy's clothes. Desirous of doing something to aid the cause she rides away with a young dispatch bearer. When the latter is shot Betsey rides through the lines bearing the message to its destination. The scenes attending this feat are nicely pictured and full of action.

The later developments, in which Betsey aids her father to escape from captivity and then is herself saved from danger by the Union officer with whom she falls in love are of a less thrilling character, but still pleasing.

Barbara Gilroy, Edward Burns and Frank Holland are in the supporting cast.

Vitagraph Serial Keeps Up Its Thrilling Career—Nine Episodes Released.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE last five episodes of the Vitagraph serial, "Vengeance—and the Woman," find Black Jack, Red Johnson and Comanche Pete still making life a constant battle against sudden death and distruction for Henry Blake and his wife. The titles of these numbers will indicate something of the nature of the dangers they encounter in each episode. No. 5, "The Plunge of Destruction"; No. 6, "The Lure of Hate"; No. 7, "The Wolf Trap"; No. 8, "The Mountain of Devastation"; No. 9, "Buried Alive."

William Duncan continues to risk his neck in the leading role and to direct the efforts of the other actors to shorten their lives with the same skill he showed in the former serial of the untamed West, and is also remarkably successful in finding striking locations and in keeping everything and everybody on the jump. The physical endurance of Carol Holloway is only equalled by her nerve and daring.

"THE KNIFE."

Alice Brady Featured in Five-Part Screen Version of Eugene Walter's Unpleasant but Powerful Stage Play.

Review by Edward Weitzel.

IN "DAMAGED GOODS" the subject treated as propaganda is used in "The Knife" as the foundation of an unpleasant but powerful drama. Written for the stage by Eugene Walter, it has been turned into a screen play by Charles Maigne for Select Pictures and was directed by Robert G. Vignola. Alice Brady is featured as the heroine of the story, and does the best work of her screen experience. Regarded merely from an artistic standpoint, the first four parts constitute drama of an unusually gripping and skillfully devised nature. The last part has not only a decided drop in sustained interest but is badly constructed. The spectator is asked to believe that a young girl who has been drugged and outraged and who has no recollection of the affair would be allowed to run the chance of meeting the man who was responsible for the crime, in the office of her fiance, a celebrated physician, who knows that such an encounter may bring about the very thing he is trying to prevent.

Condensed into a few lines, the plot of "The Knife" tells of a physician who has made some remarkable discoveries in the treatment of general diseases. His affianced wife is trapped by two fake fortune tellers, a man and a woman, drugged and given over to one of the patrons of the place. The doctor learns where she is, rescues her with the aid of some friends, and then proceeds to punish the two who are responsible for the crime in a novel manner. The pair are kidnapped and taken to a hospital. There they are inoculated with the germs of syphilis. The doctor then administers his treatment, knowing that it will either kill or cure. The woman dies in the cause of science, but the man lives, and the physician has the satisfaction of learning that he has discovered a great boon to humanity. The girl meets the fortune teller when he is wheeled into the doctor's office at the hospital, and her terrible experience is brought back to her mind. She refuses at first to become the doctor's wife, but he wins her over at the finish.

From the time the girl enters the house of the fortune tellers until her rescue, "The Knife" is a remarkable example of tense and clean-cut drama. No space is wasted. When the doctor and his friends are ready to leave the house with the two trembling wretches and their victim, the director has ended the scene right there and has not shown the manner in which the three are removed from the place, carried down the steps and taken away.

The acting of Alice Brady's support is in keeping with the play's demands and the star's brilliant example. Frank Morgan as Doctor Manning, Crauford Kent as Billy Meredith, Helen Lackaye as Louise Meredith, Paul Doucet as Jimmy Bristol, Alice Hollister as Stella Hill, Edwards Davies as the District Attorney, Johnnie Walker as Hampton Gray and Frank Evans as Detective Ellis are all admirable. The photographer was H. L. Physioc.

"The Knife" is for the mature mind. In booking it in family moving picture theaters exhibitors will do well to consider carefully their class of patrons.

"UNDER SUSPICION."

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne Featured in a Society-Crook Drama.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

ADAPTED from Hugh Weir's story, "The Woolworth Diamonds," the Metro five-reel feature released February 4, "Under Suspicion," is hardly up to the standard of the recent productions in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne have appeared. It is a crook-newspaper-society drama.

Virginia Blake covers a society musicale for the Sentinal, and meets Gerry Simpson, a rich idler, who poses as a reporter. The jewels of the hostess are stolen, and Virginia obtains the only clew, a button torn from the burglar's coat by a pet monkey. Gerry falls violently in love with Virginia and gets a job on the Sentinal to make his bluff good. Everything is proceeding favorably when Virginia finds that the button is from Gerry's coat, and concludes he is guilty. She goes to Gerry's apartment for additional evidence. In the meantime another jewel robbery occurs, and on the return of Gerry's valet it develops that he, and not Gerry, is the thief, so everything ends happily.

Bushman as Gerry Simpson, and Beverly Bayne as Virginia Blake, the reporter, are congenially cast, and fill the requirements of their respective roles. Hugh Jeffey is satisfactory as the valet. The remaining members of the cast are hardly up to the Metro standard. The production was directed by William S. Davis, and while the settings are adequate, some of the scenes are not altogether convincing. A. S. Le Vino is responsible for the adaptation, and Rudolph C. Bergquist for the photography, which is excellent.

Comments

General Film Company.

THE THING'S THE PLAY, (General Film).—A two-reel O. Henry number based on the story of the woman whose husband twice falls in love with her. Ten years' absence and loss of memory intervene between the two affairs. The best man at the first wedding also complicates the situation, he also being in love with the wife. This is hardly as strong as the original story, but makes an entertaining subject. Mildred Manning, Jack Crosby and Rex Burnett are in the cast.

COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON (General Film).—A charming little story, based on one of O. Henry's tales. It concerns a rag doll, a mischievous dog which steals the same, a grief-stricken child, and a hobo, who recovers the doll. The hobo, known as "Fuzzy," has a history, having at one time been a suitor of the child's mother. The offering, which is in two reels, contains fine sentiment and much good humor. Herbert Prior, Betty Blythe and Aida Horton are in the cast.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

MORGAN'S RAIDERS (Bluebird).—A five-reel story of the Civil War period, written and directed by Bass Meredyth and Wilfred Lucas. Violet Mesereau plays the part of a mountain girl, the daughter of one of Colonel Morgan's men, who rides through the Union lines carrying a secret dispatch. This is good in atmosphere and tells an entertaining narrative. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

THE SONG OF SONGS (Artcraft, Feb. 11).—Elsie Ferguson plays the leading role in Sheldon's sensational plot that startled Broadway. This player takes much of the risque portion out of the action and pictures the downfall of a weak and passionless girl from innocence to the muck. For a longer notice see elsewhere in this issue.

ADAM AND SOME EVES (Klever Komedy, Feb. 11).—A rather amusing little skit in one reel, featuring Victor Moore and a bevy of girls. The hero is an aviator who lands unexpectedly in a town known as "Feminineville," where he is placed under arrest and prosecuted. There is a chase scene which is quite entertaining, though not particularly novel.

"KEYS OF THE RIGHTEOUS" (Paramount, Feb. 18).—A very finished and artistic five-reel offering with a strong climax, which features Enid Bennett. She plays the part of a woods girl, whose father is a drunkard and whose grandfather is a tyrant. A young man appears, with whom she falls in love, but the regeneration of her father is the leading motive of this superior subject. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

THE GUILTY MAN (Paramount).—Picture made from the A. H. Woods stage success. Acting is excellent and players carry the exciting situation with sincerity and ease. Direction is weak, but not weak enough to spoil the value of the offering. Stage work is good. For a longer notice see elsewhere in this issue.

Foursquare Pictures, Inc.

THE CAST-OFF (Foursquare).—This six-part picture was made by Thomas H. Ince and features Bessie Barriscale. The story was written by C. Gardner Sullivan. It tells of an actress who plans a revenge on a man and gives it up for the sake of his little son. The picture is interesting. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Fox Film Corporation.

THE HEART OF ROMANCE (Feb. 3).—Love story-comedy and one of the most pleasing pictures this reviewer has seen in a long time. Youth captured its own dreams and wise and kindly age looking on with amusement are the basis of it. It is rich in human things and is delightfully acted. June Caprice and Bernard Thornton have the leads.

JACK SPURLOCK, PRODIGAL (Feb. 10).—A George Walsh picture written by George Horace Lorimer. It is one of the laughter compelling kind and will be a winner or this reviewer misses his guess. The length is six reels and as most of it is true comedy it is an unusual picture. Dan Mason plays Spurlock Senior and adds much by his experience in comedy work. It can be boosted as a specially funny offering.

General Enterprises, Inc.

THE CRUCIBLE OF LIFE (General Enterprises, Inc.).—A seven-reel number, dealing with social life and the great war. It follows the fortunes of a poor girl who marries unhappily and becomes a governess in a Long Island home. She is suspected of theft and later joins the Red Cross, which takes her to France. Her lover follows and wins honors on the battlefield. The story moves slowly at first, but later contains numerous patriotic incidents of an inspiring sort. Grace D'Armond, Frank O'Connor and Jack Sherill are in the cast. Reviewed at length in last week's issue.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

THE WOMAN BETWEEN FRIENDS (Vitagraph, Feb. 11).—A five-part screen version of a story by Robert W. Chambers, this photoplay is an excellent piece of romance and is well acted by Alice Joyce, Marc McDermott and the entire cast. It is given a longer review on another page of this issue.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE BRIGHT LIGHTS DIMMED (Drew, Feb. 11).—A comedy in which Sidney Drew plays the principal role. This picture in which is staged a remarkably realistic drunk is reviewed elsewhere, and will be found very entertaining. It is based on the idea that on Broadway "out of sight" means "out of mind."

Mutual Film Corporation.

JILTED JANET (American, Feb. 11).—This is an enjoyable comedy drama in which the honors are shared by Margarita Fischer and Jack Mower. The story is novel and should hold spectators well. An extended review apears on another page, this issue.

JERRY'S STAR BOUT (Cub, July 19).—One of the Jerry comedies in which Jerry happens in at a demonstration given by a prize fighter. Jerry chosen as the heavyweight's opponent arms himself with some ammonia by means of which he wins the day. Only moderately entertaining.

Paralta Plays, Inc.

THE TURN OF A CARD (Paralta Plays, Inc.).—An excellent seven-reel production, from a story by Frederick Chapin. The narrative begins in the oil regions of California and moves East to an estate on Long Island. This has some good dramatic moments, but the prevailing note is one of high class comedy. It makes an unusually attractive subject. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE PRICE OF FOLLY (Pathe, Feb. 10).—This is a two-reel subject, with quite a strong story interest in spite of some crudities of development. It centers about a girl reared in the wilds by her father, in perfect innocence of the evils of life. An unscrupulous young man comes and lures her to the city. The father follows and shoots the young man, and the reel closes with the father a prisoner of the law. Ruth Roland, Frank Mayo and Daniel Gilfether play the leading parts. The number deals with familiar plot material, but has considerable strength.

THE EYES IN THE WALL (Pathe, Feb. 10).—Episode No. 12 of "The Hidden Hand."—This number opens with a series of scenes in which Dr. Scarley throws Doris over the bannister of a high stairway. Jack catches her below. Further excitement follows, when an attempt is made by the Hidden Hand and his men to recover the locket. Later Vera pretends to be ill and lures Doris into fresh peril. The subject is a typical one of the melodramatic sort.

ALONG THE RIVIERA (Pathe, Feb. 17).—A fine half-reel scenic, in tints, showing the picturesque coast line of the Mediterranean Sea, from Nice to Spezia. Beautiful architecture, orange and lemon groves, and a splendid environment for the towns and hamlets make this very attractive.

WATCHING FLOWERS BLOOM (Pathe, Feb. 17).—On same reel with above. This is also an attractive tinted subject, picturing as it does the actual blossoming of campanula, larkspur, petunias and other flowers. This is speeded up 15,000 times faster than the actual opening of the flowers.

THE INNER VOICE (Pathe, Feb. 17).—A five-reel Russian Art Film production, featuring that splendid dramatic actor, Ivan Mozukin. The subject is tragic in its development, picturing the career of a young university student in Moscow, who refuses to listen to his conscience. He embezzles funds, ruins his sweetheart and becomes an unscrupulous politician, finally dying of a broken heart, brought on by remorse. The subject is very strong in presentation. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

W. H. Productions.

THE BARGAIN (W. H. Productions).—A six-part William S. Hart picture, this is one of the most effective of his earlier photoplays. It was reviewed on page 1001 of last week's issue.

Select Pictures Corporation.

THE MARIONETTES (Select).—Clara Kimball Young is the star of this five-part screen version of Pierre Wolff's stage play of the same name. The story deals with French social life and is well produced. It was reviewed on page 1004 of last week's issue.

THE KNIFE (Select).—Alice Brady is starred in this five-part screen version of Eugene Walter's sensational drama. The subject is unpleasant but of great dramatic power. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

State Right Distributors, Inc.

CARMEN OF THE KLONDIKE (Selexart Pictures, Inc).—An exceptional seven-reel production, by Monte M. Katterjohn, telling a fascinating story of the Klondike gold fields. Excellent character work is in evidence throughout and there are some big situations that are unusual. The cast is headed by Clara Williams, Herschell Mayall and Edward Coxen. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Triangle Film Corporation.

THE CAPTAIN OF HIS SOUL (Triangle), Feb. 10.—Walt Whitman and Claire McDowell are the leading actors in this five-part photoplay which has a mysterious murder for its worn motive. It was reviewed on page 1004 of last week's issue.

REAL FOLKS (Feb. 10).—This is the $1,000 prize picture written by Mrs. Kate Coraley. It is full of kindly humor and is well played by a cast headed by J. Barney Sherry and Fritzi Ridgeway. A review was printed on page 1004 of last week's issue.

FROM TWO TO SIX (Triangle, Feb. 17).—One of Arthur Stringer's novels furnished the plot of this five-part picture. It is an up-to-date spy story, and Winifred Allen plays the leading part with skill. The production was supervised by Allan Dawn. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

KEITH OF THE BORDER (Triangle, Feb. 17).—This is a corking good drama. Roy Stewart is the star and does one of the best pieces of work of his screen career. The story was written by Randall Parrish and moves along with the steady pace of a thoroughbred. It is given a longer review on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

CURRENT EVENTS NO. 37 (Universal), Jan. 26.—Effects of "fuelless" Monday on Eastern industries, a wreck in the White mountains, views of the Serbian war mission, an aviator's adventures and numerous other entertaining subjects are pictured in this number.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 9 (Universal), Jan. 30.—A diversified number containing iceboating on the Hudson river, gathering balsam needles for the Red Cross, seizure of illegal liquor in North Carolina, sacrifice of wooded estates in Great Britain, and many other features.

A DEVIL WITH THE WIMMIN (Nestor), Feb. 11.—Max Asher reappears in this number, after a long absence from the Universal program. He plays the part of a flirtatious male, who gets in bad with a married man and his wife. The comedy, written by Craig Hutchinson, is only a fair one, the most amusing scenes being toward the last. The action is of the knockabout type.

NEW LOVE FOR OLD (Universal), Feb. 11.—A five-reel feature, written by Waldermar Young and produced by Elsie Jane Wilson. Ella Hall, Emory Johnson and Gretchen Lederer play the leading roles. The story concerns a young man who falls in love with a woman older than himself, who throws him over; he subsequently falls in love with a mountain girl who proves to be the first woman's sister. Bright photographic effects and excellent character touches are frequent in this. Reviewed at length on page 1002 of last week's issue.

THE BULLSEYE (Universal Special), Feb. 13.—"The Fearless One," episode No. 2. This brisk Western serial moves along with increasing interest. Cody, the foreman, played by Eddie Polo, is taken forcibly from a passenger train by Sweeney's gang of sheepmen, while bringing Cora Clayton home. He makes a sensational escape after fighting the entire gang hand-to-hand. He leaps from a cliff to a tall tree, which bends to the ground. This feat is a remarkable one. Later both he and Cora are made captives by the gang, after Mr. Clayton has been shot. The suspense is well maintained.

PEARLS AND GIRLS (L-KO), Feb. 13.—A two-reel comic, featuring Hughie Mack, Eva Novak and others. This is a knockabout number, with no special plot interest, but containing a number of funny moments. Hughie plays the part of an office boy, in love with his employer's daughter. A stolen necklace, a masquerade ball and chase scenes at the close are part of the ingredients. A fairly strong comic.

THE RAIN OF FIRE (Universal Special), Feb. 13.—Episode No. 12 of "The Mystery Ship." In this instalment the observer is treated to a closer inspection of the Man of Mystery and his headquarters on the mountain top. The spies learn of his location there and try to shoot him, but he dodges bullets and renders his ship invisible at will. He also showers them with a rain of electric sparks. The number has a weird touch and is very interesting. It closes with a plan for Gaston's friend Jack to join the spies as a ruse for learning their secrets.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 10 (Universal, Feb. 4).—A fifth avenue military parade heads this interesting collection of news subjects, which also includes Boy Scout activities, aviation instructions, a railroad wreck in Illinois, fuel troubles, scenes on the Italian front and Hy Mayer cartoons.

PAINTED LIPS (Universal Special, Feb. 4).—A five reel subject, written by Charles Kenyon, author of "Kindling." It presents a problem story, that of a girl who was innocent of wrong, but became entangled with a fast woman. One man plans to marry her off to his enemy, for purposes of revenge, but later, when he learns her innocence, falls in love with her himself. This is splendidly presented and makes altogether an unusual subject. Louise Lovely appears in the leading role. Reviewed at length in last week's issue.

BEACHES AND PEACHES (L. K. O., Feb. 20).—A two-reel knockabout comic, featuring Dave Morris and Gladys Varden. Dave plays a henpecked husband, who becomes entangled with a lady at the beach. Complications with the latter's husband and his own wife follow. Some of the business in this is quite amusing, but as a whole it is an offering of only average strength.

DESPERATE ODDS (Universal Special, Feb. 23).—Episode No. 3 of "The Bullseye." This instalment is crowded with swift, sensational episodes, including hand-to-hand battles, gun fighting and exciting riding scenes. There is almost too much action to keep a well-sustained dramatic effect, but the number contains much that is genuinely thrilling and there is no doubt of its holding power.

THE MYSTERY SHIP (No. 13, Universal Special, Feb. 23).—This number is full of incidents of an exciting nature, which bring the man of mystery into further action. The chief scenes are in Chinatown, where the phantom comes to the rescue of Betty, Jack and Gaston, when their lives are in immediate peril. The number closes with Ben Wilson, who plays Gaston, making a swing between roof tops on a rope attached to a high pole.

World Pictures.

BROKEN TIRES (World), Feb. 18.—June Elvidge, Montague Love and Arthur Ashley are all featured in this five-part photoplay. It is strongly melodramatic, and is given a longer review in last week's issue.

WHIMS OF SOCIETY (World, Feb. 11).—Ethel Clayton heads the cast of this five-part picture, which contrasts the social world with the workers and has a melodramatic ending. The interest is well sustained all through. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

BROKEN TIES.

William A. Brady Presents June Elvidge, Montagu Love and Arthur Ashley in Woodbridge Clapp's Ingeniously Intricate Story.

Cast.

Marcia Fleming.....June Elvidge
John Fleming.....Montagu Love
Arnold Curtis.....Arthur Ashley
Corinne La Force.....Pinna Nesbit
Mrs. Fleming.....Kate Lester
Henry Hasbrook.....Alec B. Francis
Mr. La Force.....Arthur Matthews
Mammy Liza.....Frances Miller

Directed by Arthur Ashley.

The Story: Retained to defend a personal friend upon a murder charge a brilliant lawyer finds he can save him only at the cost of his own wife's fair name, and the possible convicition of his own mother. Arnold Curtis is engaged to his uncle's ward, Corinne, but the uncle refuses his consent, knowing that the girl has black blood in her veins. Corinne kills him, but suspicion falls upon the nephew, who really had been dining with the lawyer's wife at a road house while her mother-in-law has sought her at Arnold's apartments, and finds, instead, the dead body of the uncle, coming under suspicion. Arnold confesses to save the woman, and this leads to the confession from the real culprit.

For the Program: Tangled threads lead to broken ties.

Shall a lawyer protect a client above his home?

Advertising Phrases: Lawyer must implicate own mother to free client of murder charge.

Taint of blood casts shadow over many lives.

Feature These Players: June Elvidge as Marcia.

Montagu Love as her husband.

Arthur Ashley as Arnold.

Stunt Suggestions: The ingenious complications of the story warrant an extra effort to get space for reading notices in the newspapers, and the problem presented might even lead to an editorial discussion on the duties of attorneys. Interest the Bar Association if you have one, or work more directly to local lawyers. Get the furnishing stores to display ties in the window with, "'Broken Ties' may be found at the (house and date), but for ties that last come in and look over our stock." Use stills to heighten interest. For other window work use, "Should a lawyer ruin his wife to save a client? See 'Broken Ties' at (house and date)." Or borrow some state reports from a lawyer friend and display with, "No case in these books is half as strange as that presented in 'Broken Ties' at (house and date)."

Advertising Aids: Two styles each one and three-sheets. One six-sheet. Free advance poster. Cuts and mats. Lobby displays 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Two-color heralds. Slides. Press sheet.

Released February 18.

FROM TWO TO SIX.

Triangle Presents Winifred Allen in a Story of German Spies and American Sweethearts, from the Story by Arthur Stringer.

Cast.

Alice Stevens.....Winifred Allen
Howard Skeele.....Earle Fox
John Stevens.....Forrest Robinson
Baron Kuno von Wiederholtz, Robert Fischer
Madame Elsa.....Margaret Greene
Richard Skeele.....Clarence Handyside
George Worthe.....Charles B. Wells
French Maid.....Madeline Marshall
House Detective.....Riley Hatch

Directed by Thomas F. Tracey.

The Story: The Baron von Wiederholtz, head of a coterie of German spies, seeks the plans of an anti-submarine device invented by John Stevens. One of his agents succeeds in obtaining the plans. Alice Stevens gives pursuit, and comes to the hotel where the baron is stopping. Meantime a pair of plotting parents are trying to force their children into marriage, but Howard Skeele has no idea of doing as his father says, and he doesn't. Instead he helps Alice get the plans, and then he marries Alice.

For the Program: German intrigue and Cupid's capers.

Love laughed at locks and smiled on fire escapes.

Advertising Phrases: German spy knocked out with cake of soap.

German spies and spicy romance.

Feature These Players: Winifred Allen as Alice.

Earle Fox as Howard.

Stunt Suggestions: For window work display a towel and a used cake of soap with a card, "To capture a German spy, wrap the soap in the towel and hit him on the head. See how it's done in 'From Two to Six' at (house and date)." For drug, drygoods and grocery stores a line can be added to the effect that the particular brand of soap forming the rest of the window display was the sort used. If not against the city ordinances chalk in large figures "226" on the sidewalks all over town. Do this for a couple of days before the showing, and keep up until the playing date. Then hook up with the same figures in the lobby over the display frames the day of showing.

Advertising Aids: Two styles one-sheets. One each three and six-sheets. Heralds in rotogravure. Slides. Lobby displays 11x14 (in sepia and colored) and 22x28. Press sheets. Electros and mats.

Released February 17.

THE BARGAIN.

W. H. Productions Presents William S. Hart as the Two-Gun Man in a Story of Gratitude That Ripens Into Love.

Cast Not Stated.

The Story: Sent to prison for another's crime, Jim Stokes becomes hardened and turns to a life of crime as the natural way. But he is wounded, and finds aid in the shack of Phil Brent, whose daughter, Nell, nurses Jim back to health. Jim determines to return the proceeds of his stage robbery and go straight, but before he can do so the sheriff hunts him down and arrests him. Waiting for the stage, the sheriff tries his luck at cards, and loses not only his own funds, but the money Jim stole. Jim bargains to hold up the outfit and get back the money if the sheriff will give him a chance to get over the border. The bargain is kept, and Jim starts a new life.

For the Program: A regular Hart-interest story.

When two wrongs made one right.

Advertising Phrases: A typical Hart story with a typical Ince cast.

Proved more honest than the sheriff.

Feature These Players: Hart as the two-gun man.

Clara Williams as Nell.

Stunt Suggestions: The box office suggestion from the plan book will be a strong lobby attractor. You might also work the same scheme with the doorman. For street work parade a two-gun man with a sign on his back, "I am Bill Hart, the two-gun man. See me in 'The Bargain' at (house and date)." Use a mask to do away with make-up.

Advertising Aids: Two designs each in one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Heralds. Two slides. Newspaper advertisements one to three columns wide. Portrait cuts. Lobby displays 8x10 and 11x14. One 22x28 portrait.

THE GRAIN OF DUST.

The Crest Pictures Corporation Presents Lillian Walker in an All-Star Production of David Graham Phillips' Powerful Novel.

Cast.

Dorothy.....Lillian Walker
Frederick Norman.....Ramsey Wallace
James Galloway.....Ralph Delmore
William Tetlow.....James O'Neil
Josephine Burroughs.....Edith Day
John Hallowell.....Richard Wangerman

Directed by Harry Revier.

The Story: Dorothy Hallowell, daughter of a visionary chemist, obtains employment in the offices of a firm of Wall street lawyers. The junior partner is a self-centered man whose dominant traits have made him a power in the Street. But he feels the charm of Dorothy's innocence, and lays careful siege to her favors. A jealous clerk betrays him to the family of his fiancee, and they come to remonstrate just in time to save Dorothy from Norman's advances. But he follows her home, and even the presence of her dead father is no bar to his demands, but she repulses him, and drink claims the man who put ambition before honest love.

For the Program: A famous novel unfolded upon the screen.

A grain of dust may clog the mechanism of the universe.

Advertising Phrases: Placed ambition before love, and love destroyed ambition.

The grain of dust may become the boulder in the pathway of success.

Feature These Players: Lillian Walker ("Dimples") as Dorothy.

Ramsey Wallace as Norton.

Ralph Delmore as Galloway.

Stunt Suggestions: Glue a single grain of sand to a card with a magnifying glass adjusted above it, and letter the card, "This is only a grain of dust, but it might change the history of a nation. See Lillian Walker in a screen version of David Graham Phillips' 'A Grain of Dust' (house and date)." A micrometer might be used instead of the above with, "This will measure in thousandths of an inch, yet it can barely measure a grain of dust that might change the history of a nation, etc." A jewelry store might explain that a grain of dust will ruin a hundred dollar watch, and suggest repair work. Offer a prize for the most complete list of historic grains of dust as; "For want of a horseshoe a kingdom was lost." For a lobby card do your lettering in glue, and pounce on fine sand.

Advertising Aids: Three designs in one-sheets, two designs in three-sheets, one each six and 24-sheets. Heralds. Two slides. Lobby displays 8x10 and 11x14. Advertising and news cuts. Campaign book. Press sheet.

State rights.

HANDS DOWN.

Bluebird Presents Monroe Salisbury in E. J. Clawson's Story of a Gambler in Hearts and Cards, With Ruth Clifford and Rupert Julian.

Cast.

Stuyvesant.....W. H. Bainbridge
Hilda.....Ruth Clifford
Tom Flynn.....Rupert Julian
Dago Sam.....Monroe Salisbury
Marina.....Reta Pickering
Jack Dedlow.....Al Filson

Directed by Rupert Julian.

The Story: Only one man in the community believed in Dago Sam, and that was Tom Flynn. When Sam saw old man Stuyvesant shot and learned that his daughter, Hilda, was Tom Flynn's girl, he determined to protect her for the sake of the man who believed in him. But Hilda had no faith in him, and Marina, his own sweetheart, mistrusted him. Then Tom Flynn got the wrong idea, and Sam decided that he might as well have the game as the name. Hilda took faith in him, and it made a real man of Sam at last.

For the Program: The dog who was given a bad name, but escaped hanging.

Woman's faith proves salvation of card-sharper.

Advertising Phrases: Good Samaritan is misunderstood by all.

Hands down brought Dago Sam's head up.

Feature These Players: Monroe Salisbury as Dago Sam.

Ruth Clifford as Hilda.

Rupert Julian as Tom.

Stunt Suggestions: For a window attractor paste up a good poker hand on a card and a "hand" of five paper hearts. Letter below, "Dago Sam was a gambler in both hearts and cards, and he always had an ace up his sleeve in either game. But when Hilda trusted him it was 'Hands Down' for him, and it made a man of him. A Bluebird for enjoyment. (House and date.)" For a lobby banner cut out nine large "fists," and letter these with the title, using as a banner. If you can, make smaller fists to go at the top of the lobby display frames for this title.

Advertising Aids: One style each one, three and six-sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black and white lobby displays. Slide. Player cuts in three sizes. Scene cuts one and two columns wide. Heralds. Press sheet.

Released February 11.

HIDDEN PEARLS.

Paramount Presents Sessue Hayakawa as the Hereditary King of a South Sea Island in an Original Story by Beulah Marie Dix.

Cast.

Tom Garvin.....Sessue Hayakawa
Tahona.....Margaret Loomis
John Garvin.....Theodore Roberts
Kore Leon.....James Cruze
Teariki.....Noah Berry
Capt. Todd.....Clarence Celdert
Enid Benton.....Florence Vidor
Robert Garvin.....Jack Holt
Senator Benton.....Gustav Seyffertitz

The Story: Though the son of a South Sea island princess and an American trader, Tom Garvin feels himself to be wholly American, for he was raised and educated in the United States, and has never visited the island of which he is the hereditary king. But love for an American girl brings him to realize his poverty, and his uncle tells him of the secret treasure of pearls the island holds. He goes to assert his rights, but is caught trying to escape with the treasure, and is released by a native girl who loves him. He returns to the States, but the call of his own is too strong upon him, and he goes back to rule his people.

For the Program: Sessue Hayakawa in a new type of character.

Island king feels the call of his own people.

Advertising Phrases: Monstrous pearls prove kingly treasure.

Sessue Hayakawa adopts another nationality.

Feature These Players: Sessue Hayakawa as the king.

Theodore Roberts as his uncle.

Margaret Loomis as the native girl.

Stunt Suggestions: Get the local jewelers to collaborate with you in a display of pearls, either loose or mounted with a card. "These pearls are of unusual value, but they cannot compare with the secret treasure of the Hidden Pearls in Sessue Hayakawa's new play at (house and date)." A somewhat similar stunt can be worked with novelty stores on imitation pearls. Even the ten-cent stores can be worked in on this. Rubber stamp ten white marbles with any identifying stamp or merely write your initials. Announce that you will hide ten "pearls" in the vicinity of your house, each pearl good for two tickets. Work this with the newspaper and you can equal the Raffles stunt for interest. Do the work late the night before and use such hiding places as on top of a low sign, the corner of a doorway and the like.

Advertising Aids: Two styles each, one, three and six-sheets. Rotogravure. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Ten cuts each of star and production, one to three columns wide. Slides. Advertising layout mats. Press book.

JILTED JANET.

Mutual Presents Margarita Fischer in Elizabeth Mahoney's Sparkling Comedy of a Borrowed Palace That Became a Home.

Cast.

Janet Barnes.....Margarita Fischer
Jules Graham.....Jack Mower
Pratt Barnes.....David Howard
Suzette Sparks.....Golda Madden
Ernest Morgan.....Edward Peil
Mercedes .....Jean Robbins
Leon .....Fred Smith

Directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

The Story: Janet, jilted by Ernest Morgan, in favor of a wealthy girl, sends him a picture postcard of a millionaire's mansion with an inquiry as to how he likes her new home. She is horrified when she gets word that Morgan and his bride will honeymoon with her; but the owner of the mansion is absent, the caretakers are old friends, and she manages to make good her bluff and gain revenge on her fickle admirer by showing his wife his inconstancy. But when she finds that the new butler is really the millionaire, things take on a different aspect.

For the Program: A charming comedy of a boomerang revenge.

Forget your cares in Janet's troubles.

Advertising Phrases: Headed fickle admirer toward divorce court as she started for the altar.

Never spend your honeymoon with the girl you jilted.

Feature These Players: Margarita Fischer as Janet.

Jack Mower as Graham.

Stunt Suggestions: Get local postcards of some handsome house, or even a public building that could pass for a home. Write on the face: "How do you like our new home? Janet." Fasten to cards reading, "You wouldn't think a little thing like that would get a girl in trouble, but in Jilted Janet her old admirer brought his bride to spend their honeymoon, and Janet had to make good. See how she did it at (house and date)." Similiar postcards might be used for mystery advertisements, sending them out about three days before the title is advertised. On a flat surface make the outline of a large heart with putty. Grease the board and fill the mould with plaster of paris, stained bright red. When it hardens remove and glue to a frame card, then crack with a hammer. Letter it, "Janet's heart was not broken because she was jilted. It broke her heart when Ernest Morgan called her bluff and brought his wife to spend their honeymoon with her. That's what broke her heart." Use this as the basis of a lobby display with the stills.

Advertising Aids: One design each, one, three and six-sheets. Unmounted banner. Half-column cut. Cuts and mats, one to three-columns. Program cover cut, 4x4. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Slides. Press sheet.

KEITH OF THE BORDER.

Triangle Presents Roy Stewart in Randall Parrish's Stirring Story of the Hunt for the Border Wolves.

Cast.

Jack Keith.....Roy Stewart
Hope Waite } .....Josie Sedgwick
Christie McClaire }
Black Bart.....Norbert Cills
Bill Scott.....Pete Morrison
General Waite.....Wm. Ellingford

Directed by Cliff Smith.

The Story: Jack Keith, a Texas Ranger, has been assigned the task of running down the Border Wolves, whose raids have terrorized the country. The Wolves cunningly succeed in fastening upon Keith murders committed by themselves, and he has to break jail to escape a lynching. Then he rescues a maiden in distress and she proves to be a mascot, for he not only wins her sister for his wife, but in doing so he exterminates the Wolves.

For the Program: A stirring tale of law in a lawless country.

The Northwest Mounted always gets his man.

The Texas Ranger always gets his men.

NAME.....
ADDRESS.....

Advertising Phrases: Man-hunter breaks jail to escape lynching.

The Raiders of the Rio Grande.

Feature These Players: Roy Stewart as Keith.

Josie Sedgwick as the twin sisters.

Norbert Cills as Black Bart.

Stunt Suggestions: For a window display place a large revolver on a little heap of sand with a card, "Sand and a six-gun, that was Keith—Keith of the Border. See him at (house and date)." For the lobby use a card, "Lynching bee tonight," in large letters with the explanation, "Jack Keith, of the Texas Rangers, was sent after the Border Wolves. They fastened their own crimes upon him and he had to break jail to escape a lynching in Keith of the Border, showing tonight."

Advertising Aids: Two styles one-sheets, one each three and six-sheets. Heralds in rotogravure. Slides. Lobby displays, 11x14 (choice of sepia or tint) and 22x28. Electros and mats. Press sheets.

THE KEYS OF THE RIGHTEOUS.

Thomas H. Ince Presents Enid Bennett to Paramount Patrons in a Story of the Woods of Wisconsin.

Cast.

Mary Manning.....Enid Bennett
Tom Gale.....Earl Rodney
Peter Manning.....George Nichols
Paul Manning.....Joseph Swickard
John Manning.....Carl Forms
Sarah Ann Watts.....Gertrude Claire
Mary's Mother.....Lydia Knott
Judge Michael Burke,
Melbourne MacDowell

The Story: Mary Manning lives in the Wisconsin woods with her stern old grandfather, an uncle, and her mother who, for eighteen years has daily looked for the return of her husband. Into the drab life comes Tom Gale, who gives the girl her first taste of pleasure. The return of her father is too great a shock for the mother, who dies, and Mary feels that she must give her life to her father, but the renunciation serves only to bring greater happiness at last.

For the Program: Debut of Enid Bennett on the Paramount program.

A new star for Paramount patrons.

Advertising Phrases: Shock of husband's return kills waiting wife.

Self-sacrifice brings great reward.

Feature These Players: Enid Bennett a well-liked Ince star.

Earl Rodney as the timber cruiser.

Stunt Suggestions: For a lobby display, string across the front huge pastèboard keys, lettered "Truth," "Faith," "Effort," "Hope," etc. Or hang them on a ring lettered, "The Keys of the Righteous" with "Showing today" on a bar across. Ask various clergymen to designate the keys of the righteous and display the replies in a lobby frame or use as the basis of a newspaper advertisement. Perhaps you can work the same idea in conjunction with the paper as a novelty scheme, starting it off by explaining that you have the play booked and do not know what the keys are, asking for aid.

Advertising Aids: Two styles each, one, three and six-sheets. Rotogravure. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Ten cuts each for star and production. Slides. Advertising layout mats. Press book.

LOADED DICE.

Pathe Presents Frank Keenan in the First of His Big, New Pathe Plays from the Popular Novel of the Same Title by Ellory H. Clarke.

Cast.

Richard Gordon.....Frank Keenan
Rose Ashton.....Florence Billings
Harry Palmer.....Guy Coombs
Ethel Mason.....Madeline Marshall

The Story: Staking everything upon the theory that there is no God and no life beyond the grave, Richard Gordon plays with loaded dice to make the most of now. He scorns to marry the woman he loves and uses her as a bait in a badger game that brings him the capital with which to declare in on a huge food profiteering venture. Not even murder is permitted to stand in the way of his success, and success comes beyond his wildest dreams, but in the end—he knows.

For the Program: A man with nerves of iron, muscles of steel and a heart of flint.
The man who could not see beyond the grave.

Advertising Phrases: Took a 50-50 chance there is no God—and lost.
Blackmail, intimidation, murder—these were his loaded dice.

Feature These Players: Frank Keenan as Gordon.
Guy Coombs as Palmer.

Stunt Suggestions: For a lobby display dress with cardboard dice. In spotting the dice remember that the opposite sides will always add up seven as 1-6, 2-5 and 3-4. With a little trouble you can make the dice of tissue paper and illuminate with incandescent globes. Try and interest the book stores and the library. For window work display a handful of ordinary dice before a card lettered "These are not loaded dice, but in the film production of Clark's well-known novel Loaded Dice at (house and date), Gordon's loaded dice were blackmail, murder, intimidation." Play up the last three words with a line to each.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six and one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and colors, and 22x28. Slide. One-column cuts. Campaign book.
Released Feb. 10.

PAINTED LIPS.

Universal Presents Louise Lovely in a Story of an Unusual Revenge, with an Unexpected Ending.

Cast.

Lou McTavish.....Louise Lovely
Captain McTavish.....Alfred Allen
Jim Douglass.....Lewis Cody
Andrew Solman.....Hector Dion
Mrs. Callahan.....Mrs. A. E. Witting
Mrs. Silver.....Beatrice Van
Rose.....Betty Schade

Directed by Edward LeSaint.

The Story: Lou McTavish had been strictly brought up by her sailor father, but when he was temporarily disabled, Rose suggested that she would help her make money, and took her to a despicable dive. The place was raided shortly after their arrival, but Lou is saved from the police by Jim Douglass, who plans to palm off upon an enemy this supposed dissolute but lovely woman. He has her trained to play the part, and Lou innocently thinks he is having her schooled for his own wedding. When she learns the truth her unexpected action precipitates a series of thrilling crises.

For the Program: The story of a man who could not read the signs of love aright.
A lovely girl who was made the medium of an unique revenge.

Advertising Phrases: Painted lips are not always the sign of an evil heart.
Love lay at the end of a terrible trail.

Feature These Players: Louise Lovely as Lou.
Lewis Cody as Jim.
Hector Dion as Sloman.

Stunt Suggestions: For street work paint an enormous pair of lips on a man, and send him out with a sign, "Painted lips are not always what they seem. See Louise Lovely at the (house and date) in the fascinating play, 'Painted Lips,' and see for yourself." Much the same text can be used with stills, as the attractor for a druggist's display of cosmetics, featuring lip sticks, and this can be worked with other stories carrying the same line. For the lobby paint a pair of lips on a frame card lettered, "Whose lips are these (lips here)? They are Louise Lovely's in 'Painted Lips,' now showing." The first line should be much larger than the explanation.

WEAVER OF DREAMS.

B. A. Rolfe Presents Viola Dana in the Five-Part Metro Wonder Play Adapted from Myrtle Reed's Novel of the Same Title.

Cast.

Judith Sylvester.....Viola Dana
Dr. Keith.....Clifford Bruce
Margery Gordon.....Mildred Davis
Martin Chandler.....Russell Simpson
Cynthia Bancroft.....Cora Drew
Aunt Hattie.....Vera Lewis

Directed by John H. Collins.

The Story: Judith Sylvester is engaged to Dr. Carter Keith, and they plan a charming "House of Hearts" that shall be their home, but Margery Gordon wins Keith's interest, and, though he seeks to hide his attachment, Judith discovers the change, and breaks the engagement. Margery and Keith are married at the same time as her guardian is united to the woman he thought he had lost, and brave little Judith goes back to a life of drudgery content in the borrowed philosophy that "Whatever is mine I shall have. Nothing that is truly mine can be taken from me. And what is not mine I do not want."

For the Program: The weaver of dreams wove her fabrics of fancy for others.
A dreamer of dreams and a doer of deeds.

Advertising Phrases: The dream that had a rude awakening.
City girl robs country benefactor of sweetheart and happiness.

Feature These Players: Viola Dana as Judith.
Clifford Bruce as the physician.
Mildred Davis as the city girl.

Stunt Suggestions: Build a "house of hearts" for the lobby. This may be a doll's house covered with red paper hearts or the heart suits from old packs of cards, or these may be merely pasted upon a framework of lath. Put colored paper over the windows, and illuminate from within. Have the roof translucent, and letter it, 'This is the House of Hearts described in Myrtle Reed's well known novel. It was to be the home of the 'Weaver of Dreams,' but she yielded her happiness to another. See the play, with Viola Dana. (Date.)" Similar houses may be used for window work, or a house merely outlined in cards, with a still for the centerpiece, and the roof lettered with the text above, adding the house name. Get a card into the library, and see the book stores.

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten minute novel for newspaper work. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts.

Released February 18.

THE LUST OF THE AGES.

The Crest Pictures Corporation Presents Lillian Walker in Aaron Hoffman's Vital Drama of Greed Written Especially for Her.

Cast Not Stated.

The Story: The lust for gold is the lust of the ages. It wrecks the life of Richard Craig and his young wife, who rears her daughter, Lois, to dread the curse of love of riches. At college her essay on "The Lust of the Ages" wins the literary prize, and through the interest of the faculty is published. Byron Masters becomes engaged to Lois, but she learns that he, too, is cursed with the desire for wealth, and gives him his ring and a copy of her book, which is visualized as he reads it. Through the splendid spectacle he comes to realize that love is more than wealth, and that happiness is to be preferred above power and influence.

For the Program: A story of the curse of greed.

A splendid spectacle and a gripping love drama.

Advertising Phrases: Golden shackles have bound mankind since Adam.

The drama that began with Creation.

Feature This Player: Miss Walker is the only name mentioned.

Stunt Suggestions: Try and hook up with the local savings bank on a campaign along the lines that while the lust of the ages is the lust for gold this does not mean provision for the future. Many banks will be willing to supply cards good for fifty cents or a dollar in starting a deposit, which you can use as souvenirs. Other banks might give free tickets to all who open accounts before the showing, or you can make the pass books of the bank good for a matinee admission. The bank will spend the money for the newspaper advertising in return for screen and lobby advertising. For teasers or snipes use, "What is 'The Lust of the Ages'?" You might interest some minister in this production for a preliminary sermon. You might also hook with the present war through reference to the invention of the young chemist.

Advertising Aids: Three designs in one-sheets, two three-sheets, one each six and 24-sheets. Heralds. Two slides. Lobby displays 8x10 and 11x14. Advertising and publicity cuts. Campaign book. Press sheet.

THE NATURAL LAW.

Charles H. France Presents Marguerite Courtot in the Six-Act Version of the Stage Success of the Same Title, with Howard Hall and George Larkin.

Cast.

Ruth Stanley.....Marguerite Courtot
Dr. Webster.....Howard Hall
Jack B. Bowling.....George Larkin
Judge White.....Jack Ellis
George Stanley.....Charles N. France
Mrs. Stanley.....Lila Blow
Fred Dolan.....Gordon Gray
Stella Forbush.....Leah Peck

The Story: Ruth Stanley is loved by two men. One is a champion athlete, the other an older man, a successful physician. The more experienced man cautions the girl against her impulses. The youth merely said, "I love you," and, obeying the natural law, she was swept into his arms. Much anguish follows the step, but the law has been learned too late.

For the Program: The natural law is the law of God.

A note of warning that may prevent the fatal step.

Advertising Phrases: Youth must find its mate.

The natural law is written on the heart of every man and woman.

Feature These Players: Marguerite Courtot as the girl.

Howard Hall as the physician.

George Larkin as the boy.

Stunt Suggestions: The best lobby display will be found in the frames to be had from the booker. Supplement these with the action stills. In the press work recall the fact that the stage version had an eight month's run on Broadway. Offer a small prize for the best phrase expressing the natural law. Adopt the phrase, "The play that warns from the Path of Tears," and use this for newspaper work and on window displays of stills.

Advertising Aids: Two styles each one and three-sheets. One style each six and 24-sheets. Lobby displays 8x10, 11x14, and 22x28. Two styles easel lobby frames 25x40 and two styles 30x40. Heralds. Slides. Press slip sheet.

NEW LOVE FOR OLD.

Universal Presents Ella Hall in Waldemar Young's Five-Part Story of a Man Who Loved and Lost and Loved Again.

Cast.

Kenneth Scott.....Emory Johnson
Marie Beauchamp.....Gretchen Lederer
Ben Sawyer.....Winter Hall
Daphne Sawyer.....Ella Hall
"Doc" Podden.....Harry Holden
Louis Bracchi.....E. A. Warren

Directed by Elsie Jane Wilson.

The Story: Kenneth Scott is disconsolate, for the charmer he had met at a White Mountain resort had turned him down cold. Doc Podden, itinerant physician and philosopher, finds him mourning by the roadside, and prescribes a rest cure in the household of Ben Sawyer, one of the "natives." The cure works, for he finds Daphne very interesting, but the other woman comes to him again; the proprietress of a new road house that has scandalized the village. The old love flames up, but dies away to burn no more.

For the Program: Off with the old love, on with the new.

The rest cure for a broken heart included a pretty girl.

Advertising Phrases: Found lost love was keeper of a roadhouse.

Battle with rival is preface to proposal.

Feature These Players: Ella Hall as Daphne.

Emory Johnson as Kenneth.

Stunt Suggestions: For a lobby flash use a washtub with fifteen or twenty heart shaped corks provided with wire loops. Use with a couple of short poles and lines with blunt hooks. Letter a card, "If you've lost your love there are plenty more to be caught. Fish out another, or see 'New Love for Old' for a better way." Do not offer prizes for certain numbers, as this will make the stunt a lottery and probably get you into trouble. For window work use large paper hearts torn apart and pasted on cards with a slight

There's a man you ought to know

He sells Theatre Supplies.
His place of business is not a one-night stand.
He is there to stay.
So he needs the same customers right along.
That's why he doesn't sell poor goods.
No matter how big the profit.
For he wants you to keep coming.
And you won't, unless he makes it worth your while.
He does that.
He can sell you anything.
From a carbon to a complete equipment.
And he stands back of all he sells.
Take projection Machines, for instance.
He could make two better profits.
One at the time of sale.
Another on repair parts.
But he prefers smaller direct returns.
And more of the kind your good-will brings.
So he sells the Simplex, and satisfaction.

New Orleans, La.—Meatless day reaches the Zoo, and like loyal Americans, Bill Pelican and his compatriots are satisfied with other foods.

In Italy.—"One aim—one front—one army is the motto of the Allies, and every route to the Piave line is filled with Allied troops going to reinforce Italy's army. Subtitles: A short rest. Italian engineers repairing a bridge across the Adige. A company of Bersaglier cyclists, famous for its remarkable bravery in the Isonzo battle.

Los Angeles, Cal.—With the coal famine at its height, Western oil-men strive to relieve many plants with a plentiful supply of oil for fuel. Subtitles: An octopus pump operating seventeen wells in different parts of the field. Loading the tank cars; 275,000 barrels of oil are shipped every month from Los Angeles alone. Speeding for the East. The oil trains are permitted to run on passenger train schedule.

Washington, D. C.—The eyes of the Nation are focussed on the capitol as Congressmen urge the formation of a War Cabinet to speed-up America's military activities.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Good news! A "coalless" winter this, but at last—no "iceless" summer. The Mononghela is but one of the many streams frozen by this arctic weather. Subtitles: Old-fashioned paddle-boats churn their way through the ice. The ice gorge in the Kenawha River, W. Va., wrecks many boats.

With the Stars and Stripes "Over There."—(Official U. S. War Films. Released by the Committee on Public Information through the American Red Cross.) Subtitles: Leaving the quaint French villages where they are billeted, Pershing's rookies prepare for the eventful day—at the front. On the vast "battlefield" just behind the firing line, they receive their final lessons. The physical needs for modern fighting are developed with appropriate exercises. And then—most important of all—over the top for Victory's charge. The minute men of 1918. Official War Pictures of the activities of the U. S. Army in France will be shown regularly in the Hearst-Pathe News.

HEARST-PATHE NEWS NO. 10 (Jan. 30).

Camp Upton, N. Y.—Drawn from all walks of life into the great crucible of military activity, the drafted men emerge a hardy, healthy lot.

Washington, D. C.—Congresswoman Jeanette Rankin receives the banner that flew from the "House" flagstaff as the suffrage bill was passed.

New York City.—Park Commissioner Grell starts his term auspiciously; one of his first official acts is to christen three cub lions.

San Juan, Cuba.—Training on the historic hill where Colonel Roosevelt made his famous charge, U. S. marines strive to emulate the Rough Riders of '98. Subtitles: The old and the new in striking contrast—one Lewis gun is worth more than 100 of the Spanish. Cuba has joined the Allies, and huge crowds take part in rechristening German-named streets.

London, England.—No trenches, shells, or guns! Tommie squeezes as much fun as he can into his furlough, with tobogganing his favorite.

Paul City, Cal.—Although the Government is exerting all its efforts on the war abroad, it is not neglecting its Mexican border patrol. Subtitles: These horsemen keep a watchful eye all along the line for bandits and draft slackers. Over the top of the sand dunes.

Men of the Hour.—"500,000 men in France soon, 1,500,000 more ready this year," is Secretary Baker's answer to attacks of inefficiency made against the war department.

Colusa, Cal.—Thousands of wild geese and ducks migrating to warmer climates for the winter months raise havoc with the rice crops. Subtitles: Farmers welcome hunters to help them get rid of the "pest." Sunrise in the Golden West.

Newark, N. J.—Crush the foe within our gates! Fire after fire has hampered America's war preparations, and now the torch is set to the Government shipyards here. Subtitles: $1,000,000 damage is done and work on the 150 ships to be built here is stopped. Digging a trench around the yards to check the fire from spreading to the submarine plant.

"Advertising Aids for Busy Managers"

You will find it most helpful in advertising your show.

Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.

The Management of this Theatre desires the co-operation of its patrons in providing good clean entertainment.
We want no "legalized" censorship of moving pictures

We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now! Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

Set of Nine Slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00

THE AUTOMATICKET POLICY FOR 1918

One of the greatest satisfactions in our business life is to hear so many exhibitors refer to us by such "pet terms" as "progressive," "leaders in their field," etc.

During 1918 we propose to live up to these expectations more strenuously than ever before.

We shall spare no efforts to deserve the patronage of exhibitors, improving constantly on our efforts in the past.

That this policy has been appreciated, is evidenced by our constantly growing patronage. It includes the largest circuits as well as medium and small houses.

It is evidenced by our busy factories in various parts of the country from which we ship our Automaticket Systems and tickets to exhibitors in this country and abroad.

The key note of our policy is to put the interest of the exhibitor FIRST. We know that is the best way to serve our own interest.

OF

Speer Alterno Carbons

Reports of exhibitors, projection experts, operators and patrons all acclaim that Speer "ALTERNO" Carbons have completely revolutionized alternating current conditions.

Hundreds of letters complimenting Speer "ALTERNO" Carbons in the highest terms are already in our files. The one appearing here relates the results obtained by an expert who has had several years' experience on A. C.

B. A. REED, Secretary
LOCAL 245 (M. P. M. O.)

International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada.

Salem, Mass., Jan. 29, 1918.

Speer Carbon Company,
St. Marys, Pa.

Gentlemen:

Having worked for several years on A.C. with all its shortcomings, what I feel like saying after giving "Alterno" carbons a good trial is that they are a revelation.

We use A. C. with compensarc and where the use of A.C. in the past has always been with a light of inferior quality regardless of amount used, we find that with "Alterno" carbons we get an even, steady light of remarkable quality without the former worries of noisy wandering and troublesome arcs.

Very truly yours,

(Signed.) B. A. REED.

Exhibitors face the task of keeping up their profits and attendance notwithstanding the high cost of releases, high rent and taxes.

The Butter-Kist Pop Corn Machine has actually solved the problem!

Not in one or two—not in a few score—but literally in hundreds of moving picture theaters all over America.

Butter-Kist requires no wheat—no sugar—appeals to all patriots now more than ever.

Cash in on our national advertising in the great publications like the Saturday Evening Post—cash in on the public sentiment that favors this pop corn confection in war time—cash in on the people who come to your theater eager and willing to buy this toasty flavored Butter-Kist.

Machine occupies but 26 by 32 inches floor space. Stands anywhere. Runs itself. Handsomely built. Beautifies any lobby or foyer.

BUTTER-KIST

POP CORN MACHINE

No other popcorn has Butter-Kist's toasty flavor. Brings people from blocks around. Increases attendance. Actual records prove this beyond a doubt.

Our liberal plan makes it easy for theater owners to get these profits.

Foreign Buyers

This old and well established concern, wishing to extend facilities to the foreign buyers in their relations with American Film Producers, has recently opened a special department for the purchasing and exporting of Moving Picture Films. Through this special department it will be possible for you, on a very reasonable basis, to purchase your films and other articles in the moving picture line to much better advantage than could be done directly by yourself.

For this very complete service, backed by our thorough knowledge of American conditions, you pay us only a commission.

Saving Owing to the fact that our purchases are very large, we can give to you the benefit of the lowest prices. We are holding out no profit for ourselves on the purchase prices, whatever we save is for our customers.

Satisfaction Our main object is to satisfy our customers in every possible way, not only to be able to save money for him, but to buy the best the market affords; and keep him posted regularly as to what is going on in the film industry as regards new productions.

Shipments In connection with the film department you will also have the advantages of our well operated shipping department, thus you are assured of the careful and proper handling of all goods, which means for you Prompt Delivery.

Confidence You will deal with a concern with unquestionable financial standing.

THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Coatesville, Pa.

Feb. 6th, 1918.

Dear Sir:

We have one of your Hallberg 30-70 generator sets, running on single-phase, 60 cycle, A. C. and delivering 50 amperes direct current at the arc. This apparatus has been giving perfect satisfaction for nearly two years now. It ran eighteen months before we happened to remember it had never been oiled or cleaned. And then it didn't really need either!!

Our original outfit was a 50-ampere mercury arc rectifier, ——— ——— ——— This appliance has stood, in perfect condition, as an emergency outfit since the installation of the "Hallberg"—with no emergency.

What arrangement could we make with you to exchange our rectifier for a duplicate generator set? We would like to have a duplicate installation, correctly put in. We would appreciate a satisfactory installation made by your office, and replacing our present arrangement.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) WALTER H. BURKE.

A Paramount Picture

"MADAME JEALOUSY" is new. Its like has never before been attempted in pictures. Because it is really new it will go like wild-fire in your town, just as it did in New York City.

A picture that mirrors every human emotion, that pierces to the quick the thin crust of conventionalities; a story so tremendous in its scope that it will jar the most jaded critic.

Portrayed by a star whose mastery of her art and whose dynamic personality spell success wherever the public finds her.

Does the public find Pauline Frederick in your house and are you reaping the harvest of success that invariably comes to the exhibitors who show her ever-successful pictures?

A series of dramatic film stories of America in the making.
Written, directed and produced by Benjamin Chapin

A Paramount Series

AN audience of eight million learned from last week's issue of the Saturday Evening Post what "The Son of Democracy" is and why they should see it.

No one who saw the "ad." will miss the photoplay.

The Saturday Evening Post is only one of many national magazines being used to make this picture a mighty box-office attraction.

Every patron who is sent to you by those advertisements is good for ten "admissions," because "The Son of Democracy" is so built that each chapter not only is all-satisfying but leaves a hungry desire for the next one.

"THAT'S a downright good picture. It will get a pile of money," an exhibitor remarked at a trade showing of "The Song of Songs."

Of course it will. Success begets success and "The Song of Songs" was one of the greatest successes that ever thrilled the stage world.

The story of the ravishingly beautiful woman who trod the primrose maze of life brought blasé Broadway to its feet and packed the Eltinge Theatre for months.

Reinforced by a star whose very personality means a full house, the picture is greater than the stage version.

LE'S EYE'

A GREAT AMERICAN SUBJECT BY ITS GREATEST AMERICAN AUTHORITY

"The Eagle's Eye" is a series of startling revelations, mercilessly condemning in their undeniable truth—proven by facts—of Imperial Germany's crimes against America.

This great serial will inspire America to an immensely stronger degree of loyalty and patriotism. Every exhibitor should avail himself of this wonderful, timely opportunity.

"THE EAGLE'S EYE" DOES NOT PICTURE THE HORRORS OF THE WORLD WAR

It is entirely about the enemy, those deported, those recalled and those STILL ON AMERICAN SOIL. It is a picturized justification for America's entry into the war for democracy and universal freedom.

It is a thrilling, smashing subject of international importance. There is nothing else available to exhibitors that can compare, in timeliness, in theme, in public interest, in appeal, in patriotism of subject and certain results with

The HOUSE of HATE

The best of them all!

The best stars —

PEARL WHITE and ANTONIO MORENO

The best feature production, with fine sets; with expert direction by George B. Seitz, who directed the tremendous success, "The Fatal Ring;" with a costly cast which includes Paul Clerget, J. H. Gilmour, John Webb Dillion and Peggy Shanor; and with a fascinating story of mystery and suspense by Arthur B. Reeve and Chas. A. Logue.

Pathe is proud of "The House of Hate." Without doubt it is the best serial that has ever been produced!

BURTON RICE

PATHÉ

Audiences demand action, thrills, mystery, and suspense in a serial—

"The HOUSE of HATE"

has them all

The "Hooded Terror," a sinister and menacing figure, who captivates the imagination and whose identity is veiled in mystery, dominates the story. His errand is Death; his motive is the control of the great Waldon War Works. He may be Pearl Waldon's uncle, her cousin or any one of a number of persons. Your audiences will find the question of his identity more fascinating than that of the masked man in "The Iron Claw."

From the first scene in the first episode to the last scene in the last "The HOUSE of HATE" is the most sensationally dramatic story ever put upon the screen !!!!!!!

PATHÉ

A Pathé Serial is a better box office attraction than any other picture for it means fifteen weeks of big business . . . . . Just reflect for a moment, Mr. Exhibitor, what you have to offer in . . .

The HOUSE of HATE

PEARL WHITE, admittedly the greatest of all box-office attractions;

ANTONIO MORENO, a feature star and a favorite everywhere;

A FASCINATING STORY, exciting to the last degree, written by the man who wrote "The Exploits of Elaine" and the "Craig Kennedy" stories—Arthur B. Reeve, and Chas. A. Logue;

SUPER-DIRECTION, by George B. Seitz, director of "The Fatal Ring";

FEATURE PRODUCTION, with the finest and costliest sets ever used in a serial!

No matter what the weather, past successes prove that Pearl White in "The HOUSE of HATE" will be the biggest . . . attraction of 1918!

PATHÉ

Ask the nearest PATHÉ Exchange to screen for you the first episodes. We wait your verdict with confidence—"The BEST SERIAL YET"

Mr. Exhibitor, you have the unimpeachable evidence offered by the phenomenal success of past PEARL WHITE SERIALS—"The Perils of Pauline," "The Exploits of Elaine," "The Iron Claw" and "The Fatal Ring." Nothing can be more certain than that will be the greatest success of them all!

It has the stars; it has the cast; it has the story; it has the skilled direction; and above all it has the Pathe experience.

TRIANGLE

More camouflage is done with printer's ink than by all the artists with the combined fighting forces in Europe.

Exhibitors are entitled to some proof other than "Say So"—other than camouflage, some tangible evidence that our expressions of good faith, fairness and equity are just exactly as represented.

Request any Branch Manager to show you the original of the following Triangle Order No. 395, dated July 5, 1917:

"In your future dealings with exhibitors, bear in mind that your interest in Triangle products has only started when you have sold the exhibitor and that our future success is in direct proportion to his success. That your active cooperation with him is essential to the end that the public may be brought to a full realization and appreciation of our product, you are specifically instructed to deal with no exhibitor except on a basis that will be profitable to him. You are to bear in mind that unless the exhibitor makes money, we cannot. You must at all times be guided by the fact that a contract is only profitable when it insures profit to both parties; that you are giving your greatest service to the Triangle when you give your greatest service to the exhibitor."

This order was issued shortly after the inception of the present organization, over the signature of the President of the Triangle Distributing Corporation. It was not intended for publication nor exhibition to exhibitors but was an early statement of what was expected from every Branch Manager. It is published at this time only as concrete proof that the Triangle Organization is not only spreading broadcast its policy of fairness toward exhibitors, but is insisting that these principles be carried into effect. The Triangle blazed the way to equity and fairness as it blazed the way for the "No Tax to Exhibitors" policy, and it will continue to blaze along these same lines as often as occasion requires.

Little Talks With Foreign Buyers

By PAUL H. CROMELIN

NUMBER ONE

The two big things in purchasing American film for the foreign market are (a) to know WHAT to buy and (b) at WHAT PRICE to buy it. Knowledge of the American film field as related to the foreign market does not come in a day—or in a year. The market you are buying IN and the market you are buying FOR must, each of them, be at your finger tips. It takes organization to acquire the information you must have. Inter-Ocean has taken top place as a purchaser of foreign films in the American market because it possesses the best organization of its kind in the motion picture business to-day. We know the exact needs of theatres in Paris, France—and in Hong Kong, China. We know precisely what films are manufactured from month to month in the United States THAT FILL THE NEEDS OF THE PARIS EXHIBITOR—and his Hong Kong brother! In short, we never guess, we go by actual knowledge. Mr. Foreign Buyer, isn't THAT fact worth something TO YOU? Oughtn't you get your American buying down to an absolute system—Inter-Ocean System? It has never failed a foreign buyer yet! Don't you feel that Inter-Ocean's claims to your American-purchasing-business are worth investigation? Drop us a line for further facts TO-DAY.

"We Operate Everywhere"

Goldwyn Pictures

Our Business Proves Goldwyn Has Kept Its Promises!

IN the very beginning—one year ago—Goldwyn said to the exhibitors of America:

"In Goldwyn Pictures we will maintain a higher average of dramatic and technical excellence than you will be able to find in the productions of any other organization. You can therefore use Goldwyn as the basis in building a quality reputation for your theatre."

We have kept this pledge.

And we also said in the beginning: "Goldwyn will give you bigger productions at your regular rental prices than you have ever received before from any other organization."

We kept THIS promise by giving all Goldwyn contract customers Mary Garden in "Thais"—a box-office record-breaker. We are keeping this promise a second time by giving you Mary Garden in "The Splendid Sinner"—an even bigger attraction than "Thais."

But the best proof of Goldwyn's value is found in the fact that every important first-run exhibitor in North America who began showing Goldwyn Pictures last September IS STILL SHOWING THEM because they are popular and return a box-office profit.

More than 4,000 other exhibitors have followed the lead of America's biggest showmen and are now contract customers of Goldwyn.

The Foreign Market

as a rule is left out of consideration when a subject is selected for production in America. Formerly the cost of production left such a big margin of profit—and the foreign field gave so small a return in proportion—

knew so little about the foreign market, that he has been slow to grasp its importance.

Do you realize that many of the great American productions exported by us, have more than made up the cost of production? Not every picture can do it, because the subject selected would not go in some fields, but every one could show a profit if the customs and tastes of the people in the foreign market were taken into consideration. That is where we come in.

We want the best possible productions that can be adapted to the use of our customers in foreign countries. We will be glad to give you the benefit of our service and knowledge to this end.

Facts and Comments

AS between Uncle Sam's soldiers at the various military cantonments and his prisoners in the Federal prison at Atlanta the prisoners have the best of it when it comes to motion pictures. Under the present arrangements the Y. M. C. A. has the monopoly of showing all the junk it can beg or buy at junk prices at the cantonments and that is the best the soldiers are allowed to see. But at the Atlanta prison all of the very latest productions are shown to the various malefactors confined there, furnished by the film exchanges of Atlanta. The pictures shown include practically all of the Fairbanks and Hart releases, the Burton Holmes travelogues, "Intolerance," and Pathe Weeklies. Arbuckle, Sennett and Fox comedies are prime favorites. Of course all of this is free to the inmates of the Atlanta prison, but the soldiers seem unable to get anything like them for love or money, thanks to the thrifty policy of the Y. M. C. A.

Regarding the above mentioned situation there is promise that something will be done to correct conditions. Elsewhere in this issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD a news item tells of the appointment of a special committee by Raymond B. Fosdick, with P. A. Powers as chairman, to co-operate with the Commission on Training Camp Activities of which Mr. Fosdick is chairman, the purpose being to provide up-to-date pictures at the various military training camps. The membership of this new committee includes some of our most representative picture men who, it is reasonable to believe, will be able to correct the present disgraceful situation. Mr. Fosdick is to be congratulated upon the selection of Mr. Powers as chairman of the committee; the job of cleaning up will appeal to Pat and he will make it thorough when he gets started.

UPON the subject of the assistance given to the Government by the moving picture interests the MOVING PICTURE WORLD is in receipt of a letter from the chairman of the New York State committee in charge of the "Four-Minute-Men," which will be appreciated by moving picture theater managers generally. This is what he says:

> We would appreciate it very much if you could arrange to have published in the "Moving Picture World" our appreciation of the hearty cooperation which the motion picture theater managers have extended to us in the work of the Four-Minute-Men. It would be impossible for us to do what we are doing unless we had the aid of this patriotic body of citizens. Through them the Four-Minute-Men are able to give the Government's message to an average of 24,000 people a night in New York City. This is something which the motion picture theater managers may well be proud of, as their cooperation is of the greatest assistance to the Government.
> Sincerely yours,
> JAMES C. AUCHINCLOSE,
> Chairman New York State.

It should be gratifying to theater managers that by doing so little they have assisted on accomplishing so much.

OUR Washington correspondent intimates that the persistence of certain exhibitors in rushing down to Washington and talking to Congressmen and Senators about amendments to the tax law as affecting the exhibitor is likely to get the whole business in "dutch." If any suggestions are to be given Congress on the subject of taxation those suggestions should come from some authoritative source in the trade after the differences of opinion in the trade have been threshed out and a definite policy determined upon. When this has been done something concrete will have been devised to present to our Federal lawmakers and the trade will stand a chance of getting an even break if changes in the existing law are to be made.

Remember that "too many cooks spoil the broth." We are suffering from just that sort of thing right now. MOVING PICTURE WORLD readers will readily recall how Ochs and Varner and Brady all went to Washington, each with a different idea of how the law should be framed, and after the shouting was over, Mr. Kitchen put it over all of them with a perfectly good alibi that the picturemen were not in accord and didn't know what they wanted, so he gave them what he thought was good for them. Such a situation should not be allowed to occur again. But it certainly will if the exhibitors and others in the trade do not quit butting in on the game.

Business Deductions

By Sam Spedon

THERE is a whole lot of quiet work being done by those who are not shouting about it. The Sunday opening question which is of so much concern to many exhibitors throughout the country is being looked after wisely and carefully. There are two cases on the calendar to be brought up before the Court of Appeals in New York State this spring, which are being looked after and given the proper attention. When these are disposed of, then other steps will be taken to provide for the question of Sunday opening. Don't think for a moment that censorship and possible additional taxes on the industry are forgotten by the National Association. Its officers have their ears to the ground, listening for their coming and making preparations for their reception. The same can be said of many exhibitor organizations in all parts of the country.

Too Many Cooks.

The trouble in the past has been there were too many cooks spoiling the broth. Too many champions anxious to rush into the limelight and shout from the house what they and the industry were going to do to defeat and slay the hydra headed monsters that threatened to destroy the industry so they spilled the whole kettle of beans and made a mess of it and others had to clean it up. Too many prolific letter writers who were eager to rush into print and see their names emblazoned in the pages of the press, ambitious to lead the procession, they walked right into the hands of the enemy and put everybody in dutch.

Hasten Slowly.

There is an old Latin proverb, "festina lente," "hasten slowly." It is better to be once sure than twice sorry. All branches of the industry are realizing that they have been going too fast, haphazard like. The present crisis and lull have made everybody more thoughtful, given them time to think, brought them to their senses. The whole industry is proceeding more cautiously and rationally; a sign of improvement and greater stability.

More Human Like.

We notice a better spirit shown between exhibitors and producers. The exhibitors are getting the idea of persecution and oppression out of their minds. They are finding out they are big enough to take care of their own interests, and by doing so they are commanding the respect of the manufacturers, receiving better treatment and getting more attention. They are burying the hammer and hatchet and getting more human and businesslike.

Good and Better in Store.

At a large meeting of metropolitan exhibitors last week all of them, with no exception, were enthusiastic over their previous heatless Monday's box office receipts. "Turned them away," was the general answer to the question: "How did you do yesterday?" Many said business was better now than it had been in many months. We mention metropolitan because without doing so, we would make it appear that this kind of business prevailed throughout the entire country. We have reports from salesmen in rural districts where conditions were not so good, but this was caused by cold weather and coal shortage and not by any indisposition on the part of the people to attend the theaters if these deficiencies did not exist. To convince you, we quote a report from Madison, Wisconsin: "Business is some better and think things will soon be normal. Janesville theaters are closed on account of smallpox. Beloit and Evansville, no coal."

How's Business?

A great many "readers" of a trade paper give the advertising pages the "once over" and let it go at that. This may be done for business reasons or through mere curiosity. In either case they are judging the book by the cover and lose the story. If those who are sufficiently interested in the industry would take time to read their trade paper they would not have to ask the question: "How's business?" If they would read our contents page first they can always turn to the subject or subjects that most concern them. For instance, on the contents page we will find "Picture Theaters Projected." From these columns we get an idea of the activities, new theaters being built, and the alterations and enlargements being made in others. It is a simple mental process to deduct from these reports what the future of the business will be and present activities of it. So on, all the way through. If people would read their trade paper carefully and thoroughly they could draw their own conclusions. They would not have to ask, "How's business?" A great many people are like the ostrich, they bury their heads in the sand and shout: "There ain't no industry. Everything is going to the bad."

Vaudeville Only in Spots.

We have recently been asked: "Do you think motion pictures are becoming secondary to vaudeville?" Most emphatically, "No!" We have looked into this subject and find by actual observations that only in certain spots or localities is vaudeville being used in connection with pictures. These localities are small manufacturing communities or cities where they have no vaudeville houses and in such places they only have two or three combined shows a week. In purely residential communities vaudeville is not welcomed in conjunction with pictures. As an evidence of this, take Washington, D. C., and many other cities of like character. Motion pictures are an aid to vaudeville, but will never be secondary. The standard and quality of motion pictures today are sufficient in themselves to attract and entertain any audience, particularly where there is a choice.

Exit Heatless Monday

HEATLESS Monday has been chucked in the discard by the Fuel Administrator. We can now go back to our usual schedule—a picture show every day. While it has been admitted by the Fuel Man that the "chilly Monday" was a failure as a coal saver it has served to press upon our minds that there is a war in progress in which we are interested and that it is up to all of us to make an effort to save something. Reports from many exhibitors are to the effect that the coal saving campaign has had but little effect upon the gross receipts; that is something to be thankful for. It should not be forgotten that the Fuel Administrator reserves the right to make such further orders for coal saving in future as the circumstances demand.

Heat is not the only thing that eats up coal. Light and even ice in summer represent used and possibly a waste of fuel. Economies are necessary to victory, national victory first, and, second, victory for the right side of our bank account.

Adapting the Classics

By Robert C. McElravy

A WRITER named Paul West has been having some interesting adventures as a scenario writer and screen adapter. He was requested not long since by one of the big producing companies to adapt Charlotte Brontë's "Jane Eyre," a task which he undertook and describes amusingly in an article which appeared in the New York Sun. "The average 'standard,'" he says, in the course of this article, "when it is stript of dialogue, word painting and style hypnotism, presents a pretty crude and unconvincing plot." Speaking of "Jane Eyre" in particular, he says:

It made its author famous; it has always been considered a "standard." I had read it years ago and remembered it fairly clearly. The heroine was a persecuted, lovable thing; the hero a suffering, noble gentleman. To be sure, with a wife living he tried to marry the heroine bigamously, but the circumstances, as I recalled them, justified his action, and the heroine nobly forgave him. A little later the wife was providentially removed, and hero and heroine entered into the connubial bliss which they deserved.

In re-reading the book I actually had to gasp at the story. The hero was a criminally inclined cad, whose unlawful act could not be justified by any of the author's specious arguments, which covered page after page; the heroine was a fool and so talkative that I had no sympathy for her; the "mystery" of the book was so simple and foolish; in fact, the story was wrong from beginning to end when I stript it and examined it for screen purposes.

But the producers and the star wanted to do it, so I did it into a "scenario." I changed the story. Not that I thought myself a better author than the one who wrote it, but because I knew that to try to convince an audience that a man was justified legally and morally in marrying a girl when he knew his wife was alive would be hopeless. And to try to make them believe that the girl was a reasoning human being when she couldn't solve a "mystery" that was poked in her face all the time would not do either.

The movie does not argue nor preach, nor can it deceive with false cues or dress up with fancy verbiage. It presents its plots as a series of connected pictures that tell a story and try to be interesting. To the printed book or play, in which every device can be used to groom a plot that is knock-kneed and bald, it is merciless. A plot is like a woman; you can dress a woman up, paint her face and pad her where she needs padding, and she will get by. That is what an author can do to a plot in a book or on the stage, but the movie strips that plot of its clothing and cosmetics.

The writer of this article had the pleasure of seeing "Woman and Wife," under which title Mr. West's modernized version of "Jane Eyre" was issued. The story as he arranged it had powerful moments and was a commendable production in many respects. Alice Brady was as good a type as perhaps could have been chosen for the heroine, and her opportunities for character portrayal were such that she seemed like a living embodiment of Jane Eyre. But the story itself was not "Jane Eyre" and it was greatly to the credit of both Mr. West and the producers that no such claim was made for it. The character of Rochester was the merest shadow of the original, and if he was "a criminally inclined cad" as Charlotte Brontë painted him, he was certainly the finished article when Mr. West got through with him.

Rochester is undoubtedly the important character of this novel. The whole story centers about his love for the pretty governess, and his determination to marry her while his hopelessly insane wife still lives. Charlotte Brontë put in many pages in depicting the noble character of Rochester and the moral struggle he passed through before deciding to take this step. She succeeded in making of him not an ordinary man but an exceptional man, and what was more she succeeded in justifying his action with her readers.

A screen adapter, seeking to win the sympathies of observers for Rochester, would have to go about it in exactly the same way Charlotte Brontë did. He would have to demonstrate by special action in pictures, instead of words, the high character of the hero; he would have to bring out on the screen exactly the same moral struggle and the extenuating circumstances of the case.

Surely this is not a task beyond the province of moving pictures! Such situations have been handled repeatedly, and with conviction, in the films. Mr. West, in his adaptation of another subject with a much lighter plot, "The Studio Girl," accomplished several things just as difficult. He had here a situation so daring that it approached the risque, but it was presented with a charm that overcame any possible objections. And it was all in excellent character.

We think in the case of "Jane Eyre" Mr. West fell a victim to the scenario writer's creed of action. When in doubt, put in more action! That is the usual method, and it occurs to us that it is generally a bad one. Development of the characters is more important to a story like "Jane Eyre" than additional action. Bringing in the activities of the insane wife and the scheming brother-in-law in no way changed the original situation. All of the additional action brought in by these characters in no way altered Rochester's problem. The thing that was needed, if Mr. West really wanted to follow the original story, was to devise simple scenes and situations that would arouse sufficient sympathy for Rochester to support him in his determination to marry Jane. A profound question such as he was facing was not to be helped by more plot complications.

The classics are novels that have won the approval of the world. Every character in them is a special creation, differing essentially from other characters. Any unnecessary change in them, on the stage or on the screen, is immediately resented by a multitude of people who have read and loved the originals. And when an adapter speaks of "stripping and examining" a story for screen purposes, we think he has made an error at the very start. To strip an individual like Rochester of his special characteristics, is to leave him simply an ordinary man. What the adapter has done is to throw Rochester into the waste basket and supplant him with some actor who carries out Rochester's actions without any excuse or justification.

Almost any story has an odd look in skeletonized form, representing as it does merely the action of the characters without the special motives governing them. A large part of an author's business, as we have always understood it, is to dress up an unusual or ridiculous series of incidents and make them look plausible. This can only be accomplished through the medium of carefully developed characters. The plot and characters are both departures from the normal; otherwise there would be small use of telling the story.

Instead of more plot action in screen adaptations, it is surprising how little is required when the characters are right. A few flashes of real character work will sometimes lift a tame story into the class of good entertainment. But makeup and costuming will not alone create character on the screen, any more than mere description will do it in a novel. The character must be given special revealing action of some sort.

A classic such as "Jane Eyre" is practically proof against effective individual criticism. To say that the story was wrong when stript and examined for screen purposes, is not to condemn the story so much as it is the method itself. It may be first necessary to strip and examine the book, but the characters should then be re-created by use of pictures and subtitles, just as the author did it by the sole use of words. It can be done and has been done with surprising success, sometimes with a stronger effect than was achieved in the original. Whether it can be done easily is something else; just as one novel may have been more difficult to write than another.

But Mr. West is no novice in these things; we have that brilliant little comedy, "The Studio Girl," and his entertaining series of "Office Boy" stories as proof to the contrary. He knows the twists and turns of humorous character thoroughly. If "Jane Eyre" had been a comedy instead of an austere, half-tragic story, fascinating and at the same time slightly repellent, our guess is that he would have made the most of it. As it is, he seems to have been out of sympathy with this type of novel. It is difficult to resist the feeling that he has underrated not only Charlotte Brontë's performance in writing it, but his own abilities as an adapter also.

Rollo's Papa

By Edward Weitzel.

FORTUNATELY, the present generation knows next to nothing of that arch little prig by the name of Rollo, who was created some fifty years ago by the good Mr. Abbott, that the youth of the land might have an inspiring example of the perfect child, and endeavor to emulate the complete list of virtues possessed by the young gentleman. It is doubtful if there has ever been a character in juvenile fiction more thoroughly dispised by the healthy minded of all ages. The fault, however, was not Rollo's; Rollo's papa was the one to blame. The boy was endowed with an insatiable appetite for full instruction on every subject that came to his notice, and his father showed a most commendable disposition to supply his offspring with the desired information, but always assumed such a superior air toward the matter under discussion that Rollo quickly acquired the same point of view and took to looking down on everything and everybody from the lofty height of his own intellectual pre-eminence. But there was one thing Rollo's papa did not teach his son, and that was, contempt for his ancestors. Neither did he address these words to him on his twelfth birthday: "You know it all now, my son; henceforth, there is nothing new for you to learn."

The art of the screen is now twelve years of age. It has had not one, but many instructors. Some have been too severe; others too indulgent. Some have been so unwise as to commit the error of judgment avoided by the sire of Rollo. All those who have the photoplay truly at heart will make use of every means of advancing its future, and will acknowledge its imperfections as well as extol its manifest good qualities.

Whatever the amount of depression in the moving picture business, there is no denying that such a condition now exists. The reports from California, and also here in the East, tell of companies curtailing production and cutting down operating expenses of all kinds. Much of this should be laid to the war; but that does not explain why several moving picture enterprises that were leaders in the industry less than five years ago had either gone out of business or had been following a policy of retrenchment before the United States entered the present conflict.

The first thing that should be recognized is that the product of the photoplay industry is solely for amusement purposes and subject to the laws governing all classes of entertainment. It requires a knowledge of what is termed broadly showmanship. Specifically, showmanship is knowing how to shape any form of entertainment so that it will appeal to an entire body of spectators, a problem which the stage has been studying ever since the old Greek dramatists were formulating the laws of the drama, that they might fill their theaters and send the audiences away convinced they had seen "a bully good show." The experience of over twenty centuries is offered to the photoplay, the legitimate descendant of the drama in all its early forms. Is it wisdom on the part of the screen to turn its back on such an opportunity, just because the source of information is its rival, the stage?

There is another important fact that dominates all kinds of plays—they possess certain elements over which their makers have no control. Every manufacturer of screen dramas is aware that he cannot turn out moving pictures in the way shoes are made. The author of his last success may be employed to write the script and the best obtainable director and cast engaged and given every aid that money and experience can suggest, and not until the public has sat in judgment on the product will he know whether he has a money-maker or a failure.

All plays are divided into three classes; those that please the majority of a body of spectators, those that satisfy half of the spectators, and those that disappoint the most of the spectators. Only showmanship puts a photoplay in the first mentioned class. It was the lack of showmanship that closed the doors of the defunct concerns once in the moving picture business. And it is showmanship that brings the long lines of people to the box-offices of the Broadway picture houses; and also accounts for the fact that tickets must be purchased in advance for at least a dozen worthy stage performances on the same thoroughfare. Booth Tarkington's wholly admirable "Seventeen" turned away hundreds of disappointed men and women of culture and descernment on its second night in New York and has played to capacity ever since. The cause of such a result should interest every one engaged in the amusement business, screen as well as stage.

Unsolved problems of production and distribution are important factors in present conditions, but certain pictures are paying good returns on their cost, just as are certain stage plays, in spite of the war tax and the general decline in the amusement world—a pursuit that is always the first to be affected when the public feels the necessity for retrenchment. Such a condition makes it the more imperative to learn the secret of a successful photoplay's drawing power. Novelty is no longer a merit of the picture. Those who really advance the screen study every means of improving the showmanship (or technic, if you prefer the word), of the photoplay, and do not hesitate to take as many leaves as possible out of the book of experience written by a rival, even when that rival is a blood relation, who can also profit by an exchange of courtesies with a fellow art—a state of affairs that should not prompt resentment but mutual respect.

MISS PICKFORD TO AID IN NEW WAR WORK.

Mary Pickford has been appointed by Mrs. Otheman Stevens, of Los Angeles, originator and director of the salvage department of the Red Cross, to the post of publicity bureau chairman for the coast and, when as it is now planned, the movement becomes national, she will remain in that capacity for the entire country.

No money is collected by the Salvage Bureau, only literally "junk." This is turned in and the money derived is utilized for the maintenance of the great body of mercy. From Los Angeles City alone the income from the salvage department under Mrs. Stevens has amounted to $1,200 a month.

Would Repeal Censorship Laws in Maryland

Legislative Committees Listen to Arguments of Speakers for Industry—Outlook Considered Favorable

ON THURSDAY, February 14 at Annapolis, Md., a hearing was given the moving picture exhibitors of Baltimore, officials of the Maryland Exhibitor's League, men nationally prominent in the motion picture industry and others interested in the repeal of the drastic censorship law which has been in effect in Maryland for nearly two years by the judiciary committee of the House and the judicial proceedings committee of the Senate, in joint session. The bill to repeal the censor law of Maryland was introduced in the House by Delegate Delaplaine of Frederick county a short time ago.

Much interest was shown by the members of both committees when the forceful arguments relative to the uselessness of censorship were made and many enlightening points were brought forth to aid the cause. The principal speakers from Baltimore at this meeting were President Frank A. Hornig of the Maryland Exhibitors' League, Secretary L. A. De Hoff, General Counsel J. Louis Rome and E. C. Sandell. Delegate Connelly of Baltimore City, chairman of the house committee, presided.

Miss Mary Gray Peck, a member of the Motion Picture Commission of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was the principal speaker. Miss Peck has spent several years in an investigation of the censorship proposition throughout the country and her views on the subject are interesting and enlightening. A woman of unusual intelligence she has delved deep into the intricacies of censorship and the legislative committee listened to her remarks with keenest interest.

Miss Peck maintained that there is no way to improve the standards of taste affecting a growing art from without. "Art," she said, "will improve only from within and cannot be bettered by heckling, hampering influences from without."

Speaking of the more conspicuous evils of censorship she cited the instance of the refusal of the censor board of Ohio to permit "The Birth of a Nation," probably the most popular picture of the time, to be shown there. With hundreds of thousands of persons interested in this film the people of Ohio had to go out of their state to see it.

Miss Peck pointed out that most moving pictures are not bad enough for the so-called "worst" people and not good enough for the so-called "best" people. Between these classes, she said, is the greater class of reasonable people of sound judgment who are moderate in their views and who deplore the attempts of extremists to alter existing conditions to meet their own views. She said that the National Board of Review carefully reviews every picture produced so that films are censored practically before they are out of the hands of the producers, and that when they have met the approval of this organization and are sent out to be exhibited they are under the police powers of the states.

Censor boards, said Miss Peck, constitute a third class of censorship which is trying to do what the others cannot do and is an intolerant nuisance both to the motion picture industry and to the people.

Much Thought Given to Children's Programs.

J. Louis Rome, counsel to the Exhibitors' League of Maryland, introduced W. D. McGuire, of New York, secretary of the National Board of Review, as the first speaker for the moving picture men. Mr. McGuire described the work of the board, which makes a thorough but reasonable and sensible review of the work of the producers. The work of review is divided among committees which order eliminations when they are needed. Appeal may be taken from the decision of the committees to the board of directors of the National Board which meets weekly in New York, but if the board decides that the review committee's ruling is reasonable and proper there is no further appeal, and unless the producer makes the elimination ordered he severs his connection with the National Board. On the committees of the National Board of Review are men and women of prominence who must attend the review sessions regularly or their names are stricken from the rolls and others substituted.

More than 150 sub-committees of the National Board throughout the country are at work upon special programs of moving pictures for young people. Morning and afternoon performances with programs of this sort have been given in many communities with unusual success. Parents are thus encouraged to feel their own responsibility in this connection and they will see that their children attend the performances which are arranged for them rather than the others which are intended for adult consumption, Mr. McGuire pointed out.

He also showed what a great loss would result to the motion picture industry if all performances were based on what is good for a child to see. He said that a vast amount of literature would thus be made unavailable for motion picture production and that the public would suffer from this loss.

The National Board is taking special steps for the welfare of the soldiers in camps and cantonments by arrangements that preclude the possibility of improper pictures being shown in the houses in or near these places. Mr. McGuire said that the producing companies are always anxious to conform to public opinion and are constantly and consistently responsive to the wishes of the people.

At the conclusion of Mr. McGuire's address one of the members of the committee wanted to know if all pictures were reviewed by the National Board. Mr. McGuire explained that all films except those known as educational films were reviewed and of these synopses were furnished the board.

Senator Frick asked on what ground the picture men considered abolition of censorship justified and Mr. McGuire replied on the ground that it is an unnecessary duplication of the work of the Board of Review and an unnecessary expense.

The question was then raised as to whether exhibitors could appeal from the decision of the Maryland censors, and this was answered by Delegate Bryant, who said that when an elimination was ordered by one member of the board an appeal could be taken to the two other members.

The real situation that exists in the Maryland Board of Motion Picture Censors today is this: Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison is the guiding spirit of the board. William F. Stone, one of the other members appointed by Governor Harrington, is dead, and no successor has been named. Charles E. Harper, president of the board, is not particularly active, hence there can be no appeal to two members of the board from the decisions of one of the others because there are only two members of the board.

Frank A. Hornig, president of the Executive League of Maryland, spoke following the address of Mr. McGuire. Mr. Hornig caused the faces of some members of the committee to spread in broad smiles when he told of how a picture called "The Squealer" was passed without elimination by Mrs. Harrison and when returned shortly afterward under a new title, "Double-Crossed," many eliminations were ordered.

Hornig Quotes President Wilson.

Mr. Hornig cited another instance of the vagaries of censorship in Maryland in regard to the picture "Daughters of Destiny." Eliminations from this film were ordered by Mrs. Harrison, he said, and when he showed it privately to a group of citizens of Baltimore there was not an objection to it from them. The group included several clergymen. W. H. Baughman, who was one of the group, wrote to Mr. Hornig later to the effect that he saw nothing objectionable in the film, which he declared was tame compared to many shown every day in Baltimore. Mr. Baughman is headmaster at the McDonogh School.

Mr. Hornig quoted President Wilson, who went on record two years ago at Shadow Lawn, N. J., as opposed to censorship of motion pictures. Mr. Hornig explained that the cost to the exhibitor of motion pictures at this time is several times as much as it was two years ago and said that censorship was adding to the burdens of the exhibitor who is already paying state and federal taxes and government seating and reel taxes. Censorship, he declared, has driven many of the smaller film exchanges out of business.

He denied that the character of moving picture films has improved since the institution of censorship and said that no manager who wanted to stay in the business would put on pictures of a questionable character.

Theodore Mitchell, personal representative of D. W. Griffith, was the next to speak. Mr. Mitchell brought out the difference in taste and standards of various communities and told of the impossibility of reconciling them or regulating under censorship motion pictures to suit them all He declared censorship unfairly hampers and hinders the work, and that out of 600,000 scenes an average of less than 19,000 are eliminated.

Mr. Rome defended the patriotism of the exhibitors which had been attacked in a letter to the legislators and told of how Secretary McAdoo had said that if it were not for the co-operation of the moving picture exhibitors the success of the Liberty Loans would have been in doubt. The movie houses not only aided the Liberty Loan, but are also co-operating in the War Saving Stamp campaign and many other patriotic movements.

Mr. Rome exhibited a letter from a clergyman asserting that censorship is a failure, impossible and impracticable and a joke.

Miss Peck was the last speaker and at the conclusion of the hearing it was announced that another hearing would be held on Friday, February 22.

The following exhibitors from Baltimore attended the hearing: Walter Pacey, Garden theater; Milton Caplan, Clover; Louis A. De Hoff, New theater; E. C. Sandel, Lord Calvert; Frank Durkee, Palace, Colonial and others; Arthur B. Price, Rialto and Mount Royal; E. B. McCurdy, Eureka and Lafayette; Isaac Berman, Berman's theater; Frank Hornig, Horn and Royal theaters; J. Louis Rome, Baltimore and Broadway; Louis Schlichter, Edmondson and Bridge; W. Schanze, Schanze's; Paul Emmart, West End; W. E. Stumpf, Goodtime; F. L. Spitzer, Imperial, Brunswick, Md., and Jack S. Connolly, who is managing the campaign.

Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison, of the censor board, was present at the hearing, and others who represented the interests in Baltimore opposed to the repeal of the censor law included the Rev. Thomas J. Wheeler, heading the committee sent by the Holy Name Society; Mrs. Charles E. Elliott, representing the Children's Playground Association, and one priest from Baltimore, who is understood to have represented only the people of his own church or a certain portion of it.

In an interview with Frank A. Hornig, president of the Maryland Exhibitors' League, shortly after the hearing at Annapolis had taken place, he was enthusiastic in his hope that the repeal bill would go through and thinks the chances are favorable. J. M. S.

Miriam Cooper Returns to Screen

MIRIAM COOPER, who retired from motion picture acting in the latter part of 1917, has re-entered the world of the screen, and will be seen as the wife in the William Fox photodrama "Woman and the Law." Miss Cooper enjoys the distinction of having portrayed characters in the largest productions. After being featured in "Betrayed," some six months ago, she announced her retirement from film activities.

Miriam Cooper.

Miss Cooper was born in Baltimore, and came to New York City when she was twelve years of age. She made her first picture in 1912, when she was a school girl. From the time of her debut she appeared continuously until the time of her retirement.

When R. A. Walsh began the selection of the cast for "Woman and the Law" he at once realized that the part of the wife required an actress of unusual subtlety and power. She must not only be capable of registering the tenderness of motherlove, but also possess the power of rising to the great emotional heights, which take place toward the end of the drama. He thought of Miss Cooper and at once entered into negotiations with her.

Mr. Walsh brought before her so strongly the opportunity which the role afforded that Miss Cooper consented. As a result her admirers will again have the pleasure of seeing her face on the screen, and in a role for which it is claimed she has great qualifications.

Charles C. Burr Is Promoted

CHARLES C. BURR, for the past year advertising manager of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, was appointed assistant general manager of the distributing department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation last week, according to an announcement issued by that company. Mr. Burr will in the future be closely associated with General Manager Al Lichtman in the execution of the latter's duties, which have materially increased during the past few months.

Mr. Burr became a member of the Paramount organization in the latter part of 1913 as exploitation manager of the South American Travel Series which Paramount produced and distributed. He came from the New York Times, where he was doing general promotion work for the business management of that newspaper.

Charles C. Burr.

Previous to that association Mr. Burr was connected with the McCall Company, where he conducted an extensive merchandising and promotion campaign that reached all over the country. He later became associated with the Allen Advertising Agency. Mr. Burr has also been a reporter on several Philadelphia newspapers.

At the conclusion of his work in the interests of the Paramount South American Travel Series Mr. Burr was placed in charge of the Paramount trade paper advertising. He later was made editor of the Paramount Pictographs, manufactured and distributed by Paramount, and after reorganizing this department returned to the advertising department and conducted the first national campaign in motion picture history. He has since conducted the Paramount and Artcraft trade advertising campaign.

When the Paramount and Artcraft national advertising campaign was inaugurated recently, Mr. Burr was associated with John C. Flinn, director of publicity and advertising for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in conducting the extensive work of merchandising this tremendous campaign.

Mr. Burr was a student at the University of Pennsylvania, in the class of 1911. One of the most popular members of the Famous Players-Lasky organization, Mr. Burr's promotion is the result of faithful work well done.

FULTON LEASES MANISTIQUE HOUSE.

C. H. Fulton, president and general manager of the Fulton Amusement Company, of Ironwood, Michigan, has taken a long term lease on the Rex theater, a six hundred-seat house situated at Manistique, Michigan.

Manistique is one of the most flourishing little cities of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This venture is the first of a contemplated chain of theaters by the Fulton Amusement Company.

Mr. Fulton has booked Metro Service with Drew Comedies, also all Metro Specials and specials of the Madison Film Exchange, also the new Chaplins and Petrovas from John H. Kunsky.

Mr. Fulton will open his new house March 15 with "On Trial" and will establish the policy of a special one day each week at advanced prices, using features the balance of the week.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Leave Well Enough Alone, Say Exhibitors

Suggestion from Washington That Nothing Will Be Gained By Opening Up Tax Matters in Congress.

BETTER leave well enough alone is the flat statement made this week to the Moving Picture World's Washington correspondent by several exhibitors discussing the movement which seems to be afoot to reopen the tax law controversy in Congress. It seems that there are a number of exhibitors who want the five-cent houses made subject to tax and other changes made in the existing law. If the writer reads the signs aright, it will be much better for these men to forget their endeavors, play the game a little closer at home, and "leave well enough alone."

There has been some little talk seeping through to Washington that the exhibitors involved believe it would be better if the Government printed the tickets of admission, including in the price thereof the amount of the tax assessed against the houses. It is hard to conceive how any of the exhibitors would benefit by such a scheme, according to its opponents, even should the Government consent to it.

Under the law as it now stands, the exhibitors collect the amount of the tax from the people who patronize the theaters. At the end of the month they make a return to the internal revenue collector. They have the use of this money during the month. If Uncle Sam prints the theater tickets, the exhibitor will have to stock up in advance and will have to produce the amount of the tax from his bank account.

Of course, it is necessary to have on hand a large number of pennies. There is the possibility of running out of coppers, and this happens very often. But it is not very difficult to get an additional supply. Suppose, on the other hand, the exhibitors of the country were not permitted to sell other than Government-printed tickets. What would happen if an exhibitor ran out of tickets, say, at 8.30, just before the second show, when the internal revenue office closed early in the afternoon, as is the habit with Government offices? Or, worse still, suppose the internal revenue office is located in another town.

Exhibitors come here with tales that the Government is losing millions of dollars through the way the tax is being collected. It looks as though some of these men were posing as their brothers' keeper. If any change comes it is more likely to be one involving the use of stamps rather than Government printed admission tickets, where it would be necessary to have many more denominations than now, different kinds of tickets, seat checks, and what not. If these exhibitors want to lick stamps all they need do is keep on agitating a change in the existing legislation.

Congress is in no mood to listen to some of the tales that are coming in. This does not apply only to the case in hand, for there are many folks who want this, that or the other changed for their especial benefit. Plenty of changes are in sight; some of them are going to prove surprises to interested parties. If instead of trying to secure changes in the tax law, some of the more peaceful exhibitors say, wholehearted efforts be devoted to knocking out censorship laws, all of the exhibitors would be placed in a better position.

In the suggestion that the Government print the tickets to be sold by the moving picture and other theaters, it is more than likely that Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo will see available in advance of the present date of payment a very large sum of money. This would be desirable to the Government, and if the problem is reopened it is feared Mr. McAdoo may heartily accord with this or a similar suggestion and the exhibitors will have their war taxes handed to them C. O. D. instead of thirty days hence, as is now the custom. And the prime movers of this scheme should not forget that there are many exhibitors who might find their pocketbooks badly depleted, merely paying for the tickets in advance, if it be necessary for them to buy large quantities at a time.

See Washington and Canadian Co-Operation

Exhibitors in Toronto Expect Clock Changing Will Follow Five Closed Mondays.

THESE be heatless, lightless, sightless and senseless days for exhibitors of Toronto, but in spite of the unusual conditions resulting from various orders and requests by the authorities, these are also business days for local moving picture men. The exhibitors have accepted the various orders with considerable grace, the only real uproar occurring when the three-day-a-week closing rumor overran the whole country. It is plain now that there is close co-operation between the governments at Washington and Ottawa and the exhibitors are able to anticipate many regulations in a general way. There is a strong feeling in local film circles that the next step by Washington will be to save daylight during the greater part of the year by moving all clocks forward one hour. If this move is taken in the States, as indicated by the latest despatches, then Canada will surely have to follow suit. This will only be another matter which will have more or less affect on the moving picture business. Toronto exhibitors are already trying to figure ways and means to offset any adverse influence which might arise from moving the clock hands.

Toronto streets now resemble those of London, England, on the night of a raid. All exterior illumination of buildings has been cut off, thousands of street lights have been shut off, absolutely no store window in the whole city is illumined, while candles and coal oil lamps have been revived. Not one electric light is allowed on the front or entrance to theaters, the only outside lighting permitted being that from exterior emergency exit lamps. Even the interior lobby illumination must be cut down. A number of the larger downtown theaters, including the Allen, Globe, Rialto, Red Mill and others have secured permission to use gas lamps with reflectors in order to light just the entrances. Some exhibitors asked to be permitted to use several exterior electric lights as a safeguard for patrons, but they were refused. The theaters are also prohibited from using electric lights behind glass signs which bear the names of current attractions. It is now impossible, of course, to depend upon any electric illumination to find any theatre while riding along in motor cars or trolleys. It is even sometimes difficult to find a theatre at all under present conditions, yet the theatres are handling good crowds.

Saturday, February 9, and Monday, February 11, were heatless holidays for all factories, office buildings, etc., with certain exceptions in both Ontario and Quebec, but the theaters were allowed to remain open. The result was that all moving picture theaters in Toronto did a wonderful business on both days. Practically every film theater in the city was filled to capacity three or four times on both days. This business, local exhibitors believed, would make up for losses which will be encountered through the closing of theaters for five successive Mondays starting February 18.

CLEVELAND MEN HEAR CO-OPERATIVE PLAN.

C. C. Pettijohn, Harry Rapf, of New York, and Herbert Brenon, producer, were in Cleveland on February 11 and appeared before the Exhibitors' League for the purpose of explaining their new co-operative picture-buying proposition and seeking the support of Cleveland exhibitors.

The meeting was held in the league rooms, after which adjournment was taken and the party went to a projection room, where "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," a Brenon production starring Forbes Robertson, was screened.

The exhibitors present were kindly disposed to the proposition and a committee which had been appointed several weeks ago to investigate the idea was advised to go into it deeper.

Must Pay For Heatless Day Films

Decision of Toronto Exchange Managers' Association Affects All Ontario Exhibitors.

IMPORTANT business sessions were held by the Exchange Managers' Association of Toronto on February 9, at the Regent Theater, and on February 12, at the King Edward Hotel, to deal with several important matters. The most important decision reached at the first session was the resolution requiring all exhibitors in the Ontario territory to pay for service on the five heatless Mondays starting February 18.

The members declared that exhibitors were getting their films at a lower price than ever before and the exchanges in Canada were paying both the Canadian and American war taxes, duty, etc. Therefore, the exhibitors would be called upon to pay for the service which they would have used on the heatless Mondays had the theaters remained open. There was a subsequent discussion as to whether the exhibitors and exchange managers should ask the Government to make Tuesdays instead of Mondays the weekly dark day or not, but no definite stage was reached in the question.

Officers of the association for the coming year were elected as follows: N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Regal Films, Limited, president; Merrick R. Nutting, formerly of Montreal, secretary; executive committee, J. Allen, of the Famous Players' Film Service, Limited, and Clair Hague, president and general manager of the Canadian Universal Film Company, Limited.

At the Saturday conference an invitation was extended to Max Finkelstein, the Winnipeg attorney, to address the local film men at the Tuesday evening gathering in the King Edward. Mr. Finkelstein has been aiding the Manitoba exhibitors in their fight against the Amusement War Tax in that Province. Thanks to his guidance and advice, exchange manager of Winnipeg have not had a cancellation of contract or a bad debt for more than three months. The success of the co-operation between Winnipeg exchange managers and with Mr. Finkelstein led the Toronto exchange managers to believe they could follow the example of their western confreres in their work. Mr. Ludwig, the Toronto lawyer who has handled a number of moving picture law cases in the past, was invited to be present also, so that he could hear the good word.

Exhibitors and Distributors at Odds

Rumors of Combination of Former in Pacific Northwest to Keep Down Film Rentals Make Exchanges Threaten to Show Own Product.

IT seems as if the exhibiting end of the industry in the Pacific Northwest is about to take a new turn. If the threats of exchangemen are carried out the relations between distributors are going to change considerably. The conditions that cause these sentiments are as follows:

For the past few months Pacific Northwest exchangemen have had it in their heads that a combination has been formed among Portland first-run exhibitors and certain of those in Seattle to cut film rentals to a ridiculously low figure. The members of the Pacific Northwest film board of trade have evidently compared notes, found the prices coming down and came to this conclusion.

That this feeling exists is evidenced by the actions of the exchange managers. Indications are that there are those among them who are preparing to go into the exhibition game when the occasions present themselves, in direct competition with exhibitors, in an effort to keep the rental prices up.

Most of the foregoing is deduced from recent activities in film circles, but there is one instance where the scheme has already been put into practice. A film was recently put up to first-run exhibitors, they declined to take it at the rental demanded, a showhouse was leased for one week by the distributor and the film presented by him to the public.

It is the frank opinion of the writer, from a fairly intimate knowledge of exhibiting conditions in Portland, that no combination exists among first-run Portland exhibitors that warrants distributors going into the exhibition game. Any attempt by exchangemen personally to show their films in competition with the legitimate moving picture man will prove this to be true. As a rule, Portland exhibitors are as willing as they ever were to pay an equitable price for film.

But they are not going to be oversold as they have been in the past. They are not going to permit themselves to be played one against the other for the distributors' sole benefit. They have learned their lesson. It took no exhibitors' meetings to come to this understanding. It took no discussions or agreements to bring it about. It was the repeated box office deficits, together with increased war expenses, which culminated a few months ago in a grand awakening to the situation and an unconcerted movement toward putting prices in Portland back to where they ought to be.

Joe Mogler, Exhibitor Leader

President of the St. Louis Branch of the League Has Done Much for That Organization.

JOSEPH MOGLER is a live-wire exhibitor and the president of the St. Louis Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. Joe was elected president of the League two years ago, and has occupied the chair of honor by unanimous agreement ever since. He is what might be termed an aggressive leader, as he is always on the look-out to protect and uphold the rights of the organization, even at the loss of his own time and finances. A short time ago, when the tax question brought up such dissension among the exhibitors, Mogler put an assistant in charge of his two theaters—the Mogler and Bremen—and at his own expense took a train to Washington and stayed there for two weeks, endeavoring to bring about an amicable understanding between the Government, exchanges and exhibitors.

Joe Mogler.

He took a prominent part in the recent lightless night order, and it was through his untiring efforts that the St. Louis Fuel Administration granted the motion picture houses to burn 150-watt exterior lights, which will mean a saving of thousands of dollars to the exhibitors of the city.

It was through data compiled by Mogler, showing the loss occasioned by the Missouri two-day closing order, that the Fuel Administration subsequently lifted the ban on movie houses on Mondays and Tuesdays.

Mogler has steadfastly refused to allow the League to pay any of the expenses incurred by him in the various activities in which he has participated, and is known to have given more time to the League in the last two years than he has to his own enterprises. In fact, he is an all-around good fellow—a credit to the trade.

Daylight Saving Will Go Through

Favorable Report Made to House on Measure to Conserve Fuel—Will Hurt Airdromes.

THE daylight saving plan, against which a large number of exhibitors have protested, is about to become a reality, as its sponsors claim that there is a real war need for it. The House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce has just made a favorable report upon the bill passed by the Senate on June 27, 1917, declaring that agitation in favor of what has come to be known quite generally as "daylight saving" is widespread throughout the United States.

The measure is designed to standardize time for the United States and to advance the standard time one hour, beginning in the spring. The Senate would make the change at 2 a. m. the last Sunday in April and continue it until 2 a. m. the last Sunday in September. The House favors the change to occur in March and continue until October.

The exhibitors and others connected with the moving picture business have opposed the proposed law on the ground that it would cause the cutting out of one show. They declare that they are unable to get their patrons out early in the evening and people would not want to go to the theaters until it was really dark. By so advancing the clocks it will mean that the airdromes will have great difficulty in operating because on the days it is light until eight o'clock the hour of darkness will be nine o'clock. With the first show starting at nine o'clock and running until 10:15 or 10:30 it will be rather hard work for an exhibitor to get any attendance for a second show on that night.

Its advocates declare that it is fairly calculated to accomplish valuable economies in our national life, promote the comfort and convenience of many millions of our people, and it is regarded as of special value in the present national emergency.

The measure has the approval of President Wilson, and will probably become a law at an early date.

Manhattan Exhibitors Meet

An Advertising Proposition Under Consideration—Transportation Company Offers Services—Exhibitors-Distributors' Plan Nears Completion.

THE Manhattan local exhibitors' league held another protracted meeting at its rooms, 218 W. 42d street, on Tuesday afternoon, February 12. About sixty exhibitors attended. Before proceeding with the regular order of business Mr. Ginsberg, representing the New York American, expounded an advertising proposition, whereby the American would publish two or three days a week a special section advertising all the motion picture theaters of Greater New York, at a flat rate of thirty cents a line, one-half the usual charge. All ads. to be of uniform size of one inch or thirty lines, costing by the week $11.90. If necessary it would publish two pages, providing enough contracts could be secured to make the proposition pay. John Manheimer, president of the league requested Mr. Ginsberg to put his proposition in writing and he would present it to the executive board for consideration. Mr. Ginsberg said the allotted section would also contain notes and full reports of all proceedings the exhibitors' league wished published to give wide publicity to all matters they wanted to make known. Weinstock proposed a committee be appointed to look further into the matter, Messrs. Weinstock, Wolff and Hartsjen were thereupon appointed.

J. M. Walsh, of the Exhibitors' Transportation Company addressed the meeting, setting forth a proposition for delivery of films. He said the company would put a sufficient number of new trucks into service to insure deliveries and would paint them any distinctive color selected by the exhibitors. It would bond its chauffeurs and bond itself to guarantee deliveries and loss and would also have emergency trucks on hand in case of accidents. If the exhibitors would guarantee 350 to 400 patrons, it would give this service at $5.00 for each customer. Mr. Walsh is head of the Walsh Transfer Company.

The regular session was called to order by the chairman and opened with the roll call of officers, which will be the custom in future, to tell their regularity of attendance. A report of the committee on securing new quarters for the league was made by Sydney Cohn. He said the committee had been unable to make satisfactory arrangement for the 49th street building, but they had two or three other places in the same neighborhood under consideration. He also stated the Screen Club had made an offer to rent the league part of its building. W. C. Smith, treasurer of the Screen Club, was introduced and he briefly explained the offer by saying the club would let them have the parlor floor with use of restaurant and pool rooms for a more reasonable rental than they could secure quarters elsewhere. Mr. Cohn said his committee would meet a committee at the Screen Club on Thursday evening to go into the matter fully, so they could report to the league members and arrive at a decision.

The matter of signing up with the "Producers-Exhibitors Affiliated" was taken up and the plan of "producers to exhibitors direct" was again thoroughly explained by I. M. Chadwick, who was introduced and given the privilege of the floor. After his explanation, Mr. Chadwick said he would answer any questions the members wished to ask him. One of the most debated questions was what comprised the metropolitan district of New York. There seemed to be a hitch on the borough of Queens, but that was settled by Mr. Gerdsen, who said Queens would assume any quota allotted to it and it would not quibble on the apportionment of the number of days given as its part of the contract. Mr. Chadwick explained that the metropolitan district included the five boroughs and the territory as far north as Yonkers. The number of days asked for by the "Producers-Exhibitors Affiliated" was 225, of these Queens was allotted 25. Representatives from New York, Brooklyn, Bronx and Queens locals were unanimous in adopting the plan, but asked another interview with the representatives of the plan before signing contracts. It was suggested that a mass meeting of all the exhibitors of the metropolitan district be held to set forth what the local leagues thought of the proposition and induce the exhibitors to co-operate in advancing endorsement and consummation. Mr. Chadwick said that just as soon as New York signed the plan would start operations within two weeks, in fact it was ready now. He further announced that other producers were desirous of coming in on it, but they would not accept any who could not assure them of the standard and character of pictures to be distributed, which must be of the highest quality.

A motion was made, seconded and carried to accord the Brooklyn Exhibitors' Association, which is temporarily without a meeting place, the use of the rooms of the Manhattan local until Brooklyn secured new quarters. The meeting adjourned at 5 p. m.

Florida Exhibitors Hold Convention

Cooley of Tampa is Re-elected President and La Belle Secretary at Largely Attended Meeting.

ONE of the most successful conventions ever held in Florida was opened February 6 by the Florida Exhibitors' League. A "get-together" spirit was manifested from the start.

The opening session was informal, and was held in the private rooms of James B. Kelly, general sales manager of Consolidated, at the Seminole. After luncheon the regular meeting was held in the offices of E. J. Sparkes, general manager of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, in the Arcade Theater Building.

At the election of officers C. D. Cooley of Tampa was re-elected unanimously as president, R. A. McIntosh of Orlando vice-president, and Al. H. "Happy" La Belle secretary.

The next convention will be held during the second week in May at Daytonia.

After the meeting over fifty members and exchangemen were the guests of E. J. Sparks on an automobile trip. H. T. Titus of Daytonia and L. D. Joel of Jacksonville entertained members and exchangemen at a banquet on the Mason Hotel Roof Garden, the guests of this occasion being Harold Lockwood of York-Metro and Harry T. Morey of Vitagraph.

Among those present at the banquet were: Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Bennet of Ocala, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kalbfield of Palatka, Mrs. Kalbfield acting as toastmistress; Miss Nell Kalbfield, Thornton Parker, St. Petersburg; Frank Genovar, St. Augustine; C. D. Cooley, Al. H. La Belle and Fletcher Catron, Tampa; B. Beacham, Jr., Orlando; H. T. Titus, Daytonia; C. E. Daffin, Tallahassee; William Dunworth and Master Dunworth, Miami; E. J. Sparks and Mrs. Sparks, Jacksonville; W. L. Whitehead, L. D. Joel, Mort Seligman and Gus Seligman, Jacksonville; Parrish & Carter, Gainsville; Joe Marentette, Charles Kesnick, C. R. Beacham, W. T. "Doc" Koch, Atlanta; Walter J. Price, John R. Barton, Robert Similer, Harry K. Lucas, Moses Levy, Richardson Amderson, George Weaver, Frank Chamberlain and Mrs. Chamberlain, H. T. Coffey, Mike Coyne, C. T. Jordan, Walter Schmidt, William P. Spivens, James B. Kelley, Aleck R. Ninninger, Francis Rodgers and Claude Barton.

Among the many little talks that were heard by members of this happy gathering the principal ones were made by Walter J. Price, who spoke on "The High Price of Film Rentals"; Aleck Vengeance Ninninger, who made a stirring address on "Film Salesmanship," and John R. Barton, whose engaging personality, shown in his talk on "The Two Barrel System," won the plaudits of every one present.

The next day Thornton Parker was host on a motor trip, and the day following there was a large fishing trip to Mayport, planned by E. J. Sparks and Jess Clarke.

PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS EAT.

The annual midday luncheon of the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania was given February 12, at the Bingham Hotel, in celebration of its amalgamation with the United Exhibitors' Associations of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland. Over 100 local and out-of-town and local exhibitors were present, and prominent speakers were heard. Those who addressed the league were Lee Ochs, Fred Nixon-Nurdlinger, Dr. Lamberger, representing combined manufacturing interests; Judge O'Donnell, C. Stamper, M. Steifel, Eugene and Fred Felt, J. Jeffries, Harry Smith, Ben Schindler, B. Roganser, Abraham Felt and J. Emanuel. Joseph McCready acted as toastmaster. After the luncheon the exhibitors were entertained by vaudeville talent.

BOSTON LEAGUERS FINANCE EXPOSITION.

Plans for financing the national exposition of the motion picture industry, to be held in this city, probably at Mechanics Building, next July, were discussed at an important meeting of the Boston Boosters at the headquarters of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island branches of the league, 127 Pleasant street, Boston. It was decided that the Boosters' Committee, which comprises many of Boston's prominent exhibitors and exchangemen, should loan sufficient money to the Motion Picture Exposition Committee to defray the preliminary expenses entailed in the preparations for the convention. Twenty-two Boosters were present.

Virginia Exhibitors Defend Jake Wells

In Formal Resolutions Executive Committee Says Showman's Efforts Defeated First Censor Bill.

WHEREAS, the state legislative committee of the A. E. A. of Virginia, in meeting at Richmond on Friday, February 8, have had called to their attention an article and an editorial in the current issue of the Exhibitors' Trade Review, each of which is an unjust and wholly erronerous attack made upon the president of our organization,

Therefore, be it resolved, that we resent these articles as an unjust attack upon Mr. Wells and a misrepresentation of the facts of the case.

It is true that Mr. Wells said we need censorship, but what he did say was: "We want censorship; we need it among ourselves" for the purpose of stopping, through our organization, the exhibition of undesirable, wild-cat pictures that have been so detrimental to the legitimate, responsible exhibitors. There would not be this demand for state censorship now if exhibitors would see to the elimination of this class of pictures. These views were expressed by Mr. Wells at a largely attended meeting of the exhibitors, held at Murphy's Hotel, and so far from "startling Virginia exhibitors," the sentiments expressed met with the full approval of the organization.

The editorial statement that "there will be censorship in Virginia and the credit, the glory, the honor of being its standard-bearer goes to Jake Wells" shows either a total and inexcusable ignorance of the facts or a willful and malicious design to do Mr. Wells an injury.

Without the active opposition of the Wells members of this organization—an opposition brought into active operation by urgent telegrams and letters from Mr. Wells—there is not the slightest doubt that the original censorship bill would have become a law. That bill would impose heavy burdens upon the manufacturers, as well as upon the exhibitors, and if these burdens are saved them it will be because of the vigilant and energetic work of our president.

The "pet plan" referred to was offered as a substitute for the committee bill and upon advice of members of the Legislature and of counsel as the only way to defeat the original or committee bill.

We desire to repeat, upon our individual responsibility and with a full knowledge of all the facts, that without Mr. Wells the original censorship bill would be certain of passage, and if any relief is obtained—a relief which will be equally felt by manufacturers—it will be because of his efforts.

In further defense of our president we would add that Mr. Wells, at our meeting today, opposed bitterly a clause in the compromise bill requiring the manufacturers to place in the Virginia territory an amount equal to all moneys held by them as deposits belonging to the Virginia exhibitors.

CINCINNATI LEAGUE NAMES CANDIDATES.

Two complete tickets have been nominated by the committee named for that purpose by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, and a warm campaign has been on for the honors involved. The nominees are as follows:

Blue ticket—I. W. McMahan, president; Otto Dieckmann, first vice-president; John J. Huebner, Jr., second vice-president; Otto Luedeking, treasurer; H. Serkowich, secretary, and William H. Wilson, sergeant-at-arms.

Red ticket—F. L. Emmert, president; A. G. Hettesheimer, first vice-president; J. A. Ackerman, second vice-president; John J. Huss, treasurer; H. Serkowich, secretary, and Frank Willenborg, sergeant-at-arms.

It will be observed that the nominating committee judiciously labored to make it a hard proposition to choose between the two tickets, or, in fact, to select any one ticket as a whole; and it was freely predicted when the tickets were announced that there would be few "straight" tickets voted.

Barbara Castleton with World Pictures

MISS BARBARA CASTLETON has sgned a long-term contract with World Pictures. She comes to World Pictures with an experience and reputation derived from several successful independent productions, and her regular appearance on the World program will cement permanently the favor in which the public holds her.

Barbara Castleton.

Miss Castleton's career is a standing disproof of the philosophy of Mr. Micawber "to wait around for something to turn up." She assumed the reins herself, and in less than one and one-half years has risen from the ranks of extra to stellar parts. Being a cousin of Louise Gunning, the famous comic opera star, naturally inspired her with ambitions, and when still in her teens she played as an understudy of Lina Abarbanell in "Madame Sherry." But the family endeavored to prevent her from going on the stage by taking her away to Canada, where she spent four years preparing for the next assault upon the booking offices. During that period she wrote a number of scenarios and stories, which she confessses were promptly returned. Upon reaching New York she learned Herbert Brenon was making a prologue to "A Daughter of the Gods." The star selected for the role did not appear, and Mr. Brenon, searching for a suitable substitute, chanced upon Miss Castleton among a crowd of 500 extras.

Director George Irving, having been impressed by her work, starred her opposite H. B. Warner in "God's Man." Hobart Henley then obtained her services for the lead in "Parentage," which was followed by the lead in "On Trial," released by First National Exhibitors' Circuit. "For the Freedom of the World" was the succeeding photoplay in which Miss Castleton assumed a star part; "Sins of Ambition" followed. Then Herbert Brenon selected her to play the principal character in "Empty Pockets." Miss Castleton has played the leading role in the forthcoming "Mothers of Liberty," which has the distinction of being the first patriotic picture endorsed by the United States Government.

From this list of eminent productions it is evident that Miss Castleton is fully trained to supply the World franchise holders with money-making pictures, coupled with World service.

"BILLY HART" NIGHT AT ELKS.

The B. P. O. E., at its Elks' clubhouse in New York City, on Tuesday evening, February 12, gave a Billy Hart night. Billy has been an exchangeman for, lo, these many years, and the Elks depend upon him to furnish a "movie night" once a year, which consists of motion pictures and the personal appearances of motion picture stars. About three thousand guests were there to enjoy the pictures and greet the following stars: Clara Kimball Young, Edward Kimball, Shirley Mason, Montague Love, Virginia Pearson, Sheldon Lewis, Leah Baird, Arthur Ashley, Miriam Nesbitt, Mark MacDermott, "Mother" Maurice, Wally Van, Violet Mersereau, and Bobby and Helen Connolly.

MARY WARREN FEATURED FOR FIRST TIME.

Mary Warren, who has appeared with Olive Thomas in several recent Triangle plays, makes her initial appearance as leading woman with William Desmond in "The Sea Panther," a romantic drama of the days of Captain Kidd. Miss Warren, who is remembered for her work as Ida Haines in "Betty Takes a Hand," and as Grace Antrim, in the new society drama, "Heiress for a Day," has done exceptionally good work in her first prominent role Triangle directors say.

Lifts Ban on Tuesday Shows

State Administrators Still Have Authority Locally—Warning to Be Economical of Fuel.

MOTION picture exhibitors may now rejoice, for the United States Fuel Administration has raised the order making Tuesdays a closed day for the theaters and other places of amusement. It had been hoped that the order would be issued in time for the houses to remain open on Lincoln's Birthday, but that is now forgotten with the receipt of the announcement of February 13.

"With the vastly improved weather and transportation conditions and a continuance of the embargoes authorized by the Director General of Railways," says Dr. Harry A. Garfield, United States Fuel Administrator, "it is found advisable to suspend the heatless Mondays prescribed in the Fuel Administration regulation of January 17. The suspension order issued on February 13 discontinues the operation of those sections of the order relating to the use of fuel on Mondays from February 18 to March 25, both inclusive.

"The State Fuel Administrators will retain the full authority heretofore conferred upon them to establish and enfrce such restrictions and regulations as may be made necessary by coal conditions in their respective communities.

"Reports to the Fuel Administration as to coal and transportation conditions indicate a vast improvement as a result of the fuel restrictions, the railway embargoes and the weather conditions. The change in the weather hs been gradual enough to seem to insure the country against any immediate interference with the coal supply by flood conditions."

Pittsburgh Has Two New Theaters

This Month Will See Splendid Picture Houses Opened, the Grand and the Olympic, Both on Fifth Avenue.

WITH the completion of the Grand opera house and the remodeled Olympic theater, both on Fifth avenue, between Wood and Smithfield, downtown Pittsburgh is about to acquire two more large and fine picture theaters. The new Grand, which has been rebuilt on the site of the old theater of that name, will be ready about March 1. Some time during the same month Antonoplos & Baziotes will throw open their greatly enlarged and beautified Olympic theater.

Not only in size, but in modern arrangement and equipment the Grand and Olymic will eclipse any of their downtown predecessors, and will elevate the presentation of the photoplay to its rightful position in this section of the city. Half a million dollars has been spent in the construction and furnishing of the Grand, and it occupies ground worth considerably in excess of that figure. The seating capacity will be over 2,500, which is larger than the number of available seats in any other theater in Greater Pittsburgh. Many surprisingly unique features are being installed throughout. The house will be devoted to high-class pictures exclusively, and, with its dedication under this policy, Harry Davis again becomes one of the foremost figures among American exhibitors.

The Olympic, which is being enlarged to 1,200 seating capacity, has entailed an expenditure of over $150,000 to remodel. Entirely new equipment of the latest type is being installed and the interior redecorated lavishly. The building has been continued through the block, and will have entrances on Fifth avenue and Diamond street. Up to the present time the operation of the house is not being interrupted by the remodeling process. While the Olympic in the past has enjoyed an enviable reputation as one of the leading theaters in the city and of offering the best available films, Antonoplos & Baziotes are to be congratulated upon their effort to establish a still higher standard of photoplay presentation.

Russell Forms Producing Company

Pictures to Be Made by Athletic Player Will Contain Outdoor Stuff and Be Released Through Mutual.

WILLIAM RUSSELL is to appear in a series of special productions made by his own company and distributed to the trade through the exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation. This announcement is made by Mr. Russell from the Los Angeles offices of his new concern, William Russell Productions, Inc. Mr. Russell has just returned to the west coast after a sojourn of several weeks in New York, where he conducted negotiations relating to the formation of his company and conferred with various distributing concerns and agencies.

The studios will be in Southern California, centrally situated for the range of scenic settings necessary to the depiction of the Russell type of story with the "big outdoor stuff."

"My specials will be built on the biggest vehicles obtainable," said Mr. Russell, "always chosen with a view to giving me the big chance at doing those things which seem to have had the largest share in making my following with the public. It seems probable now that my first vehicle will be a strong story by William Hamilton Osborne.

"While in New York I negotiated with a number of writers of first rank and I shall have an interesting announcement presently in that connection. I am also bringing on from the east a special staff scenario writer, who is going to live on the job with me. I am not at liberty yet to give out the names of the members of the staff, including the director, as there is a possibility that I may make a change in directors before we start to shoot.

"I am pleased to have concluded arrangements for distribution through the Mutual. Through my connection with the American Film Company under my contract with that concern which expired some weeks ago I went before the picture public through the Mutual exchanges for the larger part of my screen career and I feel that there is important value to me in this connection. Also the constantly improving status of Mutual pictures and the large number of higher class theaters served by that concern make the choice a desirable one for me.

"I may also admit that the fact that the Mutual is not now offering in competition the work of any other male star is a fact of importance in arriving at my decision."

Harley Knowles Walks Into Acid

Quickly Hauled Out of Vat, However, by Party Led by William A. Brady.

HARLEY KNOWLES, general director for William A. Brady, had a close call from serious injury and possible death at Longport, N. J., February 17, while inspecting preparations for a film thriller that calls for the explosion of a $15,000 dirigible in a fight with a seaplane in midair over the ocean.

A large vat of acid, which gives off the gas to inflate the dirigible's 100-foot bag, was buried in the ground alongside the temporary hangar. The lid had been removed, and in the darkness Knowles stepped into the vat and went down to his shoulders.

Led by Mr. Brady, other members of the party quickly hauled him out and slashed off his clothes, which prevented serious burns. Knowles was wrapped in a blanket and taken to a hotel in Atlantic City, where a physician dressed his injuries.

H. R. DURANT TO WRITE FOR GOLDWYN.

Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, has just closed a long-term contract with Harry R. Durant, well known moving picture writer and editor. Mr. Durant is a Yale man and was a well-known freelance writer, having over two hundred short stories to his credit, when he joined the Munsey staff of editors. At one time Mr. Durant specialized in prize-ring fiction, and his story "The Unknown," in McClure's, still remains an American prize-ring classic. These stories were brought out in book form under the title of "Wallops." While editor there Mr. Durant wrote many photoplays for the Reliance-Majestic studios, and his contributions to the legitimate stage were "A Man and His Mate," "The Road to Power," "Something for Nothing" and "O'Shea, the Rogue."

Mr. Durant has also the unique distinction of being the only American author who ever had a Napoleonic play accepted for a Parisian production. His play, "L'Homme Meme" ("The Man Within"), won for him a coveted membership to the Society of Authors and Composers of France.

LANIER BARTLETT JOINS TRIANGLE STAFF.

Lanier Bartlett, noted scenario writer, and adapter of several photodramatic successes, has joined the staff at the Triangle Culver City studio. His first work since his return to the screen world was the adaptation of Charles Rann Kennedy's famous play, "The Servant in the House," a seven-reel feature that will be among the greatest of Triangle productions. Mr. Bartlett, following a long and varied career as a scenarioist, retired from active work about a year ago. He was induced to return to the fold as a member of the Triangle scenario force.

One Theater That Pays No War Tax

Nor Yet, with an Orchestra of Sixteen Pieces Accompanying Pictures, is There Admission Charge.

THE following story comes from the United States Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. Its interest will not be confined to those who make and distribute motion pictures. The tale is written by the assistant editor of the institution's paper, and is entitled "A Unique Moving Picture Theater." Here it is:

No admission is charged. No war tax imposed. A battery of the latest model, motor driven projectors is used, as well as a gold fibre screen. An orchestra of sixteen pieces, under a skilled director, furnishes special musical settings for every picture.

Where is this theater? you ask. The Auditorium of the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga. A prisoner conducts the orchestra and a prisoner runs the pictures.

Most people visualize a prison as a great, grim pile of stone and steel. The federal prison at Atlanta is just that from the outside, but once you step within its walls a spirit of hopefulness, an eagerness to make no more mistakes in life, is encountered, and the moving pictures shown there are in no small way one of the causes.

Almost thirteen hundred men from practically every walk of life—bankers, lawyers, doctors, architects, yeggmen, moonshiners—are gathered within its confines, and they have the privilege of seeing the best photoplays produced. Here are a few shown during the last nine months:

"Joan the Woman," "The Girl Philippa," "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," "Intolerance," by special direction of Mr. Griffith, with traveling company's complete orchestra and full effects; "Broadway Jones," "Romeo and Juliet" (Metro), "Polly of the Circus," "The Manxman," "The Planter," "The Daughter of the Gods," "The Price of a Good Time," "The Auction Block," as well as practically all of the Douglas Fairbanks and W. S. Hart releases; pictures that visualize undreamed of beauties of life, nature and history; pictures that graphically illustrate how utterly foolish is the vain quest for this world's goods without rendering adequate return; pictures that show what suffering can mean to the wives and kiddies that are left behind. Who can say that such pictures do not have a good effect upon every man who has tried both ways of living?

Paramount-Burton Holmes travel pictures take the prisoners to distant lands, show them the customs and life of alien peoples. Pathe Weeklies keep them informed of the world's events and progress. Clean, wholesome comedies lighten their hours of deepest despair, despondency and hopelessness—the crucial moment of men's lives, in prison and out.

Among the men are the most ardent movie fans. Their favorites among the feminine stars are Geraldine Farrar, Mary Pickford and Anita Stewart. Among the male stars Bill Hart runs a close second to Douglas Fairbanks. In comedies Fatty Arbuckle has no rival in popularity, although the Mack Sennett and Fox comedies are prime favorites.

All this is made possible through the generosity of the film corporations who have exchanges in Atlanta. One exchange manager, who furnishes many of the pictures shown in the prison, mostly pre-releases, says: "If the boys out at the prison like a picture I know it's good."

Back of it all there is a man with a great heart, a far-seeing mind—Fred G. Zerbst, the warden—who believes that not only is the moving picture a great entertainer, but a great educator and a great power for good as well.

FRED E. PETERS.

HODKINSON ON TRIP TO THE COAST.

Mr. W. W. Hodkinson left for a trip to the coast Saturday, February 9, which will be the first step in his campaign to tie in the exhibitor in his exhibitors' co-operative plan. Mr. Hodkinson's first stop will be in Denver, where he will remain for several days before visiting a number of the coast cities. He has appointments in the west with a number of the largest and most representative exhibitors, who have expressed themselves as most eager to become a part of the Hodkinson organization.

Mr. Hodkinson's years of experience on the Pacific Coast, both as an exhibitor and a distributor, places him on a close personal basis with practically all of the important exhibitors from Denver to the coast, and it is the result of this close personal feeling that the exhibitors have for him that has prompted him in his decision to give them the honor of becoming the first partners in the new distributor-exhibitor organization.

Soldiers May Now Get Good Pictures

Fosdick Forms Committee of Film Experts, with P. A. Powers as Chairman, to Handle Matter in Practical Way.

PRACTICAL co-operation between the Commission on Training Camp Activities and the motion picture industry was advanced considerably when a special committee, of which P. A. Powers was appointed permanent chairman, met at the Hotel Knickerbocker Monday, February 11. The session was brought about by a letter Raymond B. Fosdick, chairman of the commission, addressed to Mr. Powers, under date of February 1, notifying the Universal's treasurer that a committee representing the film industry has been appointed and designating Mr. Powers as chairman.

The sub-committee on motion pictures of the War and Navy Commissions on Training Camp Activities, thus officially designated, comprises, in addition to Mr. Powers: Adolph Zukor, Famous Players-Lasky; Ricord Gradwell, World Film; J. A. Berst, Pathe; William Fox; Richard Rowland, Metro; S. A. Lynch, Triangle; J. R. Freuler, Mutual; Samuel Goldfish, Goldwyn; George Kleine, General Film; D. W. Griffith; Albert E. Smith, Vitagraph; O. G. Cocks, advisory secretary National Board of Review, and Leo F. Hanmer, ex-officio, Commission on Training Camp Activities.

At the Knickerbocker meeting W. D. McGuire, secretary of the Board of Review, was made secretary, and preliminary organization was perfected. The point is made in Mr. Fosdick's selection of committeemen that no one organization within the industry is designated; the industry entire is given the opportunity, through this sub-committee, to co-operate in supplying films, either on a paid schedule or for free distribution, to the various training camps scattered throughout the country.

It also is understood that this committee will act in harmony with the Community Film Company, now principally represented in the Y. M. C. A. film service to the training camps. When all details are worked out there will be a schedule of releases, to be paid for in exhibition places where an admission is charged, these features to be, in a general sense, productions not over six months old. These subjects will subsequently be passed along to places where no admission is exacted, thus giving the soldiers in training an opportunity to see the newest productions, if they pay, and in any event supplying them with programs relatively new for their free entertainment.

Exchanges nearest the various cantonments will handle the distribution of films, working out a practical method of prompt and efficient distribution. In the theaters that have already been constructed for "legitimate" presentations there is already a prospect of "open time" between the appearances of the companies that are being routed by the committee of theatrical managers, already formed and active in presenting entertainments to the soldiers. It would seem logical that films will be used to supply these interims.

It may be confidently expected, as a result of Mr. Fosdick's practicable move in appointing the committee of film experts, that there will eventuate a smooth and workable co-ordination of effort between the motion picture industry as a whole and the Government. The unity of purpose, which has heretofore been complained of as lacking, with soldiers in training the principal losers, promises now to be energetically forthcoming.

JERSEY MANAGERS HOLD ELECTION.

The Theater Managers' Association of Newark and Essex County held its annual meeting in the Proctor theater building, Newark, N. J. The election of officers resulted as follows: Thomas W. Miner, president; Dr. R. G. Tunison, vice-president; R. J. O'Crowley, Jr., secretary; Morris Schlesinger, treasurer; Lewis R. Golding, chairman of the executive board. In recognition of his services as secretary during the year Mr. O'Crowley was presented with a gold watch by Mr. Miner in behalf of the association. A luncheon was served at midnight.

WESTFALL WRITES NORTHWEST STORY.

Ralph R. Westfall, author of Triangle's forthcoming "The Law of the Great Northwest," was a member of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police Force for four years, and many of his adventures provided material for the photodrama. As an officer he came in personal contact with crafty natives and rugged adventurers who in the freedom of the big outdoors developed their own code, which often brought them in conflict with the Canadian minions of the law. The series which were unfolded before Mr. Westfall have been prepared for film production.

Longer Runs at Advanced Prices

Many Dayton Exhibitors Discuss Advantages of Extended Over Short Bookings.

AFTER a careful study of the situation and consulting many different Dayton exhibitors on long runs versus short, the writer finds a difference of opinion. As to admission prices for special offerings several downtown houses are asking higher rates, while suburban theaters are standing pat. The latter like to have the downtown theaters ask more, for it makes the feature in question "go" much better. Three or four of the neighborhood houses in Dayton hold a picture two or three days, but this is not general. In most of these houses the popular demand is for a daily change.

With a few exceptions (mostly the smaller houses) all the downtown theaters hold an attraction at least three or four days and often for the entire week. After a picture has played the downtown house it is not rented to a suburban theater for a period of thirty days or more, frequently ninety day, and in a few cases one hundred days.

"The Whip," at the Columbia recently, held over for a second week to good business, as good in fact as for the first week. This would not hold true always. In order to turn the trick a second time, one prominent exhibitor remarked, one must sandwich in several weeks of short runs and then go at it again. After a week of three and four day engagements the Columbia is to play "Intolerance." Music is to be provided by an orchestra of fifteen pieces, greater than the one used for "The Whip," and the admission prices are to be raised in proportion. After having rested for a week, literally speaking, the public will again turn out in large numbers for "Intolerance."

Speaking for the rest of the picture houses I will first mention the Strand. As this is a large house engagements never are over three or four days at the most. The Strand does an excellent business, and I think this policy is successful. The Apollo here, playing first-run Metro and Fox specials, never plays a picture longer than three days except in special cases. The Apollo could well afford to hold a feature for a week as it is a small house.

Many attempts have been made in the neighborhood houses to raise admission prices and also for longer engagements. Some of these efforts have met with success, others with failure. Al Kinsler, at the Elite, frequently holds a picture for two days, sometimes three, and it seems to go over at his house with a vengeance. He remarked, however, that it would not be good as a permanent feature. The Alhambra usually does well on a second day, it being the largest suburban house in Dayton. The Mecca, which is the representative theater of the west side proper, always does well on a second day, and many times pictures are held for a three-day run. The exception to the rule is found at the World theater, managed by Alfred Espy, who states that a second day is a failure with him, and he is a firm believer in seven changes a week with the best of pictures.

On the average longer runs at advanced prices are a success in Dayton. P. J. G.

Brinch to Assist Hodkinson

Former Sales Manager is Promoted and C. E. Shurtleff Takes His Old Place.

P. N. BRINCH, who has been sales manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation since the inception of that organization several months ago, has been appointed assistant to the president and will take up the duties of that office immediately. Mr. Brinch has been associated with the motion picture industry since 1907 when he joined the sales forces of Pathe. He later became the traveling representative for the General Film Company and came into New York as office manager for Mutual. In 1915, he went with Triangle where he was assistant general manager. When W. W. Hodkinson became affiliated with Triangle, he made Mr. Brinch a division manager and so successful was he in this capacity, that at the forming of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, Mr. Hodkinson offered him the sales-managership.

Mr. Brinch was succeeded by C. E. Shurtleff, who is now in charge of the sales department of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Mr. Shurtleff has been sales manager for Select Pictures for the past six months. Prior to his connection with the Select Pictures he was special representative for Pathe for one year. Shurtleff hails from commercial fields. He did specialty sales work for the National Biscuit Co. twelve years ago, at which time he headed an efficiency training school for the salesmen of that company, at the same time spreading the gospel of the Uneeda Biscuit.

Mr. Shurtleff first came to the motion picture business as a salesman for the Vitagraph's office in Cleveland and he successfully managed the office of that company later in Detroit and Cincinnati. Mr. Shurtleff's experience and success in the sales end of the motion picture business has gained him innumerable friends among exhibitors who knew him for his scientific sales work which has always been backed up by a square deal.

Alice Howell, L-Ko Comedienne

SOME people are born lucky; others are bumped right into it, while a third class struggle along unrecognized until one day Old Man Good Luck suddenly stops in front of them and says, "Howdy, Stranger!" Alice Howell, who is featured in Century Comedies, belongs in the latter class. "Struggle" but mildly describes this comedienne's experience prior to the time that Old Man Good Luck found her out and caused her to be featured in her own brand of comedies.

A modest sort of person, Miss Howell, along with other players, was requested by the Universal to fill out a blank describing her career. This is what she wrote:

Alice Howell.

"I've been in the show business about eleven years and there isn't really much for me to tell. I came to California because the health of one of the members of my family demanded it. Pictures claimed me because I had to earn a living. I've tried my best to make good. It was a pretty hard struggle for me to get along at first. When I started with Keystone there were times when rainy weather kept my salary down to as low as six and nine dollars a week. That wasn't very much to live on, was it? Thank goodness that period is over. I'm doing pretty well and I'm paid pretty well. That's all there is for me to say."

This sketchy biography of her moving picture career, however, does not tell of the fight that has caused Alice Howell to be regarded by her fellow-players out on the west coast as one of the pluckiest women they know. It makes no mention of the fact that Miss Howell was for a long time the sole bread winner of her family because it was her husband who was so seriously ill.

Up to the time of her husband's illness, the couple were a popular vaudeville team and under the name of Howell and Smith toured the "big time" circuits from coast to coast in an eccentric act.

A turn for the better in the Howell fortunes came with Alice Howell's engagement by the L-Ko company. The very first production in which she appeared stamped her as a find. Before many comedies had been released the comedienne had obtained a wide following. Incidentally, better times brought with them a betterment in her husband's condition and he today is well known for his work as a comedy director. When the Stern brothers decided to go into business for themselves, they promptly obtained Alice Howell's signature to a contract.

"Oh, Baby!" the most recent of Miss Howell's Century Comedies, was released on February 15.

"THE EAGLE'S EYE" SHOWING AT BILTMORE.

A special showing of the first three episodes of "The Eagle's Eye," the twenty-episode serial expose of the plotting and intrigues of the Imperial German Government in America, written by William J. Flynn, recently retired Chief of the United States Secret Service, for representatives of patriotic societies in New York City, will be given in the Grand ball room of the Hotel Biltmore, at 2.30 o'clock the afternoon of February 22, Washington's birthday. The invitations for the event were issued this week.

New Plan of Film Distribution Proposed

Chicago Exhibitors Attend Meeting to Hear Plan Explained by Messrs. Pettijohn, Sherrill and Rapf, and Vote Unanimously in Its Favor.

C. C. PETTIJOHN, of the Independent Producers'-Exhibitors' Affiliated organization of the United States and Canada, arrived in the city Tuesday, February 12. On the same day Harry Rapf, of the High Class Film Corporation, New York, and W. L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, New York, came in. Mr. Sherrill is president of the Independent Producers-Exhibitors, Inc., of which he, Mr. Rapf and five other independent producers are members. The purpose of their coming was to interest Chicago and Illinois exhibitors in the plan of distributing the product of these seven independent producers direct to the exhibitor without any exchange overhead expense.

Mr. Pettijohn invited Joseph Hopp, president of Chicago Local, M. P. E. L. of A., and Louis H. Frank, treasurer of Chicago Local, M. P. T. O. Association, to meet him in conference in his quarters, in the Morrison Hotel, Tuesday afternoon. Both these gentlemen accepted the invitation, and during the conference it was arranged that a joint meeting of exhibitors belonging to both organizations should meet at Fraternity Hall Wednesday afternoon.

The meeting opened at 1.30 p. m., with about fifty exhibitors present. Mr. Pettijohn was unanimously called to the chair, and he explained fully the purpose of the meeting and the plan of leasing films direct from the manufacturer to the exhibitor. Mr. Sherrill followed and gave further details of the plan. He was succeeded by Mr. Rapf, who also dwelt on the benefits of the plan and of the saving it meant to exhibitors.

Chairman Pettijohn then called on a number of exhibitors for an expression of their opinions, among them being William Buford, of Aurora; Maurice Rubens, of Joliet; William E. Heaney, Jacob Cooper, Harry Corbett, Max Hyman, Harry C. Miller, general manager of Harry C. Moir's theaters; J. Zilligen, Charles Stewart, Louis H. Frank and Joseph Hopp, all of Chicago.

The consensus of opinion was in favor of the plan, and a vote was taken unanimously indorsing it.

A committee of seven was then appointed by Chairman Pettijohn to work out the plan for the Illinois zone, of which Chicago is the center. On this committee are: Dee Robinson, Peoria; William Buford, Aurora; Jacob Cooper, William E. Heaney, Henry Corbett, Louis H. Frank and Joseph Hopp, of Chicago. This committee was instructed to meet Friday, February 15, in Chicago.

It was noticeable that a spirit of harmony prevailed throughout the entire meeting, the members of both exhibitors' organizations being in perfect accord on the proposed plan.

During a brief conversation Mr. Pettijohn informed me that North Carolina had closed Tuesday, February 12, and Ohio on Monday, February 11. He also stated that he had received a wire from Herbert Brenon, to the effect that New Jersey had been closed on Tuesday, February 12, and that previous to the Chicago meeting about fifty per cent. of the quota of days required for the entire country, according to the plan submitted, had been signed.

Mr. Pettijohn left Wednesday night for Detroit, where he spent Thursday discussing the plan with Michigan exhibitors. Mr. Rapf was in Indianapolis the same day arranging with Indiana exhibitors. Mr. Sherrill returned direct to New York on Thursday.

Thomas J. Hamlin, secretary and general manager of the Associated Theaters, Inc., came on from Minneapolis to attend the meeting in Fraternity Hall.

In the issue of February 16, page 977, an article on this subject appears, which will further enlighten the reader on the plan proposed; also an article on page 486, in the issue of January 26.

"The Wild Goose Chase"

Extraordinary Preparations for Its Production Being Made by William N. Selig.

One day last week, the working forces of Selig's Chicago plant were increased by the arrival of a picturesque trio, accompanied by three of the finest dog trains, of five huskies each, that have ever been seen in the city. Captain Baldwin Anderson, of Gimli, Manitoba; his son-in-law, G. W. Arneson, and a neighbor, John Isefeld, are the men of the party—great, brawny, bronzed fellows, whose herculean proportions make the typical Chicago man appear puny and effeminate.

William N. Selig is now engaged in the production of "The Wild Goose Chase," a tale of the far North by Edwin Balmer, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post about three years ago. Some of the scenes are laid in Greenland, where dogs and sleds, and their drivers are very important factors in transportation. For some time Colonel Selig has been searching for a man with the requisite qualifications and the dogs. He failed until he was aided by United States Consul General Ryder, of Winnipeg, who put him in touch with Captain Anderson.

The captain was engaged at once and immediately set about the gathering of fifteen of the best huskies that ever broke trail in the northern snows. He is well known in the northland as a fearless pioneer. Last winter he journeyed from Winnipeg to St. Paul with a dog train, taking part in the winter carnival there, and was entertained at the home of Louis Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad, and chief of the carnival association.

The captain and his companions will be seen driving the three husky teams in the northern scenes, and, as these views are in and around Greenland, they will be obliged to discard the regulation Indian buckskin coats and "musher" garb for the attire worn by the Esquimo in their ice-bound home.

But polar bears also figure in the story and so Colonel Selig has already on hand seven huge monsters of that type, trainers included. A schooner, 137 feet in length, has been specially built to meet another of the requirements of the production.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Joe Brandt, general manager of Universal, arrived in the city Sunday, February 10, after a trip through the middle states, during which he covered all the Universal exchanges in that territory. Mr. Brandt stated that every exhibitor he met in his rounds claimed that Monday closing was really beneficial so far as business was concerned, as a larger volume was shown in six days than had been previously shown in seven. "Exhibitors are very optimistic," said Mr. Brandt, "as they expect business to become normal just as soon as the weather becomes warmer." Mr. Brandt left for New York February 12 after a conference with I. L. Lesserman, general sales manager of the Chicago Universal exchange.

Edwin Silverman, well known as the head of Butterfly pictures in the Universal offices here, will henceforth be associated with Select pictures.

Charles Miller, formerly salesman with the Bluebird exchange, is now connected with the Goldwyn exchange in the same capacity. Mr. Miller is one of the best known salesmen in the city, and was one of Ike Van Ronkel's ablest salesmen when he had charge of the General Film Company's branch at 529 Wabash avenue.

George Periolat, the popular character actor of the American Film Company, left this city last week en route to the Santa Barbara studios.

Margarita Fischer has just finished her fourth comedy drama for the American Film Company. It is entitled "Ann's Finish."

Mary MacLane, in "Men Who Have Made Love to Me," has been shown to crowded houses at the Bandbox theater, and is in its second week at the time of writing. A. K. Brown, manager of the Bandbox, tells me that business has increased 50 per cent. over that of the last three months while this superfeature has been showing.

McVickers theater, on Madison street, in the Loop, had the distinction of being the only theater that was open on heatless Tuesday, February 12. This house is run by Jones, Linick & Schaefer, and they donated its use, as well as the working staff, to the Government on the day mentioned for the showing of United States Government war pictures. These films were produced under George Creel's direction, and show how the soldier boys work during training. The subjects shown were "Soldiers of the Sea," "Soldiers and Sailors at Play," "Gas and Fire," "The 1917 Recruit," "The Spirit of 1917," "The United States Navy Submarines," "Messengers of Mercy" and "Naval Soldiers Training." Jones, Linick & Schaefer report that $2,500 was turned over to the State Council of Defense as the result of the day's remarkable showing.

A spectacular hold-up of the Garfield theater, 2844 West Madison street, took place Sunday night, February 10. The bandit entered the theater while Manager Ryan was checking up the receipts with the cashier. The bandit lined them up against the wall and seized $285 from the table and fled. He was chased by two detective sergeants, and was finally cornered after fifty shots had been fired. It was found that he had thrown the stolen money on top of a barn during his flight, and it was recovered.

A "Smileage Book" is the latest fad provided for the entertainment of our soldiers and sailor boys. The managers of legitimate theaters started the plan of issuing a book of passes to each soldier, and now it is expected that Chicago moving picture theater owners will follow suit.

The petition of the Fox Film Company for a writ of mandamus against the city and Chief of Police Schuettler to force them to permit exhibition of the film "For Liberty" was dismissed in Judge Hugo Pam's court February 8. The case was heard before a jury. The Chicago censor board had recommended several cut-outs in the film.

Shapiro About to Don a Uniform

SINCE the formation of Goldwyn A. I. Shapiro has been branch manager at Detroit. Mr. Shapiro has resigned to enter the service of Uncle Sam. Of draft age, Mr. Shapiro waived all claim to exemption and was placed in Class A. He will come east to spend a few weeks with his family in New York City before he goes to camp. He registered for the draft at Albany, and expects to be ordered to Camp Upton, at Yaphank, L. I. Goldwyn is sorry to lose Mr. Shapiro, whose work in the Detroit territory has been more than satisfactory. Ever popular with exhibitors, he succeeded, in the recent war tax flurry, not only in holding the large volume of business then on his books, but in actually showing a substantial increase in film sales. This Goldwyn regards as evidence of his splendid ability.

A. I. Shapiro.

The company's regret at Mr. Shapiro's resignation is expressed in a letter to him from Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, in which Mr. Goldfish says:

"It is with great regret that I have just heard of your being compelled to resign from the company. While I feel that you are doing this in the service of your country, which is the biggest cause of all, I deeply regret losing you from the Goldwyn organization.

"I want you to know that whenever you are ready we shall more than welcome you back with us. Your work in the Detroit territory has been exceptionally fine, and I want to thank you for your loyalty to the company from the first days of our organization."

J. F. Flynn, who has just returned from a four months' trip to Australia in the interests of Goldwyn Pictures, will succeed Mr. Shapiro at Detroit. He formerly was Cleveland manager for the General Film Company.

George F. Hernandez

ANY one who saw George F. Hernandez in Triangle's production "Betty Takes a Hand" would have felt certain that a multi-millionaire or a bloated plutocrat had broken into the movies out of sheer love for the sport. Looks are deceiving and all is not gold that pantomimes. George Hernandez is an actor for thirty years, has been on the legitimate stage and in motion pictures, and while he looks more like a president of a trust than a character actor who has portrayed Shakesperian roles for two years he is accepted at face value. He is an actor.

George F. Hernandez.

His weight is 196 pounds, and he stopped when he got to 5 feet 5 inches. His hair is blond and scant. His parents never were actors nor never opposed his desire for a stage career, and he was born where men were quick on the draw—Placerville County, Cal., on June 6, 1863.

Mr. Hernandez's first prominent part was performed on the legitimate stage in "The Ticket of Leave Man," which was followed by a large number of roles in other legitimate attractions. He started as a singer, but his voice failed.

The heavy hand of sorrow has touched Mr. Hernandez, for he lost two lovable children. This has not shaken the congeniality of a nature whose kindly rays lighten the paths of his many friends and companions. He likes motion pictures because of the opportunity presented for home life in Los Angeles.

Mr. Hernandez was engaged in other than theatrical work from 1880 to 1887, and made constant endeavors to supplement his high school education received at Oakland, Cal., with reading and courses prescribed by himself.

"Broadway, Arizona," "Up or Down?" "Betty Takes a Hand" and "The Hopper" are Triangle features in which Mr. Hernandez has appeared with great success.

CLYMER JOINS YORKE-METRO SCENARIO STAFF.

John B. Clymer, well known author for the screen, has been engaged by the Yorke-Metro company as scenario writer, and has left New York to join his new associates in Jacksonville, Fla. Mr. Clymer's co-worker is Richard V. Spencer, who has written the continuity of practically all of the Yorke-Metro productions to date. As the dual director system is being employed with Mr. Lockwood, each of the two directors—Fred J. Balshofer and George Irving—will have his own scenario writer.

EDITH ELLIS RETIRES FROM GOLDWYN.

In order to fulfill contracts for the writing of two plays for the dramatic stage next season Edith Ellis has resigned her position as head of the literary department of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. She will soon undertake a campaign for a national producing theater, a project which she has been working on for some time.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. HARLEMAN

War Secretary Buys First Tickets to Rodeo.

SECRETARY OF WAR BAKER has sent the following telegram to the Western Representative of the National War Camp Community Fund:

"Chairman Raymond B. Fosdick of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities informs me that Douglas Fairbanks and associates will produce a rodeo for benefit of National War Camp Community Fund in San Francisco. This fund meets with my hearty approval, and as an earnest indorsement wish to purchase first tickets for this benefit.

"NEWTON D. BAKER."

The first tickets off the press autographed by Fairbanks were mailed him upon receipt of Baker's request.

"Doug" promises to carry two hundred cowboys to the San Francisco rodeo. This will be preceded by a vaudeville show in Oakland, in which William H. Crane, famous speaking stage star; Dustin Farnum, Winifred Kingston, Louise Huff and Frank Campeau will appear.

Fairbanks has taken a great interest in patriotic war charity work. The fact that he is devoting more than a week of his time toward the success of the rodeo and vaudeville show proved he is doing his bit at these patriotic times.

His recent Los Angeles rodeo cleared over $18,000 for the Red Cross. His baseball game with Billy Sunday netted $8,000 for the athletic fund of Southern California. His vaudeville show in Oakland and Wild West rodeo in San Francisco should be a considerable boost for the funds of the National Camp Service.

He is going to ride a bucking broncho in addition to shooting glass balls, riding the pony express and supervising the entire event.

Mary Pickford to Pay Heavy Income Tax.

As stated briefly in this department last week, Mary Pickford will pay a greater amount of money to Uncle Sam this year in the form of income taxes than any other woman in the United States whose income results solely from her own efforts. Miss Pickford made out her income tax return in Los Angeles, assisted by Colonel J. P. Carter, Collector of Internal Revenue for the district of Southern California. Although the deductions had not been finally decided upon then, it was stated at the time that her total contribution to Uncle Sam as a tax on her income for 1917 would be something between $200,000 and a quarter of a million.

Mary and Collector Carter.

"It will help to win the war," said the player with a smile, as she inscribed her name "on that line, please."

Miss Pickford's patriotism so impressed Collector Carter that he requested her to do another "bit" by helping him to tell the public about the income tax. And she agreed readily to help "pressagent" Uncle Sam's collection department through the means of illustrated slides which will be shown in the theaters on the Coast.

Charlie Chaplin Visits Balboa Studios.

Charlie Chaplin made a trip to the Balboa studios at Long Beach last week to visit his old Keystone partner, Roscoe Arbuckle, and his many other friends at the Horkheimer plant.

With Chaplin came Alf Reaves, the English music hall comedian, who managed Charlie across the water. They found Buston Keaton entertaining some vaudeville friends from the Orpheum.

Charlie Chaplin says he remembers when he used to bounce Buster Keaton around on his knee, therefore getting in the class with Charlie Murray, who claims the same distinction.

In our picture we see Charlie Chaplin as a cameraman directing Lou Anger, H. M. Horkheimer and Buster Keaton in a comedy sketch.

Stop Sale of "Spirit of '76" Property.

Filing a petition of involuntary bankruptcy against the Continental Producing Company, which brought out the motion picture, "The Spirit of '76," stopped the sale of the property of that corporation by Sheriff Cline. It was advertised to be disposed of by virtue of an execution levied in the interest of J. C. Cook, who is a creditor of the corporation.

Under the order of the Superior Court all of the belongings of the company, with the exception of the film of "The Spirit of '76," which is in the possession of United States Marshal Walton, was to have been offered at public vendue.

The petitioning creditors are G. L. Eastman, J. E. Ransford and C. E. Toberman, all of Hollywood, who allege in their bill that the corporation is indebted to them $1,500, $1,200 and $1,700, respectively, for money advanced to the company.

It also is alleged in the complaint that the company committed an act of bankruptcy in allowing J. C. Cook to take a judgment against it, which had the effect of making Mr. Cook a preferred creditor.

California Cities Compete to Secure Arbuckle.

Roscoe Arbuckle is a popular resident. Santa Ana and Anaheim are competing in presenting studio propositions to the comedian, who is now producing the Paramount-Arbuckle comedies at the Balboa studios, Long Beach. Both cities are in the orange country in the heart of Southern California farming districts. It has been reported that other cities were seeking to interest Mr. Arbuckle, but up to date the Santa Ana proposition has been the best.

Nothing definite has been decided upon by either party, but it is understood that if Santa Ana erects a modern studio for the Comique Film Corporation, of which Joseph

M. Schenck is president and Roscoe Arbuckle vice-president, it will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Mr. Arbuckle is thoroughly satisfied with studio facilities at Long Beach, but he is not averse to considering the construction of a studio of his own. The comedian spent his boyhood days in Santa Ana and it was there that he made his first stage appearance.

Theda Bara Arrives on the Coast.

Miss Theda Bara arrived in Los Angeles on February 9. Miss Bara was accompanied by her sister, Miss Loro Bara, eighteen years old, who probably will appear in pictures in the near future.

The player was met at the station by her director, J. Gordon Edwards, who arrived here about a week ago, and members of the executive staff of the Fox Western Studios.

Miss Bara's first production this winter in California will be a picture version of the famous story of "Salome." Elaborate preparations have been made at the Fox studios. It is expected Miss Bara will stay here for several months.

Theater Owners Give Luncheon.

The Theater Owners' Association gave its second luncheon on February 6. About a hundred were present. The guest was Major Woodman, who made a brief address. Several others gave short talks on the theme of business improvement.

A great many exhibitors, film exchange men, representatives of the press and others interested in the business were present. Among those present were Councilwoman Lindsay and a representative of the chief of police, who requested the exhibitors to run a "safety first" film in their theaters to educate the public of the dangers of reckless automobile driving. The object of the meeting, Chairman Quinn stated, was a get-together of those intrusted to talk over important questions for the improvement of the industry. The next meeting was called for February 21, when many of the leading producers were expected to be present.

At the Diando Studios.

The Diando Film Corporation, at Glendale, has finished a five-reel feature, "A Daughter of the West," with Baby Marie Osborne supported by Frank Whitson, Marion Warner, J. Morris Foster, William Quinn, H. H. Lindley and a galaxy of medal wearing cowboys and cowgirls and atmosphere.

The Baby Marie Osborne Company has started work on "Dolly Does Her Bit," which, as is always the case with Baby Marie Osborne features, will be a five-reel one. This is a juvenile play for all ages, most of the action being centered around the children, just enough adults being used to carry out the plot.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

William Farnum is expected soon in the city. He will appear in a series of feature productions under the direction of Frank Lloyd.

Collector of Customs John B. Elliott has been named by the secretary of the treasury as censor of all films shipped into Mexico from Southern California. The collector's work will be to prevent the spread of German propaganda among the Mexican people. Every film must be licensed by the collector and sealed with a customs seal. The collector investigated 200 films since the first of January. He says that so far practically all of the films have been all right.

United States District Judge Trippet appointed W. H. Moore, Jr., as receiver of the Continental Producing Company, with a bond of $3,000. The trial of Robert Goldstein, charged with circulating pro-German propaganda through the exhibition of the picture, is set before United States District Judge Bledsoe for March 12.

Charles T. Dazey has been engaged by the Metro Film Company to write special feature stories for Viola Dana and Edith Storey. Mr. Dazey recently completed an engagement with the American Film Company at Santa Barbara. He is of course best known as the author of "In Old Kentucky," now in its twenty-fifth season, which gives it a world record, but the position he has attained as a writer of photoplays gives promise of equal success in his new field.

Belle Bennett's return to the stage is a success. She opened in Ashton Stevens' new play, "Mary's Way Out," at the Morosco theater of Los Angeles on January 27, and the dramatic critics the next day praised her interpretation of the difficult role of Nora Barrett. It has been several years since she has appeared behind the footlights.

The Sunshine Comedy that Henry Lehrman is making for William Fox has progressed far enough to show that it possesses a distinctly clever story. It has to do with a restaurant and a jail, from one to the other of which the play seems naturally to gravitate. "Ham," otherwise known as Lloyd Hamilton, is the principal figure in the play.

George Beban is trying to decide whether to brave the blizzards which are raging the other side of the Mississippi or remain here until after the spring thaw. Business in connection with the forming of the George Beban Photoplay Company and its launching requires a visit to New York, but the actor hasn't quite made up his mind that he prefers business to comfort.

Walter MacNamara, whose work has ranged from that of moneymaking spectacles to slap-stick comedies, has resigned from the scenario department of the Triangle-Keystone Company and has accepted the offer of F. Eugene Farnsworth of the Masterpiece Film Corporation to affiliate with his organization. Mr. MacNamara has just recovered from a serious nervous breakdown and the news of his recovery will please his many friends of the East and West Coasts.

United Picture Theaters Formed

Promoted by C. R. Seelye—Ochs Is President and Blumenthal Is Treasurer—To Commence March 1.

THE United Pictures of America, Inc., a co-operative film company, owned, financed and controlled by motion picture exhibitors, has opened offices in the Mecca building at 1600 Broadway. The organization of the company has been in progress for several months; the actual incorporation was not completed until the present week. For the most part, the thirty film territories of the United States with fifty experienced exchange managers and salesmen have been arranged for, it is said, and the entire working staff will begin its activities by March 1.

Lee A. Ochs, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, is president of the United; C. R. Seelye, formerly Business Manager for Pathe, Vitagraph and World is vice-president, in charge of the exchange and general business of the company; Louis F. Blumenthal, owner of the National Theater of Jersey City, Palace, Classic and Annex of New York, and Palace of Brooklyn, with three other theaters now in the process of construction, is treasurer; Charles M. Rosenthal, who is interested in a number of New York theaters, is secretary, and Milton M. Goldsmith, one of the best known film lawyers of New York, has been made general counsel. The following statement was issued from the offices of the United:

"The United Picture Theaters of America, Inc., will make no contracts to secure pictures until 2,000 days have been signed, but as a number of days have already been secured the company expects to secure 4,200 days before September 1. The first release will be announced at that time or before and all prices will be based on that number of days.

"The United plan proposes to reduce the film rentals about thirty per cent., giving producers a larger and quicker revenue than under the present expensive exchange system."

NEW PLAYERS FOR TRIANGLE.

With six new feature productions cast in the past week, the large Triangle playing forces have been taxed to the utmost and Casting Director Arthur Hoyt has engaged several new players to round out the production. Among the new faces at the Culver City studios are Zenaida Williams, Harvey Clark, Mary Marsch, five-year-old Frankie Lee, and Alice Knowland.

Novel Motion Picture Camera

G. Bettini's Invention Takes Animated Pictures on Photographic Plates—Definition of Exposures Sharp.

AN invention that is novel and really remarkable has recently been perfected by G. Bettini of the Bettini Syndicate, Inc., New York City. This consists of a camera for the taking of motion pictures on a photographic plate, five inches wide by any reasonable length. The standard, however, in that dimension is eight and a half inches. The photographs are taken in horizontal, parallel lines, and are about one-quarter of an inch square. Each plate can accommodate 576 photographs and, due to the fact that the views are taken at a speed reduced in comparison with the speed at which the standard motion picture film is taken, the plate is the equivalent, in action, to seventy-two feet of standard film.

The taking camera constitutes one part of Mr. Bettini's invention. A simple little projector for the throwing of the positive on the screen completes the device. Each of the 576 photographs may be successively projected, and since there can be no possible danger from fire, the photographic emulsion being carried on an entirely incombustible base—glass—any single picture can be left standing on the screen for an indefinite length of time. This is likely to be a highly important point as applied to educational methods in schools, colleges, and other institutions of learning.

A prominent featuer of Mr. Bettini's invention is that the views are taken with such sharpness as to admit of any one of them being enlarged to almost any desired size, even to a picture six feet high. Hundreds of enlargements, ranging from a miniature to as large as eighteen by twenty-two inches are shown by Mr. Bettini. The definition of these enlargements is remarkable, and owing to the fact that the subject was not conscious of posing for a "still" photograph he acted natural. As a consequence there was a pronounced absence of the "stiffness" or "consciousness" which usually is apparent in portraits of persons who are aware that their pictures are being taken.

With the aid of still another machine, also the invention of Mr. Bettini, the director of motion pictures can reproduce any portion of his production and get lifelike "stills" at a very small cost, plates containing 576 views being obtainable for five cents.

The invention can also be used to advantage in domestic life, photographic records of marriages, parties and members of the family in different stages of life can be made at a very low price for the family archives.

The possibilities of Mr. Bettini's proposition is so numerous that it may revolutionize the method of taking pictures with the present hand camera. The mechanism of the invention is simple and easy of operation.

Walter R. Liebmann, Moore Manager

MOORE'S Theaters Corporation, Tom Moore, president, franchise holder in the First National Exhibitors' Circuit for Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia, announces the opening of the Washington Branch Exchange of the First National at 419 Ninth street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., under the management of Walter R. Liebmann, formerly Washington manager for Goldwyn.

The new exchange is on the first floor in one of the busiest downtown blocks on "the Broadway of the Capital," and is being equipped with the most modern devices for the handling, protection and distribution of films. The ground-floor exchange room, directly between Moore's Strand and Garden theaters and only two blocks distant from Moore's new Rialto theater, to open in the early spring, has the advantage of one of the most accessible and most central locations in the city of Washington. It is, in fact, one of the few exchanges in the Capital City that takes its place among the real business enterprises of the downtown section by occupancy of a splendidly located first-floor room of large area as opposed to the customary second or third floor room on a side street.

Walter R. Liebmann.

Mr. Liebmann, who has been appointed branch manager, is a native of Deadwood, N. D., and has had a continuous experience of about fourteen years in the theatrical business.

Leaving college to enter the profession as an actor upon the vaudeville stage, Mr. Liebmann by force of personality and merit climbed to the position of stage director for Joe Weber—for whom he produced "The Climax," "Alma, Where Do You Live?" and other successes—and later to the same position with Werba & Leuscher, under whose banner he staged "The Rose Maid."

Later Mr. Liebmann served with success as branch manager for Mutual, Boston manager for Triangle, and subsequently Washington manager for Goldwyn.

MRS. THOMPSON WRITES FOR WORLD PICTURES.

Mrs. Marevene Thompson, novelist, playwright and short story writer, whose work appears regularly in several magazines, has given World Pictures the first call on the screen rights to all of her work. The World has just secured two stories from Mrs. Thompson—"The Blood of the Trevors" and "The Heart of a Girl"—which will shortly be screened. Mrs. Thompson brought these stories to the World scenario department on Thursday afternoon, February 14, at five o'clock, and by ten o'clock Friday morning, February 15, they had been accepted and the check in payment for them delivered to Mrs. Thompson. This makes a new record for quick action between an author and a film concern.

New York Operators Hold Ball

Annual Social Event Packs Palm Garden to Overflowing. Rothapfel Leads the Grand March.

THURSDAY night, February 14, the occasion of the fifth annual ball and entertainment of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union 306, I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O., at Palm Garden, New York, saw the most remarkable gathering that has yet marked the social affairs of that organization. Palm Garden was crowded to the limit and an appreciable number of trade notables honored the projectionists by their presence. Among these were S. L. Rothapfel, manager of the Rialto and Rivoli; Virginia Pearson, Sheldon Lewis, Florence Turner, Nellie Anderson and daughter, Larry Trimble, Rose Tapley, Sam Trigger and Judge Strahl, who is, by the way, an honorary member of No. 306.

Among the important members of the union present were Assistant President of the International Crickmore, who was accompanied by Harold Williams of the International General office. Chicago Local 110 sent its two business representatives, Tommy Malloy and C. Brown, who came a thousand miles to attend the ball. President Boscarelli and Secretary-Treasurer Edward W. Bordmann of Local 384, Hudson County, N. J.; President H. R. Manner and Benjamin Siegle of Local 359 of Trenton, N. J. Regrets were received from President and Business Manager Howard of Baltimore Local and Walter G. Murray of the Philadelphia Local.

Mayor Hyland of New York was to have been present, but was unable to attend, and sent his regrets through Judge Strahl.

The guests were introduced by Will C. Smith from the stage, and were given a hearty reception. Especial approval was accorded the remarks of Mr. Rothapfel when he announced that he paid his chief operator $5,000 per year.

A few excellent vaudeville numbers followed, and then came the grand march, which was led by Mr. Rothapfel and Virginia Pearson.

An effort was made to take motion pictures of the grand march, which were to have been developed and shown later to the guests, but the experiment was not entirely successful, largely because of the great crowd and the difficulty of handling some of those present who were determined to get into the picture at places where they did not belong. This delayed the taking and prevented getting a print back to the ballroom before five o'clock, when most of the guests had departed. The pictures were taken by Charles Unger and developed and printed at the Edison Studios in the Bronx.

In all other respects the Operators' Annual Ball was a great success and held the merrymakers till a very late hour Friday morning.

Appreciation for Rothapfel

Bronze Tablet Unveiled in Lobby of Rivoli Commemorating Accomplishments for Moving Pictures.

THE principal event in filmdom Saturday, February 16, was the ceremonial unveiling of a tablet, presented by Famous Players-Lasky, to symbolize the achievements of Samuel Z. Rothapfel in the realm of motion pictures. The tablet, cast in solid bronze, measuring 28 by 42 inches, had been permanently fixed in the east wall of the new Rivoli's lobby. The ceremony was witnessed by a large company of invited guests who, later on, shared Mr. Rothapfel's hospitality in a luncheon given at Churchill's just across Broadway.

It was 11.30 a. m. when the spectators assembled before the tablet. The martial beat of drums and the call of the bugle resounded within the auditorium as the attaches of the Rivoli were engaging in their daily drill, preparatory to opening the doors of the theater for public admittance. William A. Johnston, editor of the Motion Picture News, introduced Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and to Mr. Zukor's speech of presentation Mr. Rothapfel responded. Then Hamish MacLauren, publicist of the Rialto and Rivoli, made the concluding speech (briefest of all), bidding the guests repair to the feast spread for them across the way.

The commemorative tablet is in bas relief, the work of Signor Giuseppe Moretti, an Italian sculptor, who has created a beautiful work of art. The upper half of the panel bears a portrait bust of Mr. Rothapfel. The lower half shows at the left the figure of History leaning on the earth as she inscribes her records. At the right is a figure symbolizing the Motion Picture, with his lens and his reel of film (the first creation of this sort ever conceived) throwing a shaft of light that illuminates the earth for History. Floating above these figures is the Spirit of Music, thus completing the suggestion of the new type of entertainment which Mr. Rothapfel originated. The inscription on the bas relief reads as follows:

"Dedicated to S. L. Rothapfel, the pioneer and leader in artistic presentation of motion pictures, on the occasion of his opening the Rivoli theater, December, 1917. Presented by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation—Adolph Zukor, president; Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president; Cecil B. De Mille, director general."

Southern Exhibitors Prosper

Theater Patronage Shows Marked Improvement—Showless Tuesdays Thought to Have Boosted Amusements.

THE short-lived Tuesday closing order of the Food and Fuel Administrator for Uncle Sam has worked to a very appreciable advantage with the motion picture exhibitors. When the order went into effect there were many predictions of ruin for the theater owners, but happily all of these predictions have failed. The theater business in the South is showing a marked improvement. It looks as if the enforced closing of the places of amusement for one day in the week has brought the people to a realization of the convenience of the motion picture as an entertainment. At least this is taken as one of the reasons for the rush which has been apparent since the order went into effect and, now that it is lifted, the patronage of the theaters is as great as ever.

In New Orleans on Sundays it is an impossibility to find accommodations for the crowds at any of the places of amusement. The "pop" vaudeville and picture theaters are jammed, and it is no uncommon sight to witness a line of three or four hundred patiently awaiting the chance to buy tickets. The suburban houses are just as fortunate when it comes to the Sunday audiences, and during the week a relatively high proportion of attendance is recorded. Every manager in the city is elated over the favorable turn in the tide of business and reports from all sections of this film territory are to the effect that business is exceptionally good.

Of course a lot of the weaker theaters have been closed during the winter, but this fact has worked no hardship upon any one save the man who has been so unfortunate or unprogressive as to be unable to hold his patrons. The theaters that are now in operation are generally making money. An exhibitor from Wisconsin has been in New Orleans for two weeks endeavoring to purchase all or a substantial interest in a going motion picture theater and he has at this writing failed entirely, although he has made a diligent canvass among the owners. Predictions are now freely made that the improvement will continue.

FELIX MALITZ AGAIN IN TOILS.

Felix Malitz has again been incarcerated together with his secretary, Gustav Engler, in Raymond Street jail, Brooklyn, N. Y., and the bail of each raised from $3,000 to $10,000. The occasion for this action on the part of the Department of Justice is said to be on account of revelations connected with the arrest of an American army captain as a spy at Washington. Malitz and Engler were under bail on account of former charges.

While Malitz claimed at the hearing before Judge Chatfield that his business was exporting films, documents of the greatest importance to the United States government were found in his possession and U. S. District Attorney Beer characterized him as one of the cleverest propogandists that ever came into that court.

Judge Chatfield said that he would entertain an application from the District Attorney to intern Malitz and remanded both men without bail, but later fixed their bail at $10,000 each.

DINNER TO WILLIAM FOX.

Arrangements have been completed for the dinner to William Fox in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor, Sunday evening, February 24. The dinner will take the form of a tribute to Mr. Fox for his record of public service in the field of charity and in his own profession. The following is the list of speakers: Toastmaster, Wilton Lackaye; Rennold Wolf, Arthur Brisbane, De Wolf Hopper, Felix M. Warburg, Victor J. Dowling, Raymond Hitchcock and William A. Brady.

Exhibitors Give Thought to Business

Jesse Goldberg Finds Great Transformation in Picture Trade Throughout the Country

OF THE many things I have learned on my tour of the United States, just completed, investigating the conditions of the motion picture field generally, I find that of all of the three branches of the motion picture industry, namely, producer, exchange man and exhibitor, but one has made progress with the march of events and the ever changing conditions that necessarily attach to any youthful industry.

I took particular pains on this trip to investigate the demands of the exhibitor and his activities, largely because of the fact that the requirements of the exhibitor represent the choice of the ultimate consumer, namely, the public While heretofore and up to a period possibly of six months ago the exhibitor was content to give his patrons a production as handed him by the exchange, without any embellishment and without attempting to use original ideas of showmanship. My later investigation revealed to me the astounding fact that generally the theaters I visited from coast to coast and from Gulf to the Great Lakes exerted themselves to stage or present their features in a manner both attractive and befitting the production itself.

As an instance, let me recite what has been done in some of the representative houses in the country. The Pearces theaters in New Orleans receive the personal visit of E. J. Pearce at least once a day, rehearsals are held with the entire program before public presentation, and from the ticket seller to the ushers one is made to feel that they are at a performance given solely for their individual benefit. Original publicity is circulated and the management does not confine itself to the use of stereotype press sheets issued by an exchange in connection with the release.

In San Francisco, the California theater, under the active management of Harry David, is operated along lines no less than our boastful theaters in New York. The most competent of help is employed, and this, added to the wonderful theater itself, the acme of comfort, has necessarily placed this new establishment within an incredibly short time in the front ranks of motion picture palaces. A printed program is circulated, that by its make-up and its contents is even superior to the programs of legitimate Broadway attractions.

The New Mission Theater, a neighborhood house in San Francisco with a ten cent top price, is conducted very much along the same lines as the California Theater, and in catering to the women folks they even go so far as to provide nurses to mind the infants while the mothers seek their recreation. It was a novel sight, but I am informed, not an uncommon one, to have seen about two hundred babes in arms and in carriages under the care of intelligent matrons in the rear of the auditorium, and strange to say, there was not a whimper or an infantile cry that lasted more than three seconds.

I made studious inquiries as to whether the war tax has materially interfered with the attendance, and in every instance I met with the same response "NO." The demands of the theaters are based upon a legitimate study of the likes and dislikes of the patrons. Comedy of a non slap-stick variety seems to be a national necessity. Program pictures are used largely because there is nothing better consistently furnished, but a theater would prefer to play a big production and pay twice what they would pay for a program, and play it twice as long in preference to the program variety.

Stars are, fortunately, of secondary importance. In but one out of the thirty-two large houses I visited was the statement made that they are first interested in the star of the production before booking it. Of course open booking is preferential to program booking, but the managers feel they must have recourse to the program in order to safeguard a steady service.

For the first time in my experience I have learned that the theaters require trade paper advertising. This not alone because it is the quickest and best medium of their being advised of the new release, but also, strange as it may sound, patrons somewhere and somehow, in a good many instances get the trade papers, and one reader will by word of mouth acquaint possibly one hundred others with what they have learned through a trade magazine.

I suggested to several managers that in the rest or lounge rooms they have three or four copies of each issue of the leading trade publications for the benefit of their patrons. This suggestion was made upon the psychological theory that those living outside the mysteries of motion picturedom would likely become greater enthusiasts and more steady patrons, if, with the help of their theater they know a little of the trade gossip and workings of producers and actors.

The exhibition end of the motion picture industry is in a solid, prosperous condition, and the business is run along strict commercial lines. Of course in certain localities, local laws occasioned by the stress of war times have placed a slight burden upon the shoulders of the exhibitors, but they are not complaining, the only demand being for productions really worth while.

Ohio Censors Ban "Song of Songs"

Cleveland Artcraft Manager, E. T. Gerrish, Will Combat Decision in Court.

ALTHOUGH not interfered with on the speaking stage, "The Song of Songs," an Artcraft picture featuring Elsie Ferguson, has been rejected by the Ohio Board of Censors on the ground that the story is harmful. Acting upon orders from New York, Manager E. T. Gerrish, of the Cleveland Artcraft offices, has prepared to give the censors a stiff legal fight to get this picture on the screens of Ohio.

The picture was booked for first run at the Mail and Alhambra theaters, Cleveland, starting Sunday, February 17. Only a year or so ago, Irene Fenwick appeared in the leading cities of the state in the stage version and made a big hit.

The story of "The Song of Songs" is similar to "The Easiest Way," which just about one year ago was passed by the board and played throughout Ohio.

About two weeks ago the board turned down Mary MacLane in "Men Who Have Made Love to Me." It may be that the members object to a heroine having too many lovers, as Mary had six and Elsie had three in "The Song of Songs."

Critics of Cleveland newspapers were indignant when they heard of the board's action. They had seen "The Song of Songs" screened before it was sent to the censors and had made particular comment upon the excellent taste and artistic finish of the director, the late Joseph Kaufman.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of February 17 at New York's Motion Picture Houses.

THE RIALTO.—William S. Hart in "Blue Blazes Rawden," an Artcraft picture written by J. G. Hawks, in which the star appears as a lumber boss and the scenes are laid in the Canadian Northwest, was the leading attraction at the Rialto the week of February 10. The picture was directed by Hart himself, under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince. Rialto Animated Magazine, a comedy and an educational subject were also included. Albert Pellaton and Sascha Fidelman were the soloists.

THE RIVOLI.—"The Song of Songs," with Elsie Ferguson as the heroine of the Artcraft screen version of the play made by Edward Sheldon from the Sudermann novel, was the principal feature at the Rivoli. An added feature was the third installment of "Hunting Big Game in the North." Other pictures were the Animated Pictorial and a comedy. Two of Helen Moller's pupils danced, and Helena Morrill and the Rialto Male Quartette were also on the program.

THE STRAND.—John Barrymore in "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," was the feature at the Strand. The screen version of the E. W. Hornung novel and stage play brings out all the strong points of this celebrated crook story. Marie Dressler in a farce-comedy, "The Agonies of Agnes," headed the special features. A scenic of the Riviera and the Topical Review were also shown. The soloists were Don Alonzo Zalaya and Grace Hoffman.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET THEATER.—Dorothy Dalton in "Love Letters" the first half of the week. Mabel Normand in "Dodging a Million" the latter half.

BROADWAY.—"Tarzan of the Apes" continues its record-breaking run.

C. C. Hite Goes Into State Right Business

Younger Brother of Late C. J. Hite Becomes Associated with R. K. Shallenberger.

C. C. HITE, of Cincinnati, a well-known buyer and distributor of motion pictures in that section of the country, has bought the Ohio rights of Edward Warren's production, "Souls Redeemed," and several other features, contracts for which have just been signed by Hite and W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation.

During his recent trip to New York Hite announced that he had become an independent state rights operator and had taken into partnership with him R. K. Shallenberger, brother of the head of the Arrow Film Corporation. Thereby hangs an interesting coincidence. W. E. Shallenberger and the late Charles J. Hite were schoolmates in Lancaster, Ohio, and, following their college days, became business partners in many big ventures.

Shallenberger and Hite were instrumental in bringing the Thanhouser Film Company into being, as well as several other producing organizations, and both played an influential part in the growth of the industry.

C. C. Hite is the youngest brother of the late Charles J. Hite, and R. K. Shallenberger is the youngest brother of W. E. Shallenberger of the Arrow Corporation. Both are following, so to speak, in the footsteps of their older brothers.

For several years Hite has represented various organizations in Ohio, including Mutual, Triangle, Goldwyn and Jewel. His decision to become an independent operator followed a study of picture conditions not only in Ohio, but throughout the country. He states he discovered a decided trend throughout the industry towards independence and, realizing he could broaden the scope of his own activities, he entered the independent field in Ohio with his own organization. The new firm will be conducted in Mr. Hite's name. Offices have already been opened in Cincinnati and other cities in Ohio.

Novel Photography in "The Life Mask."

"The Life Mask," the third special production listed for release on Madame Olga Petrova's starring calendar for a premiere in March, is marked by the introduction of what is claimed to be a new photographic effect. In several of the scenes in which the famous Polish artiste appears she is called upon to go through the realities of a terrible nightmare, during which period her mental condition becomes hazy and unbalanced. During this time of mental stress her husband is murdered. She is shown seated well in the background of the set. As sleep begins to overpower her every object on the set is thrown out of focus with the exception of the central figure of the star herself. She is then brought slowly toward the lens with staring eyes and terror-stricken mien. Gradually the scene is thrown out of focus again and the mental aberration which takes place is conveyed by the befogged and murky atmosphere of the picture. As the leading character slowly lapses into normal once more the same trick is again resorted to, this time first throwing the background in and out of proper focus and then cutting sharply to a close-up of Madame Petrova clearly defined in natural pose. The idea is registered without subtitles.

Another unusual piece of camera work is a scene depicting a death chamber. The camera has been masked top and bottom, photographing just enough of the picture to convey the impression of death without showing the body.

"The Life Mask" was directed by Frank Crane, producer of Goldwyn's recent production, "Thais," and photographed by Messrs. Lane and Harris. The story has been scenariorized by Mrs. L. Case Russell. It is scheduled for release through the exchanges of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit during the month of March.

Whartons Return to Ithaca Studio.

After a three weeks' stay in New York filming scenes in "The Eagle's Eye," Leopold D. and Theodore W. Wharton, Inc., who are producing the picture, have returned to the home studios in Ithaca, N. Y. With two exceptions they were accompanied by the entire company, including King Baggot and Marguerite Snow, and a score of additional people engaged in New York, who will be used in later episodes. George A. Lessey, director, and K. M. Turner, an assistant director in charge of locations, will remain in New York for a few days to make final plans for more outdoor scenes when the company returns to film later episodes. The locations taken in New York include scenes on the wharves of New York Harbor, sections of the stockyards in Jersey City, and other points in the harbor which were the object of German plotting. "The Eagle's Eye" company will have to return to New York after the weather becomes milder, for only the occurrences which actually took place in the winter were photographed on the trip just ended.

"Carmen of the Klondike" (S. R. D.)

C. Mell Simmons, general manager of State Right Distributors, Inc., advises that printing work is being rushed on their first release, "Carmen of the Klondike," and that the first shipment will be forwarded within a few days so that prints will be in the hands of all exchanges by March 1. He further states that particular attention is being given to the advertising aids, and while the artistic end is not being neglected, it is being subordinated to the idea of furnishing such heralds, displays, posters, etc., as will forcefully present actual scenes from the picture that will stimulate interest and produce box-office results. In this connection he mentions a fight which takes place in the latter part of the picture, where Ed Coxen and Hershall Mayall commence a struggle inside a building, the furniture is overturned, a fire starts by the explosion of a lighted lamp, the combatants stagger into the street and continue the struggle in the street in the mud amid the downpour of rain in the teeth of an arctic gale, watched by dancehall girls in flimsy costumes and miners who ignore the wrath of the elements, until at last an unexpected climax occurs.

John Barrymore in "Raffles."

VERSATILITY has always been considered the most characteristic mark of greatness in gauging the rank of dramatic stars. From comedy to tragedy, John Barrymore shifts with as much ease as an artist does his colors on a palette. There is no phase of the player's art that seems to be a bar to his wonderful genius. Whether he appears as a helpless piece of human driftwood in Galsworthy's "Justice," or a depraved denizen of the underworld, as he did in Willard Mack's "Kick In," he always is able to create the illusion of the character he is enacting at the time.

In Mr. Barrymore's being chosen by the L. Lawrence Weber Photo Dramas, Inc., to play the title role of "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," he was given an opportunity to follow the footsteps of one of the stage's most polished heroes, the late Kyrle Bellew, but Mr. Barrymore preferred to work out his own ideas as to the manner in which he was to portray this famous character of fiction, and in many respects those who know Mr. Hornung's stories intimately prefer Mr. Barrymore's idea of the character to that of the late Mr. Bellew.

Mr. Barrymore's prior appearances on the screen were confined to comedy, and few of the motion picture lovers knew him as an artist of major standing as the result of his playing in comedies. The super-critical are seeing in Barrymore a screen star whose work is full of intelligence, intensity and charm.

Film Showing Nets $2,000 for Charity.

Entertainment held at the St Francis Hotel, San Francisco, on Friday, February 5, at which Sidney Alcott's production, "The Belgian," handled by U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, was shown for benefit of war-stricken Belgium, resulted in upward of $2,000 being collected in admissions.

The event was held under the joint auspices of Mrs. Harriet Fay Richards, a prominent California society leader; Mr. Sidney Olcott and Mr. Frank G. Hall, president and general manager of the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation. A number of prominent film folk now engaged on the Coast also were present, as were the Rev. Edward Hanna, Archbishop of San Francisco, the Rev. Nichols, and other prominent clergymen. Arrangements for the entertainment, which, besides "The Belgian," included a long musical program, were made by the California Commission for relief in Belgium and France.

Howard Sheehan, manager and director of the Rialto theater, San Francisco, who has booked "The Belgian," furnished two machines, by which the Olcott production was projected on the screen, set up in the Colonial ballroom of the hotel. John Bowles and Joe Jacoby donated their services as operators, and William Unmach, a prominent San Francisco newspaper man, handled the publicity end.

Manufacturer to Exhibitor Plan Progresses

Pettijohn, Rapf, Golden and Levine Touring Country Report Satisfactory Results in Interesting Theater Men in New Project.

PRODUCERS' and Exhibitors' Affiliated have received a telegram signed by Joe Hopp, of the American Exhibitors' Association, and Louis Frank, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, of America, reading as follows:

"We both just promised Pettijohn that we would bury the hatchet and put over this exhibitors' relief offered by you at tomorrow's meeting. It's good enough to make us shake hands.

(Signed.) "JOE HOPP and L. FRANK."

Another item of interest is a telegram from C. C. Pettijohn and Harry Rapf announcing that the direct booking plan has been accepted and approved in Ohio, and a committee of nine has been appointed to incorporate and guarantee the quota.

C. C. Pettijohn and Harry Rapf left New York last Sunday for Chicago representing the Producers' and Exhibitors' Affiliated to carry on a vigorous campaign for the direct booking plan in the Middle West. Their success has exceeded their highest hopes. They took with them Herbert Brenon's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," in which Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson makes his American debut on the screen.

Joseph A. Golden, who has just returned from a trip to the South, states he has closed negotiations covering Maryland, North and South Carolina, Delaware, District of Columbia, which will be handled by H. M. Crandall, Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama.

Louis Levine, after a trip to Albany, where he conferred with up-state exhibitors, announces that arrangements were made covering New York State with the exception of New York City; also that at a meeting of the New Jersey exhibitors, held at the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark, on February 12, the plan was adopted; further, that New York and eastern Pennsylvania exhibitors have joined.

A representative of the Producers and Exhibitors Affiliated advises that their plan is being welcomed by exhibitors in all parts of the country, and they are in receipt of very encouraging telegrams from many men prominent in the industry, including H. B. Varner of the M. P. E. L. of North Carolina, F. J. Herrington of Pittsburgh, Peter J. Jeup of Detroit, Alfred S. Black of Rockland, Maine, and S. C. Hurley of St. John, N. B., Canada; and Frank Rembusch wires that he is rounding up his territory with excellent results.

LARKIN FINISHES "ZONGAR."

Macfadden Romance Now Offered in Five Compact Reels of Death-Defying Stunts and Thrills.

GEORGE LARKIN took his hat and coat and "blew" Bernard Macfadden's Physical Culture shop last Saturday. By mid-month Mr. Larkin's labors with "Zongar" were completed, a job he has been working steadily on since last summer. He shook hands heartily with the "governor," told him he would be ready next time to jump off Trinity steeple, make the transatlantic flight, or do any other little thing that might be required, said good-bye to the office staff, and went down the Flatiron building in the lift just like ordinary folks.

For the last month Mr. Larkin and Mr. Macfadden have been working like majors in the assembly room till they got "Zongar" down to solid "meat." There are five reels of the stunt picture now. By trimming unessential action and retaining all the thrills they produced a truly hair-raising spectacle, the kind that the anaemic and weak-hearted should avoid, but the red-blooded will gloat over.

The exploitation campaign opened in good earnest the first of February, with page advertising announcements and an active state rights selling campaign. Among the selling points are George Larkin's tremendous draught as a "stunt" star; the feats, themselves, surpassing anything previously done in this line; the romance and glory of athleticism, so dear to American audiences, and the many fascinating types of physical beauty presented.

George Larkin is to make another picture for the Physical Culture Company probably under next summer's sunny skies, but in the meantime is considering an offer from a large program corporation to star in a serial. Mr. Larkin is best known to fandom as the hero of "Trey o' Hearts" and "Grant, Police Reporter."

Advertising for "The Eagle's Eye."

An advertising campaign in co-operation with the exhibitor has been arranged for "The Eagle's Eye," the twenty-episode expose of the plottings of the German Government in this country. The campaign book maps out a campaign which, in detail, is as comprehensive for the local field as most noted campaigns have been in the national field.

Six single column cuts for newspaper insertion or for use as "throwaways" constitute the beginning of the local campaign. These contain no direct reference to the picture, but are intended to arouse interest. One depicts the medal distributed throughout Germany to commemorate the sinking of the Lusitania.

The direct display advertising has been prepared with the purpose of connecting it up closely to the publicity which has been given in newspapers everywhere to the subject matter of the serial as a whole and of each separate episode. Such titles as "The Song of Hate," "The Destruction of the Atlantic Fleet," "The Crime of the Ages" (across a picture showing the sinking of the Lusitania) and others feature each cut, followed by copy emphasizing the authenticity of the facts shown by the picture, attested by the authorship of the serial, which was written by W. J. Flynn, former chief of the U. S. Secret Service. The banners, heralds, slides, lobby displays and portraits, all are a departure from the ordinary in this line. The banner is in four colors and is manufactured of heavy waterproofed canvas, prepared to stand twenty weeks of any kind of weather.

Novelty stunts are suggested for lobby or window display. Photographs of various articles of unusual interest, with methods for duplicating them at slight expense, and a description of how they can be incorporated into attractive displays are in this section of the book. Ciphers used by the German agents, which can be duplicated on a typewriter, are also shown with suggestions as to how they can be used as the basis of displays.

"Redemption" for Pacific Coast.

Julius L. Lazarus has purchased from the Nanuet Amusement Corporation the rights to Julius Steger's "Redemption," featuring Evelyn Nesbit and her son, Russell Thaw, for the territory including California, Nevada, and Arizona. He expects to open his offices in San Francisco and Los Angeles. N. R. Greathouse has joined Mr. Lazarus in his new venture in the West.

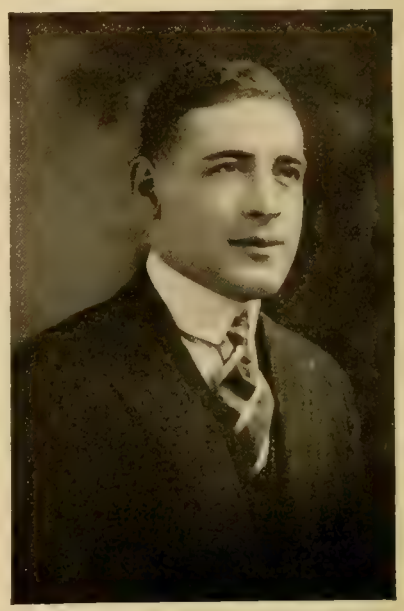
Mr. Lazarus states, while his previous motion picture activities have been confined to the East and Canada, he will make San Francisco his center of activity in the future.

Burstein Brings "The Orderly."

Louis Burstein, president and general manager of the King-Bee Films Corp., has arrived in New York from Hollywood with the latest Billy West-King-Bee comedy entitled "The Orderly," which will be released on March 1.

Jesse Levine with Magnet.

Jesse Levine, who will be in charge of the New York territory for the Magnet Film exchange, is one of the most popular film men in the New York territory. Mr. Levine started his film career with the Pathe exchange as booker. He then joined the World Film Corporation in the capacity of New York representative, later becoming assistant sales manager. He left this organization, becoming associated with the new Vitagraph Distributing Co., and while with the Vitagraph was ranked with the top notchers. For the past year Mr. Levine represented the Metro in New York.



Jesse Levine.

He has a characteristic that is rare amongst film salesmen, but it has secured for him the lasting friendship of all exhibitors; that of eliminating misrepresentation from his business principles. While, at all times, he had his organization's interest at heart, at the same time he had in mind the interest of the exhibitors with whom he did business.

Flynn Serial Used to Teach Police.

Arrangements are being made for a private showing of "The Eagle's Eye" to the police and detective forces of every city in which Foursquare exchanges are located. The pictures will be shown as an educational feature, pointing out the methods employed by German agents and the methods used to circumvent them.

The first episode shows the plot which resulted in the sinking of the Lusitania. Another is the plan to blow up the flagship Connecticut as she steamed at the head of the Atlantic fleet in the Hudson River in review for President Wilson. Still another episode shows the attempt to blow up the Hotel Ansonia in New York while the officers' ball, attended by many of the higher officers of the Atlantic fleet, was in progress. In this episode, as the guests entered the ballroom each was searched thoroughly for concealed articles by Secret Service operators, and not one of them even suspected it. The operators were attendants at the cloak rooms.

Seiver Books Jester Comedies.

F. J. Fegan, of The Standard Film Corporation, St. Louis, advises that "The Recruit" will have its premier showing in that territory at William Siever's New Grand Central theater, one of the largest and handsomest theaters in Missouri; also, that Mr. Siever has booked all Jester comedies, not only for this theater, but for his downtown St. Louis house, the Grand Central theater, as well .

BREESE APPEARS IN RAVER'S "THE MASTER CROOK."

Edmund Breese, Who Plays Mysterious Cracksman, Also Appearing in "Why Marry?" One of Season's Successes.

HARRY RAVER'S newest production, "The Master Crook," which he is about to launch for distribution to state rights buyers, signalizes the return to the silent drama of Edmund Breese, the well known "man of many faces," whose success in stage characterizations has been noteworthy. Co-incident with his picture appearance in Mr. Raver's production, Edmund Breese is appearing at the Astor theater, on Broadway, in "Why Marry?", one of the successes of the year. Devotees of the theater will recall the memorable nation-wide tour of Mr. Breese in the famous play, "The Master Mine," and in the late Charles Klein's plays, "The Lion and the Mouse" and "The Third Degree."

Among Mr. Breeze's picture triumphs, perhaps his best work was done in "The Spell of the Yukon," "The Walls of Jericho," and "The Master Mind." He was selected by Harry Raver for the unique role of "The Master Crook" because Mr. Breese wrote the story, and therefore created a role for himself unlikely to suit any other actor.

Heading Mr. Breese's company of players in "The Master Crook" is Alma Hanlon, of the famous Hanlon family of pantomimists, who for twenty-five years presented "Fantasma," "Superba," and "Voyage en Suisse." Alma Hanlon's recent appearences in pictures include "The Whip," "The Libertine," "The Public Defender," and "Pride and the Devil." She has appeared in nine recent productions under Harry Raver's management.

Hoffman Again Visits Exchanges.

M. H. Hoffman, of Foursquare Pictures, left recently for a trip which will take him to nearly every one of the twenty-one exchanges of this organization before he again returns to New York. It is Mr. Hoffman's fourth visit to the branches within the past four months, but he is a believer in giving personal co-operation to his managers.

"The fairest treatment to an exchange head," said Mr. Hoffman, "is to get out and work with him in developing his organization. It seems to me that the head of an institution should be willing, as well as able, to lend active assistance that will yield business. It is all very well to supervise from the home office, but there is nothing like being on the ground and putting a shoulder to the wheel. Foursquare Pictures has found its clientele and is doing its utmost to deserve its patronage. When we sell a picture to an exhibitor our work is just begun. From that moment on we continue to aid in getting the greatest amount of business for it that is possible. To keep our exhibitor-patrons satisfied is our first thought.

"I am looking forward with keenest interest to the success of 'The Eagle's Eye' and 'The Cast-Off,' the six-part Thomas H. Ince feature in which Bessie Barriscale is starred. I have said that I looked for a revival of business, and Foursquare indications are that it is close at hand."

Frank Hall Reports Good Business.

Frank G. Hall, president of the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, advises that the business being done with "The Belgian" is exceeding their expectations, and that it has been booked for entire week-runs in a number of houses in various sections of the country, including the Olympic theater, Boston. He further states that numerous letters and telegrams indicate that their other productions, "The Zeppelin's Last Raid" and "Those Who Pay," are doing splendid business.

Special Room for Out-of-Town Buyers

General Enterprises Provides Headquarters for Convenience of Visiting State Right Men.

THE latest idea to be placed into effect by Sawyer and Lubin, of General Enterprises, is the renting of a special room adjoining their suite of offices, which is to be fitted up especially for the convenience and use of visiting film men and out of town state rights buyers. The room will contain all of the appointments necessary for the conducting of business, and a stenographer will be provided to handle correspondence, write contracts, and attend to the other details which enter into the buying of state rights pictures. Complete information relative to hotels, theaters, and the location of the various film offices will be at the disposal of the out-of-town exchangemen, and Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin desire the entire field of territorial film men to know that the room has been designed especially for their convenience and use.

In addition arrangements are being made for the construction of a projection room adjoining the General Enterprises offices, which is to be used not only for the screening of their particular feature films, but will be at the disposal of visiting state rights buyers who must witness the productions of various film companies during their stay in New York. In order to lend the proper atmosphere to the projection of the General Enterprises, Inc., features, which include "The Warrior," "Mother," "The Liar" and "The Crucible of Life," a piano will be placed in the screening room. This may be used for the interpretation of musical-cues, in order that the buyers may judge of their value.

Showing of "King-Bee" Comedies.

Thursday, February 21, the King-Bee Films Corporation will show to the trade reviewers and the board of censors the four latest Billy West-King-Bee comedies that recently arrived from the studio at Hollywood, entitled "The Rogue," "His Day Out," "The Stranger" and "The Orderly."

The showing will take place at the Miles Projection Rooms, 220 West Forty-second street, New York.

Trade Showing for "Triumph of Venus."

After several months of preparation, Edwin Bower Hesser's mythological spectacle, "The Triumph of Venus," is ready and will be shown to the trade on Tuesday morning, February 26, at the Strand theater. It is said a surprise is in store for motion picturedom in this feature.

The star is Betty Lee, a beautiful southern girl, who plays the role of Venus, the Goddess of Love and Beauty. The solution of the problem as to how the Venus de Milo statue lost its arms is part of the story, which has to do with both the heavenly loves and the earthly wanderings of the deities of Mount Olympus.

Swimming scenes of beauty are included in one portion of the spectacle. Seven states were visited in filming the production, ranging from the White Mountains of New Hampshire to the sandy shore of Florida, to find the necessary outdoor settings for each of the seven hundred scenes. To get views on the very tops of mountains, it was necessary for the company to camp far above the timber line, where they went through a four days' storm during which their tents were ripped to pieces and even their food swept away by a sixty-mile-per-hour gale of wind. The swimming scenes were taken amid the icy waters of northern Maine, and such risks as swimming over waterfalls and through dangerous rapids became of every-day occurrence.

Edwin Bower Hesser was both the director of the production and the author of the story. The cast supporting Miss Lee includes William Sherwood, Phyllis Beveridge, Grace Hamel, Hassan Mussalli, Percy Standing and a large number in minor roles. The photography is from the camera of Otto Brautigam. The orchestral score was arranged by Don Richardson.

Directors of State Right Distributors to Meet.

On February 21, the Board of Directors of State Right Distributors, Inc., will hold a meeting in New York, when a number of business matters will be taken up, including the mapping out of a further campaign for progress and enlargement of the policies of the organization as suggested by President Sol. Lesser, who has fully recovered from the effects of his recent operation, and is back in harness with his usual indomitable energy.

On this trip the directors will also act as a buying committee in selecting additional pictures to be released following "Carmen of the Klondike," and General Manager C. Mell Simmons has arranged for a number of pictures to be shown for their examination.

It is expected that the following directors will be present: Sol. L. Lesser, of the All-Star Feature Film Co., San Francisco, president; Louis Hass, of Pioneer Film Corporation, New York, secretary; C. Mell Simmons, general manager; L. D. Netter, of Masterpiece Film Attraction, Cleveland, secretary; H. Dollman, of Doll-Van Co., Indianapolis; Harry Grelle, of Supreme Photoplay Productions, Pittsburgh, and J. J. Allen, of Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., Toronto.

Steiner Talks of Trip.

William Steiner, of the Jester Comedy Company, featuring Tweede-Dan, stated that he was surprised to see how many of the exhibitors throughout the United States had adopted a policy of seeing before buying.

A great number of the larger houses have installed special projection rooms for private screenings, and in many cases engage the services of a critic. Mr. Steiner said the smaller exhibitor either attends the regular performances at the big theaters, or has the pictures shown after his regular night show, and it is not an uncommon thing to find exhibitors at their theaters at twelve, one and two in the morning, looking over pictures. The exhibitor is getting more educated as to what constitutes good pictures. He is getting closer to his audience and knows what they want. While this works a hardship on the exchange and salesmen, the result will be that the producers will learn what is needed, and manufacture accordingly.

Exhibitors are demanding good, clean, wholesome pictures with a touch of comedy and a thrill. In the comedy line, comedies that work fast and full of stunts are much in demand, but they do not want those that are suggestive or offensive. Each day sees a greater demand for pictures that constitute good, clean, and wholesome entertainment.

Program of Producers and Exhibitors Affiliated.

The Producers and Exhibitors affiliated plan to release their first offering, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," starring Forbes Robertson, early in March, and advise the second picture will probably be the Harry Rapf production, "The Struggle Everlasting," with Florence Reed, while the third will be the Rialto Film Corporation's "The Woman Opposite," a mystery story.

Gerard Sees "My Four Years In Germany"

Luncheon Given for Trade Paper Representatives by "My Four Years in Germany, Inc." at Hotel Astor, February 9, When Ambassador James W. Gerard Explained His Reasons for Picturizing His Experience With the Imperial Government.

IT IS difficult to realize from the dignified bearing and unfurrowed brow of Ambassador James W. Gerard the harrowing scenes of which he has been an eyewitness and the strain under which he worked in the interests of America in the hotbed of German diplomacy.

It is only the realization that he is about to undergo a dangerous operation, due to an infection caught in a German prison camp, that one begins to realize the personal hazards through which he has passed.

Mr. Gerard is intensely interested in the forthcoming production from his book and, realizing the dangers of the surgeon's knife, he expressed a desire to see the picture even though Director William Nigh has not quite completed the titling and assembling.

"I was impressed," said Mr. Gerard, in a recent talk to a gathering of film representatives," by the eagerness shown by the thousands of people who flocked to hear my lectures, to learn about the inside history of this gigantic struggle of nations, and my interest in this film production is so great, because I realize the vastness of the audiences reached in the motion picture theater and the thoroughness and reality with which the story is told in this film. If there be any American in whose mind there is still a question of the necessity of America's entry into this war, the production will settle that question forever."

It shows Prussianism as it really is—the Kaiser, whose oath is worth nothing whether he pledges himself as monarch or man; Tirpitz, Hindenburg and the Imperial ring, who toasted Gerard and lauded America while they were sinking neutral vessels and sending American citizens to watery graves and fabricating lies, plots and conspiracies to sow among Americans here.

It shows the iron hold of Prussianism on the German people, the outrages of women and children in Belgium and France, the systematic starvation and mistreatment of prisoners, the deportation and enslaving of noncombatants, the deliberate ravaging of towns and countries, the sinking of neutral vessels and the attitude of the Emperor and his clique toward America before war was dreamed of here. You will be amazed at what Germany intended to do to us. You will see the Emperor tell Gerard why Germany invaded Belgium, the many insults and indignities to which America was subjected, facts and incidents that Germany never intended to see the light of day.

Lust Reports Good Business with Ivans.

Sidney B. Lust, president of Super-Film Attractions, is going right ahead with his usual good work. Troublesome times, Garfield orders, zero weather only urge him to more effective work. It is, therefore, that the Ivan Publicity Department, which is initiating a publicity campaign throughout the country, is pleased to be able to quote Mr. Lust:

"I am handling your productions, 'Babbling Tongues' and 'Married in Name Only.' Both subjects are giving satisfaction, and are of good construction and photography. The exhibitors have shown their approval of the first named subject, but the latter is only starting off. Tom Moore played 'Babbling Tongues' to a wonderful business; also the Hippodrome, Baltimore; and as a result of the advertising from these engagement we enjoyed a number of good bookings throughout the State of Maryland."

Ivan Film Productions again urge all handling their productions to co-operate with their publicity department, so as to produce the best possible results for all concerned.

Keeney Forms Distributing Corporation.

The Frank A. Keeney Distributing Corporation has been organized for the purpose of marketing the feature photoplays of the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation. It is the intention to handle New York State, New Jersey and New England direct, and probably to state right other territory. Frank A. Keeney is president of the new concern; Ray C. Owens, secretary-treasurer and general manager, and Mayer C. Goldman, general counsel. The headquarters will be in the Putnam Building, Broadway and 43d street, New York, where Mr. Keeney's general executive offices are located. There will also be offices in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and other cities.

"A Romance of the Underworld," which is to be the first release of the producing company, promises to be an interesting picture, not only because of the fact that it stars Catherine Calvert, but also because of the intrinsic interest of the story and because of the talented cast with which her director, James Kirkwood, has surrounded her, including David Powell, Eugene O'Brien, Edwin Forsberg and Sybil Carmen.

Sterling Secures "The Natural Law."

Under the terms of a deal just concluded France Films, who have been handling "The Natural Law," featuring Marguerite Courtot, dispose of the entire rights to this picture for the United States and Canada, with the exception of greater New York, to the Sterling Pictures Corporation.

SALES OF THE WEEK.
Activities in the State Right Market During Past Seven Days.

General Enterprises announce the sale of New York state rights to "Mother" to the Modern Feature Film Company, and advise that the entire territory for "The Warrior" has been sold.

Frank J. Seng advises that Fred D. Murphy of the United Film Service, Inc., who is already handling "Parentage" for New England, will also have change of the distribution of this picture for New York State, from his office at 86 Exchange street, Buffalo.

General Enterprises announce that the rights to "The Crucible of Life" for Australia and New Zealand have been sold to George Meyer, an English buyer, and that other foreign territory has been secured by J. Frank Brockliss.

Following sales of Jester comedies have been made by the Jester Comedy Company: to R. M. Savini, 63 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., for North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee; to Foursquare Pictures Inc., 1911½ Commerce street, Dallas, Texas, for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas; to Foursquare Pictures, Inc., New Orleans, for Louisiana and Mississippi; to R. D. Marson Attraction Company, 26 Peidmont street, Boston, for the New England states.

* * *

Fun-Art Films, Inc., have sold the rights to "A Rag, a Bone and a Hank of Hair" to Harry I. Garson, for Ohio; to Southern Metro Pictures Corporation, for the Southern States, and Western Feature Film Co., San Francisco, for California, Arizona and Nevada.

Foursquare Reports Interest in "Eagle's Eye."

Foursquare Exchange managers, at meeting held in the offices of the Wharton Releasing Corporation during the past week, made glowing reports of the interest aroused among exhibitors by the Flynn serial, "The Eagle's Eye," stating that a satisfactory number of contracts had already been obtained, and that great interest was being manifested in this expose of the German government's intrigues, through its spy system, against the United States, while we were maintaining an attitude of strict neutrality.

Carlton Begins Nation-wide Tour.

Carle E. Carlton, president of Crest Pictures, recently left New York City for a trip that will take him to the Pacific Coast to learn at first hand trade conditions as they apply to exhibitors, in order that the product of Crest Pictures may be so priced that theaters will be assured of an equitable share of the profits resulting from the booking of that product. Mr. Carlton says: "With conflicting reports about conditions, it is difficult to sit in New York and decide what is fair and what is not. There is nothing to do, if a producer wants to deal equitably by all concerned, but for him to go into the field and make his own conclusions. Where I find that exhibitors cannot afford to pay the prices that are being asked I will accept bookings direct from them at prices which I believe to be equitable, and guarantee that our distributors will honor such bookings. In a great many cases, I believe that exhibitors are not making the money they should be, because many of them fail to exploit special productions in a manner that their money-making possibilities justify.

"We have engaged several field promotion managers—practical exhibitors. They will meet me, and where exhibitors are willing to be shown what can be done, these men will be sent to their cities without charge."

Mr. Carlton will first stop at Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, and thence go to the Coast.

We reflect with pleasure the pride we experienced upon seeing our own little house right up there on the screen one night. Nobody knew or cared a hang whose house it was, but it gave us a thrill just the same.

A few days' schedule of a movie magnate:

9 a. m. Arrives at office.
9.02 Signs eight contracts for new productions.
9.07 Bites end of cigar.
10.00 Confers with director.
10.30 Thinks of something he wants to say to manager of west coast studio.
11.00 Swings aboard train for California, five days later arrives Los Angeles.
11.30 a. m. Sees manager.
11.00 Looks over plant.
11.03 Says "Hello" to hired hands.
11.05 Lunch at Los Angeles Athletic Club.
12.00 Finishes baked apple.
12.15 p. m. On train for New York. Arrives in New York five days later.
10 a. m. Again thinks of something he forgot to say to manager of the west coast studio.
10.15 On train for Los Angeles.
Ad infinitum. Ad infinitum.

Reminiscences.

Remember when they used to throw slides on the screen between pictures. After having basked in the light of love's fond dream in one reel your vision would suddenly be startled by a slide announcing "Henry Beermeister, Delicatessen, Liverwurst and Sausages," or "Visit Smith's Emporium. Clothes for all the family. Your father bought his pants from us. Why not you?"

Remember when (and they still do it in some places) at certain intervals the usher would come along the aisle with his sanitary shot gun and sprinkle the atmosphere with fumigating liquid. Many a happy little germ family lost its sole support thereby.

Government Forging Ahead in Picture Making

Division of Films Intends to Issue a Short Subject Each Week with an Occasional Feature

YOUR UNCLE SAM has gone earnestly and vigorously into the business of producing and distributing films intended to hasten victory for American arms in the battle for democracy. The Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information, of which Louis W. Mack is director, has general supervision of these activities and is responsible to the Government for the success of the propaganda.

The service is divided into two general purposes—to distribute one new short subject each week, of an educational or propaganda value, and to provide an occasional feature in the line of five to seven-reel productions, wholly of a propagandish character. Twelve distributing organizations have been formed, situated with a view to covering the whole country.

Production of short subjects and features has been progressing for some time, with a view to assembling a supply of material to be ready for distribution when complete arrangements have been made for the nation-wide service. With the work of production well in hand, the matter of immediate distribution is now engaging the attention of Director Mack and his associates.

It is the purpose of the Government not to interrupt the regular business of manufacturing and distributing films; there is no intention to show the pictures with an appreciable profit in mind. But the expense of the work must be met by rentals or by contributions from patriotic societies or individuals.

There are now ready for presentation, on the program of short subjects, the following releases not necessarily referred to, however, under their actual releasing titles. The captions used are designed, in the present instance, to give exhibitors an idea of the subject matter covered by the following one or two reelers:

The 1917 Recruit, two editions, training the National Army.

The Third Liberty Loan, in process of completion. The First and Second Liberty Loans were promoted through similar pictures.

Ready for the Fight; artillery and cavalry maneuvers.

Torpedo Boat Destroyers; naval maneuvers.

Submarines.

Army and Navy Sports.

The Spirit of 1917; presenting the largest maneuver in America; an attack, in sham battle, by the jackies of Lake Bluff upon Fort Sheridan, Illinois.

In a Southern Camp; general army maneuvers.

Forging the Weapons of War; making big guns and small arms.

Messengers of Mercy; the Medical Officers' Reserve Corps in action and American ambulances, giving a complete demonstration.

The Lumberjack; showing the development of the lumberjack regiment for reconstruction work in Europe.

Fire and Gas; showing the maneuvers of the new Thirteenth Engineers Regiment, demonstrating the use of gas masks.

Labor's Part in Democracy's War; labor union activities in the war.

Annapolis Naval Academy; naval officers in the making.

Shipbuilding; construction of all types of ships.

Activities of the Engineers.

Woman's Part in the War.

Men Who Are Doing Things; portraying as far as possible every person who is mentioned in public prints as being active in war preparations.

The Conquest of the Air; airplane and balloon maneuvers.

The foregoing subjects, as has been said, are ready for release; but two or three of them are just taking on the finishing touches. All will be one or two reelers, with the exception of "Forging the Weapons of War," which is now being cut and assembled, and will run to five or seven reels.

Four features are either complete or in the making. Essanay cameramen and laboratories turned out "The Remaking of a Nation," a five-reeler in which Mary Roberts Rinehart took an active part in titling and editing. This feature, arranged in story form, is intended to vizualize comprehensively the organization and training of America's great new soldier army, of a million and a half, either now in France or under training in this country. The scenes were filmed at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio, under the supervision of Major General Edwin F. Glenn, commanding the Eighty-third Army Division, and the draft army of soldiers of that division, coming from Ohio and Pennsylvania, were utilized in acting the scenes.

Thomas H. Ince and J. Parker Reid are now devoting their time to the preparation of "Columbia," a feature portraying historical events in America and the growth of the democratic spirit of America that is now fighting the militaristic spirit of Germany. Within a short time "Columbia" will be ready for distribution.

"German Spies" and "The Immigrant" are features now being completed for release in the near future. "German Spies" will expose the method of German propagandists in this country, warn the public to refrain from talking carelessly, and to watch for those who are circulating rumors and false news. "The Immigrant" will constitute a direct appeal to the immigrant not alone to become an American citizen, but to feel his responsibility as a citizen. This feature is being produced under direction of Edwin L. Hollywood, of Pathe.

The scenario department is in charge of Dr. George Pierce Baker, with Dr. Worthington Ford and Dr. William Carver as his associates. All of these gentlemen are Harvard professors, and have opened offices in Dane Hall, Cambridge, where thyy give all of their time to Government service. Dr. Baker makes occasional trips to New York and confers, at the Players Club in Gramercy Park, with scenario writers and editors who have ideas to submit that may be available.

On the date George Creel's report was prepared for the press, the financial showing encouraged Mr. Creel, who is chairman of the Committee of Public Information ,to express the belief that in time the Division of Films would be self-supporting. With seventeen paid employees the division has spent $5,226.38 for salaries and $15,452.22 for all other expenses. To apply on this account contributions had been received from state councils and patriotic societies to the amount of $4,900, with $18,000 due in pledges. This report was prepared as of January 1, and since that time pledges and rental receipts have raised the amount now credited to the Division of Films by many thousands of dollars. Thus far the Government pictures have been principally used for the purpose of giving benefits for various war activities in various states.

The time is at hand, however, when other and broader methods of distribution will be considered by Director Mack. The twelve distributing bureaus will be used as the nucleus of a comprehensive system. In several states patriotic motion picture men have "put their shoulders to the wheel" and are forwarding the Government's purposes with enthusiasm.

Walter A. Niebuhr, associated with Director Mack, in the work at Washington headquarters, has been spending the past few days in New York assisting Governor Whitman's committee in getting the office in the State Armory, at Seventh avenue and Thirty-fifth street, opened and in working order. Robert A. MacAlarney, of the Famous Players scenario department, represents the film craft on the New York committee.

The office in Boston, in charge of Mrs. A. R. Carroll, serves most of the New England territories; Connecticut activities are in charge of W. D. Ascough, manager of Poli's Palace, Hartford. Robert Lieber, of Indianapolis, is directing the work in Indiana; Missouri has Robert A. Glenn, of Jefferson City, as representative. A. A. Ashley, late of Paramount, has charge of Michigan affairs with offices in Detroit. Illinois is handled from Chicago by Watterson Rothacker, Joseph Hopp and E. W. Lloyd. In Nebraska the representative is W. H. Ferguson; in Montana Will A. Campbell, of Helena, and in Utah the chairman of the distribution committee is F. C. Richmond.

In furthering the work of distribution there is ample opportunity for patriotic exhibitors to perform a real service to the Government in working out the distribution system and to give of their time and experience to the great cause of Victory. There is a great work to be done and no time to be lost.

Laemmle Congratulates Brady

Says He Agrees with Former World Film Man, but Believes That the Latter Has Not Gone Far Enough.

WILLIAM BRADY is warmly congratulated for the stand he has taken in studio waste and high salaried stars, as expressed in the interview which he recently gave to this publication, in a statement just made public by Carl Laemmle. But, while both men are in hearty accord insofar as studio and star waste is concerned, the great divide exists in Mr. Laemmle's belief that Mr. Brady did not touch upon the equally serious waste prevalent in the business organization and that he has still to see the light in the matter of extravagance in actual production costs.

"It was with intense interest that I read Mr. Brady's statement in the February 16th issue of The World," said Mr. Laemmle. "Every man who has the welfare of this great old industry at heart owes him a vote of thanks.

"At the same time, I am surprised to find that Mr. Brady did not touch upon the equally important problems of waste in production costs and in business organization. It may be that he had the latter in mind at the time he gave out his interview, but it seems clear to me that he has not yet grasped the importance of conservation in production costs since he mentions, in the advertising section of the same issue which contained his views, the fact that he is shortly to market independently a picture that has already cost him more than $100,000. This, although one more reel of the production still remains to be completed.

"Now, waste to me," said the Universal official, "is represented just as surely by the needlessly costly production as by the needlessly costly star. Both burn up money.

"In a statement made public recently, I emphatically pointed out that the day of the spectacle is waning—at least, it will not be profitable for the manufacturer to produce them for the next few years. I say again, and with increased emphasis, that the exhibitor cannot afford to book pictures which represent a terrific outlay. The reason is that the rentals asked for these features are absolutely prohibitive. Those few showmen who, by a superior brand of salesmanship, are induced to pay the rentals demanded are absolutely oversold in nine cases out of ten.

"Sooner or later, film producers will have to get away from the idea that the prices obtained for first run showings on Broadway, New York, represent the prices that can be obtained from first run accounts the country over.

"Ask the sales manager of any of the prominent film organization to take you into his confidence regarding the prices he is actually receiving for his most expensive features in the Oklahoma City territory, or throughout the northwest, or the south, or in the Denver territory. If he knows you well enough to speak frankly and in confidence, the information that is forthcoming will make you want to dig down for the pocket handkerchief that will be required to wipe away the salt tears—especially should you happen to be a stockholder in his company.

"Our organization was the laughing stock of the trade, when, two years ago, Bluebird came out with its policy 'The Play's the Thing.' If you look through the trade papers of that time, you will find that practically every film head promptly issued announcements that such a policy was merely the subterfuge of a company that lacked stars or that was too blamed stingy to pay them the salaries demanded. You will also find that announcements of millions, and half-million-dollar productions were almost common, while pictures costing as little as one hundred thousand dollars were mentioned apologetically.

"Soothing as the Balm of Gilead to me today is the manner in which the film magnates are now chiming in with their 'You bet it is!' when 'The Play's the Thing' is mentioned. The majority of them have learned that if you've got a story in your picture—a story that reached right down into the bottom of your heart and makes a toy out of every emotion of which you are capable—it's going to make money for you even though it cost less than ten thousand dollars to produce. Amazing effects, sensational stunts, sky-high costs—all are absolutely unnecessary if your story is there!

"To get back to studio and star problems. Out in Universal City, we've got what we firmly believe is the most efficient organization of its kind in the world. Conditions such as Mr. Brady described in his interview were done away with a long time ago at our little city.

"Our players have been educated to the value of working with us as well as for us. Not one of them has recently attempted to take advantaeg of working or laying off, as they chose. Their working hours are just as regular as those of our office force. And should a director need a crowd of people for a certain scene, the most important members of our stock company will cheerfully forget that he, or she, is a star and pitch right in. In a recent Lyons and Moran comedy we had a cast of "extras" that would have cost us more than the picture could ever hope to bring, had we been required to pay them specially for the scene in which they appeared.

"Because I believe it to be every man's duty to do all he can to put this business on a firmer basis, I'd be mighty glad to have Mr. Brady visit Universal City as my guest," concluded Mr. Laemmle. "I'd be glad to have him spend some time there for the purpose of studying the plant from an efficient standpoint so that he could adopt the ideas that have caused business organization experts who have visited Universal City during the last year to pronounce it a marvelously efficient institution. The latchstring is on the outside and all that Mr. Brady need do is to pull and walk right in."

Bolster Returns from Australia

Goldwyn Representative Makes Contracts for His Company in Island Continent and New Zealand.

WITH the return of Harold Bolster from a special commission in the Antipodes Goldwyn Pictures Corporation makes announcement of its entry into an important contract for all Goldwyn productions in Australia with J. C. Williamson Films, which is the cinema branch of the world-known J. C. Williamson (Ltd.) theatrical organization.

This contract was effected on behalf of Goldwyn by Mr. Bolster with F. W. Thring, managing director of J. C. Williamson Films, and means that Goldwyn productions at once gain entry into the Paramount, Star and Victoria Theaters, great houses in Melbourne, and the Theater Royal, the big amusement institution of Sydney. The first named theater in each city will be the first-run house of Goldwyn. The Williamson cinema interests in Australia have handled "The Birth f a Nation" and "Intolerance," and the signing of their contract with Goldwyn marks the entrance of that organization into the active distribution field. Their contract covers all of Australia and Tasmania as well.

Mr. Bolster on this same trip closed a contract of equal importance for its territory for the distribution of all Goldwyn productions in New Zealand with the New Zealand Picture Supplies, Ltd., through Harry Hayward, chairman of the board of directors of that organization. This contract is inclusive, besides New Zealand, of the Samoan Islands, Fiji Islands and the Island of Tahiti.

Mr. Bolster's special service for the Goldwyn organizations put him in face to face contact with lands that to date are more closely affected by war conditions than the United States has been until quite recently. He found that these far away countries, contributing their life's blood to the cause of the Allies, had nevertheless adjusted themselves to nearly all of the reactions caused by the World War. Theatrical and other amusement enterprises faced their crises with a solid front and have emerged safely, public patronage and attendance being virtually fully restored.

"I am sure, from my personal observations in both Australia and New Zealand, and my observation and investigations since my return to the United States," said Mr. Bolster, "that conditions in their application to amusement enterprises were much worse there than they have been here. The American people will find, just as the Australians did, that the theater is the one diversion of amusement which they will not consent to renounce. In Australia the public came back in even larger numbers than ever before, and business and the general feeling of the various cities were stimulated instantly."

LYDIA YEAMANS MEMBER OF FAMOUS FAMILY.

Lydia Yeamans, who appears in the Triangle play of the New York underworld, "The Shoes That Danced," comes of a long known theatrical family. For fifty years the name of Yeamans has been familiar to American playgoers. Annie Yeamans, who won fame as the East Side woman in the Mulligan Guard Series of plays, was a contemporary and associate of Marie Bates, Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Whiffen. Her daughters, Jennie, Emily and Lydia, have all been associated with the amusement world of America. In her earlier days Lydia Yeamans was a singer, and later starred with Russell's comedians. As a buxom, whole-hearted old Irish woman of the East Side, in "The Shoes That Danced," she is said to be a counterpart of her famous mother.

Cheering News from Middle West

Des Moines Exchangemen Say That Exhibitors' Business Is Picking Up Steadily.

OPINION among managers of local exchanges in Des Moines as to immediate and future conditions in the film business is optimistic. All experienced the recent general depression. Theaters in the smaller towns, especially, were closed two, three and even four days a week, and the natural result was a falling off of bookings. However, the business is beginning to come to life and will be normal in volume inside of the next thirty days.

Dan Lederman manager of the Laemmle, Bluebird and Butterfly offices, is in a particularly good position to know whereof he speaks. "Things are beginning to break," said Mr. Lederman. "Many of the smaller towns that I have been supplying with service twice a week are now running six days and others have assured me they will be running full time within the next two or three weeks. There seems to be a tendency to use more diversified programs than at any time during the past two years. In a good many instances a mixed program of short subjects is being used one or two days a week, the regular five-reelers two or three days, and what, in my judgment, is the most hopeful sign, even the smallest towns are booking a super-feature once a week and charging advanced admission for it. Mr. Amos, who is managing our Jewel office, has ordered additional prints on all subjects to take care of the March and early spring bookings. I think we all have reason to rejoice."

William Skirboll, manager of the Metro office, is of the same mind. "Metro service is booking splendidly," said Mr. Skirboll. "Our biggest features are being used and contracted for in the small towns and at what we consider good rental prices. I know from what my roadmen report that the other companies are doing well with their regular service and specials, and there is but one answer—people who have stayed at home have come to the conclusion that amusement is necessary even during war times and the period of sacrifice that such a condition brings, and the one logical answer is the motion picture show."

Manager A. H. Blank, of the A. H. Blank Enterprises, has increased his road force in Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, where he distributes the features of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit as well as his other features. "We are booked into May on several subjects," stated Mr. Blank, "and are especially pleased with the manner in which our biggest and most expensive pictures are booking in the small towns. You know the bigger towns usually hold their own during any kind of times, but when the thousand and under towns pay good prices willingly for big stuff it shows that the scare is over and that conditions are becoming normal."

"We are working nights and have added to our office force to take care of routine work," said Manager Li Beau of the Kansas City Feature Film Company when asked how he regarded the local situation. "This is the best evidence I know of that our business is on the jump and that exhibitors generally throughout Iowa are beginning to do their normal business and look forward to a good spring. You can state that Paramount and Artcraft are doing finely. Another point speaks well for the trend of the times. I sent my specialty man into twenty-five towns during the last three weeks and without exception he booked our new series of Benjamin Chapin Lincoln two-reelers—this in addition to regular service in many instances. I think we are doing very well and that the exhbitor and, of course, the exchanges have every reason to be pleased."

L. A. Sheridan, of the Pathe Exchange, has had to take to the road for short trips to take care of the volume of business the release of the new Pathe plays is bringing. "I am working night and day trying to keep up with the run of things," Mr. Sheridan said, "and the boys are sending in fine business from all sections. There is only one answer—the houses in the medium-sized and small towns are doing real business, and that means that people are going to the theater."

Stanley J. Mayer, of the Yale Photoplay Corporation, has had to order a new print of "The Whip" to take care of his new business, and reports that his other subjects are booking splendidly.

VANCOUVER TO HAVE FILM CLUB.

Plans for establishing a film club for Vancouver theater and exchange men are well under way and a committee is making the necessary arrangements. The membership will be strictly limited to men in the film business and newspaper men who handle moving picture departments on the different newspapers.

Edwin Thanhouser Retires

Manufacturer on March 1 Completes Three-Year Contract—May Consider a "Big Production."

SOME time between February 20 and March 1 directors of the Thanhouser Film Corporation will elect a new president and Edwin Thanhouser will be at Bayville, L. I.,putting the finishing touches to Shorewood, his beautiful estate on Long Island Sound.

Three years ago, after his return from Europe, Mr. Thanhouser agreed to take charge of the company he had founded, the death of Charles J. Hite having left it practically headless. It took considerable urging to gain his consent, for Mr. Thanhouser believed he was entitled to a rest after his long period of strenuous activity. Finally he agreed to take the presidency for a period of three years, ending March 1, 1918, with the definite understanding that the arrangement would not be renewed no matter what conditions might be then, for, as Mr. Thanhouser said, he wanted a chance to enjoy himself.

Edwin Thanhouser.

At the present day, as the result of Mr. Thanhouser's management, the corporation's financial condition is unique. With studios and laboratories in New Rochelle and another glass studio in Jacksonville, both in up-to-date condition and free from debt, and a large cash capital accumulated in the banks, financial worries will not be among the problems that vex the new president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation.

Edwin Thanhouser was the first theatrical manager to embark in the motion picture business, and he brought to the work a knowledge of artistic and dramatic values which made "Thanhouser Pictures" popular and successful. Several flattering propositions have been made to him by certain film interests, but Mr. Thanhouser is not inclined to remain in the motion picture field. There is a rumor, however, that he may consider one or two "big productions," as very flattering propositions along that line, worth while both from a financial and an artistic standpoint, have been made to him.

PRESS SHOWING "THE LIGHT WITHIN."

The press showing of "The Light Within," the second Petrova production, took place Saturday morning, February 9, and was followed by a luncheon in the Pompeiian Room at Murray's. Arrangements were in the hands of D. M. Henderson and Bert Ennis of the Petrova Picture Company. There were about forty guests present and during the progress of the luncheon they were entertained by a number of willing and gifted singers who favored selections to which everyone present could help swell the chorus. The affair lasted nearly three hours and was an all-around success.

Among the guests were the following: Wallace Powers, Morning Herald; Ben Davis, Morning Tribune; Randolph Bartlett and Charles Condon, Photoplay Magazine; Peter Milne, Joseph Kelly, Motion Picture News; R. W. Barremore, Al Coumier, Exhibitors' Trade Review; S. Weller, Harold Rendall, and Laurence Reid, New York Review; Harry Ennis, New York Clipper; Jim Milligan, Edward Weitzel, Moving Picture World; Jim Beecroft, Exhibitors' Herald; Charles Brennan, Motography; Wickson Watts, Sunday Telegraph; Fritz Tidden, Dramatic Mirror; Joseph Gold, New York Star. Other guests present were representatives of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, through whose branches Madame Petrova's pictures are distributed, and A. B. Dick, E. Brown, G. Minnick of McClure Publications, Inc., William Rudge, William Barry, Charles Burrelle, Daniel Henderson and Bert Ennis.

How It Is Done at the Strand

A Discussion of Methods Which Have Actually Been Worked Out Successfully.

By Harold Edel, Managing Director.

HAVE you ever made your overture one of the very best applause winners on the entire bill? This has been especially evident at the Strand the past few weeks and is the result of mere suggestions at visualization of the number which the orchestra is playing. These "suggestions" are brought about, not necessarily by extra expenditures of money, but by a careful study of the number selected for orchestral presentation, of properties on hand, and of lighting effects.

For instance, for the rendition of "Roumanian Poem," as an overture, I used as a background an appropriate lake drop. As the number progressed, at the proper moment the bright afternoon glow changed to twilight and gradually the blue light of night came on, with the moon gradually rising. Fitting the music perfectly, clouds began to gather, hiding the moon, and suddenly a severe rain storm took place. Rain effects, with an extra projector, were very effective; lightning flashed and the thunder rolled. At this juncture, in every presentation of the number, the audience broke out in much appreciative applause. As the music quieted down, the storm gradually ceased. The lightning and thunder became fainter and fainter and finally died out entirely. A little later the first rays of morning came up, increasing slowly, the rooster crowed, and the music took a new turn. Finally, with the bright sun flooding daylight, the number was brought to a close aimdst a storm of prolonged applause. It took considerable experiment with lights to bring about the best results, but the reward was noticeable at every performance.

The following week I selected as the overture "Egyptian Ballet," by Alexander Luigini. As a background for this number I naturally used one of our Egyptian drops, suggesting the limitless desert stretching out until it meets the sky-line. Here were presented a desert sunset, twilight and then the moon coming from behind one of the distant pyramids. A tiny caravan was seen moving over the desert silhouetted against the horizon. The chief portion of this number with its weird music was played before the drop with lights representing the fascinating moonlight night of the desert. The effect held the audiences spellbound throughout and was also accorded continued applause of a most enthusiastic nature. This presentation also required considerable experimenting with lights and effects to fit every phase of the music. The result was a repetition of the word "wonderful" all through the audience whenever the offering was shown. As to expense, however, it did not represent an extra penny to the usual rendition of the overture.

In presenting an overture, or any other musical or vocal number for that matter, a switching on of all the lights in the house simultaneously, with the end of the last note of the number requiring a strong finish, always tends to help put the piece over with a bang. When a high note is reached at the end of a song or the final crash is given in an orchestration, the flood of light switched on quickly, adds volume to the power of the finish of the number presented.

Few offerings get a better hand than a vocal number put over in especially prepared settings. For instance, recently we staged a duet, "Barcarolle" from "Tales of Hoffman," in a manner which always received storms of applause. For the background there was a drop representing a Venetian effect, with boats in a harbor, on the shores of which shone tiny lights from the windows of the romantic homes. A gondola could be seen in the center of the drop with the blinking lights from other craft in the distance. In the foreground, on the stage, rode the replica of another gondola, in which reclined a romantic couple who rendered the duet.

The singers were in costume and the entire set presented a particularly effective result. By means of specially arranged sounding boards, the voices of the singers resounded charming, giving the same effect as a song floating over the water in a quiet moonlight-bathed night. Undoubtedly one of the best offerings of its kind yet seen at the Strand, this number on the bill, in the middle of the entire performance, enhanced the high standing of entertainment evidenced with the opening overture disclosing the Egyptian piece, as above mentioned.

Such a thing as giving too much in the way of stage effects in one bill is just as harmful as giving none. If the entire performance was a series of specially staged numbers with mechanical effects, it could naturally be expected to become tiresome. Therefore, in the week when my overture and duet were presented with the effects I mentioned above, my other vocal number was rendered throughout in a spotlight, the singer, in evening clothes, thus enhancing the variety of the bill.

Douglass Color Process

Series of Subjects Shown Reveals Progress—Colors Still Too Pronounced.

A FIRST exhibition of the Douglass natural color films was given in the Wurlitzer Fine Arts Hall, New York, on Tuesday, February 12, under the direction of Thomas P. Boyd, manager of the Douglass Natural Color Film Company, Ltd., of San Rafael, Cal. The production of colored films always has been the ambition of moving picture enthusiasts, several of whom have to a certain extent been successful, while at present none has arrived at that stage of perfect practicability which could guarantee their constant and common use. Whether Mr. Douglass has now succeeded remains to be proved. He comes before the public as having been the inventor of those processes which give tone to the talking machines, claiming that the Victrola in its present day standard of excellence is the result of his genius.

Mr. Douglass claims to present pictures reproducing "every hue, shade and tint of nature." Without doubt these first pictures record a distinct measure of success, and Mr. Douglass must be congratulated upon these results.

Of the natural color pictures Mr. Douglass says: "The process is not only practicable, but is comparatively inexpensive. By means of a small and not costly device that may be attached to any motion picture camera, several color values of the image photographed are given to the negative; from this positive films are printed, by a chemical process which I am not at liberty at this time to divulge. A film is thus produced which contains a series of images so colored as to give, when projected, a moving picture in natural colors, without the use at all of the rotary colored shutter which is usually required. By this contrivance the brilliancy and intensity of the projected colored picture is increased and a stereoscopic effect obtained, impossible in black and white. There is no more light required than in projecting black and white. A speed of twenty-four to the second is used, but certain experiments are being made to reduce this to the normal rate of projection. The cost of producing pictures by this process is slightly more than for making black and white, while the advance in the art of producing motion pictures is considerable."

There can be no doubt that what is given in the above description of this process is justified. The results remain to be further proved. Suffice it to say that the first exhibition of these pictures was fully up to both their promises and our expectation of them. The fact still remains there is a certain finish yet to be accomplished before they completely satisfy the full standard of that which is expected of colored pictures. Among the best pictures were the great Nevada Falls, the picturing of which seemed perfect, the rainbow produced by the falls being reproduced in most beautiful delicacy. A second rainbow picture gave proof of the faithful powers of this process.

A series of pictures showing forest fires seemed again particularly adapted to this process and could be classed as perfect, for here cause and effect seemed to meet in happy harmony. The picture of sunset followed, with similar satisfaction the glowing, fiery, and golden tints of the western sky being faithfully produced. The one weakness—paradoxical though it may seem—lies in that which Mr. Douglass calls the strength of the process when he says "the brilliancy and intensity of the projected colored picture is increased." This is unfortunate. The bright reds and greens are too strong. A flower garden is too "intense," girls in bathing costumes have too much "brilliancy," the stars on the Star Spangled Banner twinkle too brightly. If all these can be toned down to the same strength and consistency as is shown in the subjects mentioned where such perfection was obtained the process will be pre-eminently successful.

FAMOUS IRISH COMEDIAN WITH ARBUCKLE.

Walter Finnigan Reed, a famous Irish comedian, has been added to the Arbuckle scenario staff of which Richard Warren is editor. Fatty and Walter are old partners in musical comedy and the jovial "Finnigan" promises to introduce some of their old stage gags in Paramount-Arbuckle comedies that will make new laughs for screen patrons.

Motion Picture Educator

Conducted by REV. W. H. JACKSON and MARGARET I. MACDONALD

Interesting Educationals

Two Agricultural Subjects, One Topical, One Industrial and One Zoological Subject.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

"Sheep in Uncle Sam's National Forests" (Universal).

ONE of the more attractive subjects found in the 58th release of the Screen Magazine shows us some of the 12,000,000 sheep that graze in Uncle Sam's National Forests. This subject appears in the Screen Magazine by courtesy of the United States Department of Agriculture and we are told that this number of sheep represents an annual yield of 250,000,000 pounds of mutton as well as vast quantities of wool. The development of watering places we are told has caused large areas to become useful as sheep-herding ranges. In the picture is shown the lone herder and his dog, and the moving of a large herd on the Coconino National Forests, Arizona. The counting of the sheep as they graze by the Government's Forest Rangers, the separating of the lambs from the ewes before starting them to market, the driving of a herd to the shipping point, and a view of the pens at the railroad are interesting features.

"A Peruvian Sheep Ranch" (Pathe).

Pleasing scenes on a Peruvian sheep ranch situated high in the mountains will be found in the 8th release of the Argus Pictorial. Here we see the shepherds herding immense flocks of Merino sheep which are noted for their mutton producing qualities as well as for their splendid long haired fleeces. Picturesque views of the sheep on the mountains are mingled with the more practical side of the subject such as bathing and shearing the sheep.

"Our Southern Mountaineers" (Paramount-Bray).

An interesting subject found in the 107th release of the Pictograph familiarizes us with the customs of the people of our Southern mountains. Here we see them weaving cloth for their garments, plying agricultural and other duties in the struggle for a livlihood after the primitive methods followed by their forefathers. The scenes in the picture were photographed in the Blue Ridge, Cumberland and Great Smoky mountains.

"An Asphalt Lake" (Pathe).

Unusual scenes which give a good idea of the asphalt industry in Trinidad will be found in the 8th release of the Argus Pictorial. The film tells us of the ages of decay required to create this compound which is removed from its bed by picks and hauled away to be melted, poured into barrels and shipped to all parts of the country. The particular place from which the asphalt is being taken as seen in the picture is a huge lake of this peculiar compound which is so immensely rich that its diminution by the removal of immense quantities yearly seems scarcely perceptible.

"Beavers" (Pathe).

In the 8th issue of the Argus Pictorial will be found a series of interesting views illustrative of the life and habits of the beaver. The subject is attractively subtitled and gives information regarding the building of the beaver's home and its protective dam, which is scrutinized from time to time by the watchful beaver and kept in good repair. This is an attractive subject.

Aeroplane Explained

Leventhal Animated Drawing Elucidates Mystery of Flying —Paramount-Bray Offering.

AN UNUSUALLY clear illustration of how the aeroplane wends its way through space, and the reasons why it is able so to do and still maintain its balance is presented in the 107th release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph. Among the things that we learn is that the aeroplane has two rudders, one with which to steer its course straight ahead, and the other to be used in the up and down movements. Previous to this we have learned through this clever drawing the theory of the conquest of the air. This is done first by means of a boy's kite, after which it is explained that constant motion is the secret of keeping aloft. The entire mechanism of the aeroplane and also the proper method of manipulation is explained thoroughly. The subject as it appears in the Pictograph is entitled "The Rudiments of Flying."

Screen Magazine Progressing

Universal Films Interesting Subjects Presented in Intelligent and Entertaining Manner.

TO THOSE who have followed the career of the Universal Screen Magazine it is noticeable that it has progressed with remarkable rapidity and has yielded to the pulse of public necessity with ready response. Subjects have been chosen for it that are of vital concern to the economic and domestic welfare of the average citizen. Patriotism has also held a firm place in the efforts of the staff of the magazine, as it has, in fact, in the whole policy of Universal News and informational distribution.

An example of their efforts in this direction are two coal subjects, which have been released in Nos. 56 and 59. The question of fuel shortage has been uppermost in everyone's mind for weeks—hence the preparation and immediate presentation of these two educational epics!

One in No. 56 portrays vividly and in detail the new Niagara Falls engineering project, which when it reaches completion and even appreciably achieves the success which its sponsors—some of the foremost engineers in the country—predict, will effect a yearly saving of sixty million tons of coal to the sorely-pressed people of the United States.

The staff of the Magazine has just produced another subject of a vitally interesting nature, entitled "The Making of a Newspaper." It is to be released in three parts. Part One exhaustively portrays the manufacture of paper. Part Two will show how the business and editorial departments are conducted, and Part Three how the paper is printed and gotten onto the streets.

It is also arranged to release very shortly a ribbon story which should be of prime interest to women. The Audubon Society have been conducting a vigorous campaign against the use of birds' plumage for the trimming of women's hats, and have in a large measure been successful in arousing public sentiment against this barbarous manifestation of feminine vanity. The ribbon designers, taking their cue from the Audubon Society, have been spending a great deal of their time at the American Museum of Natural History in quest of inspiration for ribbon designs. The result has been the creation of some remarkable effects. Considerable footage has been devoted to the filming of the designers at work as well as to the actual weaving of the ribbon and illustration of its final use in trimming gowns and hats.

"From Here to Summerland"

Another Bruce Scenic Released by the Educational Films Corporation of America Attracts Special Notice.

AT THE commencement of the beautiful Bruce scenic, "From Here to Summerland," the artist of the camera reminds us that at the end of the road there is always lurking behind the bushes a trail to somewhere else. And so at the end of the road the traveler leaves his car which "may not be safe" and decides to forget it. With his pack train and dog he starts along the trail which leads to places where "the grey ghosts of trees are white and bare." There is also a great glacier which must be surmounted, "and just around the bend of the road there is always something new." Traveling along this beautiful trail to Summerland there is a chance to forget all and to really begin to live. At least so says the scribe of the screen. When the last bridge is crossed which, by the way, "merely reminds one that others have gone before," the ascent into the mountains becomes a reality and we rise with the camera man into that glorious world of silence and whiteness that seems at times to dissolve into the sky itself. In this region we meet with lakes which mirror with the clearness of reality all the things that chance to cast shadow across their surface. And finally after weeks we reach the valley of Summerland, the land that few men find, a land of wooded slopes, of gushing waterfalls and wonderful fern-clad canyons. These are the paths through which this beautiful picture leads us.

Inter-Ocean at Rivoli

"Hunting Big Game in the North" Well Received—First Instalment Contains Much Interesting Material.

THOSE who enjoyed the first instalment of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation's picture entitled "Hunting Big Game in the North" during its recent appearance on a Rivoli program were probably not aware of the fact that they were looking at the first reel of a five-part educational feature. This, however, was the case, and there is much enjoyable material yet to be seen in the next four instalments.

In this particular section we go with the cameraman by the inside passage to Alaska. Splendid views of Muir Glacier are seen, and in subtitle attention is drawn to the dangers attendant on the close approach to the walls of the glacier, from which huge boulders of ice are constantly falling. There are also some good pictures of a black bear with her cubs, and of the Alaskan reindeer, with information concerning them. But perhaps the most interesting of all are those illustrating the salmon industry. Closeups looking downward through the surface of the water give an idea of the quantities of fish that are to be had in that particular spot. There is also to be seen the hauling in of the nets and the capture of thousands of the finest of the species. Pictures of seals at the Bogoslof islands are included in this reel, which proved a fine offering and was received with marked interest.

Items of Interest

The Universal Screen Magazine No. 58 contains a lesson in domestic science by Mrs. A. Louise Andrea which teaches how to make a delicious cheese souffle. This lesson, given in detail, is very complete and not only is the proper amount of each ingredient tabulated in subtitle, but the actual mixing of the ingredients in closeups and the cooking of the souffle are shown. The feminine part of the audience will greatly appreciate this subject.

Interesting subjects appearing recently in the magazine section of the Rivoli program were "The Indian Fisherman" from the Finley Nature Studios, showing the Indian fishing in the Columbia River in his own primitive fashion; "The Confession of Pongo" from the Educational Films Corporation of America, in which a monkey struggles comically with the perplexing problem of seeing his own image in a mirror; splendid skiing scenes from the Hearst-Pathe News, and "Keeping Cops in Trim" from the Universal Screen Magazine.

Orrin G. Cocks, Advisory Secretary of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, has just returned to New York from a two weeks' visit to a number of cities near training camps made under the auspices of the Playground and Recreation Association of America for the purpose of studying commercial amusements provided for the soldiers and sailors. He visited Boston and Lowell, Mass., New London, Conn., and Philadelphia. In Boston he attended a meeting of the Massachusetts branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. A dozen of the exhibitors present offered to distribute free tickets to certain of the men in the Service Clubs, at the Navy Yard and elsewhere as their bit. The exhibitors were unanimous in expressing the desire that no films should be exhibited to soldiers and sailors which might be suggestive or improperly stimulating. It was suggested that a committee be appointed to co-operate with the Boston Camp Community Service in relation to commerce amusements.

It seemed probable that Sunday movies might be adopted in New London as a war measure, with a view to meeting the recreation needs of the many soldiers and sailors, particularly the latter, to be found in the neighborhood of that city.

In Philadelphia, pictures provided without charge by the exchanges on off days are shown within the encampments and Naval stations where there is no competition with the commercial houses—in the recreation buildings of the League Island Navy Yard, the Knights of Columbus auditorium at Camp Dix, the recreation hall at Allentown, and to the soldiers in the Frankford arsenal.

A demonstration of a new color method invented by Leon Forrest Douglass, of San Rafael, Cal., was given in the Wurlitzer Fine Arts Hall, 120 W. 40th street, on the mornings of February 12 and 13. While this method presents no marked differences from what has already been demonstrated in Kinemacolor and Prizma, some of the pictures shown, including scenics, military and flower studies, were enjoyed. A full review of these subjects appears in another issue of the magazine. The Douglass Natural Color Film Co., Ltd., is located at San Rafael, Cal., with Thomas P. Boyd general manager.

James Vincent

DIRECTOR James Vincent comes to be a director by natural training. Twenty years ago he studied science and art under the private tutorship of Professor F. C. Croy, of Boston, who had been a pupil of the noted Steele Mackaye.

In speaking of his early studies Mr. Vincent said, "After I had left the public schools I determined upon a course and found but one real teacher worthy of the name. He became my personal tutor and to him I owe any success that may come to me. He taught me the principles of art and science long before I ever dreamed there would be such a thing as a motion picture director. Strangely enough I was receiving a schooling for a profession equal to that of the lawyer, the doctor, or the clergy. It has been said that anything we learn will be of service to us sometime or other, and this teaching of my old master has stood me well as a director. I continued with him for fifteen years and today he still remains my most valued advisor."

James Vincent.

Mr. Vincent has been in the motion picture business for the past fifteen years, having been a member of the original company organized in this country to produce photoplays, all of which are directors of prominence today. This company included Sid Olcott, Keenan Buel, Robert Vignola, J. P. McGovern and George Melford.

Some of the stars that have come under the direction of Mr. Vincent are Walker Whiteside, Valentine Grant, Theda Bara, Madam Bertha Kalish, Irving Cummings, Virginia Pearson, Doris Kenyon and some of his productions are "The Melting Pot," "Gold and the Woman," "Sins of Men," "Ambition," Ibsens "Lady from the Sea," "Love and Hate," and "Sister Against Sister."

Mr. Vincent is a charter member of the Motion Picture Directors' Association and its present secretary. Speaking of the association he said, "We have all the prominent directors in the organization now and it is destined to be perhaps the greatest force in the industry. There are about one hundred and fifty members.

"We have banded together not to set ourselves up in opposition to anybody but to be of mutual benefit. The future of the motion picture business depends much upon its development in quality of production. The reins of quality are vested to a great extent in the director. It goes without saying that the concentrated effort of one hundred and fifty, each drawing from the other, should accomplish more than individual effort. The industry is waking up to the fact that better quality is needed. The director has always held this opinion. If directors can find ways and means toward better pictures I am sure the producers will be only too happy to cooperate with them, in which case the future of the motion picture is assured."

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Stunting.

RECENTLY we commented upon window work for picture theaters and now comes another Exhibitor to remark, "If I followed the stunt suggestions of the ..... I should need a scene painter and a property man. I can't do it with my house capacity. That's why I prefer the stunt suggestions in your paper." That is precisely why the stunt suggestions in Advertising Aids are kept down. They are intended to help the man who most needs help and who has neither scene painter nor property man. But if you cannot afford these aids to good advertising, why not try to come as close to it as you can? You may not be able to afford a scene painter, but there must be some boy or girl in your town who can paint and draw a little. Get hold of him—or her—and offer the run of the house in return for their services. By squaring off the design, even a beginner can do pretty fairly good work. Briefly, squaring off means dividing a picture into a number of equal size squares and blocking out the same number of equal size squares on your card or whatever you are using. The squares upon the original do not have to be the size of the squares on the material, but they must be of the same number. If you want to enlarge a six inch card to twelve feet, you make half inch squares on the original and one foot squares on the material. All that is within any square in the original must be put within the corresponding square on the larger scale. Even the novice can get good results with this mechanical enlargement. Build up a library of designs and presently you will have a staff artist who can do decent work. In the same way you can get up your own property room. Just collect old stuff on the off chance that you can use it some time and soon you'll be able to use the material and get results. You don't have to be a Kashim to turn out something that will gain attention. Do the best you can and you'll do better all the time. In time you can work up clever mechanical displays and will find out what a lot you can do with an electric fan. You'll know about flashers and motors and you'll make money from your knowledge. If you are "too busy" to fool with this sort of thing, don't worry. In the course of time your business will slack off to the point where you will have more time than you want.

Warning.

We should hate to have to come right out in the paper and say that S. E. Wall is delinquent—but we have not heard from him in a longer time than usual and so——.

Something Wrong.

T. F. Ware, of the Star, Talladega, Ala., in sending in a special program adds: "I do not get out a weekly program all the time. Have tried it but could not see where it paid." The box-office is the place where the right sort of program pays, but it must be the right sort of a program. This does not mean that it must be a costly program, but it does mean that it must be framed to make people want to go and see the shows. The program he sends in merely announces the titles and adds here and there a suggestion of the picture as "This is something like Jimmy Valentine," or "We offer the picture that set Birmingham wild a few days ago, and which ran for one week at the Rialto." That is hardly selling talk, but it is better than merely the star and the title. In the first place, at least half the cost should be written off through the insertion of trade advertisements. If the exhibitor does it well, he can sell half his space for at least what the program costs to get out, but to do this, he must show the advertiser that people are going to want his program; that they are going to ask for it, and take it home and read it there and look up the attractions. To do this, the program must be presented clearly and intelligently. There must be the hint of what each story is; not a labored synopsis, but preferably a curiosity-rousing line. Then there should be some chat of the players or talk of the town. We would prefer the talk of the town in a small place. Get some bright girl to "do" the society and then watch her to see that she does not knife her pet enemies. With comparatively little pains the program can be made a real feature and a self-supporting business bringer. Mr. Ware says he will admit that he does not know much about framing up a circular, but for two dollars he can get Picture Theater Advertising that tells all about programs and ad writing and about everything else an exhibitor needs to know on the subject.

Be Exact.

There is a theater just around the corner from where we live and last night, on the way home we noted that they had Snow White "tomorrow." But the sign was fixed up last night for today's display, apparently, for it was out again this morning. It cost the house twenty cents, at least, for had we known in time that "tomorrow" was really the day after, plans would have been changed to let the kiddie see Miss Clark. And that same house gives never a hint on its front as to whether or not there is a daily matinee or when the night performances commence. No matter how well the neighbors may know you, have the showing times prominently displayed. It will help more often than most managers realize.

Getting Attention.

The Boston office of Metro lately sent out a letter with "Regarding the Taxation of Your Theater," in large letters on the envelope. It is safe to say that every envelope was opened, and enough was read to tell the Exhibitor that a certain Metro feature would tax the capacity of his house. Such things have to be done nicely if they are not to arouse antagonism, but when they are aptly used, as in the present case, they are mighty good.

How Would You Like It?

How would you like to have a house where you had to get out your throwaways in five languages. We have seen Spanish-English, English-Yiddish, French-Arabic and French-Russian bills, but F. H. Sidhoa, of the Globe Cinema, Rangoon, India, sends in bills in five tongues. In the first example shown the bill on the left is in the Tamil and that on the right in the Burmese character. The Chinese character in the second is well known. That to the right is in Gujaraty. The house also issued a bill in English, Burmese and Tamil on one side and English on the other, together with several all-English bills. The Burmese and Tamil back each other up, but the Chinese and Gujaraty are printed separately, all on the thin paper so characteristic of the Far East. They are used to advertise Pavlowa in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," which Mr. Sidhoa writes did a record business. Prior to the opening there was an invitation showing; probably the first in India, largely attended by the fashionables, and this and the intensive advertising as much as the merit of the picture probably accounts for the fact that the film ran to good business for ten nights as against the usual seven to dwindling business. Mr. Sidhoa also got out a ten page booklet for the film, with cuts, press comments and a well written synopsis of the play. The type and general handling seem odd to Western eyes, but the work is well done and the proof reading is unusually excellent. When you kick at the idea of writing one bill, think of what you might have to do to make money with a release, and be content. But you will note that general publicity methods are about the same the world over, and Mr. Sidhoa does about what is done in New York or London, though he does all that he can do instead of doing only part and wondering why he does not make money.

Decker Did.

Comparatively few houses have reported a Christmas treat for the kiddies. Charles W. Decker, of the Majestic, Grand Junction, Colorado, not only gave the kiddies a free morning show New Year's Day, but he made it something worth while, even though he had to hire a Baby Osborn five-reeler just for this single performance. It pays to treat the youngsters right, for they are the best press agents a picture theater can have.

Light Effects.

With a little aid from "skedoodle plugs," A. C. Raleigh, of the Rialto, Butte, Montana, seems to be getting all sorts of fanciful effects. The "skedoodle," as Mr. Raleigh recently explained, gives a flasher in small space. We do not know the device, but it certainly seems to come in handy around the Rialto, and Mr. Raleigh takes advantage of the fact that the flasher is many times more efficient than the fixed light. Mr. Raleigh writes:

> I am enclosing a few "samples" showing my use of white space and would like your opinion. I frequently take part in something akin to an argument concerning the relative value of white space over heavy black type and borders—what I call the "foundry and funeral stuff." I have one advantage in that few advertising men seem able to resist the filling of space, and I hate to spoil it!
> We are still working the moving stunts and they seem to get over "big." I have been using eight-foot cutout heads with "skedoodle" plug effects—for instance, I used such a head on "Come Through" and put a light back of the end of the cigarette. The cigarette end was cut out and red and yellow crepe paper—two layers—pasted on. The light was on a "skedoodle" plug, the effect being a long "drag" on the cigarette. In the case of William Farnum in "When a Man Sees Red," I cut out the eyes—that is, the high lights and put red paper behind the board. I also used the plugs.
> Both of these proved very effective, and the "Come Through" head we sold to the local exchange, who are sending it around with the picture in this territory.
> I use these lighting effects in the lobby, too. I find that nearly every three-sheet has some part that can be cut out and lighted. The result, from my personal observation, more than justifies the trouble and slight expense.
> My advance notice is hung at one end of the lobby in a four-foot circle with the name of the star or picture cut out and different color crepe paper back of the cut out and, of course, the "flasher." I arrange these so that the flasher shows at least twice in the time that it takes a person to walk from the entrance to a point under the sign so he is bound to see it. These signs are not "loud" enough to stagger anyone but just strong enough to catch one's eye, and they in no way interfere with the general lobby display.
> These displays any exhibitor who has a slight "mechanical" sense can put over and, being different, will help the little window out in front. I would be very glad to help anyone in putting on any of my stuff at any time (at no expense to them as far as I am concerned), merely for the asking. They may not prove good in Podunk on the Raritan, but they certainly have been pullers here.

It may not seem, to some persons, that merely putting color into the eyes of a three-sheet is going to be worth the trouble it takes, but try it once, and you'll be surprised, and, as Mr. Raleigh says, there is some spot in almost every three-sheet that will take light to good effect. We reproduce three examples of Mr. Raleigh's advertisements.

All are three columns wide and vary slightly as to depth, the right-hand and middle displays being twelve inches deep, each. The advantage of the deep black border is largely in that you can work closer to the edges of the space without suffering from the nearby advertisements, but we like the white space better, and Mr. Raleigh handles it with more than usual skill. His stuff is never so white as to look bald, and yet it never suggests crowding. Study these well. They will repay you for the trouble. There are times when a twelve-point black border will work better than white space, but not very often does it happen that ink is as good as paper, if you tell what you have to say in what little ink you use.

A. H. Cobb, Jr., of the Temple, Hartsville, S. C., sends in his Christmas page for comment. Really this is a half page, filled in with notes and comments of the players booked. By paneling in Mr. Cobb holds his various items apart, but we think it would have been more profitable had he taken more of the space for the display for his various items. It is too crowded to make a good first impression. With all that space at his command, he should have spread the features so that even the man in a hurry could not help seeing them. This does not necessarily mean much larger type. It does mean a more open display. But since he was not hampered for space, he could have made his talks a little more full and decidedly more inviting. There is no longer any appeal to the "A Laugh in Every Foot." It has been overworked, and it never was convincing. To say that this story enjoyed a long run in China in the native tongue would have been some argument as to the merit of the story. Mr. Cobb tells what he has to offer, but he does not make you want to see his displays. The best of the boxes is that for the Pickford story. Here he tells something of the play. The lower portion of the advertisement is largely waste. Full face type in the mass is not as easy to read as a Roman of the same measure. Here it would be less desirable, even were it more readable. If he wanted to fill in with gossip, it would have been better to have set the matter in the body type used by the paper, to give the effect of reading matter. It might even have been well to have cut off the advertisement above this section, to convey the impression that the lower part was the paper's text and not a portion of the advertisement. We think that half a page would have been ample and this would have permitted the use of two half pages in succeeding issues.

Soldier Slides.

Joseph V. Yeager, who has just added a third theater to his string at Raton, N. M., is using slides of the local boys who have enlisted. They are making a hit now and he has a full set for later use should they be killed or perform some unusual service. The slides do not cost much in proportion to their usefulness and the first showing will more than pay their cost. The photographs are returned to their owners, unhurt, after the slides are made. Mr. Yeager seems to ooze out all over the local paper. In one four page issue he has a half page ad and eight readers, for a total of seventeen inches "pure reading." An eight page sheet gives eleven readers in one issue, togther with the same half page.

Rubber Cuts.

Jean Finley, of the Queen, Galveston, Texas, in sending in an interesting batch of stuff, writes that when he came to make up "The Submarine Eye," he found he had only rubber cuts, and you can imagine what a rubber cut would do on the stereotyper's steam table. One advertisement he dropped down a column. To get the effect turn the page sideways. This will work all right with a title easily read, and this seems to have gotten over. For a three tens he used the wishbone with a Puritan and his wife going home with the Thanksgiving turkey above the point of the bone with the type within the arch of the bone. It was a timely cut and worked. For a program listing Arbuckle's "His Wedding Night" and Mae Marsh in "Sunshine Alley," he used this type introduction:

QUEEN

"Always Worth While"

Presents the best program of moving pictures at all times for your entertainment and education. At various times during the coming months we will have special weeks; times when a concerted effort will be made to claim your attention and patronage. Just as the department store has its special sales, the Queen will have its bargain days. We want you to say "There's always a good show at the Queen," and we are going to make one great effort to bring this about. Go along with the Queen crowd, you can't see a bigger or better show in Galveston. As proof, take the program for tomorrow and Monday we present.

This was enclosed within a heavy ornamental border and ran into a framed cut of the Arbuckle film, with a type display for Miss Marsh, who got rather the worst of the showing in spite of her strong popularity. Hart, with the inevitable two guns, is shown in a highly ornamental border, but the strong blacks and whites are too heavy for the delicate design of the edge. This would have been better for a Pickford, but the border around the Pickford cut would be almost too heavy for the Hart, since it would bear down the value of the cut. In comparing the two, block off the other. Rugged cuts should have strong borders, but not so large as to detract from the chief drawing. On the other hand, lighter subjects should be given less pronounced borders, though they should not be so small as to fail to hold the advertisement together. In the Pickford display we think that a twelve instead of a twenty-four point border, with the rest in white space, would have given better results. Mr. Finley should put a couple of passes into his pocket and talk to the composing room foreman, explaining that no one is dead enough around the Queen to warrant a twenty-four point border on a two column advertisement.

Try It.

Stick some of these in your own program:

TO AVOID THE THEATER WAR TAX IS TO PLAY THE PART OF A SLACKER.

Remember the theater only collects the tax —the U. S. Government gets every red copper of it.

The sample is from the Poli, Scranton, Pa.

Cross Pages.

The Hardwick Brothers, Clovis, N. M., have changed to a new style of advertisement—cross pages of varying depths. The example shown is eight elevens and is a good example of their new style. The bank of all capitals in full face just below the film title is not easy to read. A twelve point Roman would have been better, but apart from this the design is excellent and it is only one of a series, along the same general lines, but with a new treatment for each subject. We are sorry we cannot give space to all three. They also send in an eight page program with a green card cover (twelve pages in all) giving the plays for a month on the first inside page with plenty of first-class house talk, along with some chat. One new feature that we like is on the third cover page. It is titled "The Pick o' the Plays," and it lists the nine chief titles for the month, giving them especial distinction without detracting from the others in the full program. The back page gives full information about the house, prices and times of showing. They usually get out a good monthly program, but this last is about the best they have sent in. And there is a clipping from the program that any town house can use to advantage:

A SMALL TOWN AUTO SHOW.

The part of the show you pay nothing to see, is the auto show in front of the Lyceum every evening. If there is a new car in the country or going through the country, it is sure to be parked in front of the Lyceum. If you like to look over the latest styles and designs in automobiles, just stroll down to the Lyceum any time during the evening. Or, if you have a new car you want the public to see, bring it down and park it in front of the Lyceum. You'll see and be seen and it just goes to prove that quality people are numbered among our regular patrons.

This not only appeals to the autoist, but to the man who wants to buy a car and 999 per cent. of the population falls within one of those two classes.

Try This.

Here is something from the program of the Garfield, Chicago, that can be taken over into your own program with profit:

"SUCCESS"

Goes to the nation that believes it is going to win the war. Mental depression on the part of those at home is just as dangerous as German submarines. No other agency comes so close to the people as the motion picture. It is our "bit" to redouble our effort toward showing pictures that will lighten the burden of worry and sorrows of those who have sent men to the battle front.

It is not going to help win the war to huddle up and groan. Keep cheerful and you'll be in a position to buy more Liberty Bonds. Pass cheerfulness along and you'll be doing your bit.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing adressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses by critized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

That Synopsis Polisher.

38. She utters wierd and unearthly sounds in the dead of night that waken him trembling and frightened from sleep.

39. She wraps herself in white sheeting and enters his sleeping room; she wakens him with moans and accusations as though she were his mother, and allows him to see her only as she glides away.

40. She leaves scraps of paper, bearing messages of accusation from his mother lying about, and Legree reads them in terror.

41. Legree is reduced to such blind fear he takes to hard drinking; he grows sick from dissipation; he becomes bedridden and alone; raving in any agony of fright, he dies. His death is discovered by Sambo, who rushes in to report two ghosts upon the avenue; in the excitement of the death the ghosts are forgotten, and Cassy and Emmeline reach the highway and make good their final escape.

42. They travel up the Mississippi as lady and maid; Cassy overhears a conversation on the boat between a lady and gentleman who had just come together in Cassy's vicinity, and whose exclamations disclosed the fact that they were childhood friends, not met for ten years.

43. The conversation drifts to mutual acquaintances, and they begin to inform each other about absent friends. The man says:

44. "You remember Henry Gathens? Well, he reformed. He bought back his slave boy, and searched the states for the mother. Failing his quest, he went North."

45. Cassy falls prone in an agony of emotion; the lady and gentlemen assist her to a bench; Cassy explains to them that Henry was her master and the boy is her son; they commiserate and the man gives her Henry's address.

46. Cassy continues northward with Emmeline; she goes direct without difficulty and finds Henry.

47. Henry and his acknowledged son are wealthy and respected people.

48. There is great joy in the reunion.

49. Henry causes the marriage ceremony to be performed, and Cassy is at last a wife, and at last—free.

In the first place, it will be noted that Mr. Harrison starts his story too far back. He calls it "Legree's Cassy," yet he gives her entire life history. Something of her antecedents is essential to the proper understanding of Cassy's make-up, but the premise here is too minute, going back to her girlhood and following her through the numerous affairs that finally bring her to the Red River plantation.

In her story Mrs. Stowe gave all this because she was writing a treatise on the evils of slavery in the guise of fiction. She sought to incorporate into the tale of the humble black the tragedy of the nearly white woman whose one-eighth black blood made her a human chattel. As an arraignment against slavery, this was all right, but as fiction it was weak plotting..

To find Cassy upon the Legree plantation and start the story there would be as bad. To understand Cassy we must know something of her earlier history, but we do not need to know her whole life to understand her later actions. We must have enough of the premise to make Cassy's moods understandable. More than that is excess. It is not essential to tell of all her previous experiences. The one thing we need to gain clear insight into her character is that she is a misfit on Legree's plantation. She is not a complaisant octoroon, nor is she merely a bad tempered one. She is a woman raised as a white child in whom there burns a fierce resentment against her curse of blood. Her detestation is deeper than her hatred of Legree. It is a protest against fate. She does not hate Legree as much as she does the conditions Legree stands for. To this end we must show something of her early life, to gain contrast and to make understandable her state of mind.

If we show just a touch of this earlier life, it should be sufficient. It is not necessary to show all of her early life; indeed, to do so will be to weaken sympathy for it. It will make a better story to show her as the slave-mistress of Gathens. In a single vision of two or three scenes her childhood can be recalled. To use Gerald as the means for getting her out of Gathens' life is bad plotting for the reason that to do this will lead the spectator to expect to see more of Gerald. It would be better policy to let Gathens sink through environment rather than as part of the plan of Gerald to win Cassy unless later use is to be made of this factor. Then Cassy is sold to Legree or a leader may be used to explain that after many changes, due to her uncertain temper, she is sold to the Red River planter. Then, and not until then, the real story starts, so that all coming before this should be gotten over as quickly as possible and with the fewest number of scenes consistent with clearness, the object not being to show the change in Cassy as to show why she is changed; to show that she has been used to better things and has a reason for resentment.

With the premise established, the greater portion of the story should deal with Cassy and Legree. In Mr. Harrison's synopsis, but half of the story includes Legree. His preparation has been too careful.

Having disposed of the plot formation, let us study the script itself in detail. Mr. Harrison does not make the common slips in English, yet his first line shows a common error when he speaks of Cassy as a "beautiful white girl." She is not a white girl. She is an octoroon, since she is the child of a quadroon and a white man. She is one-eighth black. "White" is here used in the sense that she is not black. As English it will pass, but this is not English, but synopsis, and one cannot be too definite. Cassy, then, is not a white girl but "a beautiful octoroon, so nearly white that she passes for such save among those who know that she had a quadroon mother." Now the director can make no mistake. Cassy is not a white girl, but an octoroon with a white skin.

In the interests of that same accuracy, it would be well to reconstruct the remainder of that opening paragraph. It does not give a clear idea of the situation. One is at a loss to understand "Madame, the planter's widow." Of course, in the reconstruction this entire run of action will be eliminated, but should it run, it would be necessary to give the staff writer a better idea of the relations of the persons. "Madame," of course, is not Cassy's mother, though the husband of Cassy's father. This idea can be gathered from the paragraph, but it is beter to be fully clear.

> Cassy, a beautiful octoroon, so nearly white as to be accepted as such save by those who know that she has a quadroon mother, is brought up by her father, a rich planter, as his daughter. At his death Cassy notes with growing horror the changed attitude of those whom she loves and she regards with increasing dread the cold, unfriendly manner of the planter's widow, who has always resented the presence of the child in the house.

Now we get a better picture of the situation. We see the unfortunate illegitimate child, deprived of the support of her loving father, feeling the change that has come with his death. We know precisely her position in relation to the widow and others—the latter dropping away from the deposed favorite, fearful lest any show of loyalty involve them, as well, in the relict's disfavor. We get in a brief paragraph the essence of slave-childhood.

The second paragraph is clearly defined, but the third will give some trouble. It is difficult to see how, with these premonitions, Cassy still believes herself free. Either these earlier thoughts should be toned down or the belief in her freedom be eliminated. This would not materially affect the story, though, of course, it would suggest a greater delicacy on Cassy's part were it intimated that she would not have shown similar interest if she knew herself to be a slave. As a matter of fact it would be well to tone down the previous suggestions and work to the greater climax that comes in paragraph six, though here, again, we have a false situation in Cassy going with the man without marriage and without any particular formality. It would be better to rearrange the facts to have Cassy come to the conference between Henry and the lawyer expecting to be betrothed only to find that she is to be formally turned over to Gathens as his chattel

In seven a clearer picture of Gerald should be drawn. It should be shown then what his character is. The character revelation comes very quickly, but it is best to introduce the character at the first entrance instead of permitting the reader to wait and draw his own inferences.

Beginning with seventeen the action should be more strongly drawn. Incident should replace statement of fact. It is incident the reconstructor needs. He can invent his own incident, but it is better, in essential situations, to give the same incident that formed the story in your own mind. The downfall of Henry can be suggested in broad strokes, for here the object is merely to bring about his ruin, but eighteen should be expanded, at least to the extent of suggesting two or three ways in which Gerald torments Cassy through the child.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be indorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

The British Columbia Moving Picture Machine Operators' Examination, Examination Room and Equipment.

Over a year ago the moving picture machine operators of the Province of British Columbia petitioned the Provincial Government to enact legislation taking over the examination of candidates for licenses to act as moving picture machine operators. The Government, after considering all phases of the proposition, granted the request of the operators and started to obtain information as to how other places conducted examinations. Considerable correspondence was carried on with cities and states to the east and south, but nothing in the line of the practical examination such as the Government had promised could be found. This being the case it was up to the Government to develop the type of examination which would be based entirely upon the practice of projection.

With this idea in view the planning of the examination room was gone ahead with and apparatus purchased which was similar to that used in the operating rooms of theaters. To this, extras were added in order that the examiners might really be able to determine the knowledge of candidates. The projection equipment installed includes the following standard projection machines: Simplex, Power's 6A and Edison Model B, these being the types of projection machines used in the province, and they are machines with which all operators are supposed to be familiar. These machines are all kept in the examination room, and while the candidate is examined upon them all, the major portion of his examination is based upon the machine with which he works.

The electrical equipment for projection is necessarily a very important part of the apparatus. It consists of all apparatus necessary for the generation, limitation, transformation and rectification of current for use in projection work, as follows: One motor generator set consisting of an a. c. three-phase 220 volt motor and a 65 ampere d. c. generator. This machine is a Canadian Westinghouse Special Moving Picture type, complete with switchboard.

A bank of six 25 ampere, 110 volt rheostats forms the current limiting apparatus. These are so arranged that they may be connected either in series, multiple-series, or series multiple.

One Edison special projection transformer 20 to 65 ampere secondary, 110 volt primary comprises the transforming apparatus. The rectifying apparatus consists of one 40 ampere mercury arc rectifier.

In addition to this apparatus there is a large four-panel switchboard, all panels of which are identical in appearance, but carry electrical energy of various forms, such as 600 volts d. c., 400 volts three-phase a. c., 220 volts three-phase a. c., Edison 220-110 volts from a three wire a. c. system, or 110 volts d. c. These boards are so arranged that the bank connections may be easily shifted, thus changing the form of electrical energy applied to any individual panel.

This board is used for testing and for projection work. It is made of grey marble upon which are mounted 600 volt switches. The rear connections are such as to allow quick changes from one panel to another, thereby eliminating the chance of one operator telling another what panel carries a given form of energy.

In order to allow the safe handling of this board there is a small control board, also made of French grey marble, mounted with the following assortment of switches: one 220 volt, 3-phase, 60 ampere double-throw, one 220 volt, 150 ampere, 4-pole, and one 600 volt, 60 ampere, 2-pole switch, all fused. This board is located in a separate room and has full control of the current applied to the main board.

Today, as never before, is being recognized the truth of the saying, "It's all in the lens." This is true of the projection lenses perhaps to a greater degree even then of a photographic lens. In order to thoroughly examine the candidate on this branch there is an optical department to the examination.

This phase of the examination calls for the exercise of much care lest we delve too deeply into the theoretical end of light ray work, and as there has of late been so many new and startling developments, it is necessary that a great deal of discretion be exercised in the examination of candidates on this subject. The equipment of this department consists of three different types of projection lenses.

These lenses are used either assembled or disassembled. There are also the two well known types of condenser lenses, viz., plano-convex and meniscus bi-convex. The choice of a lens, its merits, its faults and the improvement of these faults, the advantage of the later types of lenses over the older forms, the choice of condensers, their faults, their mountings, the merits of the meniscus bi-convex set as compared with the Test and Metering Panels.

Generator Set, Panel and Rectifier.

plano-convex set, all tend to lead to the discussion of the two forms of aberration, namely, spherical and chromatic, there causes and effects as well as the necessary steps to reduce both of these to a minimum. (Begin to set up and take notice now, don't you, friend reader?—Ed.)

Lastly there comes the public safety part of the examination. The candidate is very carefully watched all the way throughout the examination for signs of careless work. He is given a free hand and after he has done all his work, is almost sure to find himself up against a miniature film fire. Here his action are watched more carefully then before. After this he is questioned about the construction and equipment of operating rooms, the auxiliary equipment of operating rooms and the auxiliary equipment for public safety.

Let us enter the examination room with a candidate and trace his course through the maze. He is given a pair of overalls to protect his clothes and is led to the test board over which is mounted a bank of six test lamps, connected in series. He is at once set to work to find out what is what in the juice line. First crack out of the box he strikes, we will say, 600 volt d. c., recognizes it and passes on to the next panel. Here he finds 220 volt between the two outers and also between the middle one of the outers, but nothing across the middle and the other outer.

Guesswork usually commences here. After being allowed three or four minutes to figure the thing out, he is moved to the next panel, which may be the one carrying the Edison three wire system in which the neutral is misplaced. Nine times in ten there is a lot of guesswork engaged in again. The last panel he goes up against may have 220 volt, three-phase, and often this proves to be the hardest board to figure out. For each panel there is a given percentage allowed, and track is kept of the percentages he makes on each one.

When finished with the test board he is taken to the motor generator set and asked to look it over very carefully to see that everything is in good order. He is questioned regarding the type, whether the generator is series, shunt or compound; how electricity is generated, etc. These questions tend to show whether the candidate really understands the principles underlying the action of the machine. After having satisfied himself that everything is O. K. he is told to pick out the fuses for both a. c. and d. c. sides, which shows whether or not he knows how to safeguard his machine. He is told to start up and get current. This he fails to do, however, and is asked to locate the trouble or troubles causing this failure. The percentage marking is done as before.

From the generator set he goes to the bank of rheostats and does some connecting, thence to the blackboard, where he figures out the amperage with various rheostat connections. Having done this he is told to hook one of the projection machines in circuit with resistance sufficient to give him 50 amperes at the arc. Percentages are marked as before.

This brings him to the projection machine itself, and after a few general questions on the construction of the various projectors, what advantage one machine has over another, he is set to work on the type of machine he is most familiar with, and here his real mechanical examination starts. Functions of gears, toggles, etc., speed of intermittent, width of shutter blades, relation between speed of intermittent and width of shutter blades, setting of shutter on shaft, elimination of travel ghost, with or without setting shutter, taking up of lost motion in gears and intermittent, effect of worn aperture plate, amount of tension, takeup tension, etc., usually cause Mr. Candidate to remark that he never before knew that a picture machine has so many parts, or could develop so many faults. Lamphouse, carbon discussion and the placing of the arc in relation to the condensers naturally leads to the optical department of the examination, by opening up a discussion of the correct placing of condensers. Candidate is required to assemble a lens which has been taken down, and while so doing is subjected to questioning regarding the different glasses which form the lens, their material, shape and the reason for this combination. He is led to the discussion of chromatic aberration, its cause and effect; of spherical aberration, its cause and cure; of distortion, its test and, so far as possible, the remedy.

He is posibly asked to draw out the travel of light rays from the arc to the aperture, putting in all the zones. Discussion of plano-convex and meniscus bi-convex condensers, the percentage of light on the screen at various distances and with various amperages at the arc. He is asked to mount the lenses in the projection machine, thread up, set the shutter, and put in a picture. He has many trials and tribulations, but blessed be he that conquers, for he that obtains the necessary passing percentage gains a license that is second to none in the world of projection art, a British Columbia first class card. (To all of which I say Amen.—Ed.)

Sample Examination Questions.

OPTICAL BRANCH.

(1) Given a 17 foot picture at a 100 foot throw, what is the approximate percentage of light lost between the front condenser and the screen? What is the relative light intensity of an inch and a half spot to the light on the screen as compared with a two inch spot? (Hugely important.—Ed.) The amperage remaining constant in both cases.

(2) Show how you would try to reduce spherical aberration in the lens before you. Test this lens for distortion; for chromatic aberration. (Excellent.—Ed.)

MECHANICAL BRANCH.

(1) What is the relative advantage of a 5½ to 1 intermittent as against a 4 to 1 intermittent movement? (Fine.—Ed.)

(2) What mechanical defects will cause travel ghost on the screen when framing lever is moved above center? (Does not apply to all machines.—Ed.)

(3) What governs the proportions of the shutter blades and under what conditions could we use a properly balanced three wing 50-50 shutter? What advantage would this shutter have over a properly balanced two wing 50-50 shutter? (Splendid.—Ed.)

SAFETY BRANCH.

(1) Design an operating room which embodies your ideas of what an operating room should be, naming the six principal points to be considered in the construction thereof. (Good.—Ed.)

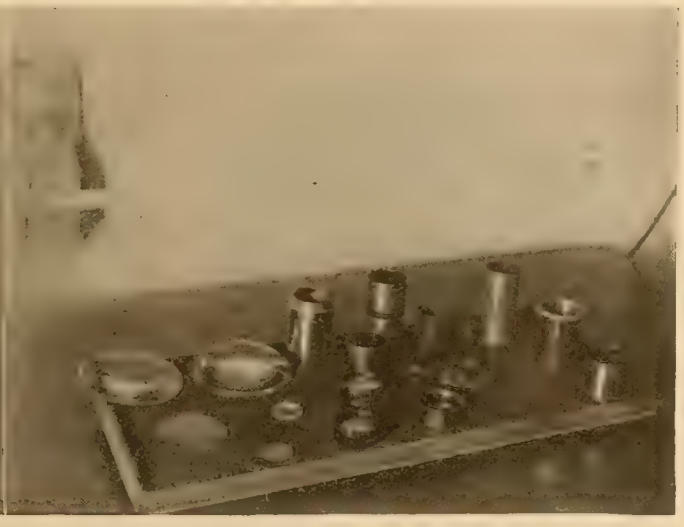
(2) Given a British Columbia standard reinforced concrete operating room for two moving picture machines and a stereo, what auxiliary fire protection apparatus would you ask your manager to provide? In the aforesaid room four thousand feet of film accidentally become ignited during the show. What action would you instinctively take? (Room here for lot of discretion on part of examiner, but a good question.—Ed.)

(3) What simple action can any operator take that will go far toward eliminating film fires, safeguarding the public and at the same time improve his own projection? (You've got me stumped. Can't figure out what you mean. Enclose condenser light ray would not apply to all machines. Think you must have worded this wrongly.—Ed.)

ELECTRICAL BRANCH.

(1) Give approximately the relatively efficiency, for moving picture projection work, of electrical current as follows:

Simplex Machine in Examination Room.



Lenses and Condensers for Optical Examination.

(A) (a) Alternating current through a rheostat, and

(b) Alternating current through an A. C. economizer or Fort Wayne compensarc.

(B) (a) Direct current from a rectifier.

(b) Direct current through from A. C. to D. C. economizer.

(c) Direct current from motor generator set using balistic resistance, and (d) direct current from D. C. to D. C. economizer. (All excellent except that, in "c," you should designate voltage in each case.—Ed.)

(2) Make the connection that will give approximately 100 amperes from a 220 volt supply line (direct current), using the following non-adjustable rheostats, viz.: three 50 ampere 110 volt, two 30 ampere 110 volt, three 25 ampere 110 volt, and two 15 ampere 110 volt. All the instruments are to be used. (Fine, but plenty of time should be allowed on this.—Ed.) What is the ohmic resistance of one of the 15 amperes rheostats in this connection? (Good, except that due to rheostat variation only the connection giving the theoretical amperage could be given.—Ed.)

(3) Throw of picture is changed, so that instead of a 12 foot, you now have a 20 foot picture. The amperage you were using before the change was made was 65. What amperage will you have to use to get the same screen brilliancy (per square foot.—Ed.) as you had before the change, assuming the optical equipment to remain constant? (Hardly a fair question unless you add that the question assumes a constant increase of light strength at screen with increasing amperages. In practice I think the correct answer would be: "Same unit of screen area brilliancy could not be had no matter how much amperage was increased." But maybe that is answer you expect. Make the 12 foot amperage 20 and your question might apply, though very difficult of computation.—Ed.)

We are indebted to Mr. W. A. Oswald, Assistant Censor and Inspector of Moving Pictures for British Columbia, for the above extremely interesting description of the British Columbia examination of applicants for license to operate motion picture projection apparatus in that province. While in Vancouver it was my privilege to meet Mr. Oswald and his fellow board members and to examine the plant which is described. Mr. Oswald and his colleagues are efficient, conscientious officials. The examination is a corker. It is what every examination ought to be, viz., one which cannot be gotten by except by one possessed of real knowledge.

Managerial Incompetency.

Recently the editor visited a ten-cent-admission moving picture theater on Broadway, near Forty-second street, New York City. For more than an hour he subjected his eyes to severe and entirely unnecessary strain purely through interest in watching to see what new atrocity a wooden-headed director would perpetrate. By and large it was awful. Surely the moving picture industry is firmly entrenched in the affections of the people when it can withstand such utterly stupid but none the less murderous assaults and live.

First let us consider the theater itself. Aside from total lack of control of tempo, the work of the operator was good. That is to say, the projector gave a steady picture and the light was brilliant, of good tone and well handled. But on either side of the screen, midway of its height and not more than five, or maybe six, feet from it, were two exit signs, with white ground-glass letters, eight or ten inches high, outlined in not very dark red. Behind this montrosity was p-l-e-n-t-y of light; yea, verily, there was abundance! Those signs could readily have been read on the opposite side of Broadway were the walls removed, and would easily have been visible a long block away. And what those two signs did to my eyes and the eyes of the rest of the audience it is a shame to tell. As if this were not sufficient there were eight green side lights on each sidewall, and from the piano and music rack of another musician a flood of brilliant white light poured back into our eyes, reflected from the sheet music. After the show I took the trouble to hunt up the (mis) manager. He listened to what I said courteously enough, agreed that it was all wrong, promised a remedy and thanked me for having called his attention to the matter. But the point is: Why should it be necessary to call a theater manager's attention to so obvious a matter as this? He did not even know what remedy to apply to the exit signs, although common sense should have told him; also it has been repeatedly set forth in this department. Block the letters out in black. That is to say, paint all the glass, except the letters themselves, black, then shove one or two sheets of red glass in behind the front glass which carries the letters so that the letters will be dark red. Thus we secure an ideal exit sign. There is no glare to hurt the eyes of the audience, even though the sign be quite close to the screen. All the audience can see is the letters, in dark red, exit. That is all they need or ought to see. The accompanying illustration sets the idea forth graphically.

The music lights were, in this case, pure stupidity. They could very easily have been entirely hidden. The side lights were necessary under present scheme of lighting used in that theater, but under a proper scheme of lighting they could be dispensed with.

When I entered what I presume was intended as a comedy occupied the screen. The audience sat in gloomy silence. No wonder! It was well calculated to make one wonder what kind of director staged it and what producer would insult the intelligence of an audience with such utterly stupid stuff. What it was all about I was unable to understand, though I saw most of the thing. Its closing scenes were enacted in a courtroom and violated every possible conception one could possibly have of a court. It was supposed to be funny, I guess. It was almost anything else. God help the man who conceives such an insult to ordinary intelligence to be comedy. Imagine a juror, during the course of a trial, waving his arm around so that every one in the room could see him, making signals to a witness, and the judge looking almost right at him, yet seeing nothing. That was just one of the mild things. And it was supposed to be humor. Faugh! Then there was the feature picture, in which one of the really great actresses of the country was leading woman. But aside from her work, which was excellent, it was, oh, so crude. Man on horseback in public street chases a sick, crippled little girl and thrashes her with a horsewhip, afterward dragging her back to the mill, he on horseback and she crippling along beside his horse. Piffle! Conditions are bad enough in some mill towns, God knows, still they don't go to any such extent of revolting brutality as that. I mention this incident as extra crude, but the whole thing was seemingly put together with a spike maul Why a really great, thoroughly capable actress will consent to prostitute her art in such a miserable vehicle passeth understanding. The audience sat throughout in stony, dreary silence. Why would it not not?

Noisy Machine.

Walter L. Greehe, Morganton, North Carolina, is having trouble, as follows:

> Would you kindly answer the following? Have been running a Power's 6-A motor driven projector for the past four and one-half years. Have had no trouble with same until a few nights ago. But now there is an unusual noise. The machine is in proper adjustment in every way and the sprockets are new. It runs smoothly and quietly until I put in a film, then the noise begins. It is a sort of cracking sound and seems as though it is in the intermittent, but the intermittent sprocket has just the right circumferential play, with no side motion. The picture vibrates but very little and the projector is all right, except for the noise. Any help you can give will be appreciated.

If you have a Handbook, third edition, turn to page 497 and read instruction No. 19. The trouble lies in the apron. Very likely the rollers at its lower end are badly worn. If so, install some new ones and the trouble will probably cease. If not, then, first making sure that the film seats itself between the rollers, bend the ears carrying the rollers so that each roller is moved ahead a little—toward the lamphouse. If this stops the noise, well and good. If not, then bend them a little further, until either the noise is stopped or you are satisfied this will not stop it, whereupon bend them in the other direction. You may stop the trouble with the present rollers by bending the ears, but if they are badly worn, you had better replace them. The noise is caused by the rollers being too far back or too far ahead.

Sixty-five dollars will, of course, help some, but with at least 30,000 operator readers there should have been, at the very least, some thousands of twenty-five and fifty-cent donations in this office long before now. In these hard times even a dollar is a lot for the average operator to give up, but here is hardly a one who could not have easily squeezed out a quarter or fifty cents had he really wanted to. Let us hope that YOU never are called upon to face the icy blasts of a northern winter, with your home smashed to the ground and burned, and the business by which you make your livelihood knocked galley west by a frightful calamity. All honor to those who gave. To you who failed, small credit.

The Art in Musical Settings.

RECENTLY we have been regaled by articles appearing in The Literary Digest, Cleveland Plaindealer, Dramatic Mirror, and the New York Globe dealing more or less erroneously with the subject of fitting music to pictures. We are glad that at last the light is snatched from beneath the bushel. It is a frank admission of the importance of music with pictures, but accurate facts should be obtained before the public is given data that is misleading. It is not our intention to enter into controversy upon the subject, but, in view of its seriousness and timeliness, it behooves us to give the exhibitor the important facts concerning this vital question.

In the first place the business of setting pictures is unquestionably an art. Music stands out prominently as one of the allied arts, plastic, and subject to many interpretations. There is nothing cut-and-dried about it. It is a subject unlimited and bounded with no well defined lines. To work in it requires years of close study, and a knowledge gained by constant application. There is an art in choosing a suitable program for a song recital, and divulging variety of color, change of tempo, and divergency of character. The arranging of a symphony concert requires a superlative knowledge of music to meet the demands of the melody-loving patrons. The proper treatment of any art is an art in itself.

Pictures are a comparatively recent innovation. Music is as old as the centuries. To fit these together, in such a manner, to convey a message to the minds of the audience, to get the atmosphere of a scene, and enhance it; to bolster up the weak spots in a film by beautiful melody or strength of chords, is truly an art.

Names of pieces do not always convey of the meaning of the music, and selections of a given name may be used for totally different scenes and still be appropriate. "The Swan," by Saint Saens, may have been written to picture "Swans on the bosom of a lake," but if one had to wait for a particular scene of that kind before applying it, once in a life time would it be heard. If we waited for a good woman to dream her last dream before using "Last Dream of the Virgin," by Massenet, this Andante number might never be used. It breathes holiness and peace, and is most appropriate for ecclisiastical services, prayer, or saintly reverence. Even in the more popular or semi-classical field names mean little. The true sentiment is shown in the melody, the arrangement of chords, and the musical form. The accentuation marks, the tempo sign, and phrasing further enlighten you as to the interpretation meant by the composer.

Music is a universal language, perfectly understood by Spanish, Italian, Russian, or English players, and it is a peculiar thing that every professional musician reads in a score the same thoughts. Changes of rendition are few, and the same tempo are maintained with but few exceptions. Musicians do not read titles. They read notes, and understand their meaning.

Thus we see that by disregarding the name but by analyzing the sentiment and getting the dominant emotion one number will fit many scenes dealing in the same emotion. For example, we have "One Who Has Yearned Alone," by Tschaikowsky. The name in this case is most appropriate, the sentiment being the sorrow of loneliness. Analyzing the composition, we find that the dominant emotion is that of utter sadness, desolation, or intense grief. This number will fit thousands of scenes where the characters and situations are entirely different, and yet be perfect in its suitability. "A Keltic Lament," by Foulds, signifies by its name the lamentations of the Irish, but further analysis shows a dignity in the sentiment of sorrow, with a hope of future emancipation. This, too, will fit diverse scenes. "Romance," by Karganoff, is another sad number of a lighter nature. Its pathos is not deep seated, but speaks more of regret. We have purposely chosen for our examples three numbers marked Andante Sostenuto to show that it is an art to pick the proper piece to suit the scene.

Synchronization is only a matter of the stop-watch with a knowledge of subtraction and addition, so far as the viewing of the picture in the projection room is concerned. But synchronization goes further. In selecting a number for the score allowances must be made to overcome the change of speed of the operating machine. It is almost impossible to take a given number of bars of a "Hurry" and make it fit. If the conductor be fortunate in stricking the right tempo (one which corresponds with the speed of the film) he can carry it no further than the following cue, but it is purely luck. The difficulty lies in the fact that a fast Allegro is not elastic. For perfect synchrony numbers with pause notes, change of tempo, or drawn-out endings are to be desired. These act as a block-signal system and insure against overrunning the cue. To properly gauge these blocks does not altogether lie in mathematics, but requires considerable musicianly art.

Be not misled by the idea that a profusion of numbers make a good musical setting. Few pictures need more than an average of six selections to the reel. This gives thirty numbers to a five-reel feature, including repetitions of the theme. The fewer the better for a smooth performance. It is a grave mistake to fit every "flash" or "close-up," because it produces an irritating effect on the audience owing to its "choppiness." A long theme comprising short phrases is to be preferred to gain the best effects in finality.

It is neither right nor necessary to "kill" a composition by forcing it into a gap too small for it. Remember that the theater orchestra has a responsibility toward the American public that cannot be lightly overlooked. Few people can afford to go to the opera, the symphony concerts or recitals of chamber music, yet the orchestra leader can play for their benefit the best excerpts from all the masterpieces. Already the uplift in motion music is felt, and the people are demanding better stuff. It lies with the musical directors throughout this country to continue the educating of the masses to the higher class of music. It is noble work, and if well performed becomes in itself a mighty reward. In fitting the picture do not loose sight of the interpretation intended by the composer.

Music at the Strand.

The Strand, under the managing direction of Harold Edel, presented during the week of February 10-17 an excellent program, as far as selections were concerned, but somewhat mangled in its rendition.

Opening with Offenbach's "Orpheus" overture, the orchestra, as conducted by Oscar Spirescu, did its best work. The "attack" was excellent, the diminuendos and crescendos splendid, and the changing of themes particularly well done. However, the violin solo somewhat marred the overture as a whole, the work not being very clean cut, and the intonation bad. The ending worked up, though, to fine effect, and altogether was very good and smooth.

The music for the scenic was especially pleasing and well fitted.

Charles Semrof, baritone, sang in excellent voice, but somewhat confused his auditors by his "lightning change" from "The Trumpeters" to "Homeward Bound." It might be mentioned, too, that his enunciation was rather faulty, which was covered up to an extent by the entirely too loud accompaniment by the orchestra. The costuming, lighting and scenic effects were pleasing, and aided materially in the general scheme.

The fitting of the feature savored of "unpreparedness," for it was very choppy and not as smooth as one would expect or like to hear. All pictures should be specially fitted ahead to insure a pleasing performance.

Another vocal selection, the duet from "Rigoletto," was well handled by the baritone, who sang in very good voice, but the general effect was not so pleasing owing to the handicap imposed by the soprano, whose voice was harsh and thin, and who seemed to be particularly ill at ease in her work. As a whole, the duet was well received, the honors going entirely to the baritone.

Leaders' Service Bureau.

Questions Answered—Suggestions Offered.

Q. I have a theater seating five hundred, which is located in a town of ten thousand population. My receipts do not warrant more than a three-piece orchestra—piano, violin and drum. My drummer is very bad and drowns out the other music. Would you suggest getting a better drummer, or substituting some other instrument?

A. In a small combination like yours we believe drums are out of place. We would suggest procuring a cellist.

Q. My orchestra plays one reel of pictures and rests the next, and as most of the features run five reels, you readily see that in alternating reels this way every other time the picture comes around the orchestra is playing a different set of reels, but using the same music, which does not "fit." My leader insists that this is the custom in the larger cities. Is he right or wrong?

A. Your leader is wrong. The following custom prevails in theaters that have no organ to relieve the orchestra: The orchestra plays part of the pictorial review, alternating with the piano, according to the judgment of the leader. If a two-reel comedy drama is shown it is played throughout by the orchestra. The pianist plays the comedy alone, and the orchestra plays the entire feature with only ten minutes' intermission, when the pianist again officiates.

Q. I have an orchestra of six pieces—piano, violin, clarinet, cornet, trombone and drums. They play pretty good music, but the folks in my town are kind of tired of them. Maybe if I would change some of the pieces I could get better results. What changes would you suggest?

A. Your orchestral combination is too "brassy" for pictures. Use piano, violin, cello, flute, clarinet and drums, and watch the good results.

Q. For two years I have been "fitting the picture" with an electric piano. Now along comes a salesman who wants to sell me a five thousand dollar orchestrion. I am perplexed. Would it be better to use this money for a real orchestra, or continue on the mechanical way? My patrons say the electric piano is out of date.

A. Would strongly advise spending the five thousand for an orchestra in keeping with the size of your theater.

Q. Ever since "The Birth of a Nation" played my town the people have gone crazy over "Fitting the Pictures," as you call it, and keep asking me to have my orchestra, consisting of eight men, play this same music for my features. Is the score for this available, and would it fit most "battle" pictures?

A. This score is not available for ordinary use, and would not fit your pictures as a general rule. A list of its contents can be secured and you can add these selections to your library.

Q. I notice you state in your reviews that "Cue Sheets can be obtained." I am a leader in a small town with only one antiquated music store that carries popular sheet music only. As my library is very limited, ofttimes I cannot get the selections suggested, or even get suitable numbers with the movements indicated. Is there not some album published that would give me a wide range of music that could be applied to most any "Cue Sheet"?

A. "Concert Album" No. 1 and 2 (G. Schirmer) and "Album of Overtures," Vols. I, II, III (Carl Fischer), will fit any "Cue" Sheet." Of course, you must have a small library in addition, as these will not play a picture throughout.

Q. Last week I had trouble with my orchestra, four "Union" players, all on account of putting in another man who was "Non-Union." As there is no "Local" in this town, and as my "Union" musicians all belong to "Locals" in other cities, and as my new man cannot join the "Union," for there is none here to join, did the others have a right to make the kick and keep the "Non-Union" fellow out?

A. Legally they have no right in the matter, but it would be policy, if you desire to hold your "Union" men, to refrain from foisting on them a "Non-Union" player.

Musical Suggestion Synopsis.

CARMEN OF THE KLONDIKE (Paralta)—Theme for the Heroine—Moderato Suggest "Land of Dreams," Driffil; "Jacqueline," Behr, or "Melodie," Friml.

Open with a pastoral overture. Follow it with theme and then "John Brown's Body" when the colored gentleman is playing piano. In the fourth reel try to procure that old song of 1898, "Come Kiss Yo' Baby." This is a direct cue. Many dramatic and hurrys are needed, while for the big fist fight scene in the last reel, which is five minutes in length, we would suggest using "Rondo Capriccioso," Mendelssohn, or some other appropriate overture. Cue sheet can be obtained from the Paralta Exchange.

DIVINE SACRIFICE, THE (World)—Theme for the Heroine—Moderato Cantabile. Suggest "Cavatina," Bohm; "Elysian Dreams," Reviland, or "Heart of Mine," Smith.

This is a heavy drama. It opens brightly and requires a Wedding March, and in the first reel a couple of Andantes. Pathetic stuff and furioso in the third. The entire fourth and fifth need Andante and Andantino numbers, closing with the Wedding March. Cue sheet can be obtained from the World Exchange.

GRAIN OF DUST, A (Crest)—Theme for the Heroine—Andantino. Suggest "Premier D'Amour," Benoist, or "Tendre Aveu," Schutt.

Melodramatic music is needed, a few pathetic, and some hurrys. No cue sheet available.

HANDS DOWN (Bluebird)—Theme for Dago Sam—Italian Folk Song. Suggest "Amari Amari," "O Sole Mio," or "Funicule Funicula."

This is a Western story and needs the Western treatment. Two-steps, Fox-trots, Galop, and some dramatic bits. Cue sheet can be obtained from Universal Exchange.

HER BOY (Metro)—Theme for the Mother—Andantino. Suggest "Consolation," Liszt; "Remembrance," Debussy, or "Melodie," Tschaikowsky.

An emotional drama taking place in the South. It is patriotic in the extreme, and will require a medley of patriotic songs if possible. Many pathetic selections are required with a Southern atmosphere to them. Use "Ol' Kentucky Home," "Swannee River," etc., as fill in music for neutral scenes. In the fourth reel soldiers are singing "We'll Hang the Kaiser to a Sour Apple Tree." Use the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" as the melody necessary. This should be followed by church music. Cue sheet can be obtained from Metro Exchange.

HIRED MAN, THE (Paramount)—Theme for the Hero—Tempo di Valse. Suggest "Brise du Soir," Gillet; "Mimi," Gardner, or "Night Song," Faurot.

Most light stuff will do for this picture. Allegros, Allegrettos and Waltz Intermezzos. Towards the end of the fourth reel have ready a two-step, immediately following it with the Virginia Reel. The opening of the fifth is dramatic and requires big stuff. An overture which opens Andante will play the reel by closing with the Theme. Cue sheet can be obtained from the Paramount Exchange.

MARIONETTES, THE (Select)—Theme for the Heroine—Andantino. Suggest "Pleading," Wood; "Esperanza," Johnston, or "Midsummer's Night Serenade," Albeniz.

French atmosphere. Choose music from Massenet, Bizet, Saint-Saens, or Berlioz. During the show of the Marionettes use "The Dance of the Marionettes" if possible. Some dramatic music is necessary, but the lighter vein prevails. Cue sheet can be obtained from the Select Exchange.

MOTHER'S SIN, A (Vitagraph)—Theme for the Heroine—Moderato. Suggest "Barcarole," Offenbach, or "Bowl of Pansies," Reynard.

This is a society drama requiring a few Valse Lentos, some heavy stuff, and two misteriosos. In the last reel use some hunting scene selection. Close with the Theme. Cue sheet can be obtained from the Vitagraph Exchange.

NEW LOVE FOR OLD (Universal)—Theme for Marie Beauchamp—Valse Lento. Suggest "Dodola," Frey; "Heartstrings," Vecsey, or "The Way of Love," Cremieux.

A little Italian music will be needed for the character of Louis Bracchi. Many pastoral numbers will fit the exteriors, and some dramatic music is necessary for the dynamic scenes. Cue sheet can be obtained from the Universal Exchange.

STELLA MARIS (Paramount)—Theme for the Heroine-Religioso. Suggest "Thais Meditation," Massenet; "Serenade," Tschaikowsky, or "Evening Devotion," Kohler.

It might be a good idea if your orchestra can do so to use two themes in this picture, and play an Andante selection for the dual role. Suggest "Love's Longing," Frontini; "In Roseland," Eugene, or "Dialogue," Meyer-Helmund. Many Waltzes are necessary, a few Allegrettos and Moderatos. In the second reel a light hurry and a dramatic tension are needed. Cue sheet can be obtained from the Paramount Exchange.

TURN OF A CARD, THE (Paralta)—Theme for Millie—Moderato. Suggest "Amaranthus," Gilder; "Berceuse," Gounod, or "Sunbeams," Helier.

This is an oil field picture. Dramatic situations abound, and the location changes from Western atmosphere to Eastern. In the first reel a dramatic Agitato is needed. During the fire scene in the second reel would suggest "Figaro's Hochzeit," Mozart, as a fitting number. A couple of dramatic selections, two Waltzes, a Western Allegro, and a big Overture are needed. Close with a simple pathetic strain. Cue sheet can be obtained from the Paralta Exchange.

Bacon-Backer Studios

Model of Construction and Utility Now in Operation—First Production in Making.

THE Bacon-Backer Film Corporation is approaching its undertaking in most propitious circumstances and under most favorable surroundings. These conclusions are derived from a visit paid to the newly constructed studios by a large party of trade newspaper men Thursday afternoon, February 14. The guests of George Backer and Gerald F. Bacon were first regaled with a luncheon, served in excellent taste, at Mr. Backer's newly opened Chatham Hotel, in Vanderbilt avenue, at Forty-eighth street.

The studios, located at 230 West Thirty-eighth street, New York, were reached after a short taxi ride, and then the party of scribes were given a surprise in the efficient equipment for taking pictures that was then revealed. The Bacon-Backer Corporation maintains that efficiency will be its first aim in production, and the centrally located studio gives evidence of a good beginning. Mr. Backer has made the construction of buildings his business for many years, and has given of his great experience his best ideas in the line he has expertly developed.

Built of brick and fireproof, within a short walk from Times Square, the Bacon-Backer studio is of three stories and equipped with every device and convenience for expediting the work of picture production. The structure is truly a model of compactness and perfection in arrangement, comfort and utility. The top floor has a "shooting" space, 92 x 40 feet, covering the entire size of the building. The lighting apparatus is complete and the last word in modern accomplishment.

The carpenter shop, property room and offices, on the ground floor, are laid out with consideration for both efficiency and convenience. The second floor is devoted to individual and chorus dressing rooms for the players. Shower baths and closets are among the conveniences, and the furnishings are in a simplicity of good taste that reflects credit upon Mr. Backer's ideas of utility and comfort. The most exacting critic would find nothing to quibble over in the construction or equipment of the new studio.

Having "house warmed" the premises under most propitious circumstances the work of actual production began the very next day, and on Sunday, February 17, Director Perry Vekroff and Cameraman Alfred H. Moses, Jr., were well into the early scenes of the first Bacon-Backer production.

SELECT ESTABLISHES NEW ORLEANS BRANCH.

In order better to take care of its enormously augmented business in that territory, Select Pictures Corporation has just opened an exchange in New Orleans. This makes the total number of Select branches throughout the United States twenty-one.

The New Orleans branch has been placed under the management of John S. Taylor, who was formerly associated with Branch Manager C. V. Ezell in Select's Dallas exchange. The new branch will take care of Mississippi and Louisiana, which heretofore had been respectively served from the Atlanta branch.

The new manager has gone out after some notable contracts, and is already well started on his way to a new record for business done in Louisiana and Mississippi. The New Orleans branch is at 718 Poydras street.

Rambles Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

NO branch of industry and commerce has evidenced a more keen and sincere desire to co-operate with the Government in movements devised to lead to victory than have the motion picture manufacturer and exhibitor. Of this will to win the war there have been many outward and visible signs.

Henry MacMahon, in The World dated January 25, presented categorical facts that proved how difficult it has been for President Brady's committee of the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry to "get action" at Washington.

Repeatedly the publicity men of various film producing organizations have paragraphed and storied the information that the "So and So Film Manufacturing Co., through its president, has declared the purpose to co-operate with President Wilson in every possible manner" to the winning of the war.

There have been unveilings of service flags galore with photographic proof that the emblems were authoritative. Pictures of various film officials have been flanked by service flags to indicate that the war is to be won.

The trade papers have printed photographs of entire office staffs throwing down the work of film distribution to take up knitting needles that a great patriotic movement may be forwarded during business hours—to the glory of the scrap book.

Telegrams and letters have gone forward to Washington. Special messengers have carried trophies of honor to the Capital, to return with a story for the newspapers detailing the highly patriotic advance of the film manufacturers resolve to win the war.

Screen actresses have resolved to "mother" whole regiments; comfort kits have been assembled; Liberty bonds have been purchased and other worthy and patriotic movements have been forwarded, the proofs of which have all found their way into print.

All of which will be accepted as fine and dandy.

"Weeklies" Hold the Palm.

But when all is said and done the news weeklies of the screen have done more visible and concrete things to help win the war than any other specific element of filmdom. Jack Cohen, of Universal; E. B. Hatrick, of Hearst-Pathe, and Pell Mitchell, of Gaumont, members of George Creel's Committee of Publicity, Division of Motion Pictures, have filled their reels with punch after punch.

As an instance: when Food Conservator Hoover asked that the news weeklies run a set of "titles" to urge the avoidance of waste, these men made action pictures of a soldier eating his "chow," contrasted with a civilian stuffing himself with loads of delicious food and then ran a title emphasising the need of the soldier getting the best of the eating contest.

Just now and for every day that shall intervene between here and Victory the Government will assemble billions of dollars in its War Savings Stamp offerings from the purse of the people. Every branch of commerce and industry is "boosting"; private individuals and firms are paying from their own funds and hundreds of pages of newspaper and magazine advertising to urge purchases of Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps.

The manufacturer of pictures has the greatest of all mediums for perpetually advertising to millions of people—just the people the Government wants as purchasers of War Savings and Thrift Stamps. And here is The Rambler's modest suggestion: Let every feature that is thrown upon a screen in the United States carry a leader or trailer. Let the star of the piece be posed in effective and smiling appeal, holding a sign plainly lettered, so it may be read in a flash. The legend might be something like this: "Help Yourself and Help Your Country. Buy War Savings and Thrift Stamps. 25 Cents Will Start You. Ask the Postman."

Millions upon millions will have the legend for their individual and mental scrap book, to be refreshed every time they see a motion picture on the screen.

Hugh A. D'Arcy, the man who discovered Bennie Zeidman and made Lubinville famous, lately suffered an unfortunate collision with a motor at a Broadway crossing and is confined to his apartments at the Green Room Club.

Leonce Perret has just completed, at the Biograph studios, a feature in which the Doily Sisters will be starred. T. E. Letendre, it will be observed, has started on the publicity.

Newspaper advertising by a Cleveland exhibitor: "'The Price of a Good Time'—No Advance in Prices."

The Rialto Film Co. has been organized to distribute a feature entitled "Who's to Blame?" Charles K. Harris, who wrote the scenario, of course.

Why Not Pro-German Matinees?

In Greater New York 39,596 enemy aliens registered and were thumb-printed, while, it is estimated, 7,000 more dodged the issue. If every one of these pro-Germans were to attend—say, Marcus Loew's theatres—all in one day there would be several million more possible ticket purchasers who could not find room to pack themselves into said houses. 46,596 Kaiser hochers, working in unison, would make an annoying noise—and the War Tax they paid would help very little.

"The Light Within" was good at Miles' theaterette the day before Petrova opened in it on Broadway and a good time was had by all at the Bert Ennis luncheon following the trade showing, at Murray's.

Mae Murray's Caviar Colt.

This is the prize animal on the screen queen's slacker farm in California. He is a milk-fed mollusk entitled Publicity. Sire, Press Agent; Dam, The Mimeograph. Publicity is king of a large herd of caviar animals that roam at will over Miss Murray's one acre egg plant.

His Middle Name Is Optimist.

General Sales Manager Joe Brandt, back from the swing around an extensive circle of Universal exchanges, declares: "Middle west exhibitors are repairing every broken chair and putting in benches, that they may be ready for the rush of business that seems to be waiting for the outburst of Spring. They made up for their one day loss in the Garfield Monday crushes; they are preparing their audiences for increased prices and a boom in business is expected"—or words to that general effect.

Charles Wisner Barrell has negotiated, through the Century Magazine, the planting of a special article, by Rialto Rivoli Rothapfel, to treat upon the presentation of moving pictures in methods of advanced and high-order showmanship. All newsstands, eventually.

Headlines, in the final analysis (an expression much used in the interviews and statements directors of publicity submit to the trade papers) should tell the story. They are meant to aid busy men who cannot stop their hurry long enough to read the yarn. Nobody with anything else to do is likely to read these paragraphs; hence it is proposed to run the sub-title under the words.

Anyhow, It'll Be Different.

Interviewed by Monroe Lathrop, a Los Angeles newspaper man, H. H. Horkheimer, among many other precious thoughts concerning the industry, advanced this one: "The desire of certain men to dominate the film business in another reason for their retirement. It is too big for any one man to control for very long. Notwithstanding, there are many would-be Napoleons in motion pictures and each one is sure to meet his Waterloo sooner or later."

Write Your Own Ticket.

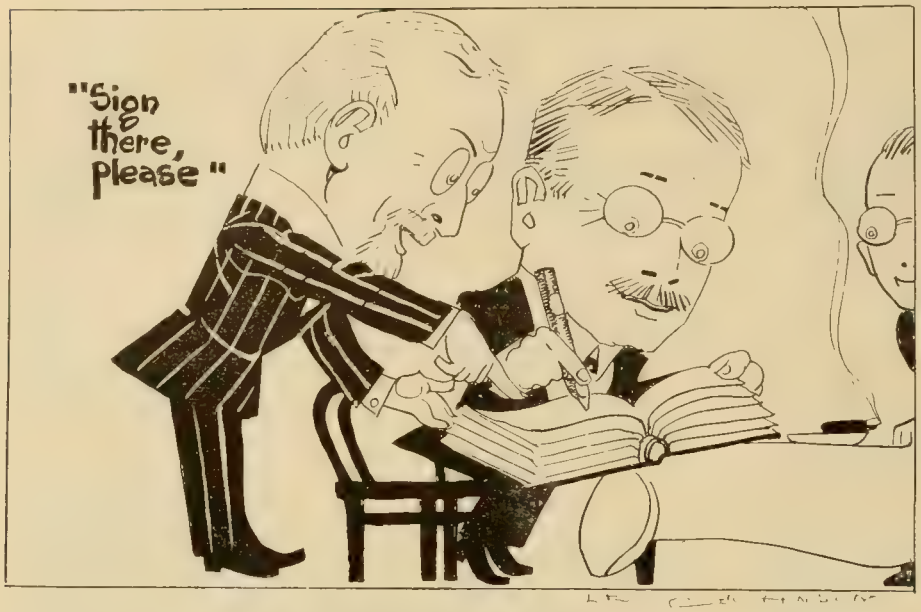
An excess draft of 50% of the annual dues, in addition to the regular assessment, is being called for by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to be paid by the end of this month. This is declared to be an emergency measure, implying prompt action.

B. P. Fineman has become jealous of the manner in which Pete Schmid displays a handsome cigarette case which he received from Mary Pickford recently, and has had his own case, presented to him by Al Lichtman and B. P. Schulberg, some years ago, polished up so that it looks like a new gift.

Wells Hawks Gets Into Pictures.

Lieut. Wells Hawks, U. S. N. R. F., who is doing publicity for the Bureau of Navigation at Washington, arranged a showing of colored motion pictures at the National Press Club recently. Before an assemblage including Secretary Daniels, nine Rear Admiral Chiefs of Bureau, 120 officers and nearly every newspaper representative in Washington, the Navy passed in review all dolled up in Prizma films in spectacular reproduction of every color and shade. Lieut. Hawks made a great success of the affair, everything coming natural to him because of his experience in showmanship when he press-agented the late Charles Frohman's enterprises, the Hippodrome, Barnum & Bailey and other mammoth amusements before he donned the uniform to which he now brings such credit and loyal service.

Harry Raver jumps from films to carnivals and back again with the agility of a snow bird. He is governor of the New York branch of the Showmen's League of America and officiated at the recent opening of the League's new club rooms at No. 817 Sixth avenue.



Jimhoff Starts a Library.

When Ambassador James W. Gerard autographed a copy of his book, "My Four Years in Germany," and presented it to the editor of The World a bright idea came to Mr. Hoff. "With this book as a starter, I shall add a library to the rathskeller in my Yonker's home," said the editor.

Send Stories That Are Stories.

The Pathe Scenario Department has been reorganized by Jacques A. Berst, vice-president and general manager, who has placed in charge Herbert Case Hoagland. That Mr. Berst considers the story section the most important department of work is evidenced by Mr. Hoagland's appointment—for no better man could have been selected. The new editor is one of the pioneers of the industry having been with Pathe throughout his film career, save for three years spent with Sellg.

Incidentally Pathe claims an entirely new idea as expressed in the subtitling, by Mr. Hoagland, of Rudyard Kipling's drama, "The Naulahka." These subtitles were originated by Mr. Hoagland and are being Universally, as well as Pathely, complimented both for the artistic arrangement and the wording.

Joseph W. Engle, treasurer of Metro, signed up a lot of checks in blank, last week, and departed for the Pacific Coast, where he will spend some time in visiting studios and negotiating important deals.

That the whale luncheon at the American Museum of Natural History has put the official seal of approval on that class of meat (?) has been entirely overlooked by the publicists who have been showing gastronomic kindness to the trade press hereabouts.

Lent Ends Easter Sunday.

From Racine, Wis., a postal card came to the publicity department of Jewel Productions written on thusly: "Would like to take up correspondence with some nice female actor of yours who would be interested in hearing from some one. I am not a rich man, but poor, working hard to earn an honest living. Please send me the address of some lady who would care to do the same."

Polly Moran's Opportunity.

Carl Krusada, advertising manager for Paralta, lately displayed class in placing his literary efforts. The Forum paid him $300 for his article, "There Is No Christ In Germany," lately printed in that highbrow publication.

John Gray's connection with Pathe's scenario department is no more. His next move is, at this writing, unreported.

Away from Cold Weather.

Mabel Condon departed for the Coast during the past week, paying a visit to her sister at Newport News en route. Miss Condon was accompanied by Edna Earle, who joined her at Chicago, for the overland trip. An informal tea was used by Miss Condon as a means to bid farewell to her legion of friends in the newspaper craft the Sunday afternoon before she departed. Her brother, Charlie, of Photoplay Magazine, assisted at the pouring.

Rising Young Journalist.

Pat Kearney, according to our secret informant whose first initial is Pete and last initial Schmid, has joined the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as associate editor of "Progress-Advance," the house organ of that w. k. company. Pat is well known in fildom as a young man who can wield an agile pen, he having started his career on The Motion Picture Mail with Johnny Semler. A very clever youngster, Pat has a bright future with his present affiliations and we all join in wishing him well. Pete Schmid confides that immediately upon taking his chair as assistant to one B. P. Fineman, Mr. Kearney asserted that he felt the motion picture business was here to stay.

Daniel M. Henderson, advertising manager of McClure Pictures, was lately awarded the $500 prize offered by the National Arts Club for a poem on the world war. "The Road to France" turned the trick.

Doris Kenyon finished the last episode of Pathe's serial, "The Hidden Hand," Friday, Feb. 15. Saturday morning she departed for Palm Beach to indulge in the first day's rest she has had since last June. Theodore C. Deitrich, of De Luxe Pictures, has cautioned her to return North before the snows shall perish on the shores of Saranac Lake; for there it is that Director Jack O'Brien will begin shooting scenes for the six-reel production, made from Mary Roberts Rinehart's "The Street of Seven Stars," in which Miss Kenyon will make her first De Luxe appearance.

John Semler, who made the Moving Picture Mail and other trade papers famous, is skipper of the mimeograph for "Bill" Steiner's Jester Comedies with his craft moored in the Candler Building.

Pay No Money to Solicitors.

It has been suggested that the trade newspaper men, in the editorial and advertising departments, assemble at a date to be subsequently determined, and eat a meal that they shall themselves pay for. There seems to be the start of a good idea, with many angles, in this.

The publicists who give of their brilliancy to the pages of the trade papers might be invited to join in the feast that the process of "planting" the opinions of their employers, covering so many topics pertinent to the industry, may become less ceremonial.

The producers who have "set up the eats" to the trade press so many times and oft might be asked to sit in and have a meal. There might, at the time appointed, be some poor millionaire very hungry and proportionately grateful for the reciprocity.

Craftsmen who design the advertising might also be included among those present in recognition of the share they contribute to making the advertising pages beautiful and profitable to the advertiser. Then, too, they would be on hand to assist Sam Spedon at the blackboard.

There might, also, be other forms of entertainment while merry chatter proceeded; harmless games with Thrift Stamps as prizes; cube rollings, and other innocent sports. And then again—who knows?

One gay wag has unspoke and said that the expense of the food might be defrayed by charging a small admission (tickets including War Tax) to those who are neither press agents nor trade newspaper men. On this point the discussion is already over-heated, even before the movement has gone any farther than this paragraph.

But in good faith The Rambler will keep together and show around to the boys any expression of opinion as to the worthiness (or on the contrary) of the suggested affiliation that may be mailed to him.

Line Forms as Usual.

Up to and including high noon, Monday, Feb 18, not one publicity agent for films has submitted a paragraph in effect that Galli-Curri, the Chicago opera phenom, appeared as an extra woman in a certain studio when times were hard for the wonderous singer.

This Paid $12.50 Per Line.

The Rivoli-Rialto management, having been stopped in the street by so many people who have asked for the correct pronunciation of the new member of the combination, finally decided to set discussion at rest by the contest method. For the following jingle John W. Low has received Hamish McLaurin's check, filled in for $50, as the P. A.'s chief item of expense last week:

Should any one ask you in confidence, privilly,
How to pronounce the new theater Rivoli,
Rippingly, smilingly answer him civilly:
"Rivoli? Why, it's exactly like Tivoli."

Roy Summerville's "Powder" Nose Annie," to become a Goldwyn with Madge Kennedy the star, under the release title "The Dangerous Game," proved the temporary downfall of Eddie Dillon, who started to direct the feature. During the action Mr. Dillon broke one of his arms and Hugo Ballin finished the production. Incidentally, and lavishly, Mr. Summerville is spending advance royalties on his song, "I Like It," which has been sold to Shapiro, Bernstein & Co., the purse being divided with Ed Hutchinson, who composed the music. The song is now a production number with two road companies and will be used in "Fancy Free," a forthcoming Broadway musical show.

Great Loss to the Screen.

While sitting about their luncheon table the other day the Famous Players-Lasky publicists discovered that way back in the dark ages of their respective careers, practically each one of them had aspired to histrionic laurels. Charles Burr, newly made assistant general manager of the distribution department, it was found, played in a Vitagraph film, but it seems the newspaper critics nipped in the bud his hopes as an actor. Charles Moyer, of the publicity department, appeared only recently in a James Montgomery Flagg comedy, in the role of a lounge lizard. His characterization is said to be perfect. B. (Bernard) P. Fineman, editor of "Progress-Advance," it seems, appeared in a Drew comedy. The result compelled Fineman to raise a mustache, it is said. Pete Schmid played the part of a newspaper photographer in a news-weekly film which he staged to boost Lenore Ulrich's arrival in New York City, some years ago. The trade paper critics were merciless. Julian M. (King) Solomon, Jr.—now the husband of Mrs. Julian M. Solomon, Jr.—played in Lubin films for a short while—just a short while. A. M. Botsford, formerly a stock actor, decided that it required more than $25 per week—even if payable every week—to get married on, so he became a reporter, which led up to his present job as magazine writer for F. P.-L. And so on, etc., and so forth.

The Havana exhibitor who started a contest to decide which woman in his fair city had "the most seductive mouth" had to call it off. His wife refused to allow matters to come to a final decision. The "most beautiful eyes" contest was decided by the exhibitor's wife who awarded the prize to her husband after she had finished with him.

While Republican party leaders were in session at St. Louis, William N. Selig, in conjunction with George Spoor and George Kleine, took possession of the Republican club, facing Bryant park, New York, for a quiet discussion of important film affairs. The Rambler found Mr. Selig hiding behind a White Rock lemonade, on Garfield Monday, waiting for midnight and his two Chicago friends.

Making a Movie Star.

Fred A. Block has devised an act for vaudeville that is intended to converge the local film fans into whatever house it plays. Antonio Duffy is piloting the offering through the booking channels. Moving pictures, using local candidates, are made upon the stage; the house is rigged with lights and a panorama picture of the audience is taken. "Do you yearn for film glory?" says the advertising herald. "Local movie aspirants are given every opportunity to display their ability under a most competent director." Three companies are now exploiting the idea and there will be many more.

Kenneth Macgowan, who has long been a skillful exploiter of Goldwin publicity, has been replaced as skipper of the mimeograph by Ewan Justice, who trapesed over to Fifth avenue from the Fox publicity rooms. Mr. Macgowan has been made assistant manager of Goldwin's production department.

At last Jerry Beatty knows "Who Is Number One?" The mystery is disclosed in the person of John F. Flinn, director of Famous Players-Lasky advertising, with whom Mr. Beatty is now helpfully involved.

Arthur Story is getting out his advance work for "Boy Scouts to the Rescue," featuring General Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scouts, as a screen actor. The picture was made in England and will be shown under the auspices of Boy Scouts throughout the country, as a ten-reel serial, in five chapters, with Mr. Story press-agenting.

Those Who Were There.

Placed alphabetically to avoid confusion Jerome Beatty, J. K. Burger, C. Lang Cobb, H. P. Fineman, John C. Flinn, Frederick Gage, Al Lichtman, Chas. E. Moyer, Pete Schmid, Nicholas Stolfi, J. Albert Thorn, Vincent Trotta, Charles Kenmore Ulrich, Norris Wilcox and Eugene Zukor had their names printed on the back of a very nifty and artistic little tract issued to mark the transition of Charles Carrington Burr from his former desk as advertising manager to his present post as Assistant General Manager of Distribution for Famous Players-Lasky.

The crafty example of printing was used in conjunction with a banquet, served "Somewhere in Mulberry Street," Thursday, February 14, entitled "An Ocean of Likker and an Island of Food," adapted by Al Lichtman from "The Land of Promise Him Six Pages and Give Him Two," or "The Ad Man's Desk." The foods were captioned: Liquor, Assorted Anti-pastry, Likker, Scared Rolls, in Bread, Ragged Spaghetti, More Likker, Spend all in the Bank, Fungus from the Department of the Interior, Fried Mystery, Some Beer, A Pole Ain't a Fairy, A Lot of Ince, Rustic Tarts, Champagne, Tutti-Frutti Without the Tutti, Caffee, Coffee, Likker, and Cognac. There were Italian translations to all of the above mentioned, purely American dishes.

Famous players enacted the following atrocities during the feast:

The Story.

Mr. Charles C. Burr, the prominent Assistant General Manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, for two years has been writing advertisements for Paramount and Artcraft Pictures. Recently, it seems, he got married and the minister gave him the marriage certificate, and bride and groom leaped into a taxicab and sped away. In the cab Mr. Burr looked at the certificate.

"My God!" he cried, Pauline Frederickly. "It isn't legal!"

"Why not!" exclaimed his terror stricken bride.

"Look!" he gasped, showing her the certificate. "They left out the Paramount trademark!"

The Anecdote.

"That reminds me," said the genial guest. "One cold winter's day I went to the Post Office to get my mail.

"'C. C. Burr,' I said to the man at the window. He looked at me queerly. 'C. C. Burr,' I repeated. He made no answer. I judged he was deaf so I yelled 'C. C. B-u-r-r!'

"'Shiver all you like, you blame fool!' he roared at me, 'but why do you want me to see you do it?'"

It was quite half an hour before the assembled multitude ceased laughing over the clever quip.

The Riddle.

Always pick a good one for the finish, leaving them wishing for more. All right: Why is that there story like a prickly fruit of a tree? Answer. Because that's a chestnut, Burr!

Harry Reichenbach has exercised his option on the Broadway and "Tarzan of the Apes" will stay at that theater for eight weeks, with every prospect of continuing the splendid start made in the earlier weeks of the engagemnt. "Tarzan" will make some money during its Broadway initiation—a rare accomplishment for feature films projected for a New York reputation.

Solicitous thoughts are directed to Tom North by his legion of friends in these days of his trial. Mrs. North is in the Polyclinic Hospital, making a brave fight against the effects of a precarious operation for the relief of appendicitis, plus a complication of afflictions. Good husband and good fellow; Tom is resolutely "biting on the bullet," while Mrs. North lingers between life and death.

The season of penance was ushered in at two prominent New York cinemas very ceremonially. The unveiling of tablets was in order—bronze tablets to commemorate two entirely different matters. On Monday, February 18, Manager Harold Edel unveiled, in the lobby of the Strand, a tablet bearing the names of Strand employees now serving with the colors. This event was first set for the preceding Monday, but news of a similar ceremony, just across the street, might have inspired a decision to make the Strand event nearer "opposition" to the Rivoli. At the last mentioned cinema, on Saturday, February 16, Famous Players-Lasky unveiled, in the lobby, a bronze bas relief, in recognition of S. L. Rothapfel's accomplishments for the motion picture industry. Sam Spedon, silver haired and tongued orator of the World staff, made a speech at the Strand ceremony.

Doubling in Brass.

"Would you believe it possible to heat the Marion (O.) theater with cordwood, coke and corn cobs?" asks Mr. Foster (G. H.) in his newspaper advertising. "We're doing it successfully," he answers himself.

Arthur Leslie, of Universal's press staff, has been promoted. He is now in charge of the contest department, his first affair engaging a 50-pound dumb bell which the resourceful idea man poised at arms length above his head in one motion. There being no other competitors Mr. Leslie won the $50 he had offered to any publicist in Paul Gulick's department. The next contest will be staged in conjunction with the forthcoming trade showing of a Harry Carey "Western"—a bull-throwing joust open to all mimeographers.

Joe Partridge has doubled the length of Longacre Square, going from Vitagraph to the U. S. Exhibitors Corp., and returning to Vitagraph to resume the position in which George Balsdon succeeded and preceded him.

The Ladies! Bless 'Em.

Rose Schulsinger has become a member of the World Film publicity staff, continuing her office for general press work in the Times building. She has been engaged to do the publicity for the opening of the Lexington Opera House as a stock company theater.

Nellie Revell, who helped make Norma Talmadge famous, is now doing the press work for "Flo Flo" at John Cort's theater.

Beulah Livingston has moved her publicity bureau from her former offices, with T. E. Letendre, in the Times building, into a beautiful studio in West Fortieth street where she will continue to mimeograph.

Aileen St. John-Brenon has taken charge of the publicity for the Producers and Exhibitors' Affiliated plan which has opened offices in the Longacre building. Miss Brenon is a niece of Herbert, the producer.

Vernon Castle's Sacrifice.

The death of Vernon Castle on an aviation field in Texas, where he was instructing Uncle Sam's recruits, brought to a heroic and a financial sacrifice that few men would voluntarily lay upon the altar of patriotism. To serve his king's colors, Castle gave up a millionaire's income drawn from stage and other forms of professional dancing, but very little from ventures into moving pictures. The "Castle Dance Films" were short, and short lived, but they made a pot of money for their promoters.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

Famous Players-Lasky to Release "Blue Bird" at Easter

Already Big Maeterlinck Production H as Been Booked in Eighty Theaters—Special Score Has Been Prepared as Well as Plans for Exploitation.

ANNOUNCEMENT from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation establishes the release date of Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," which has been produced on the screen for Artcraft, under the direction of Maurice Tourneur. After a private showing to the executives of the company it was decided that this film, which presents a most elaborate version of Maeterlinck's famous play, will be offered as a special Easter release, making a particularly appropriate subject for this time of the year.

Already eighty of the finest theaters in the country have arranged for the screen debut of the subject and preparations are being made by prominent exhibitors for fitting presentations of a special nature. The executives of the Famous Players-Lasky are enthusiastic over the screen visualization and have decided on a pretentious exploitation plan. A special music score by James R. Bradford is now under way, and everything is being done to give the film an elaborate presentation on an unusually artistic and dignified scale in accord with the high standard of Maeterlinck's piece.

The popularity of "The Blue Bird" should make the film an immediate drawing card of exceptional force. The merit of the subject itself it is expected will more than duplicate the fame of the stage offering in this country and abroad. The fantastic play pleased young and old alike in this country as well as in Europe. In London it originally opened at the Bodoir Theater in December, 1909, where it created a sensation and attracted devotees of the true dramatic art and further enhanced the fame of Maeterlinck. With its American appearance in New York at the New Theater, a playhouse erected to present the world's most renowned dramatic offerings, the production was revived with two additional scenes, in February, 1911.

In speaking of the screen version, Jesse L. Lasky, head of productions of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, said: "After negotiating for this subject more than two years, we were finally able to produce it on the screen. To stage our elaborate motion picture adaptation we selected Maurice Tourneur. A master of screencraft, the talented French director has always displayed in his films a certain touch of the artist which has made them exceptionally distinctive. The important task of preparing the scenario was intrusted to Charles Maigne, whose work in connection with the production of other notable Artcraft pictures speaks well for what may be expected of him in 'The Blue Bird' when it is released."

It is a beautiful picture.

What Players Are Doing East and West for Fox

ALTHOUGH the fuel situation somewhat handicapped the work in the Fort Lee studios of William Fox the two new studios in New York City somewhat relieved the situation in the East, while in the West the making of new photoplays continued without interruption.

In the Los Angeles studios Lynn Reynolds is directing Tom Mix in a new photoplay. The story is by Mix and the scenario by Reynolds. In this production Victoria Forde comes back as leading woman for Tom Mix. Others in the cast are Frank Clark and Barney Furey.

Edward Le Saint has finished photographing a picture in which Gladys Brockwell is starred. The story is by Charles Kenyon. In the cast are Lucille Young, William Scott, Bertram Grassby, T. D. Crittenden, Henry De Montford and Andrew Robson.

In Los Angeles also J. Gordon Edwards has begun photographing a Theda Bara super-production. The story has been adapted by Adrian Johnson.

C. M. Franklin is directing another story in which Jewel Carmen is the star. Frank Lloyd has finished his divorce propaganda picture.

At the Fort Lee studios Peggy Hyland has finished her first picture for William Fox. It is titled "The Debt of Honor" and was directed by O. A. C. Lund. This picture has a touch of the spy interest. It is set for one of the March releases.

William Farnum and his company of players are at the Biograph studios in New York City finishing work on a William Farnum de luxe production, "Rough and Ready." At the Biograph studios also R. A. Walsh is at work on "Woman and the Law," the story of which is based on a recent sensational murder, and the Lees are busy on a picture to follow "American Buds."

At the Victor studio Virginia Pearson is finishing "A Daughter of France," and Harry Millarde is directing June Caprice in a picture which will be one of the April releases.

"Tuscania" in Gaumont Weekly.

If anything was needed to convince our people—pacifists, pro-Germans, and all—that we are really engaged in a war which must be fought until Germany is thoroughly whipped, the torpedoing of the big steamer transport, "Tuscania," and the consequent death of more than a hundred of our soldiers, more than supplied that need. Though the first shock of this disaster was partly mitigated when it was learned that more than two thousand troopers on this transport were saved, it is certain that Germany will be made to pay a hundredfold for each life which was lost. The enterprise of the Gaumont company enables the public to get a last glimpse of the "Tuscania" in No. 8 of the Gaumont-Mutual Weekly, which will be released on Sunday, February 17.

This issue of the Weekly is replete with news subjects of absorbing interest. These range from war views taken abroad to pictures of current news in the United States, including many scenes which show how we are successfully meeting the coal shortage and providing against the possibility of a shortage of food.

What Neal Hart Has Done

Varied Career of Universal Player Before He Took Up Film Work.

NEAL HART, Universal's college-bred cowboy, makes his appearance in the sixteenth episode of "The Mystery Ship," this current Universal chapter story, thus including Ben Wilson, Neva Gerber, Kingsley Bennett and Neal Hart. Hart plays "X19," a part provided to give him serial experience, in view of the fact that his popularity in Universal Western pictures has become marked and has resulted in exhibitors making requests for a Western serial featuring him.

Hart came to the screen from a varied experience as a cowboy. He played left halfback on a varsity football team. He served in the navy on the Panther during the Spanish-American war. He had studied civil engineering and was a railroad superintendent of construction.

He subsequently punched cows on the Sioux Indian reservation of South Dakota, drove a ten-horse freight team between Fort Pierre and Rapid City, S. D., and later punched cows in Wyoming. He was city marshal and later deputy sheriff in Wyoming, and inspected and bought horses for the British Government for war purposes before locating at Universal City and becoming a screen actor.

Many Dancing Scenes in "Wild Youth."

Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn have contributed a beautifully effective feature to the J. Stuart Blackton production, "Wild Youth," which is being filmed in California for Paramount, by arranging a special sequence of dances, in which thirty of the Denishawn artists depict with rare skill the allegorical scenes of the play.

Dealing as it does with the conflict between youth and age, the Sir Gilbert Parker novel is especially suitable for the introduction of an artistic series of scenes, which present the dances as a representation of Youth, while Old Age is portrayed by Gustav Seyffertitz and Adele Farrington. As arranged by J. Stuart Blackton, the scenes enacted by the dancing girls present an allegorical parallel to the story or age and youth in the book, in which youth is represented by Louise Mazarine and Orlando Guise, the roles played by Louise Huff and Jack Mulhall. Age is typified by Joel Mazarine, portrayed by Theodore Roberts. The theme of the play itself hinges upon the fact that youth is attracted by youth and age eventually must make way. Thus the story culminates in a struggle in which old Mazarine, who has violated the law of youth and love by marrying a youthful girl, finally gives way to the youth of the story.

Pictorially, the scenes of the dancers symbolical of youth are a distinct achievement. The dances were arranged especially to conform to the theme of the story and the scenes were filmed in a beautiful glade in the world-famous Busch Gardens of Pasadena.

Jaxon Releases "Sherman Was Right."

"Sherman was Right" is the title of the current Jaxon comedy being distributed by General Film Company and intimates in a slight measure the bundle of humor stored up in this one-reel vehicle.

Mary Garden's Second Picture

"The Splendid Sinner" Will Be Goldwyn Star's Successor for "Thais."

UNUSUALLY good judgment is shown by Goldwyn in presenting Mary Garden in Kate Jordan's "The Splendid Sinner." After the success of "Thais" it is interesting to note that the play chosen for Mary Garden's second appearance on the screens of the world is in no sense an echo of that production. In every sense of the word "The Splendid Sinner" is different, calculated to delight those who do not respond to a story laid in an antique period and warranted to thrill those who enjoyed the art of Mary Garden in "Thais."

Not only was "The Splendid Sinner" written expressly for Mary Garden, but each feature of the production reflects the star's personal taste. After attending many showings of her "Thais," Miss Garden feels that she has caught the idea of the public in the matter of story. acting and costuming. She chooses to be judged on the strength of "The Splendid Sinner" alone.

In every particular the offering is modern. The story is one of especial timeliness, the gowns worn by Miss Garden are advance modes and the settings are the richest ever created by Hugo Ballin. A superb banquet is a feature of the story's beginning, in itself a striking instance of how far the producer can go to originate, regardless of cost. Dancers entertain the guests on the glass-topped table and Miss Garden herself, as guest of honor at this brilliant revel, stands above the light streaming through the glass pane and plays a violin. Throughout the production she moves—or rather dashes—in gorgeous figure, dancing, loving, hating, cheating, fighting and finally rising to noble martyrdom.

The extraordinary scope of the role causes Mary Garden to call it "the story of a woman who knew all sorrows and joys save one."

Jack Eaton to Make Red Cross Pictures.

Jack Eaton, president of Town and Country Films, Inc., has been assigned by the Government to make the next Red Cross pictures which will be used in connection with the second war fund drive, which will begin the early part of May. Mr. Eaton, together with Frank D. Sniffen, head of the motion picture department of the drive, and James Montgomery Flagg, leave early this week to take the interior scenes in New Orleans.

This picture will be known as "The Spirit of the Red Cross," the scenario of which was written by James Montgomery Flagg, who recently, with Mr. Eaton, made his real entrance in the motion picture field when he wrote, and Mr. Eaton produced a series of single reel comedies entitled "Girls You Have Met," all of which have created unprecedented favorable comment throughout the country.

In the Red Cross picture, Mr. Eaton will have as his leading people Peggy Adams, Raymond McKee and Harry McKee. George Lane will act as cameraman, and Saul Harrison will assist in the direction with Mr. Eaton.

Balshofer Goes South to Get Warm.

The number of players in Jacksonville for the making of Metro star series productions with Harold Lockwood has been augmented by the arrival from New York of Fred J. Balshofer and Wiley J. Gibson, respectively president and business manager of the Yorke Film Corporation.

Besides his position as president of the Yorke Film Corporation, Mr. Balshofer is also Harold Lockwood's director in Yorke-Metro productions. As Mr. Lockwood is working under the alternate director system, Mr. Balshofer will not take his position beside the camera again until after George Irving has finished the picture now in process of production—a screen version of Holman Day's novel, "The Landloper."

Scene from "The Girl in the Dark" (Bluebird).

Bluebird Serial Released March 4.

Charles Edmond Walk's popular novel, "The Green Seal," has been adapted for the screen. The story, which ran through several editions in its book form, will shortly be released by Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., under the title "The Girl in the Dark."

This newest Bluebird is made the vehicle for Carmel Myers, the player who was seen to such advantage in "My Unmarried Wife." In "The Girl in the Dark," Miss Myers departs from the foreign type she portrayed in several previous photoplays, and appears in the role of an American girl whose life is menaced by a band of Orientals.

A cast of unusual strength appears in support of Miss Myers. It includes Betty Schade, Alfred Allen, Harry Carter, Frank Deshon, Ashton Dearholt, and Frank Tokanaga. The subject will be released the week of March 4.

No "Ads" in Screen Telegram.

A staff of comeramen and camera correspondents who will supply the material for the making of the Screen Telegram, the Mutual Film Corporation's twice-a-week news release, is being organized with such rapidity that before the publication of the first issue, on Sunday, March 3, every source of news film in the world will have been covered.

Numerous subjects available for use in the Screen Telegram have been received at the laboratory and arrangements are being made for the handling of up-to-the-minute happenings until a few hours in advance of the time set for shipping the completed news films to the various Mutual exchanges. In planning the make-up of the Screen Telegram the same methods are being pursued as in the making of the news columns of a newspaper. No advertising "plants" will be permitted to find their way into this news film, and all subjects contained in each reel will be selected only on their merits, judged by their photographic and news values. In organizing the staff of independent cameramen who will comprise the correspondents for the Screen Telegram a few sections of the country are still open. Negotiations are pending with cameramen in some of these districts for exclusive representation of this news reel.

Triangle Describes Camouflage.

Somebody started something when he coined the word "Camouflage." That word has probably become more widely known and used than any other military expression of the war. The word, as everyone knows, finds its origin in the practice of the men at the front of concealing military positions, movements and ordnance by means of real and painted foliage.

Triangle has just issued a wall card entitled "Camouflage," explaining in a rather brisk and humorous manner what "Camouflage" is as applied to ordinary experiences in life. These cards are being sent to motion picture exhibitors through the various Triangle exchanges and have already aroused considerable comment. The cards may be obtained on request from any branch manager or at the main office.

Hearst-Pathe News Shows Real "Dogs of War."

The outstanding feature of the Hearst-Pathe News No. 14 are some striking scenes from France and Belgium. Those from France show the real "dogs of war" at work under fire, racing to and fro over "no man's land" in search of the wounded. Shells explode near them but do not prevent them from carrying out their duties. One dog is shown at the conclusion of a successful search. A wounded French officer is lying on the ground unconscious. The dog seizes the man's cap and races away with it to the stretcher bearers as a token that he is to be followed to the owner.

The scenes from the Belgian front show King Albert, one of the outstanding heroes of the war, being visited on the battle front by General Petain of France, another popular hero. The visit is concluded by a review of the remnants of that Belgian army which saved democracy from the German invaders. These views are not only strikingly interesting but very beautiful.

Miss Young at Work on Glyn Story.

Production has been started on "The Reason Why," which Clara Kimball Young, with her own company, is planning as her next Select Picture. While the casting has not as yet been completed, principals have been chosen, and Conway Tearle as Lord Tancred will play opposite the star in the role of Zara. Other members of the company will be Kate Lester as the Duchess of Glastonbury, and Little Eldean Stewart as Mimo. Robert G. Vignola and his assistant, William J. Scully, will handle the direction of the piece, and Lewis J. Physioc has been retained as cameraman.

"The Reason Why" is a story of European social life from the pen of Elinor Glyn. It deals with the love affairs of Lord Tancred and Zara, whom he has married.

With the usual disregard for expense the star is ordering lavish settings and wardrobe. Nineteen gowns are being rushed to completion.

The new play will be the fifth of Miss Young's Select Star Series.

Paramount Lists Nine Strong Productions for March

Subjects Feature Billie Burke, Jack Pickford, Charles Ray, Ann Pennington, Marguerite Clark, Louise Huff, Dorothy Dalton, Pauline Frederick and Enid Bennett.

ANNOUNCEMENT from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation gives the March releases of Paramount, presenting one of the best arrays of attractions offered by the organization. Nine strong cards are scheduled for release that month, practically all of these productions having been completed. In these pictures, in the order of their release, are Billie Burke, Jack Pickford, Charles Ray, Ann Pennington, Marguerite Clark, Dorothy Dalton, Pauline Frederick and Enid Bennett. A J. Stuart Blackton production also will be released in March.

The initial releases for the third month of the year are subjects starring Billie Burke and Jack Pickford. Miss Burke's new vehicle is "Eve's Daughter," which appeared as a play on Broadway recently, with Grace George as the star. James Kirkwood staged this production, assisted by H. Cameron Smith. Jack Pickford appears in another famous Mark Twain story, "Huck and Tom," and those who viewed "Tom Sawyer" will appreciate the fact that this means a real treat. "Huck and Tom" take up the adventures of "the immortal Tom," from his return to his home through the discovery of the grave robbers. William D. Taylor also is responsible for the direction of the new picture. Both the Billie Burke and the Jack Pickford productions will be released March 4.

On March 11 two Paramount pictures, starring Charles Ray and Ann Pennington, will be released. Charles Ray's new vehicle is "The Family Skeleton." Victor L. Schertzinger staged the picture under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince. Sylvia Bremer appears opposite Ray. Ann Pennington's photoplay is "Sunshine Nan," adapted from "Calvary Alley," Alice Hegan Rice's popular book. It was adapted to the screen by Eve Unsell and was staged by Charles Giblyn.

March 18 marks the release of Marguerite Clark's "Prunella," J. Stuart Blackton's artistic triumph, "Wild Youth," and Dorothy Dalton's new Thomas H. Ince production, "Love Me." Miss Clark's photoplay is an adaptation from the play by Granville Barker and Laurence Housman, the scenario having been handled by Charles Maigne. Unusual time and attention were spent on planning the settings of this picture by Director Tourneur. Mr. Blackton's offering, "Wild Youth," was taken from the story by Sir Gilbert Parker; the scenario was prepared by Mr. Blackton in collaboration with Sir Gilbert and Beulah Marie Dix. It was staged by George H. Melford. In the big cast are Louise Huff and Theodore Roberts. Miss Dalton's new vehicle, "Love Me," is an original story by C. Gardner Sullivan. Roy William Neill directed.

March 25 presents Pauline Frederick in "La Tosca" and Enid Bennett in "Naughty, Naughty!" Miss Frederick's "La Tosca" is taken, with as little change as possible, from the opera of the same name. It was staged by Edward Jose. "Naughty, Naughty!" tells of the struggles of an up-to-date young girl, who has visited New York in rejuvenating the old-fashioned, narrow-minded mid-Western town where she lives. It was staged by Jerome Storm.

Doris Kenyon and Mary Roberts Rinehart Confer

Doris Kenyon has been the busiest motion picture star in the profession during the past few weeks. In addition to acting ten hours a day before the camera she has been posing for portraits to two artists, Haskell Coffin and Charles Chambels; holding conferences with Mary Roberts Rinehart, author of "The Street of Seven Stars"; making occasional trips to cantonments to appear before the soldiers and in her spare moments working for the Red Cross.

Miss Kenyon will start work shortly on the first picture to be produced by her own company, De Luxe Picture, Inc. It will be a screen version of "The Street of Seven Stars," which Mrs. Rinehart characterizes as her most beautiful and most appealing story. It was originally published serially in The Saturday Evening Post and afterward attained a book sale of more than 250,000 copies. Mrs. Rinehart is taking a keen interest in the preparations for the screen presentation and is giving much valuable advice to Miss Kenyon as to her own conception of the charming heroine of her story.

Doris Kenyon and Mary Roberts Rinehart Conferring on the Scenario of "The Street of Seven Stars."

Abramson Company Back from Florida.

Accompanied by all the members of his company, including John Mason, Ann Luther, Leah Baird, Alan Hale, Claire Whitney, Sidney Mason, Jack McLean, William Lampe and others, Ivan Abramson, president of the Graphic Film Corporation, has returned to the city from Palm Beach, where he went sometime ago to take exterior scenes of "Moral Suicide."

Live Topics in Current Events No. 40.

The folks at home are going to find much to comfort them in the pictures showing how carefully General Pershing looks after the welfare of our boys in France, contained in Universal Current Events No. 40. The scenes contained in this issue of Current Events were photographed when General Pershing, accompanied by President Poincare, of France, and General Petain, Commander of the French armies, made an unexpected visit to one of the largest of the American cantonments. Our boys are shown practicing the gentle art of bombing, engaging in a hike through a driving snow storm, and in various other interesting maneuvers.

That the country is menaced by an ice famine of magnitude next summer unless efforts are now made to harvest the winter's great ice crop is brought home to the observer in a series of striking pictures contained in this issue. These scenes are sure to be of intense interest to public officials, as well as to householders. Historic Fort Douamont, where originated the heroic expression, "They shall not pass!" is presented as the scene of a review of its heroic defenders.

Other features include thrilling pictures of an iceboat rushing repairs across a frozen lake at a seventy-mile-an-hour clip to a broken down army motor transport, police dogs in an exhibition of capturing criminals, a parade at Minneapolis, and animated cartoons from the world's great newspapers.

E. K. Lincoln in Mae Marsh Support.

Mae Marsh's fifth Goldwyn production, "The Beloved Traitor," from the novel by Frank L. Packard, was recently completed at the Fort Lee studios following the taking of a number of scenes at Sebasco, Me., and Marblehead, Mass.

Her leading man is E. K. Lincoln, one of the featured players in "For the Freedom of the World," the stirring spectacle released through Goldwyn. In "The Beloved Traitor" he has the role of Judd Minot, which calls for the best that is in a player of his known calibre. Mr. Lincoln has had a successful career before the camera.

George Fawcett, whose work in Goldwyn's "The Cinderella Man," gave an unsurpassed touch of artistry to that beautiful Mae Marsh production, is another featured player.

Empey Goes to Camp Wheeler.

The trench scenes for "Over the Top," the Vitagraph super-feature which is being made from Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey's famous war book, with the soldier-author-lecturer as the star, are to be made at Camp Wheeler, the regular army post at Macon, Ga. Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph company, announces that by special permit of the War Department the company has been granted leave to use the big Southern camp as a location, and Sergeant Empey, with a party of more than fifty players and officials, left Monday, February 11, for the location.

Next Wholesome Is "Humpty Dumpty."

"Humpty Dumpty" is the next Wholesome production, scheduled for release in March. The stage settings of this famous Mother Goose extravaganza exceed in lavishness all previous efforts of the Wholesome directors. Following "Humpty Dumpty" will be "The Cow Jumped Over The Moon," "Cat and the Fiddle," "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater," "The House That Jack Built," "Simple Simon" and "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary."

Mutual Lists Five Features

Ann Murdock in "My Wife," Released February 18, Is the First.

FIVE feature attractions are listed by Mutual for early future release, beginning with "My Wife," starring the popular Frohman favorite, Ann Murdock, on February 18. This play had a long speaking stage run at the Empire theater, New York, under the late Charles Frohman's management, and in the picture production the original cast has been largely retained.

"The Midnight Trail," starring William Russell, the athletic actor, is an excellent medium for the quick action drama of that versatile performer. The new Russell play is scheduled for release on February 25. It is a fair example of the high dramatic excellence of American-Mutual productions, superbly photographed and directed and displaying Mr. Russell at his best in a humorous vein.

"Powers That Prey," a forthcoming Mary Miles Minter subject, slated for release March 4, is a story of how a clever and pretty girl with the newspaper instinct took over her father's paper and so conducted it as to drive out of business the crooked politicians who had hounded him. The story is one that lends itself well to Miss Minter's appealing personality and art.

Miss Minter has still another production for release April 1, entitled "A Bit of Jade." This story has an element of mystery and the young star is enthusiastic over it.

"Ann's Finish," Margarita Fischer's newly completed production, to be released on March 11, involves the career of a young society debutante who is in rebellion against nursery governess rule.

Another Fischer picture for release at a date not yet set is "Primitive Woman," a drama of daring deeds involving a young girl of today placed in a position requiring quick decisions and prompt actions.

Miss Olive Tell is starred in a new production, "The Girl and the Judge," billed for release March 18, which gives promise of being one of the most popular successes of this charming young actress.

Metro Players Visit Bushmanor.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, together with a large company of players, have returned to the Metro studio in New York, after spending a strenuous week in storm ridden Baltimore and its suburbs staging scenes for their new Metro production, "The Brass Check." Scenes were also staged at "Bushmanor," the country home of Mr. Bushman, which is ideally suited for the big estate called for in the story. The photo-version of "The Brass Check" is by June Mathis, and is being directed by Will S. Davis.

The Metro players worked in one of the worst snowstorms experienced in Maryland since 1909. The weather, however, aided rather than hindered the work, as Director Davis got some of the most striking scenes ever taken by a camera.

Special Book on "House of Hate."

Each exhibitor who plays "The House of Hate" will receive from his Pathe Exchange a special campaign book on the serial. It is prepared with the purpose of helping him sell "The House of Hate" to his patrons.

The showman will find in the pages of this book suggested advertisements to run (cuts to illustrate them can be ordered from his exchange; the type can be had in any newspaper office), reproduction of the advertising matter so that he can use it to the best advantage, and last he will find a supply of press matter giving him stories to send out in advance of the showing of the first episode, others to use as each chapter is announced, any synopses of the chapters for use in his house program and newspapers.

"The Whispering Chorus" Is Finished.

"The Whispering Chorus" is finished. After several weeks, Cecil B. DeMille has brought to a conclusion what he believes to be one of the most effective productions upon which he has engaged.

Given a story, the work of Perley Poore Sheehan, which embodied a drama of the most compelling nature; a scenario prepared by Jeanie MacPherson retaining all the qualities of the original story translated into screen terms with skill and understanding; a cast headed by players of the first rank, including Raymond Hatton, Kathlyn Williams, Elliott Dexter, Tully Marshall and others; having at his command all the tremendous facilities of the Lasky plant, and bringing to the production the experience, artistic perception, infinite attention to detail, skill in dierction, and unusual lighting and technical effects that have made him a past master in screen work, Cecil B. DeMille has undoubtedly developed a photodrama that is expected to rank among his greatest achievements.

Record Bookings for "The Guilty Man."

Record bookings on A. H. Woods' "The Guilty Man," a Thomas H. Ince production released under the Paramount trademark, are reported at the New York Distribution Department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. A deal with Marcus Loew was consummated whereby the latter takes this photoplay for a run of 140 days in his theaters in Greater New York alone. Other circuits, including the Hulsey organization in the South, have signed for long engagements on "The Guilty Man," as well as individual theaters of the highest standard in all parts of the country.

"Within the Cup" (Paralta).

One of the most complex parts ever played by Bessie Barriscale is that which she portrays in her second Paralta Play, "Within the Cup." In this picture Miss Barriscale's character as Thisbe Lorraine, an art student and writer, undergoes a complete change which taxes the star's versatility.

Miss Barriscale's acting further evidences the fact established by her work in the first picture made by her own company, "Madam Who," that she has reached the zenith of her career.

"Within the Cup" is an original story written especially for Miss Barriscale by the Paralta staff author, Monte M. Katterjohn. It was produced under the direction of Raymond B. West and presents an unusual array of elaborate scenes. The cast includes George Fisher and Edward Coxen.

"Within the Cup" is in seven reels. It is practically ready for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Service.

Plenty to Do at Lasky Studio

Eight Productions Under Way at the Two Los Angeles Plants.

A SEASON of unprecedented activity has just been inaugurated at the West Coast studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in spite of the fact that the present time is said to be one of a general slowing up of production on account of unusual war conditions. In a statement this week by Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the company, the fact is set forth that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is experiencing no difficulties in securing shipments of supplies from the East, a matter which has been given as the reason for the slowing up of production of several organizations making pictures in Los Angeles.

Six feature productions are under way this week at the Hollywood studios, and at the Morosco studios two additional companies have started work on new pictures. At the Hollywood studios the companies engaged in active production are those of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, C. B. DeMille's special production, and pictures under the direction of George Melford, Donald Crisp, and James Young. Working under the direction of Melford are Louise Huff and Jack Pickford. Sessue Hayakawa begins a new production under the direction of James Young, while Wallace Reid is being starred in a picture which was started in New York, and is being finished under the direction of Donald Crisp. At the Morosco studios, Vivian Martin undertakes a new picture directed by Rollin S. Sturgeon.

According to Mr. Lasky, who recently arrived here from the East, this activity at the Western studios is only a start. Within a short time such stars as Elsie Ferguson, Billie Burke, and Lina Cavalieri will be in Los Angeles ready for a season of picturemaking under the Famous Players-Lasky management. Later in the spring, when he has finished his stage engagement, Fred Stone is scheduled to work in Hollywood in stories which are now being prepared by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

Fine Gowns Seen in "The Shell Game."

Emmy Wehlen, Metro star, wears a number of beautiful Paris models in "The Shell Game," her screen version of Kenneth L. Roberts' clever story, "Good Will and Almond Shells."

The women who view "The Shell Game" will appreciate most, perhaps, a lace dress that Miss Wehlen wears as a negligee. The lace is combined with white net and chiffon to produce an interesting effect, and a grateful warmth for the shoulders is provided by a velvet coat of a delicate blue.

Musical Novelty in "The Claim."

The talking motion picture, perfectly synchronized, has at last been achieved in "The Claim," a Metro production featuring Edith Storey. Credit for the accomplishment, which long has been the dream of motion picture producers, belongs jointly to Miss Storey and Frank Reicher, who directed her in "The Claim." Precisely how synchronization was realized is, of course, a studio secret, but it is a startlingly effective novelty.

Miss Storey appears in "The Claim" as Belle Jones, a woman embittered by grief and a man's perfidy. One human trait which adversity cannot destroy is her love of song, and it is when she sings "Annie Laurie" that Director Reicher achieves his new effect.

When the scene was photographed, Miss Storey actually sang the song. In the finished film the notes and the words as well are shown in exact unison with the movements of the star's lips. By means of this novelty the spectators can follow the ballad themselves, and, if he chose, the musical director or organist could play the accompaniment by note from the screen.

Theda Bara Writes Spy Story.

Following "Rough and Ready," the William Farnum de luxe production which is scheduled for relase by William Fox March 24, there will be a release on April 7 of "The Soul of Buddha," a Theda Bara super-production. This play was written by Miss Bara herself. The inspiration, she says, came to her after she had read of the death of Mata Hari, the woman dancer, who was executed as a spy. It was Miss Bara's first attempt as an author.

Director J. Gordon Edwards has constructed an unusual interior set in this production. The action of the play called for an elaborate Buddhist temple in Java. After getting the required data and drawings the technical staff erected a replica of a Buddhist palace of worship, even to the life-sized statues of a Buddha and the griffins that adorn a famous temple in Java.

"The Planter" Proves a Moneymaker.

The success of "The Planter," the big Mutual Special production, based on Herman Whitaker's striking story of life on a Mexican rubber plantation, in which Tyrone Power is starred, is reflected in returns from exhibitors. Power's virile and masterly characterization of the brutal planter in this strange, exotic story of the tropics is a really forceful screen delineation.

Beban Coming in Another "Italian."

William C. De Mille's play, "The Land of the Free," which has been translated into the screen language in the film production "One More American," bares the pathetic side of political rottenness and graft which has for its victims the ignorant aliens, newly from Ellis Island, who are the potential citizens of America. George Beban, the featured star of the play, is a typical Italian who has come to this country, working hard and conducting his business in an honest manner, while he awaits eagerly the coming of his family from the homeland and his own naturalization as a real American citizen.

The "system" is working to its full effect in the Mulberry Bend district in which Luigi Riccardo is living and awaiting his family. Mike Regan is the poltical boss, and even Bump Rundle, the prize fighter, pays tribute. Mike Regan puts a doctor in as inspector at Ellis Island. That is how he was able to detain Riccardo's family when the Italian refused to "come through."

"One More American" was staged under the direction of William C. De Mille, author of the original play, and adopted to the screen by Olga Printzlau. The film will be released by Paramount February 25.

Metro Installed in Klutho Studio.

The headquarters of the Yorke-Metro Company during its stay in Jacksonville, Fla., will be the Klutho studios. Arrangements have been made to take over the major portion of the plant, and the company, already housed in its new quarters, has started to produce Metro's screen version of Holman Day's romantic story, "The Landloper."

Yorke-Metro's new quarters offer most complete studio facilities. The plant is equipped with a large open air stage, and additional space will be available shortly when the new inclosed studio is completed.

Farnum Returns from Adirondacks.

William Farnum and the large company of Fox players appearing in his support in "Rough and Ready" have returned from Port Henry, N. Y., where they were being "shot" in snow scenes. They were gone about three weeks. Director Richard Stanton, who is in charge of the third picture Mr. Farnum has made since his return to the East last year, reports exceptionally fine results from the trip to the Adirondacks.

Mr. Farnum began work on the remaining "interiors" of the drama in the studios in this city. The subject will be released as a Standard picture on March 24.

Graphic Film to Produce for International.

It is announced that an arrangement has been entered into whereby the Graphic Film Corporation, a concern in which William Randolph Hearst is interested, and of which Ivan Abramson is president; becomes the producing company for the International Film Service Co., Inc.

The first picture announced by the International, under the new arrangement, to be released about March 15, is entitled "Moral Suicide." Aside from the intensely dramatic value of the story, wonderfully impressive interiors have been used, the locations have been chosen with careful attention to the creation of the right atmosphere, a remarkably high grade of photography has been secured and the lighting effects have been so skillfully blended that, pictorially, this feature will be classed as a camera study.

Holmes Finishing "A Pair of Sixes."

Taylor Holmes is now on the last lap of his latest George K. Spoor feature, "A Pair of Sixes." All indications are that this picture will rank high, if not the highest, among his previous vehicles. "A Pair of Sixes" contains a wealth of swiftly moving action, coupled with a delightfully amusing farcical theme. Mr. Holmes is aided in his fun by the singular characterization of Maude Eburne, who, as in the stage version, plays the role of "Coddles."

The production is enacted by an all-star cast. Robert Conness plays the role of Nettleton, Holmes' business partner. Cecil Owen, playing a leading part in "Lilac Time," a "legitimate" production featuring Jane Cowl, slips away from his Loop theater to appear in an important part, and Alice Mann plays the romantic character opposite Mr. Holmes.

"Ruggles of Red Gap" is now ready for the market, although its release date will be announced later.

"A Daughter of Uncle Sam" Gets Government "O. K."

The governmental stamp of approval has been given "A Daughter of Uncle Sam," the Jaxon thrill serial, as the result of the action of the Committte on Public Information in passing for release the early episode of the serial. No changes were ordered in the story by the members of the Division of Pictures which reviewed the production, according to word received by General Film Company.

The manner in which "A Daughter of Uncle Sam" tears aside the mask which has hidden the activities of German agents of destruction in the United States makes it one of the most important war-time features produced in many months. As each of the twelve one-reel episodes of "A Daughter of Uncle Sam" features one or more phases of the work of German spies in this country.

Tom Bret with National.

Thomas Bret, who was responsible for the catchy and witty titles in most of the Drew comedies, has been engaged by Harry L. Reichenbach for the National Film Corporation to act as scenario editor and title writer for the Capitol comedies in which Smiling Bill Parsons is to appear, and which are to be released through Goldwyn.

"Billy's Baby" and "Billy's Predicament," the two completed comedies, are now under way, and will reach the Goldwyn exchanges weeks ahead of the first release date.

Lois Zellner, Walter Shrock, Tom Bret, and several other successful comedy writers have already been placed under agreement to submit a number of stories to Parsons.

Sylvia Day, one of Ziegfield's beauties, left New York this week for the National studios at Hollywood, where she will make her first screen appearance in support of Parsons.

Scene from "Six Shooter Andy" (Fox).

Tom Mix Coming in "Six-Shooter Andy," the New Fox Picture.

A new play of the gold-mining West, entitled "Six-Shooter Andy," with Tom Mix as the star, is the Fox Special Feature release for the week of Feb. 24. The cast includes several of the children who made hits in "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," and other Fox pictures. Among these little players are Georgie Stone, Lewis Sargent, Buddie Messinger, Raymond Lee, Virginia Lee Corbin, Violet Radcliffe, Vivian Plank and Beulah Burns.

Tom Mix plays the part of Andy Crawford. The part of William Crawford, Andy's father, is taken by Bert Woodruff, while Sheriff Tom Slade is played by Sam De Grasse. Ned Skinner and Whiskey Bill, henchmen of Slade, are played respectively by Pat Crisman and Bob Fleming. Jack Plank plays the part of Cy Gallagher. Ben Hammer is Susan's father. Enid Markey plays opposite Tom Mix. S. A. Franklin directed. The story is by Bernard McConville.

Charles Sarver, New World Scenario Man.

Charles Sarver, noted novelist, short story writer and author of many of the biggest screen successes played by the most famous movie stars, has been secured by the World Film Corporation as head of the concern's scenario department.

Mr. Sarver comes to the World with a splendid record of success. He has been connected with the New York American, New York Globe, and New York Press as city editor, having been engaged by Frank A. Munsey when the latter took over the Press. As managing editor of the Boston Traveler, Mr. Sarver made an enviable record for alert news sense and capacity to present the day's news to the Traveler's readers in the most attractive form possible.

Changes in Fox Schedule.

The Tom Mix production, "Six-Shoooter Andy," originally set for release Feb. 24, and later moved along to March 3, has been restored to its original place on the calendar of William Fox releases. The March 3 release will be "The Girl with the Champagne Eyes," in which Jewel Carmen is the star. A third change is the elimination from the present schedule of a George Walsh comedy, titled "The Kid is Clever," and set tentatively for March 31 release.

There are no changes in the other March releases. "The Debt of Honor," Peggy Hyland's first picture for William Fox, will be available March 10, "Woman and the Law," an R. A. Walsh production, March 17, and Virginia Pearson's war drama, "A Daughter of France," March 24.

Paul Hurst Joins Vitagraph.

Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, announces the engagement of Paul Hurst, director and leading man, as co-director with David Smith in the production of "The Woman in the Web," the fifteen episode serial in which Hedda Nova and J. Frank Glendon are to be starred. He assumed his duties with the beginning of work on the third episode of the serial, which is being filmed at the western Vitagraph studio in Hollywood.

Kerrigan's Second Paralta Ready.

J. Warren Kerrigan's second Paralta play, "The Turn of a Card," is now ready for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Service. The picture is a seven-reel comedy-drama with elaborate settings, both exterior and interior, and an unusually breezy plot. Miss Lois Wilson plays opposite Mr. Kerrigan. The picture was produced from the story by Frederick Chapin and was directed by Oscar Apfel.

One of the most vivid scenes in this production is the "shooting" of "Big Liz," an oil well which is supposed to be the largest in the great Oklahoma oil fields. It was only after a great deal of difficulty that Mr. Apfel was able to take this scene, and in order to obtain it he took his players to the La Brea oil ranch in California, while they actually shot a new well.

Marcus Loew Backs "Oh, Baby!"

Marcus Loew has signed a contract with the Universal Film Exchange, of New York, whereby "Oh, Baby!" the newest Alice Howell Century comedy, will be shown over the Loew circuit for a period of sixty-five days. "Oh, Baby!" is the sixth Century comedy featuring Miss Howell. In general theme it is a radical departure from its predecessors.

The comedy, which was directed by J. G. Blystone, contains an unusually strong cast. In support of Miss Howell appear Eddie Barrie, Neal Burns, Russ Powell, Eva Novak, and a bevy of beauties loaned to the Century for this comedy only by the L-Ko Komedy Kompany. It is declared that because of the novel photographic effects contained in the production eight weeks were consumed in filming it.

Beating Congress to It.

Beating Congress to it in the saving of daylight, a new working schedule will go into effect at the studio of World Pictures on the first of March. This schedule provides for the beginning of work each day at the studio one hour earlier than is now the case. Instead of beginning work at 9 o'clock in the morning, the studio will begin to hum with activity at 8 o'clock—this change being made for the reason that it gives the studio workers an additional hour of daylight in which to work, thereby cutting off an hour in the evening in which lights would otherwise be burned. The first picture to be completed under the new schedule will be "The Way Out," in which Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge are starred.

Mutual Features Russell February 25

"The Midnight Trail" Has a Detective Angle—Comedy and Weekly Complete List.

"The Midnight Trail" is the title of the forthcoming William Russell production, which will be released by Mutual February 25. The picture was made by the American Film Company, Inc., under the direction of Edward Sloman.

"Big Bill," as the big star is called by his host of admirers, is seen as a young man of virile and volatile temperament in whom the spirit of adventure and romance is rampant. Inspired by the thrillers of his favorite author, Conan Doyle, he poses as an up-to-date Sherlock Holmes and sleuths on the trail of jewel thieves, in order to meet the daughter of a minister who has been robbed and get the inside track of the game of hearts. Russell's delineation of the pseudo Sherlock is in his best serio-comic vein which has been in evidence in his recent productions.

"Up In the Air" is the title of the Strand comedy release of February 26, in which Billie Rhodes is featured. This is a typical Rhodes comedy with the effervescence of youth scintillating in some sparkling action. Mary is seen in a daring flight in an aeroplane with her sweetheart, to whom her father objects strenuously. With the aid of her chum, who captivates the aged and wealthy suitor favored by father, Mary finally takes the matrimonial "flight" with her sweetheart.

Mutual Weekly is released on February 25, and covers events of significant interest in the United States with some special pictures from the war zone.

Pathe Has Big Program Mar. 3

Baby Osborne in Feature and the First Chapter of New Pearl White Serial Stand Out.

THERE are two outstanding features on Pathe's program for the week of March 3—the latest Baby Marie Osborne Gold Rooster Play and the first episode of the big new serial, "The House of Hate."

Baby Marie Osborne stars in "Daddy's Girl," produced in five parts by Diando. The outstanding feature of this picture is human interest. It is a charming story of childhood with also a strong dramatic element which gives good action. Little Sambo, the comical colored boy, who has made such a hit in recent Baby Osborne pictures, has a prominent part in the cast and repeats the success which he achieved in "The Little Patriot." Herbert Standing is in the cast, as is Marion Warner, who has played in many of these Baby pictures. By reason of her charming, chubby little personality and her really remarkable talent, Baby Osborne has won her way to the point where exhibitors have found her to be a real attraction.

Indications point to "The House of Hate" as the biggest serial Pathe has ever released. "The Hooded Terror" in "The House of Hate" is a stronger mystery character than "The Laughing Mask." Born of the lust for profit out of blood, he starts through the fifteen episodes seeking to kill the heroine.

Doris Kenyon starts in the fifteenth episode of "The Hidden Hand," "The Girl of the Prophecy," with Mahlon Hamilton, Arline Pretty and Sheldon Lewis. In this thrilling chapter the mystery of the girl of the prophecy is disclosed. Doris's identity is established and the Hidden Hand is revealed. It is intensely interesting from start to finish.

Ruth Roland stars in the seventh of the "Price of Folly" dramas, entitled "The Rebound," with Frank Mayo. This is a strong drama with a happy ending. The young girl is tricked into a fake marriage by a man who is later defended in a court of law by another who loves her. At the trial his real wife turns up and reveals his perfidy. The villain kills himself, and when the memory of her sacrifice for Winthrop is dulled Violet marries Barclay.

Harold Lloyd appears in "A Gasoline Wedding," a one-reel comedy produced by Rolin. This is a six-cylinder laugh-producer in which a four-cylinder Ford that runs on one and a half conspired with Harold Lloyd to bring chuckles, then howls, then arrest for disorderly conduct.

An interesting split-reel is made up of "Yellowstone Park—Its Geysers," and "Buxton" (Derbyshire, England).

An International Cartoon and Educational split-reel release and Hearst-Pathe News No. 21 and 22 round up this program.

What's Doing at Triangle

Nine Features Are Well Under Way and Six Have Just Been Started.

PRODUCTION is making rapid headway at the Culver City studios, where nine features are in various stages of completion and six subjects have been commenced during the past week. Two other companies have nearly completed their dramas, and Director Jack Dillon has sent his latest offering to the film editing department, where four additional subjects are awaiting shipment.

These completed pictures are "The Scar," a Western, featuring Roy Stewart; "The Sea Panther," a romance of the days of Captain Kidd, in which William Desmond is a swashbuckling pirate; "The Answer," a socialistic drama featuring Alma Rubens and Joe King, and "The Hard Rock Breed," with Margery Wilson, Jack Curtis, and Jack Livingston in the leading roles.

Charles Rann Kennedy's famous play, "The Servant in the House," considered a masterpiece of the legitimate stage, will be transferred to the screen as one of the foremost features of the production program arranged by the Triangle. The play has been adapted for the film by Lanier Bartlett. It is probable the story will be in seven reels. Walter Edwards will direct. Jack Curtis has been chosen for the role of the Drain Man. Jean Hersholt will portray Manson, the Christ-like character.

Following the completion of "The Sea Panther," a pirate story, Director Thomas Heffron has a subject of a distinctly different calibre, a society drama entitled "The Veil."

A new Western thriller, with Roy Stewart, cowboy star, in the title role, has been begun under the direction of Cliff Smith at the big ranch studio, Hartville. This picture, entitled "Boss of the Lazy Y," is a screen adaptation of Charles Alden Seltzer's novel by the same name.

"Another Foolish Virgin" is a screen adaptation of W. Carey Wonderly's magazine story by the same name directed by E. Mason Hopper. Texas Guinan has an important part in this production.

Something considered unique is "Smoke," directed by Jack Conway, in which Gloria Swanson, former Keystone beauty, has the leading role. It is a "bathing suit banquet." The plunge at the Triangle Culver City studios was converted into a beautiful tank such as would be found in a country club.

Beach Supervises Polishing of His Picture.

Rex Beach is directing the titling and assembling of his newest motion picture, "Heart of the Sunset," now in process of editing in the Rex Beach Pictures Company's laboratories in New York City. Pursuing the practice he established for "The Auction Block," the author personally will write the subtitles for the new production, which is to be distributed by Goldwyn as a Rex Beach special.

Unexpected Thrill in Universal Serial.

The luck of the motion picture director, as well as that of the screen actor, is combined in a recent spectacular accident that happened to Eddie Polo while the Universal company, with Director James W. Horne, was staging the third episode of "The Bull's Eye," which is last week's release.

The Universal serial star and his horse both miraculously escaped death when the brink of a cliff accidentally crumpled and gave way, horse and rider plunging sixty feet down the declivity, landing in a heap at the bottom. Other members of the company rushed to the spot expecting to find the man killed, or at least fatally injured, but, to their surprise, he dug himself out of the avalanche of loose earth that had followed him down the cliffside and smilingly began a personal inspection to discover the numerous minor dents and scratches he had received. The horse was also found undamaged to any considerable extent.

Fortunately the cameras filming the episode were so placed that they caught the entire mishap and the scene will be retained in the picture. It will appear that the horse was struck by a bullet from the rifle of one of the rangers and toppled over the brink.

"Eve's Daughter" a March Release.

Billie Burke's next appearance under the Paramount trade-mark will be in "Eve's Daughter," adapted to the screen by Margaret Turnbull from the play by Alicia Ramsel, which will be released in March. It was a tremendous success when presented on the speaking stage, where it was a starring vehicle for Grace George. The story deals with a girl who has been strictly brought up and decides to have her fling with the meagre fortune left her by her father, who left the bulk of his millions to various institutions. She runs away with an Englishman who cannot marry her, but is rescued by her father's lawyer, who has loved her from childhood.

The story is vivacious and required a well-balanced cast to maintain the proper tempo of this comedy-drama. Billie Burke has the stellar role of Irene Simpson Bates, the headstrong girl, and William Riley Hatch plays the part of her father. Thomas Meighan is the faithful lawyer-lover who prevents Irene from wrecking her life and brings her to her senses. Lionel Atwill has the role of Courtenay Urquhart, the dashing young roue who persuades Irene to elope with him. Florence Flynn, Harriet Ross, Lucille Carney, Mary Navaro and Henry Lee complete the cast of the principal characters. The production was directed by James Kirkwood.

Big Cast to Support Miss Allison.

An aggregation of stars will be seen in "Social Hypocrites," May Allison's first vehicle as an individual star on the Metro program. Albert Capellani, the eminent French director, who has the production in charge, and who, with June Mathis as collaborator, made the screen version from Alicia Ramsay's play, "Bridge," has a penchant for great casts, and he has been "aided and abetted" by Maxwell Karger, studio supervisor, and by Leander de Cordova, his assistant director. In the cast are Henry Kolker, Marie Wainwright, Joseph Kilgour, Stella Hammerstein, Stephen Grattan, Frank Currier, Maggie Brever, and Ethel Winthrop.

"Texas" Cooper Acts as Ringmaster.

"Texas" Cooper, the Western cowpuncher, who directed the sensational cavalry scenes in Metro's "Lest We Forget," and also played the role of captain of the German lancers, returned to the sawdust ring recently to direct and act as ringmaster of the National Army Circus of the 308th Infantry at Camp Upton, Long Island.

Scene from "The Floor Below" (Goldwyn).

Mabel Learns Something About Bones in Goldwyn's New Picture.

Once she begins work in a picture Mabel Normand becomes her director's most valuable aid. Her suggestions are many and practical and every picture in which she appears is apt to embody a score of original touches in business, make-up and settings, all from the same source—Mabel Normand's remarkable sense of dramatic values and innate feeling for screen technique.

This is demonstrated again in "The Floor Below," soon to be released by Goldwyn as a worthy successor to "Dodging a Million." Miss Normand essays a character unlike any with which she has been identified and the story also is unrelated to her previous screen efforts. She is Patricia O'Rourke, copy girl in a busy newspaper office, by turns the torment and the heavenly pal of the men with whom she works. They hate her and adore her and never forget that she is with them.

In reading some of the scenes with her director, Clarence G. Badger, Miss Normand learned that Patricia would be expected to shoot craps with a messenger boy tarrying in the office, the scene being interpolated merely to illustrate one of the reasons for the girl's discharge, which, when brought about, results in the great adventure which leads her to the floor below.

The action was carried out as the star suggested, that of having the boy a funny old man character. The superannuated Mercury was Miss Normand's own selection for the part, and his playing contributes to the fun.

Miss Gordon assumes the part of Grace Culver, better known as "the wasp" because of her caustic tongue, the daughter of John Culver, who is owner of vast canneries and working on Government contracts.

Kitty Gordon in "The Wasp."

Miss Kitty Gordon's next World picture titled "The Wasp," to be released on the program March 11, is entirely different from any of her previous pictures. Miss Gordon's preceding pictures were models of sartorial elegance, giving the star every opportunity for the display of her regal pulchritude, and the subject matter dealt with the problems and injustices of our present social structure. It gives the admirers of Miss Gordon an excellent chance to see the highly developed histrionic ability of the English beauty, which talent has hitherto been left unemphasized. The story is replete with action, episode after episode piling up into one smashing climax, and besides permits the star to display a dazzling series of creations, the last word in spring styles.

Seven-Reeler for Triangle

"A Soul in Trust" Heads Program for Week of February 24.

IN Triangle's second seven-reel feature, "A Soul in Trust," released February 24, Wall Street schemers use a clever woman to obtain from an incorruptible Senator on the Naval Affairs Committee information in regard to naval bases.

This drama by Catherine Carr follows the characters through Virginia society life in the nineties to the climax in Washington's legislative halls. Belle Bennett enacts the role of Mrs. Carter. J. Barney Sherry, familiarly known as the "screen millionaire," appears as Senator Franklin. Gilbert P. Hamilton is credited with the direction of "A Soul in Trust."

"Little Red Decides," adapted from William V. McCoy's American Magazine story of the same name, is the second feature on the February 24 program. In this story Little Red, maverick of the range, is saved from a professionally prescribed mother, and finds a substitute and equivalent for maternal love in the affection of Duck Sing, a Chinese cook.

Little Barbara Connolly, three and a half years old, appears as Little Red, and Director Jack Conway states that she is far easier to manage than many of her grown-up sisters. The role of Duck Sing is played by the Oriental actor, Goro Kino.

Fritz Schade as the husband in "The Tell Tale Shirt," Keystone Comedy released the same week, is doing his best to deceive his wife (Peggy Pearce) at every opportunity. A misplaced address and Oriental innocence personified by Paddy McQuire leads to a fatal tangle in a Chinese laundry.

"A Coward's Courage" and "His Nimble Twist" are Triangle one-reel Komedies also released for the week of the 24th.

Alice Brady Meeting the Public.

Versatile Alice Brady has been giving a shining example of "how to live twenty-four hours a day" ever since she consented to oblige Loew theater patrons by appearing in person at theaters where her pictures are being shown.

Miss Brady began her whirl around the circle by apearing at the Loew house in Providence February 11. Mayor Gainor received the actress on her appearance at the Emery theater, where Miss Brady delighted the crowd with a monologue followed by a song revue.

Having been one of the clever members of the speaking stage before her conversation to film drama, Alice Brady is splendidly equipped for appearing in person before the fans who have learned to love her through her pictures. She is a speaker of no slight merit, and is possessed of a voice which has been highly cultivated and which was a valuable asset in the comic opera field.

On Wednesday night Miss Brady appeared at the Loew theater in New Rochelle, where "Woman and Wife," the scond of her Select pictures, was being presented. Friday found her at the Loew theater in Newark, "Woman and Wife" again being the picture on the bill.

During the week of February 18 Miss Brady appeared in twenty-eight of the Loew theaters in New York within five nights.

Scene from "Ruthless Russia" (Select).

Scene from "The Midnight Trail" (Mutual).

"The Midnight Trail" (American).

One of the best of the Russell pictures recently produced by the American Film Company is "The Midnight Trail," released February 25. The picture was directed by Edward Sloman. It is the story of a wealthy young clubman, addicted to auto racing, polo playing and all sports.

Francelia Billington is leading woman. Clarence Burton, Sydney Deane, Carl Stockdale, Harvey Clark, Jerome Sheler, Edward Jobson, Helen Howard and Alfred Ferguson are in the cast.

"M'liss" a Great Story for Miss Pickford.

The next vehicle for Mary Pickford will be Francis Bret Harte's famous story, "M'liss." It has been decided after all that Marshall Neilan instead of going East or directing some other star will remain in California to stage Miss Pickford's new Artcraft picture.

"M'liss" is one of the most stirring of all California stories by the famous novelist. It has been produced on the stage, and its dramatic qualities are assured. There is certain to be a full quota of that romantic and picturesque atmosphere which made the California of Harte, Twain, and others famous the world over.

"M'liss" is a hoydenish, mischievous, ingenuous, insouciant, uncouth yet lovable character withal. It will give Mary Pickford an opportunity to display her gifts.

Walthall's Second Paralta Completed.

"Humdrum Brown," Henry B. Walthall's second Paralta Play, has been completed and will soon be released. The production is of a type which stands out as being entirely different from the kind in which Walthall has previously appeared. It is a tense drama with touches of excellent comedy. Mr. Walthall's delineation of the part of Humdrum, the struggling, ambitious youth, who has grown up in a small town, will be of marked interest.

The picture was made from an original scenario by H. B. Daniel and was produced under the direction of Rex. Ingram. Mary Charleson appears in the leading role opposite Mr. Walthall and the remainder of the cast includes Joseph J. Dowling, Kate Price, Ida Lewis, Dorothy Love Clark, Joe Harris and Howard Crampton.

"Schools and Schools" Is an O. Henry.

Jean Paige, the star of a number of O. Henry successes, returned to the screen last week in "Schools and Schools," a two-reel Broadway Star feature released by General Film. This is a romance of a Western girl who comes to New York to live with a beautiful and sophisticated cousin, only to become entangled in a web of jealousy. It has been pictured with all the subtle O. Henry humor and pathos.

Following "Schools and Schools" comes "A Madison Square Arabian Night," a highly dramatic story of New York life.

E. W. Hammons, of the Educational Films Corporation of America, has successfully overcome the effects of a recent operation for appendicitis.

"The Lie" Will Be Miss Ferguson's Next.

Following the success scored by Elsie Ferguson in her current Artcraft release, "The Song of Songs," it is announced that her next screen vehicle is another adaptation from a stage piece. "The Lie," an adaptation by Charles Maigne of Henry Arthur Jones' play, which created a sensation when presented on the speaking stage as a starring vehicle for Margaret Illington, is now rapidly nearing completion at the Famous Players-Lasky studio in New York.

As Elinor Shale in "The Lie," Miss Ferguson plays a sympathetic part of great emotional intensity, which, as she has strikingly demonstrated in her past work, is an ideal role for her accomplishments. J. Searle Dawley, veteran producer of the Famous Players-Lasky organization, is staging the new Ferguson picture.

Skating Scenes in "The Shell Game."

The fashionable skating scenes of the new Metro production, "The Shell Game," taken from the story, "Good Will and Almond Shells," written by Kenneth L. Roberts and adapted for the screen by George D. Baker, in which Emmy Wehlen is starred, were taken at the Hotel Biltmore skating rink on the top of that famous hotel.

While the picture was being made, a number of Russian diplomatic visitors, for whom the Russian flag is flying over the hotel, came up to the rink with the idea of a morning's skating, not knowing that the scenes for a picture were being made. When Director Baker saw their disappointment he immediately asked them if they would care to take part in the scene.

This was a distinct novelty, and they accepted with keen enjoyment. Like most Russians, they were wonderful skaters.

Paralta Erects Permanent Sets.

At the Paralta studios permanent French, Japanese and Italian garden scenes are being erected in the studio yard. It is found that such sets are often required and the costs for erecting them are so great that a big saving will be brought about by having the sets always ready and near at hand. The directors at the Paralta studios have found that garden scenes are the most difficult to obtain and are used for but a few flashes in a picture. They believe the advantage of having them ready for use, something which is impossible when gardens owned by individuals are hired for locations will more than recompense the company for the cost of their erection.

Tad's "Swimming Hole" a Current Judge Brown Story

One of the most refreshing and captivating bits of humor screened in many months is found in "Tad's Swimming Hole," the current Judge Brown story on General Film Company's release list. This is the fourth of the series of two-part stories of youth which are being produced on the west coast by the Boy City Film Company, of which Judge Willis Brown, noted children's advocate, is the head. The stories are being written by Judge Brown, who is known as the author of numerous moving picture successes, and are directed by King W. Vidor, one of the most versatile directors when it comes to handling youngsters.

As was the case in the preceding stories, the chief parts in "Tad's Swimming Hole" are played by boys selected from schools by Judge Brown because of their fitness for the parts. A series of exciting and amusing adventures follow the attempts of "de gang" to pre-empt a swimmin' hole for their exclusive use.

Don Barclay, Comedian, Cartoonist

Don Barclay, comedian in the "Ziegfeld Follies," has begun work on a second Essanay one-reel comedy, title not yet announced. His first comedy, "Check Your Hat, Sir?" released on February 16, shows clearly the comedian's cleverness that won him such fame on the comedy stage.

Possessing a remarkably pliable body,

Sketch by Don Barclay, Showing Himself and Director Hotaling.

he goes through some laugh-evoking pantomime in this picture, from burlesqueing the steps of a classic dancer to the role of a drunk. Not the least remarkable part of Barclay's makeup is the "zigzag" division in his hair—beginning at the crown of his head and continuing to his forehead in a series of white streaks, as though he were struck on the cranium by lightning.

Excellent and unusual photography will be a feature of Constance Talmadge's new Select production, "Up the Road with Sallie," which is now being filmed under the direction of William D. Taylor at the Morosco studios in Los Angeles.

Frank E. Garbutt, who has charge of the camera work, has introduced a new novel system of lighting, and his presentation of the star in silhouette photography is remarkably effective. Mr. Garbutt is the son of Frank A. Garbutt, west coast business manager for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and he is bringing to bear on his section of the motion picture industry the same qualities which have given Garbutt senior his success.

The scenario version of "Up the Road with Sallie" has been taken from the book by Frances Sterrett, and is the work of Julia Crawford Ives. Miss Talmadge is supported by Norman Kerry, her leading man; Kate Toncray, Thomas Persee, Karl Formes and M. B. Paanakker.

"Adam and Some Eves" (Klever Komedy).

Klever Pictures, Inc., released on February 11 the Klever Komedy entitled "Adam and Some Eves," with Victor Moore playing the only male role in the comedy, this picture being unique from the standpoint of having an entire female cast with the exception of Moore. The comedy was written and directed by Chester M. De Vonde. Moore gets in some good work and is capably assisted by D. L. Don, Peggy Adams, Agnes Neilsen and a big cast of girls "de looks."

Hart Directing Story of Southwest.

Under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, William S. Hart is now working on "The Tiger Man," his fifth picture for Artcraft release. He is directing the picture himself, and it is probably a fact that there is no one better qualified or who knows more certainly just what William S. Hart should do in a film than William S. Hart, himself.

In this picture the Western star again will appear in one of his familiar haunts—the Great Southwest.

Polly to Appear in "Glad Rags."

After becoming more or less identified with Sheriff Nell and her "chaps," six-shooters, etc., Polly Moran, cowgirl supreme and comedienne extraordinary of the Paramount-Mack Sennett forces, is to change her apparel and her characterization in a forthcoming film, and will be seen as a real lady with dresses and everything. Polly says she will be lost for a time without the big "gats" at her waist, and will have to tie a rock to her belt for ballast till she gets used to it. Meanwhile, Polly's broncho views the new stuff with equine scorn and disgust.

"Queen of the Sea" Released April 21.

That wonderful subsea photo-fantasy, "Queen of the Sea," with Annette Kellermann, is announced for release as a Standard picture by William Fox for April 21.

"Queen of the Sea" is filled with thrills, including one in which Miss Kellermann walks a wire eighty feet in the air and dives into the ocean from this height. But it is in the undersea stunts that Miss Kellermann excels. She gives a marvelous exhibition of swimming and diving. The photography is of the best.

Much of the picture was taken amid the natural scenery of Bar Harbor and Mount Desert Island, on the Maine Coast.

Universal Shows Making of Machine Guns.

Under the supervision of Harry Levey the Industrial Department of the Universal recently completed filming the Colts Patent Fire Arms Co., at Hartford, Conn. Although the moving picture shows the entire ordnance product of the Colts concern particular attention was paid to the filming in detail of the construction of the machine guns that are being turned out in vast quantities to equip the United States forces both here and abroad.

It is Universal's intention to first show the film to the workers of the Colts plant, after which it will be shown in every industrial center throughout the country. The idea back of the plan is to let the ammunition workers and the men employed in other essential industries see for themselves just how great is the part they are playing in helping our country win the war. Eventually, the film will be shown to the general public through the medium of the Universal Screen Magazine.

Major Bascom Little, in charge of the Production Section, Ordinance Department, U. S. A., with headquarters at New Haven, Conn., has already viewed the film for the Government, and has given it his unqualified approval.

Mastercraft Active in Production of Dixon's "The One Woman."

Encouraging reports come from F. Eugene Farnsworth, who is managing the affairs of the Mastercraft Photo-Play Corporation in California, regarding the initial offering of that organization. Mastercraft, as has already been announced in this publication, will produce from four to seven special features a year, and all will be adaptations from the works of Thomas Dixon, author of "The Birth of a Nation," and other equally famous writers. "The One Woman," which has been chosen for the first release of the Mastercraft company, is a story based on the threat of Socialism, and work has already been started on it at the Paralta studios in Los Angeles. The picture will be staged under the direction of Reginald Barker, of the Paralta staff of directors.

It is interesting to note that when "The One Woman" was presented on the speaking stage some years ago the part of "Gordon," one of the most principal roles, was portrayed by David Wark Griffith, who later produced another of Mr. Dixon's works on the screen. The screen version of "The One Woman" was prepared by the Paralta scenario writers. J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton.

Teachers' Club Wants Children's Shows

Boston Organization Starts Movement to Have an Educational Picture Each Week in Every Bay State Theater—An Appeal to Exhibitors.

By Richard Davis Howe, 80 Summer Stre et, Boston, Mass.

BOSTON, MASS.—Officials of public schools in Greater Boston and other sections of Massachusetts ask for the support of motion picture exhibitors in a plan to present children's picture shows once each week in every Bay State theater.

The campaign is in charge of Miss Mabel M. Anderson, chairman of the Publicity Committee of the Boston Teachers' Club and the Massachusetts Federation of School Teachers. In an effort to secure aid in her drive, Miss Anderson has addressed the following appeal to all of the leading newspapers in this city:

"Through the teachers' clubs of the city and state, we are asking the managers of the theaters to put on one educational picture a week. (Historical, geographical, nature study or literature.) This is entirely practical, as one of the leading managers has done this for two years with excellent results.

"We are asking the managers to take extra care in arranging their programs so that when these pictures are given, the surrounding bill, even if suitable for adults, will be a clean one.

"The largest distributors in the country are working with us, many of the exhibitors are glad to book children's pictures on request, and there are many suitable films available."

Boston Fox Office Reorganized.

Boston.—District Manager Harry F. Campbell, of the Fox Film Corporation, has reorganized the Boston office. During the past few weeks he and office manager William D. Shapiro have added a number of new sales representatives to the already large staff.

The sales force include Charles Phillips, Frank Vine, Mose Eberstein, David Garb, William O'Brien, Frank McKay, Charles Dempsey, Frank Stanton, George Sullivan, Frank McCarthy and George Arnold.

Mr. Campbell believes big moving picture productions should call for the same admission prices as theatricals. To prove this Mr. Campbell has five companies out with a "A Daughter of the Gods," three with "Cleopatra" and three with "Les Miserables," all on percentage basis. The latter is also playing an indefinite engagement at Marcus Loew's Globe theater in Boston.

Marian Naiherseg on Fox Staff.

Boston.—The local office of the Fox Film has secured the services of one of Boston's most popular film women, Miss Marian Naiherseg, who was formerly assistant manager of the Grandun Film Company of this city.

"Idle Wives" First Boston Run.

Boston.—"Idle Wives," being exploited in New England by Edward Klein, manager of the Central Feature Film Company, played Nathan H. Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia for the first time in Boston. The picture proved very popular, capacity audiences witnessing every performance.

The management carried considerable advertising on the feature, good business resulting.

J. J. Hubbard Buys Theater at Danvers.

Danvers.—John J. Hubbard, who formerly operated the Opera House in Ipswich, has purchased the Orpheum theatre in Danvers from Charles Brown.

Mr. Hubbard opened the Orpheum on Friday, February 15, playing "The Whip" at the initial performance.

Paramount Salesmen Change Territories.

Boston.—Several changes in the zones of operation for salesmen on the Paramount staff in New England have taken place.

Samuel Hasse has been assigned to Southern Massachusetts, Cape Cod and Rhode Island.

Louis Herman, who formerly covered Connecticut and New Hampshire, will in the future represent the Western Massachusetts territory, formerly covered by Mr. Hasse. Maurice Pouzner, who replaced C. A. Faust, now manager of the Dudley theater in Roxbury, will tour Connecticut.

Charles Perkins has been appointed chief booker in the local Paramount exchange, suceeding Abraham Barry, who has been called for active duty in the U. S. Naval Reserves.

C. A. Faust Will Manage the Dudley.

Roxbury, Mass.—C. A. Faust, formerly a salesman with the Famous Players, has taken over the management of the Dudley theater in Roxbury. Mr. Faust is a showman of long experience, having been connected with the business for several years in New England.

Gustave Schaefer in the Army.

Boston.—Uncle Sam has secured the services of Gustave Schaefer, assistant manager of the local office of the World Film. He enlisted this week in the Quartermaster's arm of the war service and has been temporarily assigned to the barracks in Washington, D. C.

Edward Klein Reopens Office.

Boston.—Edward Klein, who formerly conducted the Central Feature Film Company, a state right organization in this city, and who gave up his business when he was called in the selective draft, has reopened business in this city, having been placed in Class 3 A by the local exemption board.

When called for examination for service in the National Army, Mr. Klein placed his stock of films in the hands of Daniel Horgan, manager of the Hub Pictures Corporation, another state right company in Boston, who agreed to handle his business on a percentage basis. Mr. Klein has decided to continue business. He expects to locate in the exchange formerly occupied by the Fox Film on Piedmont street.

Sidney B. Lust Gets Important Films.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Sidney B. Lust is announcing the purchase of the Douglas Fairbanks and William S. Hart pictures for the territory comprising the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia. The pictures were acquired from the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, Inc., through Hiller & Wilk, Inc., selling agents. The pictures are those produced by the Triangle and will hereafter be booked by Mr. Lust through his exchange at 1209 E street, N. W.

Government Officials See Prizma Navy Pictures.

Washington.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels, accompanied by more than a score of rear admirals and other officers of the navy, members of Congress, officials from the Government departments, and a large gathering of newspapermen, viewed with interest Prizma films, depicting the navy at work. Speeches were made by some of those present, including Secretary Daniels, while E. A. Koopman, president of the company, told of how these colored pictures were made.

Joseph Gartner Made a Captain.

Washington.—Joseph Gartner, formerly auditor for the Harry M. Crandall enterprises, and who also served as spare manager, has been appointed a captain in the army. Captain Gartner had served during the Spanish-American war, and recently was a student officer at the Fort Myer reserve officers' camp. He was not commissioned with the men of the training camp, however, for, fortunately or not, he was taken ill just before graduation. The delay, it seems, resulted in his obtaining a higher rank.

New Theater on Ninth Street.

Washington.—Ninth street has been selected f r another motion picture theater, for a house with a seating capacity approximating five hundred is projected by Marcus Notes, proprietor of the Empress theater, for erection at the corner of Ninth and D streets, N. W. Work on the demolition of the building now on the site has been started. The premises were formerly occupied by a liquor concern, driven from business by the passage of the prohibition law.

John Payette Joins Goldwyn.

Washington.—John Payette, formerly assistant manager of the V. L. S. E. exchange, has joined his former chief, George F. Lenehan, at the Goldwyn exchange, where he will occupy a similar position. Mr. Payette is one of the best known among the film salesman doing business out of Washington. He started in several years ago with the General Film, and for a considerable length of time was in charge of the Baltimore subbranch. He was also stationed in that city for the V. L. S. E. branch.

A. N. Waters Managing Crandall House.

Washington.—A. N. Waters, formerly manager of the Truxton theater, has been appointed manager of the American theater, one of the Crandall houses.

New Company to Build Theater.

MARIETTA, GA.—Application for a charter for the Marietta Amusement Company, to operate theaters for moving pictures, vaudeville and other forms of entertainment, has been filed with the clerk of Cobb County Superior Court by F. G. Marchman, prominent Marietta business man, and six associates.

It is proposed to capitalize at $50,000 and to erect a theater near Marietta, where large numbers of soldiers are frequently encamped.

Drama Picture Made by Signal Corps.

Atlanta.—"His Best Girl" is the title of a moving picture film advertising the advisability of soldiers buying Government war risk insurance. The film was made by members of the signal corps, who have had wide experience in moving picture work, and is put on in drama form. It was received with delight by the men at the units serving the 325th and 326th Infantry regiments, Tuesday.

Look Out for Swindling "Collector."

Atlanta.—A. O. Blalock, collector of internal revenue for this district, sent a warning recently to managers of motion picture houses in Atlanta and other Georgia cities, warning them to look out for a man calling himself J. M. Bosse, and representing himself to be an internal revenue officer. He is described as being about 5 feet tall, weighing 160 pounds, 40 years old, dark complexion, and has one finger missing. The description given also states that he appears to be well educated and laughs a great deal while talking.

Two Theaters Close.

Atlanta.—Two picture theaters in Atlanta, the Rialto and the Georgian, have closed. Poor business and gloomy prospects are the reasons.

Many Baltimore Men in Draft Class 1A

Among the Young Men Likely to Be Called at Once Are L. A. DeHoff, L. J. Rome, E. C. Eiseman, J. J. Payette, H. Edmonds, Who Are Leaders in the Trade.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The general remark that is heard from every moving picture man that has been put in "Class 1" with regard to his call for the next draft is, "If Uncle Sam needs me, I'm ready." In making inquiry upon the subject it is to be found that about five of the real live wires in the film industry in Baltimore have been put in the first class and this list includes the following: Louis A. DeHoff, the extremely popular manager of the New theater and secretary of the Maryland Exhibitors' League. Mr. DeHoff is one of the best known exhibitors in the Maryland League. J. Louis Rome, manager of the Broadway theater and general counsel of the Maryland Exhibitors' League, is thoroughly alive to the possibilities of his environment and is well liked. On the exchange side, C. E. Eiseman, manager of the Mutual office in Baltimore; J. J. Payette, Vitagraph representative in that city, and Hernon Edmonds, assistant manager of the General Film office in the same city, belong to the class of good fellows who know how to make and keep their many friends. The correspondent believes that, no matter when they are needed by Uncle Sam, they will all become excllent soldiers and good fighters in the cause of freedom and democracy.

Parkway Theatres Aid French Orphans.

Baltimore.—On the afternoons of Wednesday and Thursday, February 12 and 13, Bernard Depkin, Jr., supervising manager of the Parkway Theater Company, gave a benefit at the Parkway, Strand and Wizard theaters to the Francis Scott Key Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The proceeds went toward the fund for the French orphans, two of whom have been adopted by this chapter.

"Big Ben" Abrams Now Managing Blue Mouse.

Baltimore.—Benjamin Abrams, of Philadelphia, who is known throughout the trade as "Big Ben," has taken charge of the management of the Blue Mouse theater, 28 West Lexington street, beginning Thursday, February 7. Prior to his present association, Mr. Abrams was associated with the Hoffman-Foursquare in Philadelphia.

Theaters Prove Marked Aid.

Baltimore.—Since the Four-Minute men have been on the job in Baltimore, all the moving picture theaters, as far as can be learned, have heartily co-operated with the movement and the drive for shipbuilders has been greatly aided by the movement. It is estimated that during the week of February 4, about 100 of the recruits for the shipyards that came in were recruited through the efforts in the moving picture theaters.

F. C. Schanberger Has Silver Wedding.

Baltimore.—On Thursday evening, February 7, Manager Frederick C. Schanberger, of the Maryland and Auditorium theaters, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his wedding by giving a family reception and dinner at the Hotel Kernan, of which he is also manager. After the dinner the party occupied boxes at the performance at the Maryland theater. Forty-five members of Mr. and Mrs. Schanberger's families were present.

L. A. DeHoff Praises Paralta Films.

Baltimore.—When Louis A. DeHoff, manager of the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, was seen the other day, he was enthusiastic in his praise of the Paralta pictures. "I was a little skeptical," said Mr. DeHoff, "when I signed up with Paralta, but now I am perfectly satisfied. When we ran J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Man's Man," it went over big and the same thing is happening with Bessie Barriscale in "Madam Who?" These productions are being handled through the Baltimore office of the General Film Company, and L. Rosenthal, the manager of this branch, is working like a beaver locating bookings.

Coal Refused to All West Hudson Theaters

Dealers Notified to Let No Fuel Go to Theaters in East New Jersey—Managers Warned to Be Economical of Light.

By Jacob J. Kalter, 25 Branford Place, Newark, N. J.

HARRISON, N. J.—Fuel Administrator Daniel B. Walsh has notified coal dealers that they must discontinue supplying the motion picture theaters of the West Hudson towns with coal. This action, Mr. Walsh explains, is necessary in order to have sufficient coal for the homes. The exhibitors have also been warned to conserve light. All have been notified to use as little light as possible. Those who fail to live up to the rulings are threatened with a complete shut-off of gas or electricity, as the case may be. None of the West Hudson theaters, so far as could be ascertained, has a plentiful supply of coal on hand, and it is not yet known to what extent the order will injure the business.

$100,000 Industrial Film Co.

Newark.—With an authorized capital of $100,000, the Tisdale Industrial Film Corporation has filed articles of incorporation at Trenton. E. R. McGlynn is the statutory agent. The registered office is at 810 Broad street. The films to be produced by the new corporation will be of an industrial nature. The incorporators are F. M. Tisdale, M. J. Zucker and S. C. Deixel.

New Film Delivery Company.

Irvington, N. J.—Herman J. Seiler, of 1142 Clinton avenue, has filed as the trade name of his new film delivery company, the System Film Delivery.

Madge Evans at Court.

Newark.—Little Madge Evans, the 10-year-old star of the World Film, appeared here personally in conjunction with the showing of her picture February 14 at the Court theater. The picture shown was "Gates of Gladness."

Dr. Hespe Incorporates.

Jersey City.—Dr. H. Charles Hespe, president of the New Jersey State Exhibitors' Association, is listed as the registered agent of the Courtland Exhibiting Company, with offices at 390 Central avenue. The concern is capitalized at $100,000. The firm will conduct public amusement enterprises. The incorporators include Dr. Hespe, William Hackett and Francis E. Hespe.

Tobacco Fund Benefit at City.

Newark.—"Intolerance" was the attraction when the City theater, Seventh and Orange streets, gave a benefit for the soldiers' tobacco fund. Leon O. Mumford is the managing director of the show house.

Newark Theater Altered.

Newark.—The Newark theater, owned by the Market & Beaver Realty Company, will undergo alterations.

Paragon Laboratories Incorporated.

Jersey City.—The Paragon Laboratories Company has filed articles with County Clerk McGovern. The registered offices are at 15 Exchange place, with the Corporation Trust Company as registered agent. The company will manufacture moving picture appliances, films, etc. The capital stock is $20,000, of which $1,000 has been paid in. The incorporators are H. A. Black, John W. Stout and John R. Turner.

MORE PITTSBURGH NOTES.

George Oldfield Made Manager.

Pittsburgh.—George Oldfield has been placed in charge of the Pittsburgh George Kleine exchange, 123 Fourth avenue, succeeding Oscar Krugh, who has resumed his former position as traveling representative with the same firm. Mr. Oldfield has been connected with the Kleine company for several years past in this city and Cleveland, O., and is well known among exhibitors of this territory.

Business Notes.

J. H. Zimmerman, representing the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, 127 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, reports having closed contracts for showing "The Belgian" at all of the Rowland & Clark theaters. "The Belgian" will be presented first at the Liberty and nex at the Plaza, Strand, Belmar, Arsenal and Rowland. The Rowland & Clark theaters also recently booked "The Zeppelin's Last Raid" for early showing.

Patriotic Cause Allows Tuesday Shows

Many Cleveland Theaters Open on Fuelless Day to Permit Benefit for Woman's Military Auxiliary—Shows in Other Ohio Cities.

By M. A. Malaney, 218 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland, O.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—Tuesday, Feb. 12, although usually an "openless Tuesday" for picture theaters, found a majority of the Cleveland theaters and others in northern Ohio open, the profits going to the Women's Military Auxiliary, for use at their community house at Camp Sherman, where Ohio's draft army is located. The women obtained a special permit from Fuel Director Garfield.

After fifty theaters responded immediately to the call, most of them being the large houses, it was explained by smaller houses that they did not participate in the benefit because the ordinary Tuesday night shows no profits, so it might be an expense to open.

The Cleveland theaters which took part in the benefit were the Knickerbocker, Camerophone, Princess, Mall, Alhambra, Standard, Avenue, Bijou, Dream, Strand, Wonderland, Gaiety, Bronx, Corona, Reel, Monarch, Metropolitan, Olympia, Penn Square, Orpheum, Marquis, Lyceum, Crescent, Majestic, Marvel, Windemeer, Lakewood, Southern, Madison, Doan, Y, American, Norval, Fountain, Grand Central, U. S., Haltnorth, Quincy, Stillman, Opera House, Colonial, Prospect, Star, Empire, Miles, Gordon Square, Liberty and a few others.

Several theaters in Toledo, Sandusky, Alliance, Akron and other northern Ohio cities also opened up Tuesday for the same purpose.

Manager Gerrish Back on the Job.

Cleveland.—After nearly four weeks' illness Manager E. T. Gerrish, of the Cleveland Famous Players Film exchange, is back on the job again, suffering slightly from rheumatism, but otherwise feeling fit.

Manager E. T. Gerrish.

Mr. Gerrish had a siege of sickness. First he suffered an attack of appendicitis and was rushed to Charity hospital, where he was operated upon. Then while in bed he fell a victim of neuritis. After recovering and going home he came out to work in the wet weather and contracted rheumatism in the legs.

"Well, there's no use of complaining," says Gerrish. "If I get all that's coming to me now maybe I will be spared further illness later."

Big Moving Day for Film Companies.

Cleveland.—All film companies in the Columbia building, Cleveland, have received notice to vacate by May 1.

The owner, M. A. Bradley, gives as his reason that on that date the insurance companies will raise the rates on the building unless the risk from moving picture films is removed.

The companies affected are the Standard, Select, Metropolitan, Exclusive, the Argus and the Sixth City Film Company.

"Remaking of a Nation" Opens in Cleveland.

Cleveland.—"The Remaking of a Nation," the big Camp Sherman army picture, opened to a big business Sunday, February 17, playing simultaneously at four theaters in Cleveland—the Standard, Knickerbocker, Fairyland and Olympia.

Thousands of tickets were sold in advance by a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce, at 25 cents each, which insured the success of the undertaking.

The headquarters at Camp Sherman at the time of the opening also announced many more dates in Cleveland, including about 25 theaters and running up to the middle of March.

Each theater, by the arrangement, is allowed ten cents on each ticket, besides the war tax item, the balance going to pay expenses of making the film and the profits of the proposition going to the camp fund for the care of dependents of soldiers quartered there.

Cincinnati News Letter

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

W. S. Wessling Honored by Cuvier Press Club.

CINCINNATI, O.—W. S. Wessling, manager of the Pathe exchange, and a popular member of the film fraternity, was one of the committee on entertainment appointed by the Cuvier Press Club for its big meeting recently. The Cuvier Press Club is an organization numbering in its membership not only newspaper and theatrical men, with other Bohemians, but some of the leading business men of the city, who like the informal atmosphere of the club and the good scouts they meet there. Its entertainments are events to date from, and Mr. Wessling therefore felt the honor of being placed on the committee, which had the duty of arranging the latest blow-out of the club.

Thieves Get Big Haul of Paper.

Cincinnati.—The high value of paper waste to junk dealers resulted in a costly loss to the Vitagraph company's Cincinnati office a few days ago, and one which could mean at the same time only a comparatively few dollars to the thieves. The company's quarters at 129 West Seventh street were entered by unknown marauders and a mass of posters and other printed and lithographed matter estimated to weigh no less than five tons was removed. This, of course, was a handsome haul for the thieves, viewed as waste paper; but the material was far from being waste paper to the company, as it consisted of advertising matter which will cost nearly $2,000 to replace.

Bill at Walnut Makes Hit.

Cincinnati.—One of the best combination bills offered by the Walnut this season was presented beginning Feb. 10 at that theater, including Mary Pickford in her latest Artcraft release, "Stella Maris," and the first two-reel episode of the new Chapin series, "The Son of Democracy."

Cincinnati Exhibitors Smile Again.

Cincinnati.—Local exhibitors are beginning to smile again, since decent weather has come, and it has been announced that "heatless Mondays," and, consequently, enforced Tuesday holidays, are at an end. Attendance on many recent Mondays, especially on those since the weather gave way to normal temperatures and sunshine, has been splendid at the theaters, as people had nothing else to do. The more moderate weather came as a more welcome relief, if possible, as it was necessary for many of the suburban houses to shut down completely during the zero period, on account of inability to secure heat. This problem is now over, for good, it is hoped, and the theaters are again open to their eager patrons.

Dayton Theaters Give Tuesday's Profits

Miami Valley Exhibitors Take Fuel Administrator's Offer and Open Tuesday, Handing All Profits to Women's Military Auxiliary.

By P. J. G., Dayton Correspondent.

DAYTON, Ohio.—One of the quickest happenings yet to take place at the offices of the Miami Valley Exhibitors' League here was staged Tuesday morning, February 11, at eleven o'clock. Only three principals took part in the affair with a fourth party very interested. The writer assisted in every way to open the theaters of Dayton along with the three main characters in the surprise, namely, Val Rayburg, Al. Kinsler and Clay Brehm.

Al. Kinsler, Val Rayburg and the writer were seated comfortably in the League rooms waiting for something interesting to happen. Mrs. H. G. Carnell, acting chairman of the Women's Auxiliary Committee doing work for the soldier boys at Camp Sherman, walked into the office with what looked to be an important letter in her hand. This she showed to Al. Kinsler as secretary of the League. It was from the state fuel administrator and gave the theaters of Dayton the right to open on heatless Tuesday, provided the proceeds, over and above expenses, should be turned over to the Women's Auxiliary for charitable work at Camp Sherman, Ohio. It was necessary to act quickly, and after a minute's discussion Kinsler and Rayburg decided to inform the different managers as soon as possible. Clay Brehm was first informed and lost no time in getting to the League rooms for full particulars. Clay called the Keith people at Cincinnati as well as several exchanges who knew nothing of the affair. After calling Cincinnati, Clay phoned to the Columbus Keith manager, who, likewise, knew nothing in regard to the matter. After this he changed his ad in the daily papers (on the streets at one o'clock), informing the public that the Strand would remain open. Al. Kinsler also rushed announcements to the local papers which stated that all the theaters members of the Miami Valley Exhibitors' League would remain open for the fuelless day.

After a minute's deliberation it was found that the quickest way to inform the neighborhood theaters was by automobile.

Clyde A. Congrove Salesman.

Dayton.—One of the newer type of film salesmen is Clyde Congrove, who called on the writer while in Dayton last week. He is a progressive spirit. I have never heard Clyde say another film company's pictures were bad; that he sold the only pictures on the market; that his company was the only one to give service, etc. Clyde closed eight contracts while in Dayton.

Buffalo News Letter

By Joseph A. McGuire, 157 N. Elmwood St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Theaters Open Lincoln's Birthday.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Buffalo moving picture theaters were open Sunday, Monday and Tuesday of the week of February 10 and closed Ash Wednesday, which was observed as a heatless day of that week. The decision to keep the theaters open Tuesday was reached after a series of conferences between the local theater managers and Ellicott C. McDougal, Erie County fuel administrator.

Plan Motor Truck Line to New York.

Buffalo—A motor truck transportation system between Buffalo and New York will be established in an effort to relieve railroad congestion. Moving picture men hope to see the system extended so film can be shipped speedily over the line. The route from Buffalo will follow the old Genesee turnpike to Albany, with stops at Rochester, Geneva, Syracuse, Utica and Amsterdam. From Albany the trucks will go down the east bank of the Hudson, with stops at Hudson and Peekskill.

Ticket Books at the Elmwood.

Buffalo—Manager Weinberg of the Elmwod theater, Buffalo, has prepared books of tickets containing ten admissions, as follows: Ten 17-cent tickets, $1.70; ten 11-cent tickets, $1.10.

Charles Riehl Has No Complaint.

Buffalo—"We give our patrons a good show every day," said Charles Riehl, who conducts the Liberty theater at Jefferson and Utica streets, Buffalo.

"This plan brings us better results than a big show one day and a poor one the next. Closing on the heatless day is doing us no harm. The people like a day off. We have been doing as well, or even better, on the short weeks then on the regular schedule. We charge ten cents daily for grown-ups and five cents for children except on Thursdays and Sundays, when the youngsters pay ten cents. In running a theater a man must be not only polite, but firm with patrons. When they understand that this firmness exists they are not likely to give a tale of woe when they pay the war tax or the extra nickel for the children."

"We have a brick theater, seating 500," continued Mr. Riehl. "When the house was built eight years ago it was one of the best equipped in the city. We fortunately bought a good supply of coal last summer and the theater has been well heated all winter."

Full Pay for Employees in Buffalo.

Buffalo—Most of the Buffalo theaters are paying their employees on the Tuesday holidays. This act of patriotism is regarded as especially commendable inasmuch as many burdens, unknown to the public, have been imposed on the local theatrical managers during these critical times. That the managers bear these burdens willingly goes without saying.

J. R. Oishei Doing a Good Bit.

Buffalo—John R. Oishei, manager of the Teck theater, Buffalo, is conducting the State outdoor and advertising campaign for the Thrift Stamp progaganda. Mr. Oishei also played a prominent part in the second Liberty Loan campaign.

Wurlitzer Buffalo Store in Trim.

Buffalo.—A large unit orchestra has been received at the Buffalo branch of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co. The instrument carries fifty selections at one time. W. P. Tanney is manager of this branch. After several unavoidable delays the improvements at the Wurlitzer store have just been completed. The decorations are in gray and white.

Many Causes Hinder Shipments in Ontario

The Disorganized Express Service All Over the Province Has Been the Cause of Much Discomfort to Exchanges and Exhibitors.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard Street E., Toronto, Ontario.

TORONTO, ONT.—Transportation difficulties, due to frequent storms, equipment breakages and labor shortage, have played havoc with booking arrangements and release schedules among Ontario exchanges. Ontario exchanges have refused to take any film shipments at all; some theaters have been compelled to repeat programmes on several occasions, and sometimes the theahibitors. On several days the express companies are called upon to present "emergency shows." In the latter instance, exchanges have shipped various pictures which have not been booked because shipments to exchanges have been delayed. Some exhibitors have been making it a practice to hold films until a new assortment actually arrives at the theater in order to insure having a show at all.

The exhibitors are not the only ones who are troubled by the disarrangement. The exchanges are having difficulty in collecting their money when emergency reels are shipped to an exhibitor in place of booked pictures. Quite often an exchange uses a roadman or other employe to take the reels to an out-of-town exhibitor when it is seen that an express company is tied up. The exchange employe takes the film with him in a passenger coach in order to oblige a customer. Even in this way, the reels are not delivered until it is time to start the evening performance.

Benefit at the Brighton Theater.

Toronto.—Through the courtesy of Manager Barkley of the Brighton theater, Roncesvalles avenue, Toronto, the Canadian Ensign Chapter, Independent Order of the Daughters of the Empire, gave a very successful matinee on Thursday, Feb. 7. The house was filled to capacity at both performances. The proceeds are for the I. O. D. E. Home in Halifax for homeless children.

Tom Byerle with Specialty Film.

Toronto.—Important changes have been made in various details connected with several exchanges in Canada. Tom Byerle, formerly Montreal manager for the Famous Players and the Canadian Universal, has become temporarily associated with the Toronto office of the Specialty Film Import, Limited, as special representative. It is understood that Mr. Byerle will eventually become the special representative in western Canada for L. E. Ouimet, president and general manager of the Specialty, Pathe distributors in Canada.

A. Smeraldi Gets K-E-S-E Franchise.

A. Smeraldi is reported to have secured control of the Canadian franchise of the K-E-S-E. Mr. Smeraldi was formerly the special Pathe representative in western Canada. Just before leaving Winnipeg, Mr. Smeraldi secured a big contract for the Pathe with the Groves-Walker Company, Limited, whereby Pathe and Gold Roosters will be shown at the Orpheum, Moose Jaw; Empire theaters, Saskatoon, and the Regina theater, Regina, for some time to come. What changes in the distribution arrangements in Canada for the K-E-S-E will be made have not been announced by Mr. Smeraldi. One of the big releases with which Mr. Smeraldi will be able to make a start is the de luxe edition of "Quo Vadis."

Vincent McCabe Now Represents Fox.

Vincent McCabe, formerly with the Toronto office of the Specialty Film, has been appointed eastern Canadian representative for the Fox Film. Mr. McCabe has three branch offices under his supervision, namely, those at Toronto, Montreal and St. John. No change is being made in the direct management of the Fox branches, it is announced. Benny Rogers will continue in charge of the Toronto and Maurice West will remain the manager of the Montreal office. Fox features have played a number of Toronto's big theaters. "When a Man Sees Red" was the attraction at the Regent for one week, while the Hippodrome has used two Fox specials during the past month. These were "Camille" and "The Conqueror."

What Other Exchange Men Are Doing.

Mr. Soskin, of the Toronto headquarters of the Famous Players Film Service, has gone to Montreal to reorganize the Montreal branch of the company.

Charles Berman, formerly in control of the World franchise in Canada, with headquarters at Toronto, has become Montreal manager of the U. S. Exhibitors' Corporation.

Pat Kaplan, formerly shipper at the Toronto office of the Globe Films, Limited, has joined the staff of the Regal Films, Limited, Toronto.

President Thomas in Toronto.

Toronto.—Manager Thomas of the Strand theater, Omaha, and president of the Nebraska Exhibitors' League, was a visitor in Toronto early in February to confer with local interests regarding a position as supervisor of the chain of theaters, consisting of the Regent, Toront; St. Denis, Montreal, and the Flower theater, Ottawa. It is understood that Mr. Thomas will assume his duties here in May.

Maritime Provinces Letters

From Alice Fairweather Standard, St. John, N. B.

Notes of New Brunswick Theaters.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—The Star opened its anniversary week by playing the Pathe feature "Iris" to good business. The slightly higher price for children at this popular theater does not seem to make the least difference as it is well filled every evening.

"Damaged Goods" has played to enormous houses at the Lyric, starting Thursday, Feb. 7, to men only for Thursday, Friday and Saturday. On Monday a morning performance was given to accommodate the crowds.

Halifax Jottings.

Halifax, N. S.—At Halifax the complete Pathe service has been sold out between the Empress Imperial and the Academy of Music.

H. R. Walker of Dartmouth has booked the Pathe serial and features.

As if enough things had not happened to the theaters in Halifax Monday, Feb. 4, a fire originated in the upper story above the Imperial theatre, Halifax, and considerable damage was done to the theater by water. They did not have to close the house fortunately.

"The Screen Telegram," the news weekly soon to be issued by the Mutual, has been booked at the Orpheus theater, Halifax.

St. John Personals.

B. Horsfell, the general manager for Canada of the Mutual Film Company, was in St. John for three days recently on his annual trip.

E. R. Lynn of the Casino theater, Sydney, passed through St. John recently on his way to New York and Boston.

Dr. Daley of Sussex was in St. John on Friday, Feb. 8.

Fuel Orders Lightened in Eastern Iowa

Warmer Weather Lifts Ban on Use of Coal—Restrictions Enough Remain—Abundant Fuel Expected in a Few Weeks.

By J. L. Shipley, 615 Locust Street, Des Moines, Ia.

DES MOINES, IA.—The conservation ban is being lifted gradually in the eastern Iowa cities. Waterloo shut down on matinees for six days a week in cooperation with the board of that town, remaining open on Sunday afternoon only and giving the evening performances as usual. The ban was lifted last week when the weather moderated and coal became more plentiful and the shows are running full blast as usual. The seven o'clock lightless order is still in effect at Marshalltown and Manager J. Jolly Jones of the Strand is threatening to give away souvenir lanterns to his patrons so that they won't get lost on the way home. At Cedar Rapids the theaters are opening at two in the afternoon and closing promptly at ten-thirty, which cuts down the running time nearly two hours. Box office lights go out promptly at nine-thirty. It is thought that there will be abundant fuel in all points within the next month so that stringent measures may be done away with.

Miss Margaret Hein of Metro Weds.

Des Moines—Miss Margaret Hein, who has been head inspector in the Metro office at Des Moines since it was established three years ago, was united in marriage to Raymond Crowe, who has an indirect connection with the film business as pick-up man for Wells-Fargo.

Ed Lipson Gets New Territory.

Des Moines—Ed Lipson is now acting as Metro representative in eastern Iowa. Mr. Lipson has served in various capacities in the Los Angeles, Seattle, San Francisco and Salt Lake City Metro offices. But reports that he considers that Iowa has the finest exhibitors with whom he has ever done business and that he wants to stay in the Hawkeye state.

Two Juvenile Shows—Both Make Good.

Des Moines—Juvenile shows ran opposition in Des Moines Saturday, February 9. Manager Blank of the Garden offered Marguerite Clark in "The Seven Swans" in conjunction with the Des Moines News between the hours of ten and two, the proceeds being devoted to the News project of adopting two war-stricken Belgian children. At the Empress the Evening Tribune entertained its little friends with a special morning performance of Mary Pickford in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Judged by the packed houses nearly every kiddie in Des Moines attended one or both shows.

J. S. Shortly Buys Princess Theater.

Sioux City, Ia.—J. E. Schlank announces the sale of his Princess theater at Sioux City, Ia., to J. S. Shortly, of Seattle, Washington. The Princess is one of the finest theaters in Iowa with a seating capacity of fifteen hundred. It was built originally for stock and after a successful season with that policy passed into the hands of Mr. Schlank, who brought the house into instant popularity with first-run feature pictures. Of late, Mr. Schlank has been running vaudeville in conjunction with feature programs. Mr. Shortly announces that the policy of high class vaudeville will be continued and in addition he will run the highest grade of feature pictures

Rialto Theater Nearly Ready.

Omaha—A. H. Blank is spending a large amount of time in Omaha these days superintending the finishing touches of his gigantic Rialto theater, which will open within the next thirty days, according to present plans. Mr. Blank now operates three houses in Davenport, one in Marshalltown, one in Des Moines and with the Rialto two in Omaha.

Abe Frankle's Rialto Coming.

Des Moines—Abe Frankle reports that the completion of the new Rialto in Des Moines is being rushed as rapidly as possible and that he expects the new house to open within the next month or five weeks. It will be one of the finest houses in the middle west.

Visitors in Des Moines.

Visitors in Des Moines during the week of February 4 were J. M. Heffner of the Bijou, Mason City, Ted Bryant of the Gem, Oelwin, and A. W. Saunders of the Star, New Sharon. Joe Gerbracht of the Twin-Star, Ames, and John Petersen of Story City also visited the various exchanges. Pete Lemen of the Strand, Newton, was in evidence.

Manager J. K. Black came to Des Moines on a shopping tour last week and bought a new Minusa screen, a new Simplex machine and a wilderness of carbons from the Des Moines Film & Supply Company. Mr. Black also arranged for an attractive stage setting and for the redecoration of his theater in the near future.

Stanley J. Mayer, manager of the Des Moines Film & Supply Company and the Yale Photoplay, was called suddenly to Kansas City last week by the serious illness of his mother.

Indiana News Letter

(From Indiana Trade News Service, 501 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.)

Free Film Shows to Teach Patriotism.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Through Mrs. David Ross, president of the Board of Indorsers of Motion Pictures for Juveniles, a projector has been purchased and with this machine the women of the board propose to show educational and patriotic films in all of the public schools of Indianapolis, and in other public places where the children can be reached.

No admission is to be charged, but the projector will be rented for a nominal sum to any organization desiring to use it.

The first exhibition was given Monday evening, February 11, at the Foreigners' House, in the west side foreign district.

New Amusement Company in South Bend.

South Bend—The Castle Theater Company of this city has been incorporated under the laws of Indiana with a capital stock of $15,000 to engage in the exhibition of motion pictures. The directors of the new concern are Hyman Soboroff, Beatrice Soboroff and Miss Rose Cohen. The company may erect a theater here some time in the near future.

Large Amounts Paid in for War Tax.

Newcastle, Ind.—The box office at the Starette theater here has two receipts, totaling $344.75. These are for the war tax which the patrons of the theater have paid during November and December. The tax for November was $169 and in December it amounted to $175.75.

During January the Nelson theater, Logansport, Ind., collected over $300 in war tax. During December Manager Lindsay of the Paramount, Ark and Grand theaters paid a total of $440 in war tax, and for November and December H. R. Byerly, manager of the Colonial theater, paid a total of $121.96.

The war tax for the Grand theater in Washington, Ind., for December amounted to $265.50, according to Hugh O'Donnell, proprietor of the theater. The war tax for November was $374.17, making a total of $639.97 that the Grand has paid into the coffers of Uncle Sam since the war tax law went into effect.

Manager Casey Makes Improvements.

Evansville, Ind.—The Royal theater, one of the most popular motion picture houses in this city, has undergone some improvements recently and it is understood that Manager William Casey will make some additional remodeling in the early spring.

Century Theater's New Policy.

South Bend, Ind.—The Century theater here has announced that from now on the war tax, which was paid by the patrons, will be paid by the theater. Along with this announcement came the information that in the future vaudeville will be tabooed on Saturday and Sunday nights and that high grade photoplays will be shown instead. The price has been reduced from 15 to 10 cents for adults and from 10 to 5 cents for children.

Henry K. Burton Hopes for Nomination.

Indianapolis.—Henry K. Burton, publicity manager for the Central Amusement Company, which operates the Lyric, Alhambra and Isis theaters, is preparing to make the race for the Republican nomination for representative from Marion county in the next legislature.

Detroit Film Trade News of the Week

A. I. Shapiro Leaves Goldwyn for Army Service—New Triangle Manager Appointed—Important Trade Notes—Among Exhibitors.

By Jacob Smith, 710 Free Press Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, Mich.—The resignation of A. I. Shapiro as branch manager in Detroit for Goldwyn was announced this week and J. E. Flynn has already been appointed his successor.

Mr. Shapiro was recently placed in Class A of the draft and, in view of the next call being announced for Feb. 23, and the probability that he would be called, he thought it best, in justice to Goldwyn, that he resign at once in order to give his successor the necessary personal assistance in getting acquainted with the local situation. Incidentally, Mr. Shapiro wants to spend a few weeks with his folks in New York City before being sent to one of the training camps. "Shap" has a host of friends in Michigan and they are all sorry to see him go.

Mr. Flynn, the new manager, has had many years' experience in the film business, having been in charge of exchanges through the west, the General Film exchange in Cleveland, and having just returned from a trip to Australia in the interest of Goldwyn. To him we wish every success.

While Goldwyn is losing a good man, it is replacing him with a good man, which assures Michigan exhibitors a continuance of square and fair treatment.

H. D. Posey New Triangle Manager.

Detroit.—R. A. Perry has resigned as Detroit manager for Triangle and H. D. Posey is his successor. Mr. Perry has become Michigan representative for the Allen Film Co., handling "The Garden of Allah," "Mother" and "The Warrior," and has already opened a branch office at 201

Film Building, 63 East Elizabeth street, Detroit. Mr. Posey, the new Triangle manager, was recently affiliated with the New Orleans office of Triangle.

Recent "Buys" of Detroit Exchanges.

Detroit.—Exchanges here announce the following "buys" for the state of Michigan:

Harry I. Garson Productions, 318 Woodward avenue, has purchased a number of Triangle-Keystone comedies.

The Standard Film Service, Film exchange building, has bought about thirty Mack Sennett comedy re-issues, and will release them at the rate of one comedy each week, starting about the first of March. This exchange has also a feature, "Would You Forgive?"

The Strand Features, Film Exchange, Detroit, has bought a print of "Cleopatra," which features Helen Gardner.

H. O. Pierce Gets Butterfield Appointment.

Flint, Mich.—Walter Jacobson, for the past year manager of the Garden, Butterfield, theater in Flint, has gone to California. Howard O. Pierce has taken full charge of the Garden and Majestic theaters and will be assisted in the work by Stephen Willets. Mr. Pierce is well known in film circles, having been formerly with the State Film Co. and the Kunsky Enterprises in Detroit.

Sterling Film Exchange Opens.

Detroit.—The Sterling Film Exchange, with a capital stock of $4,000, has opened offices at 302 Film building, Detroit. Robert Woodhead is president and Edward Diehl is secretary. This firm is releasing some Christie comedies and some Art Drama features.

Dawn Masterplay Takes Ohio Papers.

The Dawn Masterplay Co., 501 Owen building, Detroit, is now a $16,000 corporation, papers being filed under the laws of Ohio, with permission to do business in Michigan. S. M. Krohn, of Dayton, Ohio, is president; Arthur S. Hyman is vice-president, and I. M. Freiberg is secretary and treasurer. This company has six features for Michigan and contemplates the purchase of others in the near future.

Here and There in Michigan.

Detroit, Mich.—L. C. McConnell, formerly a stock salesman, has joined the sales staff of the World.

Detroit.—George Rowell, the new salesman for George Kleine pictures, is doing splendidly. So far has closed a contract in every town.

Cadillac, Mich.—The Star and New Lyric theaters opened for business on Sunday, February 10, and the local authorities are going to make a test case, owing to the number of protests by church people.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—L. Dennis, 407 South Division street, has been appointed western Michigan representative for Simplex machines and Simplex parts; also Teco products and Gold King Screens, the appointment being made by J. George Fineberg, president of the Theater Equipment Co.

Grayling, Mich.—George Olsen, of the Grayling opera house, has ordered from the United Theater Equipment Co. two Powers machines, a Hallberg economizer and other modern equipment for his booth.

Detroit.—L. F. Davis, former salesman for Pathe and Vitagraph, and recently in training at Camp Custer, Mich., is on his way to France to do duty at General Pershing's headquarters.

Flint, Mich.—Charles Garfield, of the Orpheum theater, says he broke his house record with "The Price of a Good Time."

Theaters Open, Give Third to Red Cross

Minnesota Fuel Administrator Lets Up on Theaters for Patriotic Cause—Records Made and S. O. R. Signs Out—Business Notes.

By John L. Johnston, 719 Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Tuesday, February 12, was not entirely theatreless, Judge McGee, Minnesota fuel administrator, informed Twin City theaters on Monday that they might remain open on Tuesday if they would turn over one-third of the day's receipts to the Red Cross and not count the cost of labor in the day's overhead.

Forty-one of the theaters in Minneapolis reported to the Red Cross that they would operate on that basis. The Pantages, a local vaudeville and film theater, remained closed on Tuesday, but advertised that a good donation had been made the Red Cross despite the fact that the theater's doors were shut.

Business in the Twin Cities Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Feb. 9, 10 and 11, was the best recorded this winter, several house records being shattered. According to reports from traveling film salesmen business throughout Minnesota and the Dakotas has shown a noticeable increase since the extreme cold weather terminated.

Among the features offered at Minneapolis houses the first part of the week, beginning Sunday, Feb. 10, were "Brown of Harvard," four days at the Strand. This was held over for four more days. Jack Pickford in "Spirit of '17," at the New Garrick; "Painted Lips," at the New Garden (this feature broke house records February 10 and 11); Dorothy Dalton in "Flare Up Sal," at the New Lyic; Bushman and Bayne in "Under Suspicion," at the New Aster; Douglas Fairbanks in "Flirting With Fate," at the New Unique.

At St. Paul's downtown theaters exceptionally good business was recorded Sunday and Monday, February 10 and 11. Bills offered were: New Garrick, "The Barrier" (which has had great success); Starland, Edna Goodrich in "Who Loved Him Best?"; Alhambra, Douglas Fairbanks in "Reggie Mixes In"; Blue Mouse, Theda Bara in "The Forbidden Path"; New Princess, Effie Shannon in "Her Boy," and the New Majestic, Carmel Myers in "My Unmarried Wife."

Tom Kress Representing Pathe.

Minneapolis.—Tom Kress, well known Mutual traveling salesman, has joined the local Pathe exchange as a Twin City representative. Mr. Kress has been on the road for the Mutual for the past fourteen months and is well known throughout the territory.

E. Seitzler Promoted.

Minneapolis.—E. Seitzler, formerly connected with the Minneapolis Fox exchange as a salesman, has been appointed manager of the Sioux Falls Fox exchange, according to reports. Mr. Seitzler, though only in the Northwest territory for a short time, has made many friends here.

J. A. Bradley Jewel of a Salesman.

Minneapolis.—Joseph A. Bradley has resigned from the road staff of the local Universal exchange and joined the salesforce of the St. Louis Jewel office. It is reported that Mr. Bradley is to receive a splendid promotion upon assuming his new duties.

What Exhibitors Are Doing.

Minneapolis.—Managers Julius Johnson of the New Garrick will display "The Son of Democracy," beginning Wednesday, February 13.

Manager Branham of the Strand has booked "Woman and Wife," an Alice Brady-Select picture. Mr. Branham is now in Milwaukee conferring with Thomas Saxe, owner of the Strand, relative to future bookings at the theater. "The Price of a Good Time" will begin a run at the Strand theater shortly.

Among the future bookings at the New Garden theater are "Wild Woman" and "Morgan's Raiders," according to Manager Billy B. Watson.

St. Paul.—Manager Theodore L. Hays has booked "The Judgment House," "The Marionettes," and "Joan, the Woman" for future showings at the New Garrick theater.

Manager Oliver A. Rowe of the Blue Mouse has booked "The Wife He Bought" and "Painted Lips" for showing at his theatre shortly.

William Warville Nelson, former orchestra leader at the Metropolitan opera house, has been secured to direct the New Garrick theater orchestra. Mr. Nelson is recognized as an able leader and a clever composer.

Manager Bert Goldman of the New Majestic has booked the Nell Shipman feature, "The Wild Strain."

Exhibitors in Rochester, Minn.

Rochester, Minn.—The World representative had occasion to visit Rochester, one of the liveliest show towns in Southern Minnesota, recently and noted good patronage at the theaters offering good pictures.

Manager Reid of the Empress playing Fox, Vitagraph and independent releases, is playing to a good patronage daily.

The Grand is showing Triangle, Universal and various other program releases and doing well under the management of John Gievert.

The New Garden, under the management of Mr. Dryer, is playing to good business with Paramount and Mutual releases.

The Metropolitan is doing a fair business.

The Lawler, formerly the United, was opened February 6 by James Kellar. This theatre, the largest in the city, played to S. R. O. the opening evening. This theater is managed by Claude McQuillan and is equipped with two brand-new Simplex machines and a Wotton Rexolux in charge of Harold Bogey. The theater's music is furnished by an eight-piece orchestra, under the direction of Harold and Glenn Cooke. The theater opened with "Empty Pockets" and Mr. McQuillan hopes to register "Brewster's Millions" before it closes.

Among the Exchangemen.

Minneapolis.—Manager Burke of the Westcott Film Corp., announces the gigantic Griffith spectacle may be booked on a flat rental basis as well as a road attraction.

Manager Harry Graham of the Minneapolis Kleine exchange is elated over the success of "Brown of Harvard" at the Minneapolis Strand, beginning February 6. The picture, originally booked for four days, was held over for four more by Manager Branham of the Strand and continued to draw exceptional patronage, despite the fact that no extra efforts were used to present it.

Manager Calvert of the Omaha Jewel exchange visited Manager Pearson of the Minneapolis Universal exchange February 12.

C. L. Booth Joins Elliott-Sherman.

Minneapolis.—C. L. Booth, former assistant manager of the local Vitagraph exchange and later connected with the Jewel exchange at Omaha, Neb., has returned to Minneapolis and joined the salesforce of the Elliott-Sherman exchange.

Kansas City Censor Again in Court

Judge Asks Censor F. F. McClure and His Assistants Why They Should Not Be Punished for Contempt—Tossing Injunctions.

By Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Beet Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The picture "I, Mary MacLane," shown by Manager William H. Quigley of the Garden theater has roused the ire of F. F. McClure, film censor of the Board of Public Welfare in Kansas City.

The picture was rejected by Mr. McClure and the board of appeals "because the whole strain is immoral," said Mr. McClure. "In the picture the sacred things of life are handled in a light and flippant manner, particularly love and matrimony. The Mary MacLane of the picture is portrayed as a callous and hardened woman and the constant use of cigarettes and spirituous liquors throughout the picture served to intensify the impression. The picture as a whole is unwholesome and immoral. The leading character is portrayed as playing for conquest and sensationalizing and belittling the sacred things of life. * * * Anyone expecting something highly salacious would be as disappointed as the curiosity seeker who expected to see something of doubtful character uniquely portrayed. The picture is simply a disgusting thing. The heroine is too busy having fun with many men to bother about such foolishness as matrimony."

Mr. McClure had Mr. Quigley, the theater's manager, arrested. Then Judge Daniel E. Bird, of the circuit court, issued citations for Chief Flahive, chief of police, Mr. McClure, his two assistants, and two policemen to appear in court and show cause why they should not be punished for contempt for arresting the manager of the Garden. They were dismissed, but the judge granted an injunction preventing the film censor from interfering with the showing of the picture until after the hearing February 11, which gave the Garden a week in which to show the picture unmolested.

Then Judge O. Lucas, who believes the film censorship should be sustained, set aside the injunction granted by Judge Bird. Whereupon Judge W. O. Thomas granted another injunction. The outcome has not yet been decided.

Abilene, Tex.—The Queen Amusement Company chartered with a capital stock of $2,000.

Orange, Tex.—Harry Kitterman, of the firm of Kitterman Brothers, who operate the Princess theater, has arranged for the establishment of another motion picture theater on Main and Fifth streets. It will have a seating capacity of 800.

Tulia, Tex.—The Olympia theater at this place, formerly owned by Dye, Ford and Scott, has been bought by Hermes Townsend.

Kentucky Spring Brings Good Business

Big Improvement Noticed in Louisville Theater Business—Shows Are Again Attracting Big Crowds—Traffic Becomes Normal.

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Stark Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Weather conditions in the Louisville section have shown a big improvement since the opening of February, and business is responding to this influence in a fine way. Warm rains and winds resulted in the streets being washed clean of all snow, traffic has returned to normal, and residents who had been cooped up for weeks started out in force to make up for lost time, with the result that the Sunday and Monday business has been extremely good, the houses in some cases having trouble in accommodating the crowds. The suburban houses have also had much better business, and far more profitable returns, as the cost of heating has been greatly reduced.

Films are again arriving on time, as traffic is again reaching a normal stage. However, high water in the Ohio River and other streams is expected shortly to interfere with the running schedules of some of the trains. However, practically no delay has been met with for a week.

Exhibitors Write to Legislators.

Louisville.—Exhibitors of the state have been busy during the past few days in writing to their representatives in the Legislature, asking for support of the bill now before the General Assembly, which provides that moving picture theaters be classified along with railroads, and allowed to operate on Sunday, this being an amendment to section 1321 of chapter 36, Kentucky Statutes, known as the Blue Laws. This measure, which was introduced by Senator Helm, of Newport, Ky., following action of the Court of Appeals, which upheld the old statute, means a great deal to the amusement lovers of the state. Under the present law it would be possible to close things up so tightly that there would be nothing to do on Sunday but go to church, take a walk or stay at home. It is believed that public opinion is so strongly in favor of the measure that the General Assembly can hardly afford to hold it back, and as only about a third of the session is over the chances are that the measure will have plenty of time to get up before adjournment.

To Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Goldberg, a Boy.

Louisville, Ky.—An application for the position of assistant manager of the Strand theater, of Louisville, arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Goldberg, 829 South Third street, early this month. The applicant is a fine boy. He arrived just in time to celebrate the birthday of his uncle, Lee Goldberg, who also was born on February 9. Lee Goldberg was formerly manager of the Strand, Mary Anderson and Keith houses, but is now giving his entire time and attention to the management of the Big Features Rights Corporation, which handles a number of big features and the First National service.

Rails to Keep Crowds from Blocking Aisles.

Louisville.—The Alamo theater, operated by the Fourth Avenue Amusement Co., has taken steps to comply with the orders of the Board of Public Safety, which has ordered the theaters to quit allowing anyone to stand in the aisles of the theaters. This concern has installed an enclosure of heavy brass rods, just inside of the main entrance, so that all patrons entering the theater are upon being admitted introduced into the main auditorium, but they cannot reach the aisles until a man at the inside gate permits them to pass him. The rails have been so arranged that the main exit is clear and there is nothing to bar those endeavoring to leave the theater. The space inside of the enclosure is large enough to accommodate nearly 100 people, and more if crowding is permitted.

These rails might interfere somewhat in emptying the house in a big rush or panic, but it would be possible to go over or under them in that case. Since this system was installed the company has had no trouble whatever.

Picture Shows and the Shopping Trade.

Louisville.—That the moving picture theaters have grown to a point where they are of considerable advantage to the retail merchants has been shown in Louisville during the heatless Monday period, when the theaters were closed on Tuesday. Retail merchants claimed that the closing of the theaters on Tuesday resulted in that day being a comparatively light business day, as many shoppers who desire to take in a picture show put off the trip until Wednesday, which is the heavy day now. Many women desire only to make a few small purchases and figure on taking in one if not two shows during the afternoon. With the theaters all closed there is no incentive to come down town merely for a small parcel or two, and the merchants are beginning to realize that the picture theaters aid them in getting business.

Boxing May Come Back as a Show.

Louisville.—That theaters may again be used for holding professional boxing bouts, of the ten-round, no decision type, for athletic clubs, is now a matter that is being discussed all through the state. A bill has been introduced at Frankfort to legalize such bouts, and with the interest in physical development as a result of the war, and the regular matches held at Camp Taylor, between professionals and soldiers. A few years ago some big bouts were held in Kentucky, at the old Hopkins theater, known also as the Music Hall; at the old Avenue theater, the old Auditorium and at other places, some of the best boxers in the country appearing then. However, boxing was killed in Kentucky several years ago when it got rowdy. It is believed that clean-cut boxing would enable many theaters to greatly increase their revenues.

IN WISCONSIN.

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

New Theaters and Changes.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Sherman Brown Amusement Company has been incorporated for the purpose of conducting theaters and producing plays, silent and spoken. The incorporators are Sherman Brown, manager of the Davidson theater, W. C. Schnell, business manager, and W. B. Rubin.

Peshtigo, Wis.—The Star theater was destroyed in a fire which swept the business section. It had been recently leased to Ben Anderson.

Algoma, Wis.—W. L. McLaughlin is now manager of the Majestic theater, David Burke, the owner, planning to devote his time to his farm.

Fox Lake, Wis.—The Star theater has been closed by Manager Fanshaw, who has removed to West Virginia.

Clear Lake, Wis.—O. M. Bussewitz of Turtle Lake has purchased the Rex theater of C. A. Steindorff.

Waupaca, Wis.—Proprietor Charles Cohen temporarily closed the Lyric theater and remodeled it in order to increase seating capacity.

Wilton, Wis.—A moving picture theater has been opened here by L. Baily and Elmer Brookham.

Superior, Wis.—The childrens' matinee on Saturday has been restored at the Broadway theater, by Elmer L. Finstead, who has been promoted from the assistant managership to a managerial post.

Milwaukee, Wis.—"Intolerance" returned to Milwaukee for a week's run at the Princes theater.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Mary Pickford in "Stella Marie" went so good at the Alhambra that the three day booking was lengthened into a week.

Smallpox and Drouth Close Texas Theaters

Shows That Have Weathered Hard Conditions Now Temporarily Put Out of Running by Epidemic and Lack of Rain.

By Douglas Hawley, The Times-Herald, Dallas, Tex.

DALLAS, TEX.—Moving picture shows which withstood the vicissitude of war taxes and other ills that have been their portion during the last several months, have at least found a foe before which they must bow. Several theaters have been compelled to close in Texas during the last week, because of continued drouth and the prevalence of small-pox. An almost epidemic condition of the latter has closed—temporarily—the Dixie at Brownwood, the Majestic at Stephensville, and the Star at Brackettsville, in West Texas. Schools were closed at these places also.

At New Braunfels, a town of 4,000 inhabitants, and in one of the ordinarily most prosperous sections of Texas, the largest theater is now running only three days a week, because of drouth, and theaters at Kerrville and Comfort have been closed indefinitely.

It is also stated that Dye, Ford and Rogers, controlling theaters at Amarillo and Plainview, have closed at Tulia, Canyon and Floydada, probably because of drouth. They have, it is said, relinquished the latter points completely.

But everything in Texas isn't so pessimistic looking. There have been some good rains in the southwest during the second week in February. Elsewhere than in the drouth country conditions couldn't be better, according to exhibitors who have recently called on local exchange branches.

Dallas Increases Operators' Fees.

Dallas.—The board of city commissioners here has increased the license fee imposed on operators of moving picture machines. The new requirement in an ordinance passed by the board is a fee of $10 for the first year, an increase of $5. The second year it is $5, and $2.50 a year after that. A board of examiners, under the ordinance, is required to meet once a month to pass upon the fitness of operators to manipulate machines, and those passing the examination are given permits by the city electrician. A new permit is required each month.

Jimmie Young Gets Oklahoma Business.

Oklahoma City.—Jimmie Young, of Brownsville, Tex., has purchased the Oklahoma right to the F. N. E. A. controlled films, and has established an Oklahoma office for their distribution. Manager H. G. Morrow of the Dallas branch, F. N. E. A., has been here aiding Mr. Young in getting started.

Manager Ezell in New Orleans.

Dallas.—Manager Claude Ezell of the Dallas branch of Select is in New Orleans, aiding in the opening of the New Orleans Select branch and giving Manager Taylor there a good start-off. Without confirmation from Mr. Ezell it is understood that J. A. Cressey, an uncle of Clara Kimball Young and a Dallas man, has disposed of all his rights to certain of Miss Young's pictures to the Select Corporation.

"The Other Man" Pleases Bissinger.

Dallas.—Lew Bissinger, manager Washington theater, declares he has found a "regular" picture. Lew ran off the Vitagraph "The Other Man" recently, and has been all enthused ever since. "Say," he said, "it's the only thing I ever saw that you fall for right from the start, and then go to directing all on your own. And, believe me, it comes out just as you'd have it come out of you were making it yourself, see." No more sincere praise could be given a film. Harry Morey and Grace DeArmond are prime favorites in Texas, and with such opinion there's much pleasant anticipation against the early March release of the story.

"Stella Maris" and Other Recent Films.

Dallas.—"Stella Maris," with Mary Pickford, proved the biggest thing in Dallas for many a week at Hulsey's new Queen theater, during the week ending Feb. 10, after an opening with "Blue Jeans." Following this the Queen offered the Paramount "Mrs. Dane's Defense," with Pauline Frederick.

For the week beginning Feb. 11 local theaters showed these: Old Mill, Petrova in "Daughter of Destiny"; Mabel Normand in Brenon's "Empty Pockets"; Washington, "Limousine Life," with Olive Thomas, Triangle; "Men Who Have Made Love to Me," Kleine-Edison; Rex, "Under Suspicion," with Bushman and Bayne, Metro; Hippodrome, "Mother," with Elizabeth Risdon.

Around Film Row, Dallas.

When a man reports rain in Texas right now, everybody smiles with him. W. M. Eppstein, of Lytle and Eppstein, San Antonio, so reported while calling on local agencies during the second week in February. "Makes things look better in the southwestern country," he said. "Early reports make us hope the precipitation extended over considerable territory—we sure need it in the drouth country."

W. H. Ogilvie, of the Star theater, Cooldige, Tex., feels good. He says business is O. K. and that his section is in good shape.

Diversified farmers have diversified coin with which to pay for viewing diversified pictures, says B. F. Hunter, of the Buford theater, Sulphur Springs. Mr. Hunter is in the midst of one of the best farming sections of Texas—where "book farmers" make two things grow where there formerly was only one.

W. A. Ritter, of the Royal, Forney, Tex., says everything's all right in his territory.

Chas. Tryphone, of the Queen, Goose Creek, Tex., says if they're producing as much oil in other oil districts as they are at Goose Creek there'll be gasoline enough to go 'round.

L. B. Remey, manager Dallas Goldwyn branch, left for a visit to New York headquarters, Feb. 9. He says he bought it with premiums paid for increased business—anyway, J. B. Dugger, manager Vitagraph Dallas branch, is riding in a new Olds eight sportster.

Jack Abrams, representing "Birth of a Nation," has donated the picture for Everman Camp, Royal Flying Corps, Fort Worth, on March 3.

J. P. Leuning, of the General Film Company Dallas office, was called to New Orleans, Feb. 10, by the illness of one of his kiddies.

H. G. Price has been added to the Vitagraph road force out of Dallas, with east Texas territory.

Notes Across Texas.

Olney, Tex.—R. Shuffler has purchased the former Queen theater here, reconstructed the building and opened with the New Queen, a creditable house for this little city.

Marlin, Tex.—B. F. Lewis, formerly operating the Dixie theater here, has removed to Goose Creek in the South Texas oil fields.

Week's San Francisco Trade News Letter

California Theater Advertises Its Pictures Conservatively—Worthwhile Items of the Film Business on Coast—Trade Personals.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkel ey, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The California theater has adopted a conservative policy in regard to advertising of productions offered and patrons of the house are commenting on the manner in which published statements can be relied upon. No attempts are made to bolster up a picture of but average quality by high-sounding advertising, but when a production is especially good the public is informed of this in advance. In advertising "A Modern Musketeer," with Douglas Fairbanks, the management was content with making the statement that it was "positively the best picture in which this star has appeared." This was sufficient and capacity houses were the rule. This production was followed by "Shirley Kaye," with Clara Kimball Young, this being the first time that any feature other than a Paramount-Artcraft picture had been shown in this house.

Merchants and Theater Owner Co-operate.

Redding.—J. J. Wood, who conducts the Redding theater, finds that it pays to co-operate with the merchants of the town in the matter of publicity. Whenever he books a production of extra merit he uses a large newspaper space and induces the other merchants to increase their advertising space, or to offer special bargains. Through their combined efforts many are attracted from outside points to come here to trade and see the show. Mr. Wood recently offered "The Man Without a Country" and many, including the mayor, called to personally thank him for showing it

"The Belgian" Featured at Benefit.

San Francisco.—On the afternoon of February 8 the Colonial ballroom of the St. Francis hotel was the scene of a brilliant assemblage when the Sidney Olcott production, "The Belgian," was shown at two performances for the benefft of the Belgian baby relief fund. The picture was presented through the courtesy of Howard J. Sheehan, managing director of the Rialto theater. A. M. Bowles, who formerly conducted a theater at Livermore, Cal., volunteered his services as operator.

Effective Carbon Display.

San Francisco.—F. J. Alberti, who handles National carbons in the San Francisco field, and who maintains an office at 100 Golden Gate avenue, recently arranged a window display that attracted wide attention on the part of exhibitors. This consisted of a drawing of the interior of a theater with a screen flooded with light coming from carbons mounted on the drawing. Below was a long list of local houses making use of the line of carbons handled by this distributor.

Attend Opening in Los Angeles.

San Francisco.—E. Bruce Johnson, of the T. & D. circuit, visited the southern part of the state recently and attended the opening of Sid Grauman's new theater. He spent some time at the new Chaplin studio while away and found that work was being rushed there to complete the first release on schedule time for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. Sol Pincus, manager of publicity for the Imperial theater of this city, also attended the opening of the new Grauman house and visited some of the studios.

Fox Exchange Has Visitors.

San Francisco.—George M. Mann, formerly with the Triangle, but now Western Division manager for the Fox, is here for a short stay. W. H. Massie is also here to manage the presentation of "Cleopatra" at the Cort theater and George Dumond, until recently with Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, has started out on the road as advance agent for this production. Following a brief period of open booking the Rialto theater has returned to the Fox program.

Exchange Managers Talk to Merchants.

San Francisco.—Meyer J. Cohen, manager of the local office of the George Kleine system, and J. H. Allen, of the Progressive Company, recently attended a meeting of the Mission Street Merchants' Association and told of the enormous strides taken by the moving picture industry during the past few years. They spoke of theaters as a business asset to community districts and of the tendency here to build commodious district houses that rival downtown theaters elsewhere.

World Managers Visit Los Angeles.

San Francisco.—E. C. Jensen, division manager for the World Film, recently made a business trip to Los Angeles and later sent for local manager Floyd St. John to come there and confer with him. During the absence of the latter the local office was in charge of H. S. Meyer.

L. C. Johnson Weds.

San Francisco.—L. C. Johnson, for six years operator at the Verdi theater, on Broadway, and for some time manager of this house, was married recently to Mrs. Nellie Michaels, chief owner of this theater and one of the owners of the Kearny theater on Kearny street. The Verdi theater has recently been remodeled and refurnishd and it is planned to remodel the Liberty theater across the street from here and open it as Verdi theater II.

Strand Employees Buy War Stamps.

San Franciso.—The employees of the Strand theater have formed an association to purchase $100 worth of War Savings Stamps each week. The management has placed the theater screen at the disposal of government officials for the showing of slides calculated to stimulate the sale of the stamps.

House Under New Management.

Oakland.—E. V. Clover is no longer manager of the T. & D. theater here, having been succeeded by Arthur Wenzel, formerly of this city, but more recently with Oliver Morosco.

Fight Pictures Sent to Training Camp.

San Francisco.—Miles Bros., Inc., have sent four sets of prize ring pictures to Camp Lewis, Washington, where they will be used by boxing instructor Willie Ritchie, in teaching the soldiers to become proficient in the manly art.

California Books Travel Series.

San Francisco, Cal.—Eugene H. Roth, of the California theater, has booked the Lincoln and Parker World Travel series for presentation at this house, the first offering to be shown commencing February 10.

Unique to Shown Bronco Billy Reissue.

San Francisco.—The Unique theater on Market street has secured the first-run bookings on the reissues featuring "Bronco Billy" G. M. Anderson, which met with so much favor a few years ago.

Select Making Good Showing.

San Francisco.—The Select Pictures Corporation is enjoying a fine business and has recently added to its staff to care for the increase. George M. Colladay, formerly with the Vitagraph out of Seattle, is now with this concern and recently started on a trip through the territory south of San Francisco, while Barney Benard has started north. H. C. Cohen, until recently connected with the Los Angeles office, has been transferred to this branch. During the week of February 17 two of its productions will be shown at the California and Portola theaters, "Ghosts of Yesterday," with Norma Talmadge, having been booked to the former, while the latter will offer "Her Silent Sacrifice," with Alice Brady.

Window Display of National Carbons.

Portland, Ore., News Letter

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Building, Portland, Ore.

Eastern Oregon Progresses.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Mrs. Clark Leiter, owner of the Arcade and Star theaters, at La Grande, Oregon, was in Portland during the run of "Cleopatra" at the Majestic theater to see this big picture put over. Mrs. Leiter told of conditions in her part of the state. The way she puts on her shows will make her metropolitan brothers sit up and take notice. The Arcade has recently installed a new Robert Morton organ and the Star is using a five-piece orchestra.

The Arcade is using Hippodrome vaudeville acts one day a week. Mrs. Leiter has just finished remodelling this house and was in Portland buying statuary as part of the decorations.

Another live wire in the Eastern Oregon territory is J. P. Cotter at Baker, Oregon, the next town to La Grande. By owning several theaters, Mr. Cotter practically controls the situation there, but he is not taking advantage of his monopoly to the detriment of business as some exhibitors in one-man towns are doing.

He pays an equitable price for film, shows his pictures as close to release date as possible, and enjoys excellent patronage.

Another Exponent of Progress.

Portland.—Speaking of progressive exhibitors, C. M. Hill, manager of the Portland Paramount-Artcraft office, tells of an exhibitor in a little town of 600 people who is ace-high in the game. He is F. F. Groves, and he conducts the show in Carne's Hall, at Pilot Rock, Oregon. When Mr. Hill was advised by his road man that he had placed "Joan the Woman" in Pilot Rock at a rental that would be considered by less progressive exhibitors as prohibitive, but at the same time the minimum price of the picture, Mr. Hill was afraid that the exhibitor had been oversold. But the road man's judgment was vindicated when Mr. Groves put over the picture in real big-town style, crowded his house at increased prices and made handsome profit. Mr. Groves also showed "The Spoilers" twice to big business.

New Use for Pictures.

Portland.—The Service Film Company recently installed a projector at the convent of the Dominican Sisters. The Sisters do not enjoy the privilege of attending picture shows so they have arranged for programs of educational and scenic subjects, which are shown within the convent walls.

Another St. Helens House.

St. Helens.—Another new theater has been opened here. It is located at West St. Helens and is operated by S. S. Long. Mrs. Jeffries is completing her new theater here, the Liberty.

People Move to Portland.

Portland.—C. C. Ferguson, owner of the Baker theater, Newberg, Oregon, was a recent visitor in Portland and decried the fact that so many families in his town were moving to Portland where the men were being employed in the shipbuilding industry. Many small town exhibitors complain that the theater business is being hurt by people moving to Portland.

However, Mr. Ferguson did not complain of business in Newberg. He says that newcomers are taking the places of those leaving and that business does not suffer materially.

With the Road Men in Oregon.

Portland.—E. R. Simpson, special representative for Pathe, with headquarters here, returned from Seattle where he was attending Pathe Week. He reports Exchange Manager W. W. Kofeldt getting things working in good order for a big sales campaign in the territory.

Ted Johnson, traveller for Mutual, has written in to Manager George Jackson that he is meeting with fine success in Eastern Oregon and that business conditions there are much above average.

B. J. Sperry, Paramount, made a run to The Dalls and reports all the theaters there doing good business.

Invents New Shutter.

Freewater.—C. F. Perkins, Star theater, claims to have invented a shutter that cuts flicker down to a minimum. He uses a mirror screen which he says always shows flicker if there is any and repeated tests with his shutter have given him most satisfactory results. He is having his invention patented.

"Garden of Allah" as Special Show.

Portland, Ore.—E. J. Myrick, manager of the Liberty theater, made "The Garden of Allah" the special attraction at the big showhouse during the week of Feb. 3, presenting the picture with many novel effects, among which was a sandstorm during appropriate scenes in the picture. J. G. Von Herberg, of the Liberty Company, was present in Portland during the showing.

Seattle Organization's Plea Has Effect

Northwest Film Board of Trade Prevails on Express Companies to Look Out for Interests of Exchanges When Train Schedules Fail.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

SEATTLE, WASH.—The express companies operating out of Seattle have acceded to the request made by the Northwest Film Board of Trade that its officers be notified when an express train was not to make its regular run. The Board of Trade took this action in order that the exhibitors might not be without shows when, as is sometimes done during these days of transportation troubles, a train does not make its scheduled trip.

In answer to the Board of Trade the express companies declared that it was only because of the organization that they would consent to give this warning, that they could not have agreed to do it for a single concern.

New Houses and Changes in Management.

Seattle.—Jack Kauffman, who formerly operated the Liberty theater in Hoquiam, has bought the Avenue theater, a neighborhood house, from F. L. Hawthorne.

Seattle.—H. T. Johnson sold a complete equipment this week to Charles Benson of Seward, Alaska. The equipment included 300 chairs, a Monsa screen and two Powers 6A projectors. Mr. Benson expects to open his theater as soon as the equipment arrives.

Centralia, Wash.—Joe Lucas, manager of the Grand theater, bought the Ideal theater from R. V. Griner this week. Mr. Lucas has leased the new theater which is being built in Centralia, so that he now has only one competitor, M. Bloom, of the Central theater.

Northport, Wash.—The new Liberty theater was opened by Melville L. Adams on February 7 with "Polly of the Circus."

Dayton, Wash.—E. C. Smith, manager of the American theater, has bought the Liberty.

Seattle Exchange Personals.

Seattle.—C. H. Code, Well-known film salesman of the Northwest, has just taken a position with the Seattle Goldwyn office to cover the Washington territory.

H. K. Brin, who deserted Seattle's film circle last spring to go East, is now traveling for Triangle out of this city.

J. B. Gilman, formerly with Paramount and later with World in Seattle, went out this week for Fox.

Ollie Wog, formerly salesman for the De Luxe Feature and more recently traveling for Artcraft-Paramount out of Denver, reported at Camp Lewis, near Seattle, this week for the draft.

H. D. Naugle, Western division manager for Vitagraph, who is now on a tour of his entire territory, is expected in Seattle March 3-10.

J. S. Woody, Northwest manager of Select, returned to Seattle last week after a trip through Montana. Mr. Woody reports that all the principal towns of Montana are using Select service.

B. F. Rosenberg, publicity man for Metro's Western offices, returned this week from a trip through the Oregon territory. Mr. Rosenberg reports that business in Oegon has improved and that "Draft 258" is going over big everywhere in the Northwest territory.

H. G. Rosenbaum, manager of the Artcraft-Paramount office, returned from a conference with other Western managers of the company in San Francisco.

New De Luxe Motiographs on View.

Seattle.—The Theater Supply Company sent out engraved invitations to exhibitors of the territory this week to come and see the new 1918 De Luxe Motiograph. The new model excited much admiration in the window of the supply store at 2006 Third avenue. George Ring, manager of the Society theater, one of Seattle's leading neighborhood houses, was the first to buy a pair of the big new machines. Since the arrival of this first sample shipment the Theater Supply Company have orders for more of these machines than they can at present supply.

De Luxe Gets Reissues.

Seattle, Wash.—Mike Rosenberg, manager of the De Luxe Feature Film Company, closed a contract with Triangle this week for the Northwest rights to the Hart, Fairbanks, Keenan, and Talmadge re-issues.

Visitors on Seattle's Film Row.

Exhibitors visiting Seattle recently were F. L. Stannard, Gem theater, Wenatchee; Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Williams, Orpheum, Snohomish, and Munroe theater, Monroe; A. J. Jenkins, Apollo, Everett; C. E. McKee, Orpheum, Everett; James Chenaur, Star, Port Angeles; Mrs. B. F. Malone, Colonial, Charleston; E. C. Smith, American and Liberty, Dayton; H. T. Moore, Colonial, Tacoma; George Reizner, Lyric and People's theaters, South Bend, Wash.

Spokane Brevities

By S. Clark Patchin, E 1811 Eleventh Ave., Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, WASH.—P. L. Carroll, branch manager of the Pathe exchange, has just returned from a successful business trip covering Montana. Mr. Carroll reports that he has placed the Pathe films in the largest picture houses of Helena, Butte, Great Falls, Billings and Anaconda.

"Enlighten Thy Daughter," a sociological film, was presented at the Clemmer the week of Feb. 1 and proved a success. About 300 clubwomen saw the picture as the guests of Dr. H. S. Clemmer and indorsed its teaching. Mary Pickford in "Stella Maris" drew large audiences the last part of the week.

The Liberty theater has just closed for two of the big George Kleine features, "Brown of Harvard" and "Uneasy Money." Manager Sam W. B. Cohn announces that the pictures will be shown in the near future.

"The Eyes of Mystery," full of romance, suspense and excitement, was shown to large audiences at the Casino theater.

At the Lyric, Louise Blaum, in "A Strange Transgressor."

Will S. Hart in "The Narrow Trail" drew the usual large crowds that are attending the Lyric daily.

Carr and Schad Try Reserve Seat System

Colonial Theater in Reading Finds Reserve Seats Pay—Keeps 500 Seats Out of 2,000 for Sale by Number—How System Is Run.

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

READING, PA.—C. L. Carr, of the Carr and Schad Amusement Enterprises, which control the Colonial, Arcadia and Princess theaters in Reading, was a visitor at the Philadelphia branch of the Pathe exchange recently, and viewed a private screening of Frank Keenan in "Loaded Dice," in company with W. S. Hunt, an exhibitor from Wildwood, N. J.

Mr. Carr reports excellent business conditions in all of their theaters and is very optimistic regarding the future. He is greatly elated over the Colonial theater, their latest achievement. Out of 2,000 seats, 500 of the upholstered ones have been covered with slip covers and numbered, so that when a prospective customer approaches the box office to purchase a reserved seat a plan of the entire section is shown on a cardboard, so that any of the vacant seats desired can be secured. The plan is worked out similar to the legitimate houses, only that it is used for the evening performances only. During week runs, a seat for any day of that period can be reserved up until 8 o'clock, and as each seat is vacated after the first performance, the box office is instantly notified so that the seats can be resold for the second show. For the remainder of the seats, 15 cents admission is charged.

L. A. Magazzu May Buy Theater.

Philadelphia.—L. A. Magazzu, former owner of the Logan theater, who is at present conducting an Italian restaurant at 17 S. 16th street, is expected to return to the exhibiting business, as he is reported to be negotiating for the purchase of a photoplay house.

Nixon-Nirdlinger Theaters on Roll.

Philadelphia.—The chain of theaters under the management of Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger has been placed on the roll of honor by the Pennsylvania Committee of Public Safety for their patriotic cooperation with the government in the prosecution of the war. A handsome framed diploma of honor was presented to each theater last Monday night by the representative of the Four Minute Men.

Manager Bert Moran Marries.

Philadelphia.—Bert Moran, manager of the George Kleine System, 1309 Vine street, surprised the employees of his exchange by entering the seas of matrimony on Tuesday, February 12. Mr. Moran, looked upon as being of a most retiring disposition, should be extended double credit for taking the initiative in assuming more responsibilities. A hearty reception awaits him upon his return from his honeymoon.

Interesting Trade Notes.

Philadelphia.—The Stanley Company secured bookings on the Mutual's new Screen Telegram, for over 35 days, immediately upon its release.

Philadelphia.—M. E. Milligan, formerly the road man for "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," is now with the sales force of the Wm. Fox local exchange.

Philadelphia.—C. G. Powell, formerly of the Electric Theater Supply Company, has become associated as an active partner with P. Glenn and J. J. Goodstein, having purchased an interest in the Keystone Feature Film Co.

Philadelphia.—The Fort Pitt Theater Co., in charge of William Karrar, controls the road attraction "The Italian Battlefront" pictures for this territory and is meeting with great success. Harry Marcus and J. L. Whittle, who are doing the road work, are sending in good reports each day. Immediately following the cumulative successes of the Italian war films, Mr. Karrar announces the forthcoming attractions, soon to be released: "Our Navy," played 5 weeks at the 44th street theater; "Tarzan of the Apes," "Ramona" in 10 parts and "Eyes of the World."

Philadelphia.—The first anniversary of the Broadway theater, under the management of Sablosky and McGuirk, will be observed during the week of February 11 by the presentation of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation."

Philadelphia.—A patriotic picture to advertise the third Liberty Loan was completed last week by the Stanley Advertising Company. Jack Fisher, a popular young man among the exhibitors, posed as Uncle Sam.

SCATTERED BITS OF NEWS.

Detroit Pick-Ups.

Holland.—F. F. Kirkpatrick of the Apollo theater, writes the World office that his wife is very ill and that he will leave the state as soon as he disposes of his theater.

Detroit.—Field Carmichael, Fox manager, is on an extended trip through the state for the purpose of personally coming in contact with exhibitors and studying their wants.

Detroit.—L. J. Gardiner, of the United Theater Equipment company, is on a trip to northern Michigan, where he has a number of live prospects for Powers machines and Velvet Gold Fibre screens.

Detroit.—The Universal has shown further signs of retrenching by discontinuing its branch offices in Grand Rapids, Mich., and Toledo, O. Hereafter all exhibitors in those localities will be handled from the main exchange in Detroit.

Detroit.—A warrant has been issued for Leslie J. Fluegel, treasurer of the Adams theater, who is accused of having embezzled the theater to the extent of $4,000.

Detroit.—Dave Prince, manager for the General, reports big bookings on Paralta Plays. John H. Kunsky will show Paralta at the Madison and Washington theaters, while they have been booked for most of the Butterfield theaters.

Brief Oregon Notes.

Portland.—S. Danz, Star theater, Astoria, was a recent visitor in Portland. He says business is better in Astoria than it has been for years. Road men report Astoria to be the second best film town in the state.

Vader, Wash.—Dick Charles, who operates a string of houses in this vicinity, has sold the Castel Rock theater.

Stayton, Oregon.—Harry Humphrey has bought the Star theater from L. E. Warford, who acquired the house a month ago from F. X. Hoereth.

Centralia, Wash.—Joe Lucas is reported to have purchased another theater here.

Extra Fine Business February 11.

Boston.—Nearly every moving picture house in this city reported capacity business on "heatless Monday" last week. The almost unseasonable warm weather brought the people out in droves to the shows.

Pittsburgh News Letter

By Pittsburgh News Service, 405 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Manager J. L. Ellman Enlists.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—J. L. Ellman, manager and publicity director of the Pittsburgh branch of the Harris P. Wolfberg Attractions, Lyceum Theater building, has resigned his position to answer the call to the colors and, after concluding a short visit to his home in St. Louis, will enter the active service of Uncle Sam. The name of Mr. Ellman's successor has not yet been announced. Mr. Ellman is the second manager of the Pittsburgh Wolfberg exchange to enlist, Edgar Wolfberg, brother of Harris Wolfberg, having joined the army several months ago.

Finer Quarters for First National Circuit.

Pittsburgh.—The First National Exhibitors' Circuit and the Rowland & Clark theaters have greatly enlarged their joint quarters in the Westinghouse building, Pittsburgh, and now occupy a spacious suite of rooms on the sixth floor. Leading from a large reception room is the office of the First National Exhibitors' exchange, in charge of Charles F. Schwerin, and adjoining this is the publicity department, in charge of Samuel Sivitz. To the left is the booking department for the Rowland & Clark theaters, presided over by W. E. Kirsch. Adjacent to this room is the bookkeeping department, and beyond, as heretofore, is situated the private office of Mr. Clark.

Harry Thomas Heads Arsenal Theater.

Pittsburgh.—Harry Thomas has been appointed manager of the Arsenal theater, of the Rowland & Clark chain, Butler and Main streets, Pittsburgh, succeeding J. A. Riley, who has been placed in charge of the Belmar theater, Homewood avenue and Bennett street. Mr. Thomas has been connected with the Rowland & Clark organization for the past six years, and was formerly head operator at the Regent. A change in personnel has been made necessary by the enlistment of several members of the managerial staff of the Rowland & Clark theaters. George Vogenberger, former manager of the Belmar, left recently for the U. S. Aviation Camp in Texas.

Majestic Theater Changes Hands.

Rochester, Pa.—The attractive Majestic theater, Rochester, has been purchased by the firm of Cohn & Vinegard from the former owners, Solz & Goldberg. The house changed hands on February 4. The Majestic has a seating capacity of 1,100 and is one of the largest and finest theatres in the Beaver Valley. High-class photoplays will be shown as heretofore. Messrs. Cohn and Vinegard are Pittsburghers, but will move to Rochester in order to give their personal attention to the management of the Majestic.

Goldwyn Strengthens Sales Staff.

Pittsburgh.—In preparation for an aggressive spring drive at the Pittsburgh Goldwyn exchange, Manager C. C. McKibbon has made several changes in his staff and strengthened his sales force during the past week. R. Daniels has been appointed sales manager of the branch, and he has engaged two able assistants, H. E. Stahler and R. T. Meyers, both experienced film men. Manager McKibbon has gathered about him one of the most effective organizations possible, and is securing the desired results.

The Bell Film Service, 804 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, has purchased the Jester comedies for this territory. They feature "Tweedle-Dan" and are in two reels, one comedy to be released every month.

"HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS."

Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in Five-Part World Romance of the "Zenda" School.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE hero of "His Royal Highness" is an American football star who goes to some mythical kingdom in Europe, is passed off on the populace as the heir to the throne, marries a princess and takes to the king business with a contentment that puts his democratic training and ancestry to the blush. This five-part World picture is closely related to the long line of romances that have come down from Anthony Hope's "Zenda" stories. In spite of the great affairs of state with which they deal they are recognized as a form of light entertainment that is meant to amuse, not to instruct. "His Royal Highness" is quite as good as the average story of this class, and will delight the heart of the matinee girl and her big brother—if he chances to be in love.

Jack Christie has a roommate at Harvard who is known as Victor Borden. When Jack becomes the football hero of the year and goes to Paris with his chum he discovers that Victor is the rightful heir to the throne of Wallarya, now occupied by a usurper. There is a plot on foot to put Victor where he belongs, but he has fallen in love with a pretty little Apache named Lisette, and is wounded in a fight when he visits the cafe where she dances. Jack agrees to go to Wallarya in Victor's place and hold things down until the real prince recovers. When the time is ripe for him to be crowned Victor sends word that he has married his little Apache and sailed for the United States and Jack is welcome to his kingdom. The football star met the princess on the ship coming over and fell in love with her, so is very well pleased to marry and settle down as a ruler by divine right and a bit of political jugglery.

The cast is equal to all demands of the story and includes, in addition to Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley, Kate Lester, Bert Honey, Lionel Belmore, Kitty Johnson, A. Black and Herbert Barrington. Carlyle Blackwell directed the production. The subject was photographed by A. Moses and L. Tainguy.

"THE WOOING OF PRINCESS PAT."

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Contains Intimate Views of Royalty and Is Amusing During the Most of Its Five Parts.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

MANY things of late have contributed to the crumbling away of the awe once inspired by persons of royal birth, and the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, "The Wooing of Princess Pat," will add to the good work. William Addison Lathrop, the author of the picture, has been no respecter of noble blood, but takes the spectator behind the scenes, as it were, and shows him that young women born in the purple are subject to the same fits of pouting, sulking and want of dignity that characterize the stage and screen ingenue, no matter what part she plays. However, if the young person who is to inherit a throne be attractive looking and cute much is forgiven her, and so the Princess Pat, who is not the English Princess of that name, but the daughter of the ruler of another of the mythical kingdoms known to the writers of fiction, will find a host of admirers, even if she does act like a spoiled child who should be punished and put to bed.

The story is the usual one of the princess who marries for state reasons and imagines, or pretends to believe, she hates her liege lord, and ends by falling deeply in love with him. Aside from a brief spurt of melodrama near the finish, which enables the princess to bind up the slash on the hand of her king with her own handkerchief, the atmosphere is one of comedy and free and independent citizens of the United States will be surprised to find how very like ordinary human beings are all the haughty persons of the story. Perhaps they have read correctly the signs of the times and are merely preparing to lay aside their undemocratic airs and customs.

Gladys Leslie is "cute and cunning" as the Princess Pat, and well considered characterizations are given by J. Frank Glendon, Bigelow Cooper, William Dunn, Charles Kent, Carlton King, Templer Saxe and J. Albert Hall. The picture is carefully mounted and was directed by William P. S. Earle. It was released February 18.

"THE LIGHT WITHIN."

Madame Olga Petrova in Five-Part Screen Story Made Up of Equal Portions of Science and Romance.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE author of "The Light Within," Mrs. L. Case Russell, a five-part screen story starring Madame Olga Petrova, has built a romance around a test-tube and blended the laboratory and the drawing-room with considerable skill. Science and love are constantly at war with each other during the unfolding of the plot, and although "anthrax" and other contagious diseases and a wonderful new serum play important parts in the story they are handled in such a manner they are made to serve the cause of dramatic art and help to bring about the "happy ending" with the lovers clasped in each other's arms.

Madame Petrova enacts the role of Laurel Carlisle, a young physician, who stifles her love for a man in her own profession and marries a millionaire, that she may have the money to carry on her research work. She presents her husband with an heir and then divides her time between her boy and her test-tubes. Contrary to all preconceived notions of such an advanced woman, she does not neglect her wardrobe, however, but always appears carefully groomed and correctly gowned on every occasion. She also exhibits a calm during several disconcerting situations that speaks volumes for her scientific training.

An epidemic of scarlet fever having broken out, Laurel is forced to choose between the life of her boy and the children of the poor people who rush to her for help when they hear she has discovered a serum that will conquer the disease. After the death of her young son she perfects an "anthrax" serum and, believing her husband has been lost on a yachting cruise, accepts the offer of her old sweetheart to prove the worth of her discovery. He also renews his love making and is accepted, but the husband returns and is more disagreeable than ever. When his rival has been inoculated with the germs of "anthrax" he destroys the serum that is needed to save his life. Laurel is equal to the occasion, however. By almost superhuman effort she produces a fresh supply, and her husband perishes miserably by accidentally contracting the very disease he hoped would kill Dr. Leslie.

Madame Petrova is always consistent to her conception of the character and makes the most of her own physical charms. She is excellently supported by Lumsden Hare, Thomas Holding, Clarence Heritage, Freddi Verdi, Evelyn Dumo, Fred C. Jones, Frank McDonald and Matilda Brundage. An intelligent dog is a feature of the cast. The production reflects credit upon the Petrova Company and the director, Lawrence W. Trimble.

"OUR LITTLE WIFE."

Goldwyn Presents Madge Kennedy in a Comedy of Incident in Young Married Life.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

INTENDED for farce may have been "Our Little Wife," but Madge Kennedy introduces a delightful characterization of feminine irresponsibility and raises it to some higher and intermediate place. The story itself is farce in its exaggeration of incident, with some bright spots sure to get a laugh.

When Madge imagines she is ill and sends for the handsome young doctor who has already aroused her husband's jealousy, she absent-mindedly removes the temperature thermometer from her mouth and stirs her tea with it, causing it to show a prophecy of immediate death. She is a well-meaning and very childish wife, who carries a number of disappointed admirers along on her honeymoon and afterward compromises herself and several of them in a swift series of misadventures, but it is an open question whether those misadventures are comical enough to compensate for their obvious artificiality.

The gross improbabilities of pure farce are easily forgotten because there is not the slightest pretense of plausibility—one may freely laugh at its inanities, but the injection of such a pleasing personality as that of Miss Kennedy calls for incidents as authentic as her characterization, with some consistency on the part of her support. Where sympathetic interest would gain by naturalness it is marred by straining credulity to the utmost. Human nature is much funnier than ingenuity of situation, as proved by Miss Kennedy as "Our Little Wife." On her superior interpretation of her role nearly all the merit of the story depends. So the Strand audience seemed to think.

"THE UNBELIEVER."

Edison Studio War Play, in Which Marine Corps Participates, Scores a Hit at Rivoli.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE Unbeliever" achieves the unbelievable and hitherto unknown in moving pictures—it presents a clear picture of what war is really like. The massed scenes for the first time mean something to the audience, and they evoke round after round of applause. Grouped around a better story, one of loftier ideals and more dignified interpretation, these realistic battle scenes would not have suffered as they do from lapses of audience interest. In the early part of the story a wealthy young man talks of "masses" and "classes" in an un-American fashion and a persistent effort is made throughout to create the impression that this young man has done something quite creditable when he acknowledges that his manly chauffeur is a human creature after all, especially in view of the chauffeur's heroic death.

That might do in Europe, but it is so opposed to the American spirit that it acts as a damper on enthusiasm aroused by the splendid showing of the marines and some well-considered appeals to patriotism. The wealthy young man enlists, participates in some Belgian scrimmages, plants a counter-mine, meets a pretty Belgian girl, sends her home to his mother, gets wounded and returns home to embrace the pretty Belgian in the same old conventional last scene. Raymond McKee plays this role and Marguerite Courtot is very lovely, with nicely fluffed hair amid scenes of battle and a becoming frock at the conclusion, both acting wholly out of mood with the play. Their easy indifference is a jarring note, but not so serious as the infirmity of purpose in the play itself. The entire tone of a dramatic composition of this kind is out of harmony with the audience when it does not consider the emotions of those in front on seeing what an ordeal our brave sons and brothers may have to pass through.

In strong and forceful contrast is the dignity and courage of the actual fighters on both sides. The enemy is not belittled, though some of his brutality is shown. Small but thoroughly effective is the revolt of a spirited young German soldier against Hun despotism shown by his superior officer. The minor characters score in not making the war trivial. Among the real soldiers there is no disposition to be flippant. The field operations, quite as well as those of squads, are most clearly and vividly portrayed. One feels the thrill of actuality wherever troops are engaged. Thus the subordinates carry off the honors. The Rivoli presentation drew an enormous crowd and it was given in magnificent style, evoking storms of applause.

"DADDY'S GIRL."

Five-Reel Pathe Gold Rooster Play, Which Features Baby Marie Osborne and Some Grown-Ups.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

A PLEASANT little home-like story is "Daddy's Girl," written by John W. Grey and M. Ramirez Torres, and directed by William Bertram. It has a strong juvenile interest, the heroine being Baby Marie Osborne, who has appeared successfully in other screen stories. The supporting cast contains many children, including a small colored boy who contributes much of the comedy. Besides these, there are a number of adult performers, including Marion Warner and Louis J. Cody, who play Baby Marie's parents.

The plot in rather slight, but natural and convincing in development. It begins by first introducing Baby Marie and her parents living in a modest little home. The father is well connected but not very successful in a business way. They receive a visit from an uncle, who announces that he has made them his heirs. Later the uncle dies and they go to live at the wealthy estate he left them.

The activities of the juveniles are pictured in an entertaining way all through the number, but are particularly interesting in the "kid" show. Here Marie plays the equestrienne and the colored boy is ringmaster of the circus. Young observers will especially like these scenes.

After coming into wealth, the young father takes up with a different sort of life. He falls a victim to the charms of a fast woman, but Baby Marie visits the cabaret, to which they have gone, and brings her father home.

"BROADWAY BILL."

Sentimental Story in Yorke Metro Picture with Harold Lockwood in Lead.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE always will be pictures aimed at a certain definite class and sure to succeed. The producer has no worries at all. He knows before the picture is made that it is going to measure up to a certain definite standard and, if he is experienced, he can tell almost the amount of money the picture will be worth. "Broadway Bill," the recent Yorke Metro production, is one of those love stories that are sure to be liked by the school girl, the shop girl, the servant girl, the young clerk and the youthful unwed generally. It is ably put on; there is no show of stingy economy in it; the players are well chosen and especially the leading juvenile. It is a picture that will give dream-freedom to a good many young people and they will thank the picture with affection.

Harold Lockwood's qualities are well enough known and in the other juvenile part is Martha Mansfield. "Broadway Bill" is what his name indicates till the girl throws him off and he decides to make a man of himself. The girl's father owns a lumber camp in the North Woods and sends Bill to find why his birdseye maple isn't making money. The foreman is tough and he has a big Swede as his right bower and a sneaky little wood thief as a left bower. "Accidents happen" in the words and a few are scheduled to come to Bill. This part of the story, set in the real woods, hip-deep in snow, is fine. Bill wins out and has a physical encounter with the boss, not realistic at all, knocks him out and he is elected foreman.

Bill has conquered gin so far; but he finds the cook's whiskey bottle wrapped in a newspaper. By chance he reads in this that the girl is engaged to his rival and then he would have fallen if a friend had not come in. The girl's father, with the girl and the family, now appears. The girl goes to meet Bill. He is about to embrace her; but tells her he now has no right, as there is another. She thinks he refers to another woman. Small brother gets lost in the woods. Bill rescues him. Is nearly dead, and lies on the couch. The girl keeps embracing him, oh, so lovingly.

"THE HOUSE OF HATE."

Pathe Releases First Installment of the New Pearl White Serial.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS first installment of "The House of Hate," in three reels, introduces the observer at once to a complicated, but clearly outlined, murder mystery. The scenes are filled with an agreeable tension and the incidents have a strong touch of melodrama in their development. The serial has been directed by George B. Seitz, and is in a direct line of succession with "The Perils of Pauline," "The Iron Claw," and other well remembered numbers which he brought out. The story in this instance is by Arthur B. Reeve and Charles A. Logue, both successful writers.

Pearl White, the intrepid heroine of many former serials, is here cast in a role that promines to be full of exciting interest. She appears as the daughter of Winthrop Waldon, a wealthy manufacturer of munitions. They live in a fine home, surrounded by scheming relatives, all anxious to get their fingers on the old man's fortune. The father, desirous of perpetuating the family name, wishes Pearl to marry her cousin, Haynes Waldon, but she loves Harvey Gresham, a young scientist, who works at the home. Antonio Moreno, whose previous screen work is favorably known, is cast as Gresham. J. H. Gilmour appears as Winthrop Waldon, and J. Webb Dillon as Haynes Waldon.

A mysterious figure, clad in a black robe and hood, is seen in the house in these opening reels. Winthrop Waldon's life is threatened, in a note written by this mysterious person. In the final reel the wealthy man is stabbed by the same hand. This opens up a strong mystery, as almost any one of the characters, either a man or woman, might have worn the concealing garments.

"THE BOY SCOUTS TO THE RESCUE."

Universal to Release Series of Five Two-Reel Installments Devoted to Boy Scouts in England.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

LIEUTENANT-GEN. SIR ROBERT S. S. BADEN-POWELL, who has been called the father of the Boy Scout movement, is sponsor for this series of pictures devoted to the activities of these boys. The series is in story form, but gives opportunity for whole companies of the Scouts to appear, and an interesting insight is afforded into the methods employed abroad.

The scenes are all laid in England, two boys, known as Skinnay Blake and Buster Gray, playing the leading parts. One of the youths is the son of a wealthy English gentleman and the other the son of a poor family. The regeneration of "Skinnay's" father is an element in the story.

Some good contrasts are in evidence as the story unfolds, and an idea is given of the democratizing effect of the Scout movement, which renders all boys equal, at least in the ranks. The tale itself centers about a thieving gypsy, named Gypsy Don, who has kidnapped a poor boy after the latter had escaped from prison. There is not the impetuous rush of incident that might be found in an American production, but the plot is sufficient to hold the interest and gives some commendable lessons in honor, service and patriotic duty. Sir Baden-Powell and other officers of the Scout movement in England appear at times. The settings are mostly found on an English estate and are attractive.

"THE FLASH OF FATE."

Five-Reel Universal Offering Features Herbert Rawlinson in Story of Crooked Financial Operations.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS is a crook story in a different guise, with a number of melodramatic situations strung through it. The final reel contains excellent suspense, and, without looking too closely into the rather loosely constructed plot, the subject is, on the whole, an enjoyable one of the kind. The hero fluctuates between good and evil, after his father has been crushed by a Wall street rival. He at first goes in for revenge and determins to be a crook, but at the close decides it is no use and goes back to the straight path.

The story is commendable for certain novelties, which keep it well off the beaten path. One of these was the interesting scenes in which the hero telegraphs a message over the entire city by flashing the lights on and off in conformity with the Morse code. By this means he gets into instant touch with the girl and her brother, both of whom are in peril. The plot, such as it is, is never obvious in development, but consists largely of a series of entertaining melodramatic happenings.

Herbert Rawlinson appears as the hero and Mary MacDonald as the girl. Jack Wilson plays the brother of the girl, and others in the cast are Dana Ong, Madge Kirby, Willis Marks, Chas. West and George Brooks. The story was written by James W. Atchison and put into scenario form by Waldemar Young. Elmer Clifton had charge of the direction.

"LITTLE RED DECIDES."

Triangle Picture Made from Magazine Story Contains Excellent Characterization, but Has Slight Plot.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

OPINIONS will differ greatly over the merits of "Little Red Decides," a five-part Triangle picture, made from a magazine story by William McCoy, scenario by Jack Cunningham, directed by Jack Conway. There is no fault to be found with the way the picture is produced, and it will appeal to many as a touching little tale of an orphan child who was made the pet of every man on the ranch of Colonel Ferdinand Aliso, even the Chinese cook becoming the boy's willing slave.

The big situation occurs when the child has been seriously ill and the doctor threatens to have him sent away from the ranch unless one of the men takes unto himself a wife who will become a mother to Little Red. There are but three available candidates for the position and a the cowboys draw lots to see which one shall sacrifice himself for the good of the child. Tom Gilroy draws the jack and, much against his will, proposes to the three women and is turned down by the trio. Little Red is adopted by Colonel Aliso and decides the question for himself by remarking that he wants the Chinaman to be his mama.

The difficulty of making anything approaching drama out of so slight a plot or of sustaining the interest for five-reels will prevent the picture from being an unqualified success. It is full of "cute" incidents and its humor is of the simple and wholesome variety, but its sentiment would have proved more effective if it had not been administered with such liberality.

Barbara Connolly, a chubby little girl, is quite as adorable as any Little Red could possibly be, and Goro Kino is a Chinese actor with a real comic gift. Frederick Vroom, Jack Curtis and Walter Perry are the other important members of the capable cast. Released February 24.

"BLUE BLAZES RAWDEN."

William S. Hart in Picturesque and Human Artcraft Film Story Supervised by Thomas H. Ince.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

LAID in the Canadian Northwest, "Blue Blazes Rawden," a five-part Artcraft production written by J. G. Hawks, and featuring William S. Hart, is strong on picturesque settings, and tells a human, if not particularly dramatic, story. The picture was directed by the star, and supervised by Thomas H. Ince. It opens with the promise of a struggle between two determined men for the possession of a woman, which is terminated in the second reel, when "Blue Blazes" kills "Ladyfingers" Hilgard in a fair fight, the rest of the story being devoted to the coming of the mother of Hilgard and the remorse of Rawden when he realizes the grief he has caused the sweet-faced old lady who thinks him her boy's best friend.

There are a few moments of real excitement when Babette Du Fresne, the woman in the case, tells Hilgard's brother who it was killed him, and the young chap takes the pistol thrust into his hand and goes in search of "Blue Blazes." The lumber boss does not deny his guilt or make any effort to defend himself, as the boy raises the pistol and fires at his breast. Mortally wounded, he will not permit young Hilgard to be harmed by his companions; nor will he stay and allow Babette to care for his hurt. The mother of "Ladyfingers" goes home without knowing the truth, and "Blue Blazes" takes "the lone trail" into the wilderness to die.

There is a lively fist fight in the first half of the picture; also a gripping pistol duel. For the most part, however, "Blue Blazes" appeals more by the human side of its story than by the force of its action, and a clean drive through to the end of the motive which made Rawden, Hilgard, and Babette the central figures.

The local color is excellent, and the acting uniformly high grade. William S. Hart portrays an entirely different nature from that of his quiet and reserved badmen of the Southwest, and contrasts the open wildness of Rawden with his better feelings with much skill. Maud George is vital and unconventional as Babette. Gertrude Claire as Mrs. Hilgard, Robert McKim as "Ladyfingers," Hart Hoxie as Joe La Barge, and Robert Gordon as Eric Hilgard complete the cast.

"A CALL TO ARMS."

Third Part of Benjamin Chapin's Lincoln Pictures, "The Son of Democracy," Released by Paramount.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

IN "A Call to Arms," No. 3 of the Benjamin Chapin series of ten two-reel dramas devoted to the life of Abraham Lincoln and entitled "The Son of Democracy"; Lincoln's life in the White House at the time Fort Sumter was fired upon is shown, and the many problems he was forced to face at that momentous hour are brought out with great clearness. His calm when surrounded by hot-headed advisers, each one determined that his scheme for saving the Union must be adopted, and the depth of his feeling at thought of a divided nation are clearly indicated by the action of the story and Benjamin Chapin's acting of the President.

The human side of Lincoln is amusingly shown by the incidents of his two boys, "Tad" and Robert, when they run away from their lessons and go swimming in a nearby pond. The way their father protects them from the consequences of their prank and helps them to dry their wet clothing before the grate fire furnishes a humorous sidelight on the character of our best loved President.

Like the two preceding numbers, "A Call to Arms" has been produced with every attention to historic correctness, and Benjamin Chapin's work as Lincoln is too well known to need further comment.

"MY WIFE."

Five-Part Frohman Production on Mutual Program Features Ann Murdock and Pleases in Comedy Values.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

NELL HENDERSON has directed with considerable skill the production of one of the former Frohman stage successes, "My Wife." Ann Murdock is particularly charming and at ease as its star, and, perhaps, it might be added with more than a grain of truth that to Mr. Henderson, Miss Murdock and a competent cast, including Rex McDougal and Ferdinand Gottschalk, most of the success of the pictured version of the play is due.

The story, which is rather improbable and holds as many another has done because of the comedy, as well as the unusual quality of the situation, deals with the matrimonial interests of a young heiress. Arrangements for a fitting union for the young woman are, of course, cherished by her parents in opposition to the wishes of at least one of the contracting parties. A stipulation in the will of an aunt who has left her a million provides for her marriage by the time she has reached the age of eighteen years. In order to keep within the bounds of the requirements of the will she endeavors to bring about, with the consent of her parents, a marriage with the man she loves, and who is about to go to war. Failing to do this she persuades her guardian, a young bachelor, to marry her in name only, and with the provision that on the return of her lover a divorce be applied for. During the absence of the soldier, however, environment takes a hand, the married pair fall in love with each other, and the soldier with a Red Cross nurse.

"IT PAYS TO EXERCISE."

Paramount-Sennett Two-Reel Farce Comedy Features Chester Conklin with Satisfactory Results.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE latest Paramount-Sennett comedy relinquishes not one iota the claim to box office success, which has been heretofore accorded this brand. If you are looking for something of an unquestionably refined nature you may not be pleased with "It Pays to Exercise," but if you are willing to overlook one or two vulgarities and be entertained by a conglomeration of happenings that in spite of their rough edges are strictly funny you will like it. In fact any one who is unable to see comedy in the contortions of Conklin's double jointed legs arrayed in tights are lacking in a sense of humor. The most objectionable thing in the picture is the amusing accident which happens to the stylish attire of the leading lady, when she is unconsciously divested by a dog of the rear width of a bustle effect gown. This opens the way to a series of excruciatingly funny happenings, some of which take place at the show to which the young lady is followed and annoyed by an admirer pursuant to the dog incident. A lot of things take place in the course of the picture which are not new, but are just as comical as if they were, all traveling with terrific speed. The opening of the picture in which Conklin, as a heavy weight champion, fools the public for so much per into believing that he is actually lifting heavy weights, which are manipulated from behind the scenes by means of a crank, has an original touch.

"ONE MORE AMERICAN."

George Beban in Another of His Favorite Italian Stories Written and Produced by William C. DeMille.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

LAUGHTER and tears are skillfully blended in "One More American," a Lasky-Paramount picture written and directed by William C. DeMille, and featuring the favorite Italian character actor of the screen, George Beban. The author has taken a familiar and important phase of American political life, and evolved a simple but engrossing story that permits George Beban to fully sustain his reputation as a representative of a son of Italy. The star appears as Luigi Riccardo, the proprietor of a marionette theater on the lower east side, New York. Luigi is waiting anxiously for two events to occur: The arrival of his wife and child from Italy, and the day when he shall receive his naturalization papers.

Regan, the ward boss, is furious at Riccardo for refusing to pay graft and for influencing his countrymen in the Italian district not to vote as they are told by the leader. When Luigi's wife and child reach New York, Regan uses his pull with one of the physicians on Ellis Island, and has them detained on the strength of the doctor's testimony that the little girl is mentally deficient. Her father is there to meet his family, and is stunned when he first hears the doctor's verdict. He then becomes wild with grief and rage, and can hardly be restrained. Returning home alone and broken-hearted, Luigi finds friends in a newspaper reporter and a young prizefighter. The two help him to trap Regan and bring his wife and child into the country.

"One More American" is built up with skill. The characterization all through is convincing, and the scenes in the marionette theater are both novel and amusing. Aside from George Beban's fine work as Luigi the entire cast is exceptionally clever. Raymond Hatton as Bump Rundle, the prizefighter, gives the most able impersonation next to the star's. Helen Jerome Eddy as Lucia and Camille Ankewich as Maria stand out in the two leading female roles. Jack Holt, H. B. Carpenter, Hector Dion, May Palmer, Ernest Joy, Signor Buzzi, and May Giracci complete the cast.

The production has fine local color, and the direction by William C. DeMille never falls below the requisite mark.

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM.

An O. Henry Story, "The Moment of Victory," and a Judge Brown Offering, "The Lost Lie"—Each in Two Parts.

"The Lost Lie."

THIS subject is an interesting story of boyhood trials and tribulations; it has several interesting touches of child life and several good comedy bits interspersed through the two reels; there is, however, a lack of continuity, particularly in the earlier part. Two boys take an automobile ride without the owner's permission. They are arrested, and although both tell plausible lies their stories do not quite agree. However, the judge allows them to go free, and in the end they confess the truth. The scene where the boys ask to have the official seal of the court on receipts for part payment to damage to the machine is particularly good. The work of the boys, William Vaughan and Mike O'Rourke, is excellent, and Ruth Hampton is attractive as Mike's sister.

"The Moment of Victory."

While this two-part picture is interesting and has some good characterizations, especially that of Chet Ryan as Willie Robbins, it is hardly as satisfactory an offering as some of the earlier pictures founded on the stories by O. Henry.

Willie was a timid small-town youth who aspired to the hand of the village belle. But she laughed at him and taunted him, saying he never could be fly. Soon after the Spanish-American War started Willie volunteered and plunged madly into danger and, by capturing a Spanish general and his staff, wins a captaincy. When the war ends, he returns home, calls on the girl, reminds her that he has made good and then walks away.

General Film Company.

THE LOST LIE (Judge Brown Stories).—An interesting two-reel story with a number of good touches, although lacking in continuity in the earlier part. Two boys take a ride in an automobile without permission and the owner arrests them for theft. In court they lie about it, and although their stories do not quite agree, the judge frees them and they finally confess the truth. Reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

THE MOMENT OF VICTORY (Broadway Star Feature).—A two-reel O. Henry with Chet Ryan in the leading role. This is a story of how a timid boy made good after being taunted by a girl he loved. It is hardly up to the standard of the earlier offerings in this series. Reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

OUR LITTLE NELL (Essanay).—A one-reel comedy in the nature of a burlesque on a western melodrama, concerning the love affairs of "Little Nell," weighing nearly two hundred pounds, and involving the rivalry of the sheriff, the hero and the bandit. Of ordinary interest, with a couple of laughs and considerable horse-play.

Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

BLUE BLAZES RAWDEN (Artcraft), Feb. 18.—In this five-part picture William S. Hart acts a lumber boss in the Canadian Northwest. The story has plenty of heart interest and picturesque atmosphere. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

A CALL TO ARMS (Paramount).—The third installment of the Benjamin Chapin series of two-part pictures, "The Son of Democracy," this number shows Lincoln at the opening of the Civil War. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

THE LIGHT WITHIN (Petrova).—A seven-part feature on the "First National" program, the picture is a romance in which love and medical science play equal roles. Madame Petrova appears as a physician who must choose between the life of an unworthy husband and the man she really cares for. The climax is forceful. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Goldwyn Distributing Corp.

OUR LITTLE WIFE (Feb. 10).—A farce-comedy of young married life, with a pleasing impersonation of the irresponsible and childish wife by Madge Kennedy.

Greater Vitagraph.

THE WOOING OF PRINCESS PAT (Vitagraph), Feb. 25.—Gladys Leslie is the featured player in this five-part picture, which gives an amusing if not always truthful picture of the private affairs of royalty. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

George Kleine System.

THE UNBELIEVER (Edison Perfection Picture).—A war picture in which the United States Marine Corps participates, giving an exciting and realistic picture of battles as they are actually being fought. The military operations and patriotic sentiments are of a high order and grouped around a love story.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE JAWS OF THE TIGER (Pathe), Feb. 17.—Episode No. 13 of "The Hidden Hand." This installment opens with the rescue of Doris from the Hidden Hand by Jack. Doris once more falls into peril by receiving Yoga Rahnee, a Hindoo clairvoyant. During a seance the Hidden Hand appears and carries Doris into a room where a captive tiger is kept. As the number closes she is in immediate danger of death from the tiger.

SOLD FOR GOLD (Pathe), Feb. 17.—The fifth number of "The Price of Folly" series. In this two-reel story a wealthy widow with social aspirations induces her son to marry the daughter of the president of a mill trust. The young people, who are portrayed by Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo, are happy but a short time, when the husband returns to his former fast life, and shortfly after the wife commits suicide. The number is melodramatic and none too convincing at times, though there is a definite story interest.

ARGUS PICTORIAL No. 8. (Pathe), Feb. 24.—This number opens with views of the Peruvian sheep industry, where Merino sheep are raised and sheared for market at an altitude of 16,000 feet. The second subject is a study of the specific gravity of various fluids, including water, sulphate of zinc and mercury. Views taken at the asphalt lake at Trinidad follow and the number closes with microscopic studies of animalculae. A diversified and instructive subject.

AROUND CENTRAL AUVERNE (Pathe), Feb. 24.—A tinted scenic, picturing Vezere valley, in France, various castles, bridges, fortifications and the like. An exquisite scenic half-reel.

CLERMONT-FERRAND (Pathe), Feb. 24.—This, on same reel with above, is also in beautiful tints. It pictures a famous region noted for its mineral springs and religious associations. Numerous unique old towns have been visited and some quaint feudal architecture is also shown.

BEAT IT (Rolin-Pathe), Feb. 24.—An exceptional one-reel comic featuring Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels. The former plays the part of a flirtatious youth who becomes involved with several young women and finally has no less than fifty police after him. A new and highly laughable variation of the "police" comic. This will make its way with any audience.

A ONE NIGHT STAND (Pathe), Feb. 24.—A two-reel number featuring Toto, Bud Jamison and Clarine Seymour. Toto appears as property man at a theater and also plays one of the gallery gods. His work is very funny in this number, particularly as the property man. The last reel is given up to a number of burlesque scenes at the theater, where Toto "crabs" the work of the show girls, the hypnotist and the mind reader, Madame Zazz. A good number of the knockabout type.

Triangle Film Corp.

HIS DOUBLE LIFE (Triangle-Keystone), Feb. 17.—A comic gentleman deserts his wife and ten children, meets with an automobile accident, has an astonishing dream about wooing an heiress, going through all sorts of lively adventures, wakes up in a repentant mood and hurries back to the bosom of his family. Plenty of ginger in the two reels and a fair amount of humor.

LITTLE RED DECIDES (Triangle), Feb. 24.—Five-part picture made from magazine story. The leading characters are a little orphan and a Chinaman. Full of sentiment and "cute" scenes for the child. Well produced and good cast. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

CURRENT EVENTS, NO. 40 (Universal), Feb. 9.—A number of varied interest, which includes many scenes from the middle west, the war front in Europe and other points. This closes as usual with several reproductions of newspaper cartoons.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 11 (Universal), Feb. 13.—Survivors of England's "First Hundred Thousand" feted in London; fighting of the cotton bollworm; American army activities of various sorts and war scenes abroad are included in this number.

WATCH YOUR WATCH (Nestor), Feb. 25.—An office story, featuring Ernie Shield, Orin Jackson and others. The office men are all in love with the pretty stenographer, but the arrival of Mr. Stick-up's jealous wife changes things. There is scarcely enough plot in this to hold the interest and none of the incidents are in themselves very amusing. The number as a whole is lacking in strength.

THE MASK RIDERS (Universal Special), Feb. 25.—Episode No. 14 of "The Mystery Ship." This pictures the escape of Jack Fay from Chinatown and the pursuit of Gaston and Betty by the spies. The latter also make an attack on the headquarters of the man of mystery, who defends his fortress with a big gun. The developments of this number are full of interest and contain considerable novelty.

AMBROSE, THE LION-HEARTED (L-KO), Feb. 27.—A two-reel comic featuring Mack Swain in the name part. He plays the part of a young blacksmith in love with the daughter of a rich man. His rival is Hairoil Hal, a desperado. The burlesque characterizations and action are very funny in this and the incidents are also laughable. It is one of the best L-KO's recently shown.

STILL IN THE RING (Universal Special), March 2.—Episode No. 4 of "The Bullseye." Cody's rescue from the ruins of the demolished cabin and mine shaft makes a strong opening for this installment. Other features are North's visit to Clayton after the latter has been freed by the sheepmen. Peace is declared between the conflicting elements and then Sweeney's gang of rustlers starts fresh trouble. This continues the interest in good style.

THE FLASH OF FATE (Universal).—A five-reel feature with Herbert Rawlinson and Mary MacDonald in the leading roles. The former appears as a young man whose father was crushed by a Wall street rival. He goes out for revenge and determines to be a crook, but later has a change of heart. This contains some strong melodramatic situations and the suspense in the last reel is particularly good. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

World Pictures Corp.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS (World), Feb. 25.—Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley head the cast of this five-part romance of an American football player who marries a princess and becomes a king. The picture is a good example of its class. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

"THE BELOVED TRAITOR."

Goldwyn Presents Mae Marsh in a Strongly Dramatic Version of Frank L. Packard's Novel of the Same Title.

Cast.

Mary Garland.....Mae Marsh
Judd Minot.....E. K. Lincoln
Henry Bliss.....George Fawcett
Myrna Bliss.....Hedda Hopper
Paul Drayton.....Bradley Barker
Father Anthony.....J. A. Furey
Simeon Garland.....Louis R. Grisel
Dan.....Chester Morris

Directed by William Worthington.

The Story: Mary Garland, alone of the inhabitants of the little Maine fishing village realizes that Judd Minot's little statuettes are more than children's toys, but she realizes his genius and seeks to advance it. When city people rent her cottage, and Henry Bliss discovers Judd's talent, she stills her jealousy at Judd's infatuation for Bliss' daughter and urges him to go. Some years later Judd is still climbing. Myrna Bliss still infatuates him, and a rather gay life prevents the full development of his talent. Some hint of this Mary gets in the little fishing port, and she comes to New York to save her beloved traitor from himself.

For the Program: A play in which Mae Marsh's emotional skill will surprise you.
A charming story of a beautiful country.

Advertising Phrases: New York's Bohemia and the rock-bound coast of Maine.
Innocence bests vampire in battle for man's success.

Feature These Players: Miss Marsh in a more strongly dramatic role than usual.
E. K. Lincoln as Judd.

Stunt Suggestions: Displays of fishing tackle can be hooked up with the stills of the sea scenes, and a slicker as the centerpiece for a display of raincoat will form the foundation for another display. If the book stores carry Packard's novel get them to make a special display. For the lobby decorate with fishing nets and lobster pots. Tennis nets can be made to serve at a pinch.

Advertising Aids: One rotograveur and one lithograph one-sheet. One style each three, six and 24-sheets. Lobby displays 8x10 and 11x14. Al o 22x28 enlargements of the star. Five scene cuts, two cuts of star, four ad-cuts. Two slides. Press book.

Released February 24.

"THE CAST-OFF."

Foursquare Pictures Presents Bessie Barriscale in a Story by C. Gardener, Produced Under the Personal Supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

Cast.

Pansy May.....Bessie Barriscale
Guy Henley.....Jack Livingston
Dr. Thorpe.....Howard Hickman
Hazel Wilson.....Dorcas Matthews
Sam Mason.....Thomas H. Guise
Mme. James Hendon-Ware.Aggie Herring
Grace Lytton.....Margaret Thompson

Directed by Raymond B. West.

The Story: Coming as a "bound girl" from the orphan asylum to Mme. Hendon-Ware's exclusive boarding house, Pansy May cheerfully drudges the whole day long. It is a drab life, but there is one ray of light; the attentions of Guy Henley. Pansy May cannot realize that he is only making sport of her, but the knowledge comes when he promises to take her to a matinee, and arrives at the theater with another of the boarders. But the manager finds in Pansy May a type he has been seeking, and she finds the way to the stage made easy. Some years after she is a star, and Henley, now tired of his married life, turns to her again. She encourages him to gain revenge, but there is another man, and the battle proves of vivid interest to the very moment of the unexpected climax.

For the Program: Barriscale—Ince—Sullivan; surely that means something to you.
Boarding house cast-off wins glittering stage triumph.

Advertising Phrases: Cruel joke proves the making of a slavey.
From back stairs to down stage.

Feature These Players: Bessie Barriscale as Pansy.
Jack Livingston as Henley.
Howard Hickman as Dr. Thorpe.

Stunt Suggestions: For window work take cards about the size of half sheets. Letter these near the top with "Pansy" May, leaving the rest blank. Two days later cross off the name on each card with a smear of transparent red, and add "now Pancrimee Nethaway." Two days later add, "She was the cast off, but she became a great stage star, and the man who had flouted her came crawling back. What did she do? The answer at (house and date)." Preserve the two-day intervals to rouse the interest. For a lobby display get a bunch of junk, old clothes, cooking utensils, etc., and pile in a corner with a sign, "These are cast-offs, as was Bessie Barriscale in 'The Cast Off,' but the cast-off became a famous star. She didn't stay a cast off. See this Ince production (date)."

Advertising Aids: One, three, six and 24-sheets. Lobby displays. Newspaper cuts. Press sheets.
State rights.

"CAVANAUGH, OF THE FOREST RANGERS."

Vitagraph Presents Nell Shipman and Alfred Whitman in a Five-Part Blue Ribbon Feature Based Upon the Novel by Hamlin Garland.

Cast.

Ross Cavanaugh.....Alfred Whitman
Virginia Wetherford.....Nell Shipman
Ed. Wetherford.....Otto Lederer
Eliza Wetherford.....Laura Winston
Sam Gregg.....R. Bradbury
Joe Gregg.....Rex Downs
Neil Ballard.....Joe Rickson
Mr. Redfield.....Hal Wilson
Mrs. Redfield.....Mrs. Hattie Buskirk

Directed by William Wolbert.

The Story: Ed. Wetherford gets in bad with the cattle rustlers in the territory patrolled by Ross Cavanaugh, of the Forest Rangers. He disappears, leaving his wife to care for their young daughter and herself. Virginia, the girl, is sent East to relatives, and in six years returns beautiful and talented. Finding her mother running a cheap boarding house, she aids her in the work; Cavanaugh helping to protect her from the too strenuous attentions of the rough boarders. Virginia hears the wife of Cavanaugh's superior warning him against a marriage beneath him, and without waiting to hear Cavanaugh's reply flees, heartbroken. But in the end all comes out well, though not until many strenuous days have passed.

For the Program: A realistic romance of the rugged West of rustler days.
A listener who might have heard good of herself, but she didn't.

Advertising Phrases: Heroes of the timbered heights.
A drama of deeds and daring.

Feature These Players: Nell Shipman as Virginia.
Alfred Whitman in the title role.

Stunt Suggestions: Get some pictures of the California redwoods from railroad folders, geographies, or other sources. Display these with a card reading, "Don't think the only big trees in California are the redwoods. See the giant pines around Mt. Wilson in 'Cavanaugh of the Forest Rangers' at (house and date). They will interest you almost as much as the fascinating screening of Hamlin Garland's novel with Nell Shipman and Alfred Whitman." The pictures need not be removed from the books. Use the same style of announcement for the lobby, with stills from the play showing the pines.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Window cards. Lobby displays 11x14 and 22x28. Slide. Herald. Press book.

Released February 25.

"CLEOPATRA."

The Helen Gardner Film Co. Presents Helen Gardner in a New and Vastly More Spectacular Version of a Play in Which She Has Already Won Renown.

Cast.

Cleopatra.....Miss Gardner
Charmion.....Miss Winter
Iras.....Miss Sindelar
Pharon.....Mr. Howard
Marc Antony.....Mr. Sindelar
Ventidius.....Mr. Waite
Kephren.....Mr. Knowles
Diomedes.....Mr. Osborne

The Story: This story deals with the later portion of the life of the Egyptian Queen, commencing with the receipt of the summons from Marc Antony to come to him at Tarsus to answer a charge of treason. She goes, but she returns with Antony a captive to her charms. There follow his return to Rome and his second mission to Egypt, when she again captivates him, and for a second time turns him from his duty; then, for a whim, draws him back to Alexandria as he is about to conquer her foes. The story is told with unusual splendor.

For the Program: The story of the world's first vampire.

Glittering scenes of gorgeous splendor.

Advertising Phrases: A wonderful pageant of the Nile.

A feast for the vision and the mind.

Feature These Players: Miss Gardner as Cleopatra.

Mr. Sindelar as Antony.

Stunt Suggestions: The best suggestion of this lavish production is given through the lobby displays. Order extra sets and use them for window work well ahead of the showing. In a small town get them out at least ten days ahead. If you have a rural list specially circularize it for this attraction, with a card showing a scene cut. For the lobby try for an Egyptian effect with obelisks, draperies, etc. If you can find a copy of Lane's Manners and Customs of the Modern Egyptians in the library you can get many hints from the illustrations. Almost any other book on Egypt or Arabia will serve. Get the store handling cosmetics to hook up with you in window displays, and loan them photographs.

Advertising Aids: Three styles of one-sheets, two three-sheets, one six and one 24-sheet. Half sheet window card. Photos 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. One, two and three-column cuts. Slides. Press book.

State rights.

"THE CROSS BEARER."

World Pictures Presents Montagu Love in a Stirring Story of Love Against the Gruesome Background of the Rape of Belgium.

Cast.

The Cardinal.....Montagu Love
Laine De Merode.....Jeanne Eagels
Lieut. Maurice Lambeaux..Anthony Merlo
Gaston Van Leys.....George Morgan
Banker Van Leys.....Edward Elkas
Baron Spiegelman.....Charles Brandt
Jeanne Perrier.....Eloise Clement
Col. Krause.....Albert Hart
Brother Joseph.....Alex. Francis
The Cardinal's Housekeeper..Kate Lester
Madame Lambeaux.....Fanny Cogan
Madame Van Leys.....Henrietta Simpson

Directed by George Archainbaud.

The Story: Belgium is invaded, and Liane, the Cardinal's ward, makes her way to his palace from the convent, already raided by the Germans. She unfortunately attracts the attention of Baron Spiegelman, fit successor to the unspeakable Kraus, and to guard the girl the Cardinal assents to a wedding with Gaston Van Leys, and seeks to send them to the Belgian lines, but the baron is warned, and it is only after a succession of the most nerve racking situations that the young couple are at last enabled to perfect their flight, while the cross bearer remains to comfort his afflicted people.

For the Program: A vital romance with a wonderful background.

A story of the Belgium that is.

Advertising Phrases: Louvain is no more, but it lives again in "The Cross Bearer."

Not a mere war story. It is something greater than that.

Feature These Players: Montagu Love in a vivid impersonation of the Cardinal.

Jeanne Eagels as his ward.

George Morgan as Gaston.

Charles Brandt as Baron Spiegelman.

Stunt Suggestions: Work the booster suggestions in the press book. Use extra posters well in advance. Make a drive on the Knights of Columbus and other Catholic societies. Dress the lobby with flags and military trappings, and play up the lobby displays.

Advertising Aids: Free advance three-sheet. Two one-sheets, two three-sheets, one six-sheet. Photographs. Slides. Press books. Heralds.

Released as a special.

"THE FLASH OF FATE."

Universal Presents Herbert Rawlinson and Mary MacDonald in a Unique Story of Love and Telegraphy by James T. Atchison.

Cast.

Henry Shorb.....Dama Ong
Randolph Shorb.....Herbert Rawlinson
Laura Shorb.....Madge Kirby
Abner Hinman.....William Marks
Dora Dean.....Mary MacDonald
Joe Dean.....Jack Nelson
Philadelphia Johnson..Frank MacQuarrie

Directed by Elmer Clifton.

The Story: An unusual story in which an entire city receives the message destined to keep one man from suicide. Randolph Shorb, left almost penniless by the failure of his father's firm, turns to robbery to rehabilitate his fallen fortunes. He loves Dora Dean, who, with her brother, has served as telegrapher at a country station. The brother comes to the city, and falls under the influence of the man who taught Randolph to rob. He is forced to rob the bank by which he is employed, and Dora mortgages the home and comes to the city with the money that is to save him. She is too late. Joe has gone away to kill himself, but Randolph manipulates the master-switch that controls the city's light current, and through every light there comes the flash of hope that brings the brother back.

For the Program: The story the wires told.

The Morse code saved a brother's life.

Advertising Phrases: Used city's lighting system to prevent a suicide.

Stockbroker turns robber to recoup his losses.

Feature These Players: Herbert Rawlinson as Randolph.

Mary MacDonald as Dora Dean.

Stunt Suggestions: For window work use a flasher in conjunction with an incandescent lamp inside a black box with, "Can you read this message? If you can, come down to the (house) and get a pair of tickets. If you cannot, see 'The Flash of Fate' (date), and you will see what the message was." As there is no message flashed there will be no tickets to be given out. For the lobby arrange a dummy switch connected by a rod with a switch in an insulated box below that works an incandescent lamp. On a card letter. "'The Flash of Fate' (seen here today): the message was 'Joe, Call up Rector 3372 at once. See if you can send it.'" Below letter the dots and dashes of the message. Any operator will give you the proper dots and dashes, but avoid the humorist, or check him up. Turn the current on during showing hours, and let the curious be your ballyhoo.

Advertising Aids: One style each one, three and six-sheets. One-sheet of players. Black and white lobby displays. Slide. Player and scene cuts. Heralds. Press book.

Released February 18.

"HEADIN' SOUTH."

Artcraft Presents Douglas Fairbanks in Another Chapter from the Strenuous Life in Which a Diplomatic Bad Man Wins a Wife.

Cast.

"Headin' South".....Douglas Fairbanks
Spanish Joe.....Frank Campeau
His Aide.....James Mason
The Girl.....Catherine MacDonald

The Story: There is so much of novelty in "Headin' South" that it has been decided that it would be a shame to spoil the surprises by revealing them in advance, but Doug never had more adventurous experiences than when he hooked up with the gang of Spanish Joe, a border bandit, and a thorn in the flesh of all good citizens on both sides of the Rio Grande. "Headin' South" puts brains into Joe's badness, but Joe was too attentive to the girl "Headin'" was interested in, and the partnership was violently disrupted—violently and with emphasis.

For the Program: Fairbanks as a "good" bad man.

A dizzy debauch of daring deeds and startling stunts.

Advertising Phrases: The Fairbanks of the Rio Grande.

As a bandit, "Doug" is a perfect gentleman—but active.

Feature this Player: It will be best to concentrate upon Fairbanks.

Stunt Suggestions: Borrow or fake a large compass, and send a man through the streets with it. He should hold the box so that the card will show, and should never divert his attention from it. From the box hang a sign reading, "I'm headin' south to see Douglas Fairbanks in 'Headin' South' at the (house and date). And, man, believe me it's a scream—some scream." It will help if you can rig an auto steering gear to the box by which the man may "steer" his course. With a litle trouble a light framework boat can be built to suspend from his shoulders. For the lobby use the cut-outs you probably already have, draping the face in a black mask. For the street wagon use the posters.

Advertising Aids: Two styles each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Rotogravure. Lobby displays 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts and mats for star and production one to three columns wide. Advertising layout mats. Slides. Press book.

Released February 25.

"HER BODY IN BOND."

Bluebird Presents Mae Murray in a Charmingly Real Story of the True Life Behind the Scenes by H. Sheridan Bickers.

Cast.

In the Prologue.

Pierrot.....Kenneth Harlan
Pierrette.....Mae Murray
Harlequin.....Al. Roscoe

In the Play.

Polly Blondin.....Mae Murray
Joe Blondin.....Kenneth Harlan
Harlin E. Quinn.....Al. Roscoe
Matthew Moore.....Paul Weigel
Betty Coates.....Mabelle Harvey
Champagne Sleeth.....Joseph Girard

Directed by H. Sheridan Bickers.

The Story: Polly and Joe are vaudeville performers, and they at last fix up the act that is to get them the "big time." They win their goal, but Joe is injured at the first performance, and has to be sent West. Quinn, a rich profligate, seeks to win Polly, and, with the connivance of her drug-crazed father, obtains possession of Joe's cheery letters and forges instead demands for money in increasingly large sums. Moved to haste by Joe's rapid recovery, Quinn makes a last demand, and Polly, to gain the huge sum she thinks is needed to save her husband's life, promises to come to Quinn after the performance, but in her nervousness she falls and is injured, and it is Joe, himself, who comes at last to save her from her fate.

For the Program: A stage story that is true to the life.

A brave little woman who put duty before honor.

Advertising Phrases: An allegory and an actuality.

A story that might have been taken from life.

Feature These Players: Mae Murray in an unusually sympathetic role.

Kenneth Harlan as the husband.

Al. Roscoe as Quinn.

Stunt Suggestions: Take dolls (preferably dressed as Pierrettes) and bind them to cards with cords of suitable size. Letter the card, "Her body was in bond, but Death cancelled the contract in the absorbing story of the stage, which shows Mae Murray at her best. 'Her Body in Bond' at (house and date). P. S. It's a Bluebird, need we say more?" For the lobby work up the columbine idea in decorating the frames. The art stores will give you pictures of ballet dancers. Buy a few, cut them out and place among the stills.

Advertising Aids: One style each one, three and six-sheets. One-sheet of the star. Colored and black and white lobby displays. Slides. Heralds. Player and scene cuts. Press sheet.

Released February 18.

"HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS."

World Pictures Presents Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in a Rousing Story of a Blue-Blooded Prince and a Red-Blooded American.

Cast.

Jack Christie.....Carlyle Blackwell
Princess Diana of Terresta,
Evelyn Greeley
Her Aunt.....Kate Lester
Victor Borden.....Bert Honey
Gen. Malcoff.....Lionel Belmore
Lisette.....Kitty Johnson
Capalette.....A. Black
Ferdinand.....Herbert Barrington

Directed by Carlyle Blackwell.

The Story: Jack Christie, a college football hero, becomes the chum of Victor, heir to the throne of Wallarya, a petty European kingdom, also a student at the college. When Victor receives an urgent summons to return, he persuades Jack to accompany him. On the voyage they again meet the Princess Diana, of Terresta, but she does not know which is the prince. Jack becomes enamored of her. A stop in Paris is almost fatal to the plans of the Wallaryans. Victor falls in love with the daughter of the king of the Apaches, and Jack rescues him from the Apache hordes, but Victor is wounded, and it is Jack who takes his place and appears in Wallarya as its king, confounding the Terrestians, who thought he had been killed by anarchists. Jack marries Diana, and as Victor elopes with his Apache charmer he keeps the throne and lives happily ever after.

For the Program: College hero becomes H. R. H.

From gridiron to a royal throne.

Advertising Phrases: Took a throne to oblige a king.

Red-blooded American rules the Balkans.

Feature These Players: Carlyle Blackwell as Jack.

Evelyn Greeley as the Princess.

Stunt Suggestions: For the lobby make a bomb about eighteen inches in diameter with a large fuse. Have the fuse fireproofed, and letter a card, "Fac-simile of the bomb by which the Terrestian plotters sought to blow up 'His Royal Highness' in Carlyle Blackwell's new success here (date). Please do not light the fuse." Play the last line up, and the practical jokers will supply you with a ballyhoo free of charge. For window work use football helmets and gold-paper crowns with, "Jack Christie exchanged the football helmet for a royal crown, and kept it because the royal owner refused to come back for it. See 'His Royal Highness,' with Carlyle Blackwell (house and date)."

Advertising Aids: Two styles each one, three and six-sheets. Free advance poster. Lobby displays 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Two-color heralds. One and two-column cuts. Slides Press sheet.

Released February 25.

"SIX-SHOOTER ANDY."

William Fox Presents Tom Mix in the Story of How Andy Crawford Cleaned Up the Wickedest Mining Camp in All the West and Won the Sheriff's Badge.

Cast.

Andy Crawford.....Tom Mix
William Crawford.....Bert Woodruff
Tom Slade.....Sam Degrass
Mexican John.....Charles Stevens
Ned Skinner.....Pat Crysman
Whiskey Bill.....Bert Fleming
Susan Allenby.....Enid Markey

Directed by S. A. Franklin.

The Story: Bannack was the wickedest mining camp in all the West, and the marshal, instead of preventing crime, was at the head of the outlaws himself. Andy Crawford expected a few killings, but when his father was murdered he "got" the man who did it, even if he was a sheriff's deputy, and then he went after the man higher up and added him to the little list, to say nothing of winning the girl and cleaning up the camp.

For the Program: Tom Mix in a story of strenuous action.

He "got" his man and he got his girl.

Advertising Phrases: Shoots crooked sheriff to save the town.

The shield of the law was a shield for the lawless.

Feature These Players: Tom Mix as Andy.

Enid Markey as the girl.

Stunt Suggestions: For street work send out a sweeper with the usual push broom. On his back letter the sign, "There are other ways of cleaning up a town. Tom Mix did it with a six-gun in Six-Shooter Andy (house and date)." Get after the hardware and sporting goods stores for displays of six-shooters with signs. For the lobby make a cut-out of one of the posters with a real instead of a painted gun.

Advertising Aids: Two styles each one, three and six-sheets. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Slide. Mats. Press sheet.

Released Feb. 24.

"A SOUL IN TRUST."

Triangle Presents Belle Bennett, Supported by J. Barney Sherry and Darrell Foss, in a Characteristic Play of Politics by Catherine Carr.

Cast.

Dabney Carter.....Darrell Foss
Courtney Maitland.....Belle Bennett
Nan Barker.....Lillian West
Dabney Carter, Jr.....Grover Franke
Senator Franklin.....J. Barney Sherry
Jason Meredith.....Lee Hill
Mammy Judy.....Lizzie Davis
George Barker.....William Dyer

Directed by G. P. Hamilton.

The Story: Anxious to know where Senator Franklin stands on matters vitally affecting their business interests, a group of Wall Street men send to Washington Nan Barker, who works upon the sympathies of Franklin's secretary, Dabney Carter. Carter permits her access to the safe, supposing she is looking for papers that will enable her to reclaim her child, kept from her by Franklin. He also demands that his mother, who is engaged to the Senator, break the engagement. Mrs. Carter knows more of Washington politics than does her young son, and with the hint he gives she reclaims the papers and straightens out an even greater tangle.

For the Program: A story of Wall Street in politics.

Woman lobbyist finds son is intended victim.

Advertising Phrases: Robs safe of senatorial secrets, but is forced to give booty back.

Mother winds son in vampire net.

Feature These Players: Belle Bennett as Carter's supposed mother.

J. Barney Sherry as Senator Franklin.

Darrell Foss as Carter.

Stunt Suggestions: Pick up the superstition paragraph from the press book and use it as the basis for a collection of superstitions. After the play has shown you can get out a booklet on "The pet superstitions of our leading citizens," and have a permanent advertisement. Offer prizes of seats for the five that are best expressed, either in prose or verse. Or you can start a couple of weeks ahead, without reference to the play, and hook up the play to the running contest when you are ready. For window work fasten a number eleven envelope, tied with red tape and sealed to a card reading, "What do you suppose it was that made Nan Barker give up these valuable political secrets after she had stolen them from Senator Franklin's safe? A hundred guesses would not help you any, so see A Soul in Trust at (house and date) and learn the answer."

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Special process art heralds. Slides. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Electros and mats. Photos. Triangle magazine. Press sheet.

Released Feb. 24.

"WILD WOMEN."

Universal Presents Harry Carey in a Dazzling Dream of Dancers and Disorderly Conduct That Followed the Rodeo.

Cast.

Cheyenne Harry.....Harry Carey
Pelon.....Ed Jones
Pegg.....Vesta Pegg
The Queen.....Martha Mattox
The Princess.....Molly Malone
The Boss.....E. Van Beaver
Slugger Joe.....W. Taylor

Directed by Jack Ford.

The Story: No rarebit dream was ever half so vivid as the visions that follow the imbibing of too many Honolulu cocktails. Cheyenne Harry and his ranchmates go to the rodeo, where Harry cleans up the prizes. Then they see the Hawaiian dancers, and the cocktails follow. Then comes a dream of shanghaiing a wonderful voyage and experience on the South Sea Island that send the boys on the water wagon for a time at least.

For the Program: It isn't a play. It isn't a comedy. It's an inspiration.

Vivid Western scenes and humorous Hawaiian happen'ngs.

Advertising Phrases: The women were wild, but the boys were wilder.

There isn't room for an inch of stupid film. It's all laughs or thrills.

Feature These Players: Harry Carey as Cheyenne.

Vesta Pegg as his opposite.

Molly Malone as the Princess Wykickie.

Stunt Suggestions: Get the drug stores and confectioners to feature a Honolulu cocktail, which can merely be a fixed-up pineapple soda. Use a card, "Try the new drink, the Honolulu cocktail. Then see the after effects in Wild Women at the (house and date). It's great—they're both great." If your state has not gone prohibition yet get the saloons to also feature the cocktail. Make a dry martini, fill the glasses not quite full and drop in carefully about half a pony of grenadine. Squeeze half a lime into the glass. It is to be drunk at a gulp, without stirring. Above the bar use a card, "Don't drink more than two Honolulu cocktails. If you want to know why, see Wild Women at (house and date)." For a lobby display offer matinee or evening admissions to all ladies who come in "Hawaiian evening dress."

Advertising Aids: One style each one, three and six-sheets. One sheet of star. Black and white lobby displays. Slide. Heralds. Player and scene cuts. Press book.

Released Feb. 25,

"THE INNER VOICE."

Pathe Presents Ivan Mozukin in One of the Famous Productions by the Russian Art Films Corporation.

Cast Not Given.

The Story: The criminal may seemingly escape the consequences of his crime, but inevitably the Inner Voice will bring home to him the burden of his deeds. Ivan Ermoloff, promising, popular with his student companions, and treasurer of their club, becomes enamored with gambling. He loses not alone his own funds, but the money of his companions entrusted to his care. In later life the taint still hangs over him, and he lets a little child die that the fortune may come to him, but the time arrives when the payment must be made. The Inner Voice speaks.

For the Program: Another of those wonderful examples of Russian art.

Don't say there is nothing new until you have seen Mozukin.

Advertising Phrases: The Inner Voice speaks in clarion tones.

Enjoy no false security. Your sins will find you out.

Feature This Player: Ivan Mozukin as the wrongdoer.

Stunt Suggestions: For window work get ideal child pictures, photographs or really good color prints, and use with a card, "In 'The Inner Voice' the hardened criminal condemns a little child to death that he may inherit his fortune, but the Inner Voice avenges the innocent. Don't miss this unique Russian Art Film at (house and date)." You can work up considerable interest among the literary societies for these Russian productions and make them a fad. For the lobby work with cards along the lines of, "You've seen and read a lot about the Russian Ballet, but what do you know about the Russian drama? It is more characteristic and interesting."

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet. Two three-sheets. One six and one 24-sheet. Lobby displays 11x14, both in sepia and colors. Also 22x28. Slide. Two one-column cuts. Campaign book.

Released February 17.

"LITTLE RED DECIDES."

Triangle Presents a Different Sort of Cowboy Story in the Five-Part Visualization of William McCoy's Clever Conceit.

Cast.

Little Red.....Barbara Connolly
Duck Sing.....Goro Kino
Col. Ferdinand Aliso.....Frederick Vroom
Tom Gilroy.....Jack Curtis
Two Pair Smith.....Walter Perry
Sour Milk.....Jean Hersholt
Parson Jones.....Frank MacQuarrie
Mrs. Jones.....Nellie Anderson
Miss Hanly.....Margaret Cullington
Widow Bolton.....Alice Davenport
Eliza Squires.....Maude Handforth
Little Doc.....Percy Challenger
Dr. Kirk.....George Pearce
Foreman.....Curley Baldwin
Miss Wattles.....Betty Pearce

Directed by Jack Conway.

The Story: The physician wrote a prescription that read, "One Mamma for Little Red, to be obtained at once," and there was not a wide choice of possible mammas near the Aliso ranch, but the boys cut cards, and each in turn did his best, but Red would still be motherless had he not made his own choice, and he did not get a mamma at that. A story that has all the breeziness of the West without depending upon shooting or riding for its charm.

For the Program: The story of a little boy with many foster fathers and no mamma.

The doctor ordered a mother, but Little Red knew better than that.

Advertising Phrases: Cut cards to decide matrimonial victim.

The cowmen were willing, but the old maids were shy.

Feature These Players: Barbara Connolly as Red.

Goro Kino as Duck Sing.

Frederick Vroom as the ranch owner.

Stunt Suggestions: Get out a throwaway headed, "Wanted a Mother. We want a mother for Little Red, for the Doc. says he must get one, pronto. No objection to old maid or widow, and she can take her pick of the boys, though there ain't much choice. Apply Aliso Ranch. Tom Gilroy, Two Pair Smith, Sour Milk, Committee." Do not add the house name or other details, and get out early enough to make talk before you begin your regular advertising for the attraction. Repeat on a lobby card a day or two before the showing, with the addition of " 'Little Red Decides.' (Date.)" If you can get a red headed child about five years old have a cowboy wheel him through the streets in a barrow with a banner, "I'm looking for a mother for Little Red. I'll marry the willing woman. For details see 'Little Red Decides' (house and date)."

Advertising Aids: One each one, three and six-sheets. Heralds in rotogravure. Lobby displays 11x14 and 22x28. Slides. Electros and mats. Press sheet.

Released February 24.

"MY WIFE."

The Empire All-Star Corporation Presents Ann Murdock in "My Wife," Another of the Famous Charles Frohman Stage Successes.

Cast.

Beatrice Hammond.....Ann Murdock
John Hammond.....Hubert Druce
Gerald Eversleigh.....Rex McDougall
Mrs. Hammond.....Amy Veness
Biggy Gore.....Ferdinand Gottschalk
Miriam Hawthorne.....Grace Carlyle
Ronald Farwell.....Jules Raucourt
Davies.....James Kearney

Directed by Dell Henderson.

The Story: Determined that her niece shall not die an old maid, Beatrice Hammond's aunt requires that Beatrice shall be married by the time she is eighteen if she is to receive the inheritance. She wants to marry Ronald Farwell, but Farwell is ordered to service in France. To save the fortune he coolly arranges that Beatrice shall marry her guardian, Gerald Eversleigh. When he comes back, Gerald will divorce her, and she will be left free to marry Ronald. But when Ronald does come home it is with a pretty French nurse, and he is not at all anxious to marry Beatrice—no more anxious than she is to marry him, so they let things stay as they are.

For the Program: A marriage of convenience that was too binding to be broken.

A Frohman star in a famous Frohman play.

Advertising Phrases: A zero wedding that got started for the tropics.

She said she loved another, but a woman never knows.

Feature These Players: Miss Murdock in the leading role.

Rex McDougall as her guardian-husband.

Jules Raucourt as the man who changed his mind.

Stunt Suggestions: If you think your clientele will stand for the rather broad suggestion, use the twin-bed four-poster suggestion of the press sheet, working with the furniture stores, but be careful in handling this. It is apt to be loaded. It would be better to use the stills for window work with some of the catch-lines supplied by the press sheet, or concentrating on the "When a Man's Married He Wants a Wife." For the lobby work up with orange blossoms and wedding bells.

Advertising Aids: One style each one, three and six-sheets. Unmounted banner. One, two and three-column cuts and mats. Half column and 4x4 cuts. Lobby displays 11x14 and 22x28. Slides. Press sheet.

Released Feb. 18.

"THE ROUGH LOVER."

Bluebird Presents Franklyn Farnum in An Amazing Melange of Mistaken Identities and Cross Purposes by C. A. Kenyon.

Cast.

Richard Bolton } "Breeze" Bolton } .....Franklyn Farnum
Helen .....Juanita Hansen
The Countess.....Catherine Henry
The Count.....Fred Montague
Richard's Aunt.....Martha Mattox

Directed by Joseph de Grasse.

The Story: Richard Bolton is a studious youth who is too timid to tell his love to Helen and who is terribly embarrassed at the fervid love-making of the Countess. In the first place, he doesn't love the Countess, and in the second her jealous and excitable husband has the bad taste to cut up rough. Helen rather despises him for his timidity and detests him for his inability to dispose of the Countess. Into this tangled tale comes "Breeze" Bolton, pugilistic white hope, and half-brother and double to Richard. He rather likes the Countess and is not in the least afraid of her husband, but his rough love-making is too much even for the Countess and he turns to Helen. That is when Richard finds his manhood and knocks her tormentor off a cliff as she sinks into his arms, and at last the puzzled company begins to understand what has seemed so inexplicable.

For the Program: A laggard in love, but a fiend at figures.

They were half-brothers, but wholly different.

Advertising Phrases: The cave-man stuff didn't make a hit for keeps.

One lover was too meek and the other too wild, but the meek one improved and knocked out the white hope.

Feature These Players: Franklyn Farnum in a dual role.

Juanita Hansen as Helen.

Catherine Henry as the Countess.

Stunt Suggestions: For a window display show text books with a set of used boxing gloves and the sign, "Which would you prefer for a lover, the man with the books or the man with the punch? You can judge better after you have seen The Rough Lover at (house and date). It's a Bluebird, with Franklyn Farnum)." For street work dress a man in rough trousers and shoes, but a frock coat and white shirt and tie, rimmed eyeglasses and a sporty cap. Put a boxing glove on one hand and a text book in the other. For a sign letter, "I'm what Helen and the Countess thought I must be, but really I'm two men, as you'll find when you see Franklyn Farnum in The Rough Lover at (house and date)." For the lobby get some of the ten-cent books on how to make love and how to write love letters. Show with some Greek and mathematical books and a card, "Richard Bolton knew all about Greek and higher mathematics, but he never had read the small books. He could have saved himself a lot of trouble if he had. Complete your own education in love-making by seeing The Rough Lover."

Advertising Aids: One style each one, three and six-sheets. Stock one sheet of star. Colored and black and white lobby displays. Heralds. Slides. Player and scene cuts. Press sheets.

Released Feb. 25.

"ONE MORE AMERICAN."

Jesse L. Lasky Presents the Distinguished Character Actor, George Beban, in Another Convincing Story of Italo-American Life "In the Bend."

Cast.

Lugi Riccardo.....George Beban
Maria, his wife.....Camille Ankewitch
Their daughter.....May Giracci
Lucia.....Helen Jerome Eddy
Bump Rundle.....Raymond Hatton
Sam Potts.....Jack Holt
Boss Regan.....H. B. Carpenter
Dr. Ross.....Hector Dion

Directed by William C. De Mille.

The Story: Lugi has come to America to make a home for his wife and little daughter. The marionette theater down in the populous Mulberry Bend district has made good and he sends for them to join him. Meantime he has opposed Regan, the ward boss, refusing to pay tribute and injuring his political strength, and Regan prevents him from getting his final citizenship papers. Regan also works through a party man, physician at Ellis Island, to have the wife and daughter turned back. Crazed, Lugi seeks to kill Regan, but Sam Potts, who has been gunning for the boss, gets the goods on him through Lugi, and one more American is added to the census.

For the Program: As faithful to life as a tour through Little Italy.

Home is where the heart is, and Lugi's heart was all American.

Advertising Phrases: Marionette showman defeats powerful political boss.

George Beban once more plays an Italian.

Feature These Players: Play up Beban in leading role.

Jack Holt, as the reporter.

H. B. Carpenter, as Boss Regan.

Stunt Suggestions: If you used the last stunt suggestion for Jules of the Strong Heart, in the issue for Jan. 26, repeat with the new title. With draperies you can improvise a marionette theater in a show window, using ordinary dolls with fine strings on their heads and limbs. Set a scene, and before the curtain use a card, "See Beban as the proprietor of the Marionette Theater in One More American, at (house and date). A novel glimpse behind the scenes of play and politics." For the lobby suspend a couple of dolls similiarly strung from the lobby dome and let the cashier or doorman give the strings a tug now and then to give motion to the manikins. Above or below use a card, "See Ricardo's wonderful marionettes in One More American. Now showing."

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one, three and six-sheets. Rotogravure. Photos, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Ten cuts each on star and production, one to three columns wide. Advertising layout mats. Slides. Press book.

Released Feb. 25.

"REVENGE."

B. A. Rolfe Presents Edith Story in a Five-Part Arrangement of Edward Moffat's Novel, "Hearts Steadfast."

Cast.

Alva Leigh.....Edith Storey
Dick Randall.....Wheeler Oakman
"Tiger Lil".....Alberta Ballard
"Sudden" Duncan.....Ralph Lewis

Directed by Tod Browning.

The Story: Alva, coming to a mining camp to marry, finds her fiance murdered, and swears to be avenged. She stays on at the camp in the hope of finding some clue, and Dick Randall and Duncan, the proprietor of the dance hall, give her aid in her search. Both men love her, and Alva comes to care for Dick, but Duncan permits her to overhear a conversation that persuades her that Dick killed her fiance to gain full possession of their joint mining claim, and she punctures his canteens as Dick sets forth across Death Valley desert to record the claims. But Tiger Lil overhears Duncan propose marriage to Alva, and in a fit of jealousy she makes revelations that set all things clear. and Alva is just in time to save Dick from death.

For the Program: The story of one woman's love and another's jealousy.

The cultured girl of the east and the dance hall girl of the west were alike in their jealousy.

Advertising Phrases: Murderer pretends to hunt for self to gain woman's favor.

The girl of society and the girl of the slums are alike in their loves and hatreds.

Feature These Players: Edith Storey as Alva.

Wheeler Oakman as Dick.

Stunt Suggestions: For the lobby hang two canteens from a tripod with a drip pan beneath. Punch very small holes in each so that the water merely seeps through. See that they are properly replenished from time to time. For the card use: "Alva sent the man she loved into the desert with leaky canteens because she thought he had lied to her, but she learned her error in time to save him from the poisoned water the canteens contained. Just one of the many thrills in Revenge, Edith Storey's latest play (date)." For window work make the stills of the desert scenes the centres of cards reading, "Death Valley is the favorite location for western stories, but no production offers more thrills than are to be found in Revenge, the newest Edith Storey play at (house and date)." For street work use a roughly dressed man with two leaky canteens. On his back put a sign, "I know these canteens leak because I've seen Revenge. You see it at (house and date). Then you'll know why, too."

Advertising Aids: Two styles each one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel for newspaper use. Slide. Heralds. Lobby sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts.

Released Feb. 25.

"RUGGLES OF RED GAP."

Essanay Presents Taylor Homes in the Delightful Comedy by Harry Leon Wilson Originally Appearing in the Saturday Evening Post.

Cast.

Ruggles .....Taylor Holmes
Cousin Egbert.....Frederick Burton
Hon. George.....Lawrence D'Orsay
The Widow Judson.....Virginia Valli
Kate Kenner.....Edna Phillips
Mrs. Effie.....Lillian Drew
Maw Pettingill.....Rose Mayo
Earl of Brinstead.....Charles Lane
Belknap Jackson.....Rod LaRocque
Mrs. Belknap Jackson.....Frances Conrad
Jeff Tuttle.....James F. Fulton

The Story: Harry Leon Wilson has written nothing more diverting than this story of the irreproachable English valet who is lost in a poker game to a rough-and-ready Westerner and taken to Red Gap ultimately to become its social mentor and chief caterer, and there is sheer delight in the story of how the Earl, brought over to save his younger brother from the vampirish clutches of Klondike Kate, makes the lady his Countess and once more stands Red Gap upon its somewhat dizzy head.

For the Program: Meet your book friends on the screen.

You've chuckled over the story; now laugh at the film.

Advertising Phrases: Flesh and blood instead of words, but it's the same good story.

An American in the making.

Feature These Players: Taylor Holmes as the valet who became a social arbiter.

Frederick Burton as Cousin Egbert.

Lawrence D'Orsay as the Honorable George.

Virginia Valli as the Widow Judson.

Stunt Suggestions: Get the local dealers to feature the book in their windows with a card for the attraction. Get a card up in the libraries, if possible. As far ahead as possible, give the call number of the book on your screen or in the program. Use plenty of window cards. Mount the 24-sheet on your street wagon. For an extra lobby display paste up a pair of poker hands, an ace-full and a bob-tailed straight and letter, "The Honorable George lost his valet in this game. Which hand did he hold? See Ruggles of Red Gap if you can't figure it out. Don't miss it, anyhow (date)."

Advertising Aids: One, three, six and 24-sheet posters in nine colors. Window cards in six colors. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x29. Black-and-white stills. Portrait photos. Mats. Two styles each one and two-column cuts. Announcement slides. Press book.

Released Feb. 25.

"THE SIGN INVISIBLE."

First National Presents Mitchell Lewis in a Drama of the Northland and a Man Who Lost His Faith in God Because His Skill Had Left Him.

Cast.

Lone Deer.....Mitchell Lewis
Dr. Robert Winston.....Victor Sutherland
Rev. Rene Mercier.....Wm. A. Williams
Lou Baribeau.....Edward F. Roseman
Pierre .....Ray Chamberlin
Chin Loo.....Wm. H. Cavanaugh
Bad Nose.....Jos. Heron
Monihan .....Phil Sanford
Jeanette Mercier.....Mabel Juline Scott
Winona .....Hedda Nova
Towanah .....Roy Midland
Mrs. Winston.....Mary Kennevan Carr

Directed by Edgar Lewis.

The Story: Dr. Winston loses his faith in God because his mother is permitted to die under his own scalpel. He seeks to lose himself in the Northwest and becomes a drink-sodden wreck in whom only the good priest and his daughter Jeanette, still have faith. Saving Jeanette from the attacks of Baribeau. the company agent, Lone Deer is hurt and his eyesight is affected. The priest begs the physician to perform the needed operation, but Winston is just getting over a spree and fears to use the knife. He pleads that he has abandoned God and has been abandoned in turn, but the priest points to his recent defense of the church from the lumber gang as the sign invisible of his restoration, and the success of the operation gives Winston back his self-respect and makes him once more a man.

For the Program: A story of the land of the best and the worst.

A famous production by the famous producer of The Barrier.

Advertising Phrases: Giant deeds and vital actions.

See the fights that are just a part of the story—they're great.

Feature These Players: Mitchell Lewis as the half-breed.

Mabel Juline Scott as Jeanette.

Victor Sutherland as Winston.

Stunt Suggestions: Use paper for window display or stills and the window card. It might be possible to interest ministers, and particularly Catholics in this story, which deals with a man brought back to the church. You might dress a corner of the lobby as a part of Baribeau's post store, with some display of goods and signs telling the exchange value of skins.

Advertising Aids: Two styles of one-sheets, one each three, six and 24-sheets. Window cards. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Real photos, 8x10, in sets of ten. Rotogravure heralds, 7x8. Synopses of News Reels

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

HEARST-PATHE NEWS NO. 11 (Feb. 2).

San Diego, Cal.—Overshadowed by the modern motor truck and powerful tank, the old-fashioned wagon-train still renders useful service. Subtitles: The pack mule continues to plod his weary way, as in the pioneer days of '47. This heavy-loaded train of 24 wagons makes a trip of 40 miles across rugged country.

On the Atlantic.—The S. S. Vaterland, renamed the "Leviathan," in Uncle Sam's service, which arrived safely at a foreign port on her maiden trip as an army transport. Subtitle: Once the pride of the German marine, she now defies U-boats to help Democracy's cause.

Cary, Ill.—Norway's thrilling sport at its best—famous skiers match their skill on the narrow runners at the annual tournament. Subtitles: Down the short incline—now the leap—then into space. Regnar Omtvedt holds the record with a jump of 203 feet.

Boston, England.—Back to "Blighty" at last—600 happy Tommies released from German prison camps in exchange return on a Dutch ship. Subtitles: No place like home, especially after a stay in a German camp. "Good by" to the kind-hearted Dutch nurses, who enlivened their homeward journey.

With the Stars and Stripes "Over There."—Official U. S. War Films: released by the Committee on Public Information through the American Red Cross. Subtitles: Motor trucks driven by daring Yankee chauffeurs are used to haul supplies and "eats" to Pershing's boys in the trenches. The medical corps uses the motor trucks to transport wounded. The motorcycle squad. Mechanics as well as fighters, Uncle Sam's boys keep everything in shape. Official war pictures of the activities of the U. S. Army in France will be shown regularly in the Hearst-Pathe News.

New York City.—Alas! The animal world is sad! Bill Snyder, keeper of the Central Park Zoo for 30 years, bids farewell to his old chums. Subtitles: "Hattie" is overcome with grief. He feeds his kids for the last time—and you can't get his goat.

Guatamala City, Guat.—First pictures of the volcanic eruption accompany the earthquake that nearly wiped out this large, prosperous city. Subtitles: The boiling, molten masses beneath the earth's surface bursts forth in fiery streams. The pall of disaster hangs over the countryside; many were killed and 80,000 made homeless.

Do Your Bit.—Use only victory bread so that our boys at the front may be maintained. It is a small thing they ask you as partial recompense for the much you ask of them.—U. S. Food Administration.

Camp Upton, N. Y.—Onward—ever onward—through winter snows or summer calms, march these gallant boys in camp, heading for "over there." Subtitles: Ex-Ambassador Gerard greets America's new envoys to Germany—2,000,000 strong!

"It's a long way to Berlin—but we'll get there!"

Message to Our Soldiers and Sailors.—The Government offers life insurance to all men in military and naval service. Subtitle: Men who were in the service prior to October 15, 1917, must apply for this insurance before February 12, 1916.

HEARST-PATHE NEWS NO. 13 (Feb. 9).

On the Atlantic.—The nation mourns the loss of 141 of her brave warriors when the transport Tuscania is torpedoed by U-boat near Ireland. Subtitles: Germany stakes her all on her sneaking demons of the deep. But America will not falter—her mighty men-of-war will clear the way.

Washington, D. C.—Thousands of soldiers and sailors are taking advantage of the Government insurance for war risks. Secretary McAdoo presenting the first certificate. Subtitles: This policy is backed by the world's strongest insurance company—the United States of America. Uncle Sam hopes to insure all men in service. Automatic typewriters preparing circular letters. The form letter is made on a stencil which controls the keys.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Increased demand for rabbit fur due to its use in lining aviators' helmets and vests, is a boon to local rabit farms. Subtitles: Exceptionally fine specimens. Sewing the prepared skins into the aviators' helmets.

London, England.—Tommy loves the din of battle; even as a convalescent at home he engages in vigorous combat, if only with snowball grenades. Subtitles: True to type—they take their punishment and come back for more. Fighting Pierrots, actors in active service, help to entertain their comrades. Sir Rufus Isaacs, Lord Reading, appointed by Britain as High Commissioner to United States.

In France.—Still neutral but precariously near the danger zone. Spain sends a mission to the French front to see war at first hand. Subtitles: At Pont-a-Mousson, saved from the wreckage of Teuton shells. They shall not pass—was the motto of these heroes at Verdun and they did not.

Memphis, Tenn.—Ruin and disaster lie in the wake of the severe weather. Scores of ships are wrecked by ice jam in the Mississippi. Subtitles: Steamers in the Ohio River are almost buried under the huge floes. The damage done to navigation this year by the weather has been the worst in decades.

San Francisco, Cal.—Too young for Over There, but doing their bit Over Here, Boy Scouts launch a big drive for funds to widen their activities. Subtitles: With these boys—the citizens of tomorrow—the nation need not fear.

The Vosges Mountainn.—We hear much of brave soldiers, big guns, daring birdmen, but little do we know of the dumb heroes—the gods of war. Subtitles: The little canine warriors play a big part in every battle. In the thick of the struggle, midst the rain of shells, they dash about in search of wounded. The silent sentinels.

Yaphank, L. I.—Army units now in training get an idea of winter warfare. What a cantonment looks like under a deep blanket of snow. Subtitles: A straight eye even on slippery ice. Trenches must be built in winter as well as in summer. Scene at Camp Devens.

New York City.—Luckily no one is killed when a speedy express train runs into a crowded local on the "L" and telescoping the rear car. Subtitle: The express car is of steel, the local of wood—this is the result.

Daly City, Cal.—"Helping to build" the nation—women now tackle all tasks to fill the gap made by war in the country's industrial life. Subtitles: My, how these girls paint—not the way you might imagine. Quite handy at this job!

In Flanders.—Her land ravaged, her people enslaved, but Belgium's spirit still lives. General Petain pays a visit to King Albert. Subtitles: A handful of men, yet they bar the Teutons' advance like a wall of steel. Winter on the Yser dos not chill the spirit of the Allies.

Cartoon.—Progress.

Do your bit.—Observe Tuesday as a meatless day and one meatless meal every day. U. S. Food Administration.

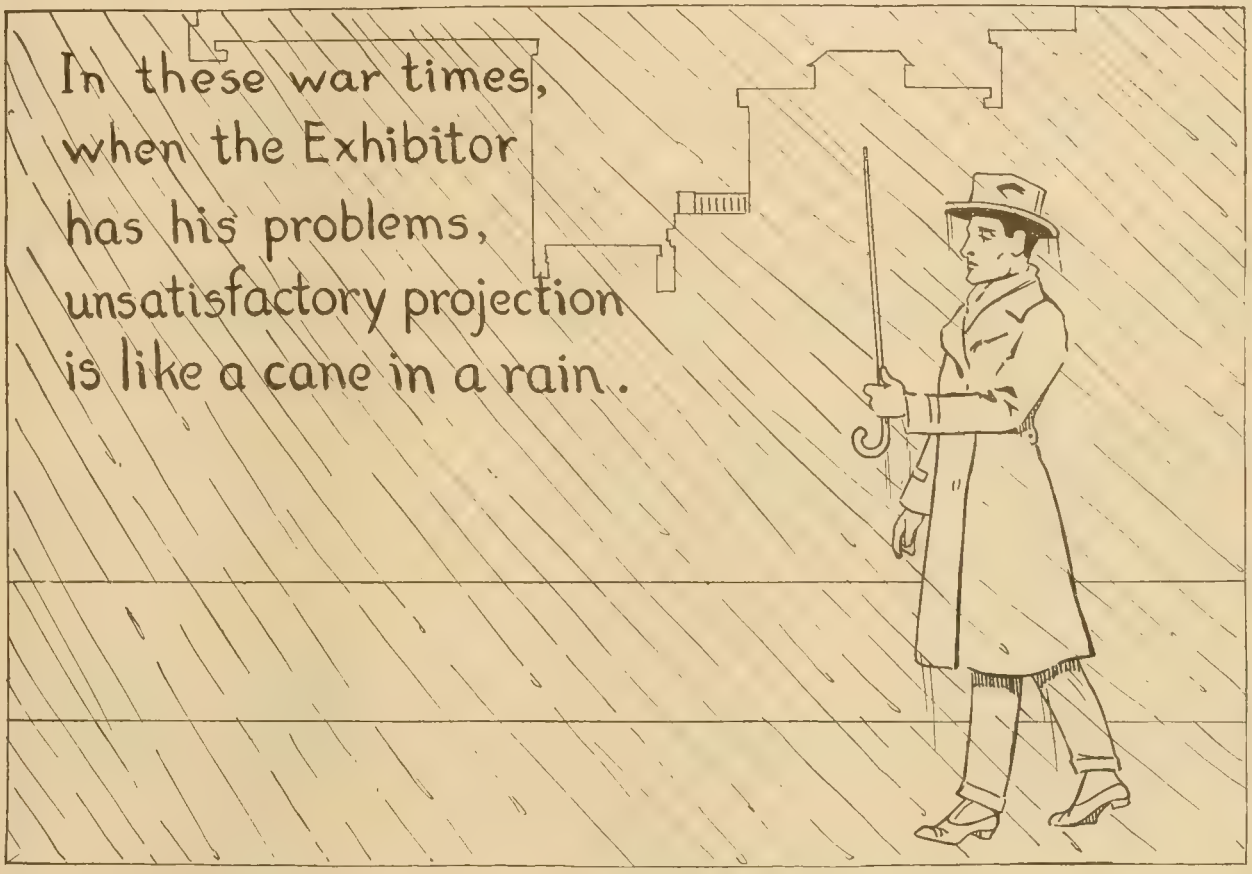
Simplex



THE climbing cost of living compels people to turn their money over before they spend it. Never before were they so discriminating: never so determined to make every coin count.

Under such conditions, you can't get their money unless you give a big money's worth. If you skimp on the very thing people pay you for—motion-picture projection—you're like a man with a cane in a rain.

Shrewd Theatre Men draw the crowds in war times as well as in times of peace with Simplex projection, because it's the biggest money's worth.

The Simplex Distributor helps the Exhibitor succeed. If you don't know him, we'll make you acquainted.

You can meet the most unfavorable conditions if you are properly equipped

Sure Fire Helps to Success

The CHALMERS PUBLISHING CO., publishers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and CINE MUNDIAL, the leading trade papers devoted to the Motion Picture Industry, are also publishers of the only library of practical text books dealing with the cinema art adapted to the every-day needs of those already engaged in the business or about to engage in it.

These text books, six in number, have been written by men carefully selected for their proven knowledge of the subjects to be covered, being almost without exception veteran members of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD'S editorial staff; entirely without exception these men are at present actively engaged in the motion picture business—they are not dreamers or theorists.

Each text book has been written to provide real help to the individual who reads it—consistent with the unswerving policy of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD—a genuine "Dedication to Service."

Motion Picture Handbook for Managers and Operators

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Read What Josiah Pearce & Sons Say About Our Goods

Gentlemen:
Now that you have completed equipment in our new theatres here in New Orleans, and Houston, Texas, we want to take this means of expressing to you our appreciation of the manner in which we have done business with you, also as to the character of your goods. You have, without exception, filled our orders just as promptly as we could ever expect and probably quicker than we had anticipated, and the fact of your having supplied us with brass frames and various other equipment in our fifteen theatres is evidence that we are pleased with your goods, for they are the most attractive, durable and practical that we have as yet found.
We wish you good luck in the prosecution of your work.
Yours very truly,
JOSIAH PEARCE & SONS,

SILVERTIP

The Standard Carbon for Direct Current Projection

The Silvertip projector carbon was designed to meet every requirement in the projection field. It is heavily plated, making it capable of carrying the heaviest current without harmful heating. It is of small diameter, thereby eliminating the disagreeable flicker due to the traveling of the arc. The light given by the arc is proclaimed to be the most satisfactory known.

These are a few of the good points of this direct current carbon which has successfully kept pace with the rapid advance of photo-play photography. Silvertips are giving satisfactory results everywhere, especially for the projection of the present day Art Films.

IMPORTANT: Silvertips are for Direct Current projection only

FOR ALTERNATING CURRENT PROJECTION

The White A. C. Special Carbon is particularly designed for alternating current projection in motion picture work. It gives an absolutely noiseless, pure white light that insures perfect definition.

An improvement which calls for absolutely no investment in the form of extra equipment, and makes possible perfect, low cost projection.

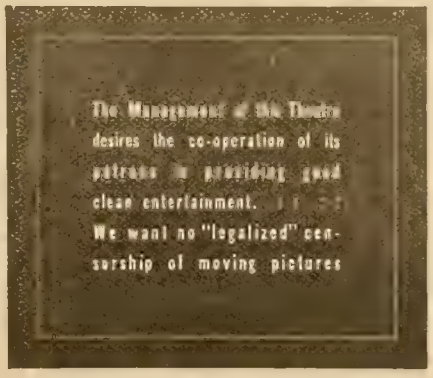
Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.



We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now!
Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

ACME PORTABLE PROJECTOR

Does the Trick

Milwaukee, Wis., January 10th, 1918.

Mr. R. H. Fulton, United Theatre Equip. Corp.,
154 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

My dear Mr. Fulton:

Received your letter of January 7th, in which you ask if I find advantage in having the small machine which enables me to review my pictures previous to showing same.

For your information, will say, that I consider this one of the biggest improvements I have made since I have been at the Merrill.

That by having this machine, it gives me a chance to review all the pictures during the day and does not necessitate my staying at the theatre after closing hours to screen any pictures.

By the arrangement I have I may screen one or two reels of the picture in the morning and finish same after dinner, which makes it very convenient, and I really do not see how any of the large theatres can possibly get along without a small projection machine and room of their own. By this arrangement it gives you plenty of time to make any changes you see necessary in your picture.

I would like very much for you to advise me what carbon you are handling and the price of same.

With best personal regards, I am,

Yours very truly,
MERRILL THEATRE,

"The Only Picture that Could stand Another Day"

Chas Pacini

"IT WAS ABSOLUTELY THE GREATEST DRAWING CARD I have ever run in my theatre.

IT SMASHED ALL MY HOUSE RECORDS. THE FIRST DAY was a little bigger than the second but not much difference.

THE HOUSE WAS PACKED AND STANDING OUT ALL DAY and I had to put on extra help.

IN THE EVENINGS IT TOOK THE AID OF TWO POLICEMEN to handle the crowds, which were lined up for nearly a block on each side of the theatre and way out in the street."

"THE PICTURE PLEASED MY PATRONS VERY MUCH, ALL DECLARING it good, clean and interesting. Lots of people didn't see it because they could not wait to get in.

BECAUSE OF THE LARGE NUMBER OF PEOPLE WHO WERE NOT ABLE to see this picture I have decided it could stand another day.

IT IS THE ONLY PICTURE THAT AFTER A TWO-DAY RUN I HAVE THOUGHT COULD STAND ANOTHER DAY.

YOU CAN JUDGE FROM THIS LETTER WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME — AND I TRUST I WILL GET MORE LIKE IT."

Goldwyn Announces The Turning Of The Tide

INCREASED business for Goldwyn Pictures from the great and unconquerable WEST—a sure sign of returning prosperity for the nation's exhibitors.

Increased businesss from the prosperous Ten Billion Dollar SOUTH; richer and wealthier than ever before in its history.

Increased business and bigger patronage from the recently-zero NORTH, just thawing out under the first sunshine after the worst winter ever recorded.

Bigger business than ever from all-powerful EAST—the financial heart of America with steadily mounting war profits coursing through its veins.

Goldwyn business is feeling and benefitting by these wonderfully changing conditions and the reason we are benefitting is that our productions throughout a desperate winter have kept thousands of our exhibitors "ahead of the game" in revenues; ahead of their competition in patronage; ahead of their rivals in quality product.

We definitely predict the most prosperous Spring and Summer exhibitors have had in several years and we can further insure this prosperity with Goldwyn productions made according to the most skilful box-office pattern.

TWO TREMENDOUS GOLDWYN SUCCESSES

For February – March

POCKET-BOOK PICTURES—pictures with strength "on the door" of theatres; pictures with action, plot and humanity in them; but above everything pictures with profit in them. If they have Quality and Art in them, so much the better, but the profit-making essentials must come first.

These are the demands of every exhibitor in America today and Goldwyn, following up its string of profit-making pictures, is continuing to meet the exhibitor-demand with a consecutive series of remarkable productions which will cover the entire Spring and Summer. We are proud to submit for the box-office verdict:

MAE MARSH
IN
THE BELOVED TRAITOR
BY FRANK L. PACKARD

An emotional, melodramatic love story of action and romance—revealing the great dramatic power of one of the screen's biggest favorites. Released February 24.

MABEL NORMAND
THE FLOOR BELOW
BY ELAINE STERNE

A bigger, faster and more thrilling romantic comedy-drama than her successful "Dodging A Million," which broke house-capacity records. Directed by Clarence Badger. Released March 10.

Consult the box-office charts of the trade press about every recent Goldwyn production and find these reports by exhibitors who played them: "Record for my house." "Big business at advanced prices." "Extra big business." "Weather awful—business great." "Drew tremendous business." "Turned hundreds away." "Two days to capacity." "22° below—S. R. O." All Goldwyn Pictures are drawing big business throughout America.

A "THRILLER" AND A BIG "SENSATION"

For March — April

THINK what a sensation a melodramatic Madge Kennedy will be—the Madge Kennedy of the smile and the wonderful comedy eyes added to a new and still more remarkable Madge Kennedy in a rushing, mysterious, amazing drama that sets audiences aquiver. This is the big surprise picture we have made to keep your Spring business booming.

And to all of you who broke every house record with Mary Garden in "Thais"—think of the profits and the box-office prosperity that will be yours with another Mary Garden picture—more sensational, more daring than "Thais." Goldwyn is pleased to announce:

MADGE KENNEDY IN THE DANGER GAME

BY ROY SOMERVILLE

More than a "Feminine Raffles;" If you were not "in on the secret" you would call her "the most beautiful burglar in the world." Released March 24.

MARY GARDEN IN THE SPLENDID SINNER

BY KATE JORDAN

An amazing drama of a magnificent woman who sacrificed her honor but won redemption and became one of the world's martyrs. Directed by Edwin Carewe. Released April 7.

Already the world is demanding peace. When it comes America faces the greatest ten years of prosperity in its history. Every class will have an abundance of money. Labor will be better paid than ever before. Goldwyn is expending every ounce of its energy and effort to make for the nation's exhibitors productions that will be insurance policies against the possibilities of poor business.

"THE GUILTY MAN"

By Ruth Helen Davis and Charles Klein
Irvin V. Willat, director ; supervision of

THOMAS H. INCE

A Sure-Fire Money Maker

"THE GUILTY MAN" contains every element necessary for box office success. It's a long-run picture, for it's the sort people talk about, the kind they send their friends to see. Look what the critics say:

Exciting story. Excellent atmosphere. Can safely be recommended.
—Moving Picture World

Strong drama with plenty of tense moments. Truly dramatic. Cleverly maintained suspense.
—Exhibitors' Trade Review

Direction commendable, sets realistic, photography all that could be desired.
—Motion Picture News

The success of "The Guilty Man" when it was presented on Broadway will undoubtedly be repeated in the screen version.

Here's More Proof

YOU read in a recent advertisement of what Mr. H. R. Mason at Goldsboro, N. C., had to say about Triangle service.

Here's another letter which is also well worth reading. It was written by Mr. Herman J. Brown, President of the Brown's Amusement Enterprises at Boise, Idaho, the Company operating the Strand, Majestic, Isis and Comic Theatres at Boise, and the Majestic Theatre at Nampa, Idaho.

"Thinking it may interest you to know of our experience with Triangle Film, we are taking the liberty of writing you this.

"When your service lost certain of its most prominent stars, we were of the opinion that its value had been hurt, and cancelled. We then opened our Majestic Theater to a straight open market booking policy and secured a succession of high priced stars. With the inauguration of the 15-cent per reel 'graft,' we placed your service in our Isis Theater, one change a week, throwing out the product of one of the predatory grafting producers. We immediately realized after seeing your new film what a foolish mistake we had made in cancelling your service and hastened to book a second change, thus eliminating the product of another one of the skin-'em-alive boys. As an experiment we then lifted your 'One Shot Ross' into our Majestic Theater and were astonished to find that it outdrew the high-priced should be, but-is-not lady star, in one of our super-de-luxe feature company pictures which had been in that house on the same day the preceding week. We pleased our public and made good money on 'One Shot Ross'—we lost heavily on the lady star that had succeeded in sticking one of the producing companies with an enormous salary, but is unable to get the public into the theater. With this experience in mind we at once booked your service two changes a week into our handsome new thousand-seat theater in Nampa, Idaho, the Majestic, which we claim is the finest theater in a city of 10,000 or less in the United States. We opened this theater with a succession of states rights pictures. We played three of them at high prices—then came the first Triangle 'Fighting Back,' which outdrew the three big state right pictures and succeeded in getting what they failed to get, viz., hearty applause. Exhibitors near here tell us that some of the new Triangles have broken their house record for business. We are now moving Triangle service from the Isis Theater to the Majestic Theater in this city, the largest and best equipped motion picture theater in the state of Idaho, and they are going to stay there indefinitely.

"With best wishes for your continued success in delivering the exhibitor fine pictures at fair prices with clean methods and an absence of bludgeoning tactics of other exchanges, we are,

"Yours very truly,
"BROWN'S AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISES, Ltd.,
"Herman J. Brown (signed.)"

We want to repeat our recent statement. If the pictures you are running are not making money for you, if the service you are receiving is not prompt and satisfactory, if the business methods of the companies furnishing you pictures are not perfectly fair and square, let us suggest that you communicate with the nearest Triangle exchange and find out what Triangle has to offer you.

MYSTERY!

Always in a Pearl White serial has there been an imagination-captivating mystery.
In "The Exploits of Elaine" it was the identity of "the Clutching Hand".
In "The Iron Claw" it was "who is the masked stranger?"
In "Pearl of the Army" it was the master spy;
In "The Fatal Ring" it centered around the ring itself.
In

THE HOUSE OF HATE

it is the "Hooded Terror," who is the most mysterious, the most dangerous and the most attention gripping of them all!

After seeing one or two episodes your patrons will be begging you to tell them who the man really is!

STORY!

A successful serial must have a strong story—a fifteen week's long story, that at no point lets down in interest but always leaves audiences eager for more.

THE HOUSE OF HATE

has such a story.

It was written by the creator of the famous "Craig Kennedy" stories in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, Arthur B. Reeve, together with Chas. A. Logue. It has everything you have learned to expect in a Pearl White serial—and more. It was scenarioised by B. Millhauser, who wrote the scenarios for "The Fatal Ring." The direction is faultless. George B. Seitz wrote the scenarios for Miss White's earlier successes and directed "The Fatal Ring." He has given "The House of Hate" super-feature production. Astra produced it.

Announcement and Explanation of Un

UNITED PICTURE THEATRES OF AMERICA, INC., has been chartered under the laws of New York to enable several thousand exhibitors in every section of the United States to own collectively and to distribute to its members pictures on which all members can and will make a profit. Through this organization which exhibitors themselves own and operate from top to bottom, we are bringing together our membership which will give a picture 4,000, 6,000 or 9,000 days of booking time and wipe out instantly the cost of selling, overhead distribution and print waste, which are the chief reasons for the high rentals you are now paying.

Every manufacturer or producer of pictures wishes to do this, wishes to save this money, wishes to free himself of the burden of distribution and salesmanship expense in a highly competitive industry. But every producer who has tried to do this has failed. Therefore, this revolutionary change, which every producer will welcome, has had to come from THE EXHIBITORS OF MOTION PICTURES.

That is why United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., has been organized. We, as exhibitors, do not want to pay the tremendous cost of maintaining thirteen selling organizations with a first-run product trying to sell only three available first-run prospects in Salt Lake City, or seventeen exchanges spending a fortune weekly in seeking the business of five first-run houses in Minneapolis. We are now doing this. None of the various producing firms are any more anxious to pay these costs than we are—but they cannot escape them. But WE can, and this means that this organization of exhibitors, because of its plans and purposes, is a friend and money-saving ally of all producers and one to be encouraged by every friend of the industry.

United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., is the exhibitors' own solution of the costly evil that every factor in the industry wishes to destroy. What we will do is this: We will agree on a star whose popularity and money-making powers are unquestioned. We will make certain in advance that the star and productions are big enough for the foremost theatres, and therefore for all other theatres. We will then say to the producer having this star: "Make us six or eight pictures annually with this star and we will pay you for each negative a price that will give you a liberal and yet fair profit." We will make our own prints, our own accessories and take care of the distribution of this and all of our other pictures to our members here and in foreign lands. We are free of salesmanship costs because we have an assured playing time of several thousand days guaranteed in advance by our members. There is today no profit in distribution. The United plan relieves producers of the unprofitable exchange investment and worry and at the same time gives them cash on completion of pictures and wider distribution of their picture than they now receive.

This collective buying is the principle of co-operation which dynamites selling expense out of existence. It accomplishes for the film exhibitor what the American Druggists Syndicate has achieved for its 22,000 druggist members. It has cut the purchase cost of drugs practically in half. It unites thousands of small buyers into one huge purchasing unit.

The druggists own 90% of all the stock of this company, so they are their own bankers and reap the bankers' dividends—the druggist members control the company, so all companies selling these druggists must give them fair treatment and fair prices. These druggist members are not only the bankers and customers of their own company, but they hire experts to run the A. D. S. for the equal benefit of all members. No drug manufacturer owns stock in the A. D. S., so all manufacturers are treated with equal fairness. When the A. D. S. members advertise and popularize a brand they derive ited Picture Theatres of America, Inc.

RENTALS IN HALF

the benefit. Starting with $400 eleven years ago, the A. D. S. today has received from its druggist members $5,000,000 with which to carry on its business. In return for this money the company issued common stock, and so large have been the dividends that the stock has long sold above par and the A. D. S. has assets enough to buy back its $5,000,000 worth of stock issued and still have remaining assets worth probably $10,000,000, which is about the total value of the quick assets of all the film companies combined. Everyone has been benefited by the A. D. S. No one has been hurt by it. The A. D. S. has profited its members by the elimination of the waste of competition by co-operation. Ask the A. D. S. druggist in your community.

Applying the A. D. S. method of organization to the exhibitors' problem, United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., will instantly cut your rental price for a picture thirty to fifty per cent. below the price you are now paying and give you many of the very same pictures you are now playing.

Behind this organization, devoting their energies and capacities to creating this great new exhibitors' purchasing and distributing alliance, are the men whose names are undersigned, and who have heeded the urgent appeals of several thousand exhibitors to create this nation-wide organization and wipe out the ruinous waste incurred through separate buying.

The founders of this company have worked out a plan which many of the largest and best known exhibitors, practically all big producers in New York and many stars have pronounced to be unique and of great value to all branches of the industry. Within the next few weeks a United salesman—a high-class man whom you respect—will visit your community. He will thoroughly explain the United purposes, every detail of the plan, the method of incorporation and everything else. This is the exhibitors' company, and you are entitled to know. There are no insiders. There is nothing to conceal. The more you know about the United plan the stronger you will be for it.

In our next announcement we will tell you more about this revolutionary cost-saving plan, which will reestablish sanity and profit for all elements in the motion picture industry.

CHIEF of U.S. SECRET SERVICE

THE BILTMORE
NEW YORK
JOHN McE. BOWMAN

January 18th, 1918

Mr. W. J. Flynn,
New York City.

My dear Chief:

I have just returned from viewing your wonderful film, The Eagle Eye, and I am so much impressed with its power to do good that I must write you this line to congratulate you.

The episode connected with the Hotel Ansonia was particularly interesting to me on account of the hours of mental anguish we all went through before the navigating officers of our fleet were out of danger, and in viewing the picture I realize more than ever the strain you were under during that dreadful twenty-four hours.

Most pictures of this kind border on the melodramatic, but this has not one ounce in it but is really dramatic from beginning to end; and if at the end of the third episode, when you ask people in the audience if they are not going to help destroy German autocracy, I am much mistaken if the appeal does not bring the spectators from their seats into a loud declaration of loyalty for this great country in which they are living. I, personally, with the cold sober thought in my mind that it was only a picture, could hardly restrain from rising up and giving the answer the appeal called for.

It is extraordinarily well done, has the touch of authenticity behind it and will convey a wonderful message to the doubting ones, some of whom still believe we should be neutral.

Wishing you every success in the wonderful story you are putting before the public, believe me

Yours very sincerely,

John McE. Bowman.

Exhibitors Trade Review

A PHOTOPLAY that can run into the seven part class without ever once losing its interest, without failing through every reel to bring regular tears to the eyes of the audience, deserves to go down in screen history as a rara avis. Yet this is what has been accomplished in the case of "Revelation." Words can hardly describe the wonderful acting of Nazimova, her illimitable art, her sinuous grace, the marvel of her changeable moods. From the first she wins her audience, when in the French cabaret, a half naked dancer, the curves of her delicate body move the spectators in the wine tavern to a mad outbreak of enthusiasm.

Then later the love episode—the woman who found in the American artist the ideal of her sadly tarnished life, and finally awakening to the Magdalene horror of sin in its bald, brazen aspects, conquers the passions of the flesh and yields all else in a sublime devotion to The Christ, the image of The Virgin and hope for Divine forgiveness.

This is but a poor description of a play which deserves far more space than it can be given at present. One can only dwell upon a few instances of such telling power that they must be outlined, if only in brief. As a Parisian grisette, light of love, living but for the moment, despising the future, revelling in a glamorous atmosphere of wine, song and rose leafs cast under her white, twinkling feet, Joline, as portrayed by Nazimova, captures all hearts.

And right here is seen the insight of the true artiste. The ordinary actress, staged in such circumstances would inevitably spoil the climax by overdoing the part. Not so Nazimova! When the model of whom she is jealous appears, the artist's sweetheart approaches her with all due humbleness. Her wonderful eyes seem to express nothing but sympathy, up to the instant when they flame into a hell fury of rage, and she hurls herself upon the other woman like an avenging demon. After which, the revulsion of feeling, the passionate desire to atone, followed by the gift to her rival of her rings, and declaration of guilt to her lover.

A finer cast could not have been collected and George Baker has directed the play with such skill and careful attention to detail as to establish his right to be numbered with the most admirable craftsman of the silent drama.

The war views, depicting the "going over the top," and search among the wounded by the Red Cross contingent, are wonderful even in these days of numerous battle films

The lighting is superb and considered as a whole, "Revelation" offers to exhibitors one of the finest drawing cards from a box office standpoint that the screen has known in many a lor g day.

NAZIMOVA PICTURE A REAL PHOTO PLAY

"REVELATION" AT LYRIC RANKS HIGH AMONG FILMS.

Metro Production Is One of the Best Ever Screened and the Work of the Star Is Superb—Settings Are Beautiful and Appropriate Photography Is Excellent and the Supporting Cast Adequate.

One of the most noted dramatic reviewers of New York came out of the Lyric Theatre late yesterday afternoon after the first presentation of the Metro picture, "Revelation," with Mme. Nazimova as the star, and said:

"I've been going to pictures for a long time, looking for what I consider a real photo play, and at last I've found one."

That is what "Revelation" is—a real photo play. It has a beautiful story, beautifully told and wonderfully well acted. Practically all the interest centers in the one character, Joline, played by Mme. Nazimova. There never has been, never can be any question as to the talent of this actress, and in the role of Joline, the vivid, picturesque little model of the Latin Quarter, who, through a miracle, finds her soul, Mme. Nazimova is suited as she seldom has been before. Her playing, whether as model, mistress, Madonna or nurse, is a triumph, one that she never has exceeded on the speaking stage.

"Revelation" is a truly great picture, one of the best ever screened.

N.Y. Morning Telegraph

Nazimova's work in "War Brides" showed her splendid adaptability as a screen artiste, but the part played more or less on one key only. In "Revelation" she runs the scale of emotions, and holds the sympathetic interest of the spectator throughout.

N.Y. Evening Mail

"Better than War Brides"

N.Y. Times

"Spectators showed their warm endorsement"

Evening Telegram

"Displayed heights of temperament never before equalled"

N.Y. Herald

Opportunity

Do you know when opportunity knocks at your door? — Reports from all over the land show tremendous receipts at the box office through METRO's feature productions. They set a new high standard for cash return to the exhibitor and through them Metro proves its ability to make big successes. Metro wants you to share in the clean-up.

"LEST WE FORGET," with RITA JOLIVET, will make you big profits. It has exceptional advertising advantages, such as the sinking of the Lusitania, an international star and a tremendous spectacle. Just having finished its big run at the Lyric Theatre, New York at prices of 25¢-50¢ and $1.00

"The LEGION of DEATH, with EDITH STOREY, should be advertised as a tremendous drama of modern American and Russian high life, with women actually fighting in the trenches.

"The Slacker," with EMILY STEVENS, and "Draft 258," with MABEL TALIAFERRO, are already demonstrated box office successes of tremendous size. In order to reap the full benefit from these big features, advertise them well before you show them.

"BLUE JEANS," with VIOLA DANA, is one of the greatest attractions presented in motion pictures. It is an absolutely certain clean-up.

These features, together with the other big Metro productions which are about ready for release, make the motion picture business safe for the exhibitor.

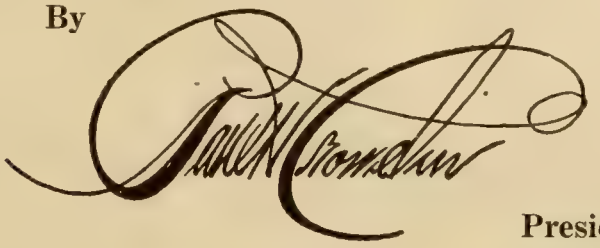
"A Desk and a Map of the World"

(Little Talks with Foreign Buyers—No. 2)

By



President

Inter-Ocean's success in selecting American Film for foreign buyers has tempted a number of people to go into "the exporting business." A DESK AND A MAP OF THE WORLD IS SUPPOSED TO BE GOOD ENOUGH TO CATER TO THE FOREIGN FILM BUYER'S WANTS. Oughtn't it be perfectly easy to be a successful "moving picture exporter"—the whole world is buying film, so why not good naturedly accommodate the whole world? What the Inter-Ocean's competitor forgets is that Inter-Ocean has made of film-selection-for-foreign-buyers a highly specialized business, that cannot be learned in a month or a year or by the installation of a shiny new desk; and that purchasers of American film for the foreign market are careful about their purchases to the point that they will ONLY deal with firms that know the FOREIGN market as completely as do the buyers themselves. It's a fact! It stands to reason that only a large exporting organization that is 100 per cent. FILM exporting organization, that devotes the brains of its entire well-trained force to the foreign film market, and the foreign film market only, CAN BE PERFECTLY EQUIPPED TO SELECT FILMS FOR THAT MARKET. The foreign buyer is accustomed to 100 per cent. market knowledge at the place he buys his American film, and he knows that such knowledge can be only had by an organization that CONCENTRATES ALL ITS ENERGIES TO LEARN EXHIBITOR CONDITIONS IN ALL COUNTRIES. That organization is indisputably the

Facts and Comments

AS a matter of policy and in the interests of good showmanship the exhibitor who signs a contract to show a specified brand of pictures in his house to the exclusion of all others is making the greatest possible mistake of his career. This question is important and is one that is likely to confront exhibitors at any time, consequently it is the one question that should have their most careful consideration before action is taken. Let us give you some reasons:

Do you realize the full meaning of a contract to show a certain make of pictures exclusively in your house? It means just this: that you have leased your house to the manufacturer of the pictures for which you have contracted. Not only have you leased your house to him, but you have agreed to pay him a stipulated price in rentals for his pictures during the life of that contract, and that price will be "all the traffic will stand," for it will be the price for the exclusive right to that particular line of pictures. Pretty soft for the manufacturer, don't you think?

Just on a chance that this has not yet penetrated we will put it another way: Let us suppose that you want to lease your theater. The first question is the price of the lease—how much you are to get for it. Now, you are not in this business for fun; you want to make money out of your investment and the good-will you have established. In other words, you want that house and the business you have established to work for you, in which case your lease will read that "the party of the second part," which is the fellow who leases your house, "shall pay you a sufficient sum of money, keep the house in repair and turn it over to you in good condition at the expiration of the lease." That sounds like a business transaction, doesn't it? Any business man can understand it.

But how about this exclusive motion picture service lease? Do you do any of the things mentioned above? You do not. This is what you do: you take all the risk of business, pay all the overhead, make all the repairs, pay all the taxes and license fees and agree to run only such pictures as the manufacturer with whom you have made the lease gives you to run, and finally you pay the manufacturer a high rental for what he makes you believe is an inestimable privilege—the exclusive right to show his pictures only.

Now, have we made this plain? If you lease your house in the regular way you receive your monthly rental regularly and have no further responsibility. If you sign an exclusive contract you have, for all practical purposes, leased your house because you must show only the pictures contracted for and you still have all the responsibility and risk of operation. Also, as you know, you must pay a high rental for exclusive service.

*

Past events in the motion picture business show that no single producer or groups of producers have been able to dominate the business for any great length of time by reason of either monopolistic control or quality of product. The class of pictures or the stars which find favor with the public today may be entirely outclassed within a year from today. Nothing has ever been done that can not be and has not been improved upon. Players lose their vogue; methods of production change. Those who have followed the fortunes of the business for even so short a time as five years have seen many such changes. Who will say that present conditions will prevail five years from now—three years or even two years? Consequently how utterly ridiculous it would be to sign a contract with any single producing company for any length of time that would bind you to take that company's pictures to the exclusion of all others.

Again, under the present conditions, no one company can be said to control all the best pictures or all the best stars. Many companies are making good pictures—pictures that stand in the first line of productions of the day. Can any enterprising exhibitor afford to close his doors against any good picture of whatever make and thus deprive his patrons from the pleasure of seeing it, or compel them to go elsewhere? To do so is to invite competition of the strongest kind.

The best policy of management and the best showmanship dictate that every exhibitor should develop his business in such a way that his house shall stand upon its own foundation; that it may be free to show the best pictures obtainable at any time no matter who the maker may be. By maintaining your freedom of action you continue to be a proprietor and manager. Otherwise you are no better than a janitor.

* * *

WE touched lightly in a recent issue upon the alleged refusal of a certain exhibitor of prominence to permit the serial production known as "The Eagle's Eye" to be booked for his houses upon the grounds that it might offend his German patrons. Lest there be other exhibitors of the same mind on this subject a few words regarding the proper attitude of all loyal and necessarily patriotic Americans may be timely. The United States is at war with Germany and Austria; it is not a game of pinochle or tenpins, but a life and death matter in which many thousand American soldiers —our sons, our brothers and the sons and brothers and husbands of the patrons of our picture shows—will give their lives for the maintenance of the liberty and freedom of thought and action which we enjoy; for the integrity of our homes and the honor of those we love.

We have seen several episodes of "The Eagle's Eye." The picture portrays in soul-stirring scenes the devilish plotting carried on in this country by the agents of Germany and Austria at a time when we were at peace with those countries, at a time when those agents were enjoying our hospitality under the guise of diplomatic representatives to a friendly nation. The incidents pictured are not imaginary, but are startling and horrid truths, gleaned from the experiences of the former Chief of the United States Secret Service Bureau, William J. Flynn, who was engaged in blocking the schemes of Von Bernstorf and his brood, and who has been given official permission to weave those experience into pictures so that the American people may be aroused and made to see the true state of affairs.

Now, as much as we may sympathize with our German friends, many of whom are loyal to the land of their adoption, we insist that this fight for freedom in which we have enlisted can have to do with them in but one way. That way is our way. It is our fight and they must either be for us or against us. If they are for us their feelings will not be hurt when we say and do things against their fatherland; if they are against us they will be safer in an internment camp.

*

There was a time in this world war when we told each other that it was best not to present pictures in our theaters that might offend our German friends. That day has passed. We have now before us just one big and all important task: We must win this war!!! To fight to win we must get mad (some purist will say "angry," but "mad" is the word), and the madder we get the better we will fight. The trouble just now is that too many millions of our people are not mad enough to fight. They have got to be maddened to the point that they will either get into the trenches or put their last dollar on our boys who are getting in. Pictures will be the greatest force in thus working all of us up to the proper fighting spirit and that will be the best picture which drives us farthest into the fight.

Pictures like "The Eagle's Eye" should be shown in every picture theater in this country. Not once, but a dozen times. It and others like it will help to win this war, and the time is not far distant when the exhibitor who refuses to show them to his patrons would better shut up shop.

Don't forget, either, that there is another Liberty Loan coming and that some sacrifice will have to be made to meet it when it comes. Get ready for it; prepare your patrons for it. Get all the war pictures you can and feed them out as frequently as you can. Turn loose the "Four Minute Men" in your house; have a "Liberty Loan" night at your house every week. Get your patrons fighting mad and we will win this war.

*

Men, there's an idea in that catch word "Liberty Loan Night." Do you get it? Try it! Put on a regular fighting program; get the best fighting "Four Minute Men" in your town. Turn your orchestras loose on the latest and best fighting music—all the patriotic stuff you know. Decorate your house with "Old Glory" and the pictures of the great men who have fought to keep her floating. Advertise it big in the newspapers. Promise to invest a liberal percentage of your excess profits for that night in Liberty Bonds or War Saving Stamps and keep your promise. Have War Saving Stamps on hand and sell them to your patrons—a quarter will star them and they will take a lot if you put the right kind of "pep" into your program. You have been talking a lot about "doing your bit." Here's your chance to make good. Who will be the first to head the Roll of Honor?

What's New?

By Sam Spedon.

THE newest things in the industry are the three recently proposed co-operative booking organizations: The Associated Theaters, Inc., of the Northwest; Producers-Exhibitors Affiliated and the United Picture Theaters of America, Inc.. All three are dependent upon the support and co-operation of the exhibitors, who are the essential factors of the plan. The Associated Theaters of the Northwest, Inc., has been completed and has already been announced that it will begin operating this month. The Producers-Exhibitors Affiliated is well under way. The plans of these two organizations have already been published in these columns and in the advertising pages of this issue of the World we print the propectus of the United Pictures Theaters of America, Inc.

All three are primarily for the elimination of waste in production and distribution for the reduction of film rentals to the exhibitors. Each one of the three claims it has the solution of economic distribution and equitable rentals, which statement awakens the attention and interest of the whole industry. If these claims are made good they certainly will revolutionize the industry.

The plans of each one of these organizations are practical, but experimental at this time. To put them in operation confidence in the promoters on the part of the exhibitors is necessary. Here is the hitch and question, whether the necessary numbers of exhibitors will contribute to the test and take a chance to put them in operation. It may be that the promoters of the ideas involved are too far in advance of the industry and the exhibitors cannot grasp them and are waiting as we heard one exhibitor say to "let them try it on the dog."

To thoroughly understand the plans, it will be necessary to secure and study the prospectus of each organization. The first is under the management of Thomas Hamlin of Minneapolis, the second is represented by C. C. Pettijohn of New York and the third by C. R. Seelye and Lee A. Ochs of New York.

Why Not Criticise Moving Pictures?

By Robert C. McElravy.

WHY don't you criticise the movies? You know they need it! You know they are simply terrible, don't you? Yet you insist upon praising them most outrageously!"

Thus said an outspoken friend to the writer a few nights since.

"Well," we replied, "what is your particular grievance against moving pictures? Have you seen any recently? Most people who persist in criticising them have never seen more than two or three, all told."

"I saw one up on 125th street the other night that was rotten! I saw one at the Strand a few nights ago that was awful! I saw one at the Academy lately that was simply dreadful. I saw one at the Rialto last night that smelled to heaven——"

"Hold on, my friend," said the writer, "you'd better stop a minute and come up for air. It really can't be as bad as all that!"

"Yes, it is," he persisted. "They're all bad—no style, no art, no drama—nothing but pictures!"

Of course the conversation did not occur in just that way, but we have given the purport of it. By judicious probing and keeping accurate count on our fingers, we learned that our critical young friend had gone to see moving pictures no less than six times within a period of ten days. He is, without realizing it, what is technically known as a moving picture fan. He is fascinated and carried away by the silent drama, and his way of expressing appreciation is in the form of a general condemnation of every picture he sees. He is in the same boat with the baseball fan, who sits in the bleachers and yells: "Gee, isn't Schupp a piece of camembert today! He's getting worse every game!"

The attitude is not an exceptional one. It is one of human nature's humanest traits, that of denouncing roundly the thing that captivates one. We are reluctant about many things—paying board bills, going to the barber's, accepting heatless and wheatless days, cutting out smoking, giving up chocolates (if we happen to be the sort of person who eats them), and missing our copy of the morning paper. But the thing we all dislike more than anything else is to admit that something has interested us in spite of ourselves.

Which brings us up to the little story of the four elderly ladies who were once sitting in judgment on moving pictures.

They were members of the old Board of Censors, in the days when the censors took life and moving pictures a little more seriously than they do now; and it must be admitted in all fairness that they sometimes had to! In those days, when Mack Sennett was experimenting with his early Keystone comics, there were indeed moments when gentle ladies of the board sometimes got more thrills than they desired. That period has happily passed and Mr. Sennett, as well as other directors who have learned to tone down too riotous situations, will no doubt admit that controlled and restrained humor is after all the most successful humor.

The four elderly ladies were looking at a two-reel comic picture as it unfolded on the screen. There were slapstick and knockabout situations galore, all of an acceptable sort; it kept getting funnier and funnier, and the elderly ladies were sitting up straighter and straighter all the time.

Finally, one of them, unable to contain herself longer, leaned over and said to the others: "We might just as well laugh." So they all began laughing, and from that moment they could never see enough Keystone comics.

Now there really isn't very much of a point to this little story, or there is a great deal of point to it, just as it may strike the reader. It simply demonstrates another familiar attitude of mind toward moving pictures.

In the first instance, we have the case-hardened fan, the fellow who goes to moving pictures all the time. He tries to get more thrills than he has any right to expect, and he contemptuously dares the pictures to "do it again." Then we have the elderly ladies who were terrified with the thought that they were going to see something improper, and learned to rejoice and be glad when they found that, after all, moving pictures were only harmless amusement.

As a matter of fact, we should probably not go to see moving pictures with any special attitude of mind, other than the expectation of having an enjoyable and profitable time. We should learn to accept their failures, which are rapidly becoming less frequent, with the same indulgence we would accord an unsuccessful book or play; we should rejoice in their wonderful advancement, and tell our friends of the remarkable successes they achieve. In any event, the time has come when rightly disposed people are no longer looking down their noses at moving pictures simply because they are moving pictures.

To try to minimize screen plays by slighting their real value is of no avail. It is sometimes merely a pose on the part of people who pretend to do it in a serious way. Let us be careful that we are not caught in this attitude, most of all, for life has a sad way of picking up its heels, like the trick photographer at a circus, leaving us and our precious poses far behind.

We must learn to resist this very human tendency to cry down things of worth, simply because they come upon us unprepared. It is good for us to have our aplomb shaken a little at times, and we must bring ourselves to deal generously and kindly with innovations, however annoying they may at first appear. Let us all brush up our lorgnettes a little and see if we can't keep in closer touch with good things as they come along.

Question of Sunday Opening

By Sam Spedon.

AGAIN the opponents of Sunday opening are busy in many state legislatures throughout the country. We have been appealed to by many exhibitors for advice and opinions on this subject. They have asked us for literature concerning it. Such as we have we have given them. It is a very difficult matter to meet this question, as it affects each and every community differently. It requires a personal acquaintance with the conditions existing in each community to speak intelligently. We never give advice, but we are always willing to express our opinion.

In the First Place.

Here in New York and other states, a variety of conditions present themselves. In a great many smaller towns and cities the population comprises a majority of religious, "church going," "God fearing" people, who hold very closely to the straight and narrow paths of their forefathers and they are fearful to depart therefrom. When this class predominates and influences the politics of its community, it consequently influences its legislative representatives. In such a locality Sunday opening is up against a very hard proposition.

The Second Place.

In other places, where there are manufacturing and mining interests, we find a varied population, a majority of which go to church once on the Sabbath and have much idle time on their hands. In such a community we find the people, after a hard week's work, eager for entertainment and recreation, always ready to welcome the right kind of moving pictures and they would probably support their representatives in favor of Sunday shows.

Both Different.

We are frank to admit that in the first place Sunday opening seems almost impossible. To secure support from the legislators in such a community would depend largely upon the character of exhibitors in that section. They would have to be politic and tactful, just as good as the rest of the community, but persons of more liberal views and great discernment in the selection and showing of the character of pictures that would in no way offend their patrons or fellow townspeople. They would have to be men beyond reproach and good repute. Such exhibitors in time, understanding the people, will bring the pictures up to the people and the people up to the pictures. The second instance, in the manufacturing or large communities, while we believe the same principles and careful discernment in the showing of pictures should be followed by the exhibitors, there is a reason, a very strong one, why moving pictures should be shown on Sunday to give the people the right kind of entertainment and recreation. We all know that they will get the wrong kind if they cannot get the right and where they have nothing to do they will find plenty to help them do it.

A Fact and Solution.

We are now up against a stone wall, looking the fact squarely in the face, that the smaller places, towns and cities are largely in the majority and they govern the state legislators to a great extent. After considering this fact very carefully, it has been decided that the only way to meet the question of Sunday opening is through a bill appealing for local option and leaving it to each community to decide in open election what the will of the majority of the people may be on the subject. Under present conditions it seems to be the only solution of the subject.

At Your Service

By Sam Spedon.

ANY publication that is afraid to print the news because it might lose advertising is digging its own grave and writing its own obituary in advance. Such a publication is suffering with journalistic gangrene and mortification has already set in. Anyone that makes the assertion and aspersion that a bona fide trade journal is governed by such fear insults the whole industry. We believe that the publication of verified news is as welcome to the person or business about whom it is published as it is to those who read it and are not involved. The truth, without malice aforethought, is a corrective and matter of concern and benefit to the whole industry. A sincere and honest publication has nothing to fear and everything to gain by publishing it. A real publication will never make itself a gossip and scandal monger, but the statement of facts, confirmed and sponsored, is its bounden duty to its readers and the service demanded by them. We are glad to say that the old cry that the trade press was afraid to publish the exhibitors' side because it favored the producers, is becoming fainter and fainter. Our opinion of the exhibitor and producers is too big to accredit either with the insinuation that it holds the whip to chastise us or the sword of Damocles over our heads to destroy us.

News Co-operation.

We have correspondents and representatives in all parts of this country and abroad, but it is impossible for them to be everywhere at the same time. We can always get the news from the producers—their press agents are always on the job. It is different with the exhibitors; they are legion, therefore, we need their co-operation. The exhibitors are realizing what co-operation means, they need it, everybody needs it, we need it. When you hold a meeting and our representative doesn't, or can't reach you, get the secretary of your league to send in a copy of the minutes or a report of it. If anything is on your mind that you think the rest of the industry ought to know, anything you want to say or ask, send it along and we will give it the space it deserves or let you know the reason why.

The Showmanship of D. W. Griffith

By Edward Weitzel.

NOW three years old, "The Birth of a Nation" is still going strong. No other screen spectacle has equaled its success. While the Griffith picture was among the first of its class and derived the inherent advantage of novelty, the showmanship in its construction played one of the most important parts in the unique history of its public favor. Every device known to the "show world" was employed in its making. These were supplemented by the originality, deep artistic insight, and unbounded faith of the man who created the spectacle.

Possessed of a thorough working knowledge of the laws that have enabled the great practical dramatists and producers of the past to fashion the masterpieces of the stage—in other words, showmanship in its best sense—D. W. Griffith applied his knowledge to the special requirements of the screen. From his selection of a subject to the smallest detail of production his work will square with the best traditions of "Giving the public what it wants." His showmanship is ninety-five per cent. perfect, and that is why "The Birth of a Nation" has broken all screen records as a financial investment.

Such a result could not have been accomplished, of course, without—what many earnest but mistaken writers on the subject of the stage and the screen imagine is outside the province of showmanship—artistic merit. In point of fact, it is the cornerstone of every worthy achievement; showmanship being the skill that takes the gold and the precious stones of thought after they have been mined and supplies everyone connected with their journey from the raw material to the purchaser with the best tools and conditions to secure a wide market for the product.

Showmanship, when properly directed, becomes the "handmaiden of screen art." Highbrowed dilettanti are given to regarding it with lofty disdain. Others see in it a depraved panderer whose only object is sordid gain; a trafficker in the purity and charm of an art which it debases and sells to the common rabble. Being of human invention, it has its vices as well as its virtues, but the latter qualities far outnumber the former.

The wares of the great diamond merchants, art dealers and silversmiths on Fifth avenue reveal showmanship of the highest order at every stage of their fabrication, and also in the manner in which they are offered for sale. Each article is so made that it pleases nearly every beholder. Its intrinsic worth is so presented to the public that none of its value is obscured, a result that requires the experience and skill called showmanship in the amusement business; and showmanship is the secret of the success of "The Birth of a Nation."

Commencing with his choice of a theme, D. W. Griffith gave proof of his showmanship when he selected "The Clansman." This story by Thomas Dixon had life and movement and dealt with strong passions. It also had picturesque features which lent themselves to the large effects that were absolutely necessary if the interest and broad sweep of dramatic action introduced by the Civil War episodes in the first part of the picture were to be maintained throughout the reconstruction period. The raids of the Klu Klux Klan were the principal effects of this nature.

The struggle between the North and the South is a heroic theme, and the director's choice of incidents carried out the assertions regarding his showmanship. Griffith left nothing to chance. He picked out "surefire" situations and bits of business and transferred them to the screen with a power of effect that made clear their fullest meaning. Keenly alive to the fact that the mother who came to plead with Abraham Lincoln for the life of her son was a familiar figure on the stage, he did not under-rate the vitality of the incident when presented by a new medium. It was the same with the situation of the two young chaps, one a Northerner, the other from the South, and still warm friends when the fortunes of war brought them face to face upon the battlefield, where they died in each other's arms. Griffith did not discard the incident because it came from behind the footlights and could also be found between the covers of a book. His showmanship told him it belonged in his picture because he had the right setting for it and could give it a treatment that would add novelty and a deeper poignancy to a well tried emotional bit.

And so it goes, all through the picture! There is no experimenting, no indication of that naive ignorance of the practical side of stage and screen production which makes the works of many famous writers such brilliant failures when they undertake to express their great thoughts in dramatic form. Action—abundant, expertly accelerated and vitally essential action—chains the attention through the two hours of the picture's telling; and the psychology of its showmanship is never at fault. Even the repetition of the rescue by the Klu Klux Klan does not anti-climax the finish, the force and novelty of the onrush of the fantastically clad horsemen carrying the interest at undiminished speed.

A word concerning the ethical effect of "The Birth of a Nation." Its importance to the advancement of the screen can hardly be overestimated; nor the skill with which it recreates two of the most momentous periods of our history. It also reveals another significant phase of our national life: A story written by an ardent Southerner and produced by another Southerner equally as anxious to tell the South's side of the Civil War and the reconstruction era that followed has been shown to millions of Northern people and has excited only their admiration and sympathy. The objection that has come from the Northern negro and certain portions of the white race has not been of sufficient volume to affect this condition in any material degree. The spirit of fair play thus brought to the surface is worth more than a passing thought.

Readjustments of Standards

By Louis Reevs Harrison.

THE entire system of producing moving pictures is founded on the idea of improvement, hence it is hardly too much to say that no reason exists for "playing down" among people who are not headed that way. The cultivation and training of the audience have been silently going on for many years, until that body has become more or less capable of judging screen plays, so much so that the keenest comments I have heard during the past year have come from playgoers who make no pretense of critical ability. They are simply "fans," steady patrons, who know all the artists by name and discuss merits and defects with the utmost freedom.

Without claiming superior intelligence for such persons, they go so often to the exhibitions that they begin to figure out values by effects upon themselves. They test the worth of what is shown on the screen by the sensations it arouses, or fails to arouse, in themselves. Asked why they do not like this or that seemingly superior product, they can tell, and there is an astonishing agreement among them on points of failure. The reviewer might be deeply impressed by the care and good taste displayed in treatment, but it is all lost on the "fan" if some apparently unimportant defect in logic kills his interest.

Children, as a rule, notice small inconsistencies, but the grown-up puts his finger unerringly upon any large disagreement between the idea of the play and the action. All go to be stirred, or thrilled, amused or moved, and all have come to recognize the difference between banal sentiment and the real thing. This collective consciousness of the audience is beginning to reject inanities and artificialities of the machine-made, studio-built piece. When pictures pall on the audience it is time to readjust standards.

We all get into the habit of thinking in ruts. The average mind is concerned chiefly with advantages to be secured for the individual in a day when really great achievement is the result of composite effort. No individual, however, is responsible for the whole picture under the present system. The producer is often overwhelmed with the multitude and variety of things demanding his attention, hence he tries to delegate matters of judgment to various departments and get at consensus of opinion. There he runs up against one or another ready-made standard by which all plays must be selected.

Despite all this, it is coming to be recognized more and more that there are no eternal principles to guide, no distinct dramatic values other than those which can be summed up and classified in what has already been done. Yet the greatest writers of other days were those least influenced by dogma. From Goethe to Bernard Shaw, the creative artists continually jarred the theorists. It is now almost fully realized that art is not didactic, not enslaved by rules, precepts and doctrines.

An interesting story, one that pleases, entertains or sets us thinking, is more or less a law unto itself. It has precedent over the criticism which analyzes and classifies it. Whether it protrays the result of complicated antecedent causes or starts with motives which lead up to results is not a matter of great consequence if it holds us in its thrall from beginning to end. We may dream our way through mystery or follow some panorama of entrancing experience—the concrete art seems to be to lead us up to some moment of absorbing interest capable of more than one development and threatening what we hope will not happen. The main point of structure is to rightly place the crisis, or high climax nicely at some part of the finish.

It may be taken for granted without discussion that the producer wishes to give the exhibitor something which will satisfy the average audience. In going about it the producer may have to consider his contract with a certain high-priced and popular star. She also must be pleased. Screen failure means a great deal to her. The producer naturally searches for a story which will suit her ideas, and thus he takes the road to the left instead of that to the right. What he needs is a great play, in whose success she is bound to heavily participate, because she will inevitably be more representative to the audience than the dramatist.

By injecting her personality into the interpretation of a superior role under capable direction exactly the right combination is made to carry out the producer's initial purpose. While it is nearly always possible to rearrange development so as to broaden the star's opportunity, it is a wrong course to pursue to string out a series of ill-adjusted scenes merely for the sake of exploiting that star's personality. When she insists upon any such thing being done, she injures herself and all others concerned to an extent not easy to repair. From her should be won recognition that she is a vital element in a composite work.

As purely a matter of creative criticism, it is here suggested that the producer make known to star, director and author in conference that a unity of purpose and a harmony of action will best serve the individual interests of each and every factor in production. Here is a starting point for a readjustment of standards. The author naturally lays stress on the placing of his crisis and upon the arrangement of events leading up to the high point of audience interest, but he may learn much from both director and interpreter as to the most effective method of leading up to the climax of his story.

Just as in all lines of business where there is up-to-date organization, enthusiasm and initiative and unity of relation should be encouraged, not separated and repressed, as under many of the systems now existing in the studios. Individual ambition, the desire to run things, is to be expected, but it results in an autocratic, domineering and prejudiced attitude among those who should be brought to consider the common interest as superior to that of any one individual. A first move in the readjustment of standards might well be that headed toward harmony of effort.

Inasmuch as the tremendous outpouring of pictured stories, exceeding that of all other arts of expression combined, has created what might be called a "trained audience," at least a critical portion of the average audience, the sensible response is to give the right sort of answer to a more cultivated demand. Ultimately this influence will be felt in bringing added attendance to the exhibitions. No man is really working for the exhibitor's interest, and thus for the entire interest of moving pictures, who makes no effort toward measuring up to higher standards.

A readjustment of production may lead to many other happy results than that of making the business pay larger dividends. It may dispense with the poverty of ideas in the stories shown and substitute truth for error. It may do away with flashy display by temperamental personalities now afflicting us with their examples of egomania, and replace these with superior interpretation of what is interesting in human nature. With a finer agreement among the factors of production may come a deeper sympathy and higher respect from those on whom the future of moving pictures depends, the people.

No Place for German Sympathizers

Was the Biltmore on Washington's Birthday, when "The Eagle's Eye" Was Shown.

A PRIVATE showing of the first three episodes of the patriotic serial, "The Eagle's Eye," in the Grand Ball Room of the Hotel Biltmore, New York, on Washington's Birthday, demonstrated one thing very plainly—it was no place for German sympathizers. The ball room was packed, the attendance numbering around fifteen hundred, and the expose of the plotting of the Imperial German Government in America was received with every indication of approval.

Before the showing of the serial commenced Dr. William J. Hornaday, president of the American Defense Society, made a short address in which he took occasion to recall to his hearers the full extent of Germany's treachery in this country and her crimes against the laws of humanity. Dr. Hornaday did not mince his words, and if there were any friends of the Kaiser in the audience the speaker must have given them an unpleasant twenty minutes.

Dr. Hornaday gave "The Eagle's Eye" his hearty indorsement and pointed out the good that would result from showing a picture of this nature founded on facts furnished by William J. Flynn, the recently retired chief of the United States Secret Service, in as many of the cities and towns of this country as possible. It would, he said, help everyone to realize what a relentless foe Germany is, and to strengthen the determination to crush her power at any cost. Representatives from many patriotic societies were present, including the National Security League, American Flag Association, American Legion, Colonial Dames of America, Congress of States Society, George Washington Memorial Association, Guardians of American Liberty and Order of the Founders and Patriots of America.

The episodes shown have already been reviewed in the Moving Picture World. Produced by the Whartons, with King Baggot and Marguerite Snow at the head of the cast, the serial gives every promise of achieving marked success.

Eight Hour Bills Up in Kentucky

Three Measures Provide Penalties for Violation and Extra Rates for Overtime.

EMPLOYERS in general are watching with concern a series of bills which have been introduced before the legislature in an attempt to make Kentucky operate under an eight-hour working day. Two bills have been introduced into the House and one in the Senate. The principal of these bills is the Thornton Bill H. B. No. 18, referred to the Committee on Immigration and Labor, and later reported favorably and placed on the record.

All three bills provide for penalties for failure to comply with the law, and also provide extra wages for all overtime, under the House bill at the rate of one and one-third the regular pay, with a penalty of $100 for each infraction.

The Thornton Bill calls for 50 per cent. additional for all overtime. This bill is probably the most dangerous of the lot. The only exceptions to its provisions are domestic and agricultural pursuits.

CAPTAIN ROBERT WARWICK "OVER THERE."

Captain Robert Warwick, a graduate of the last Plattsburg training camp, is in France. A cable dispatch has been received from him, bearing the single word "Safe." Captain Warwick left the United States about the middle of January under instructions to report to General Pershing, by whom, it was understood, the player would be assigned to the intelligence bureau. Captain Warwick was in Washington just prior to his departure. In the lobby of one of the big hotels a well-known motion picture director remarked to a World man: "There's Captain Bob Warwick. I'll leave it to you if there is any more soldier-like figure among all the officers we have seen here tonight." And Arthur Ashley was right.

The many friends of Captain Warwick will be glad to hear of his safe arrival.

CAPTAIN CASTLE IN ANIMATED WEEKLY.

The last motion pictures taken of Captain Vernon Castle, the late popular dancer and British flier, were made by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at one of the aviation training camps and are shown in the current issue of their Animated Weekly. A special print of these pictures will be presented to Mrs. Vernon Castle by the Universal Company.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Philadelphia League Meets

Consolidated with United Exhibitors' Association—League Officials Resign and Are Re-Elected.

THE Philadelphia Exhibitors' League of America held its regular meeting at its headquarters, 313 Vine street, on Tuesday afternoon, February 19. About sixty members were in attendance, including several members of the United Exhibitors' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland. The league's president, Judge J. O'Donnell, called the meeting to order and, after the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, he stated that the main object of the meeting was to bring about the affiliation of the United Exhibitors' Association with the Philadelphia Exhibitors' League, the two bodies uniting.

The league had decided that as this was to be done, the only fair way to bring it about was for the present officers of the league to resign and have an election of new officers by the united organization. The secretary thereupon read the resignations, which were accepted, and the United Exhibitors' League, as the coalition was called, proceeded with the election of officers for the ensuing year. The name of Judge O'Donnell was placed in nomination for president, and he, with all the retiring officers of the league, were unanimously re-elected. Following are the officers: J. O'Donnell, president; S. B. Black, vice-president; J. G. Conway, 2nd vice-president; C. H. Goodwin, secretary; B. Schnidler, assistant secretary, and Harry Green, treasurer.

Judge O'Donnell made a stirring speech on harmony, cooperation and sticking together. Among other things, he said there was no need of antagonistic competition between members and requested that where this kind of competition existed between a member and a non-member, that the former endeavor to bring the latter into the fold. Edward J. O'Keefe, of Atlantic City, did not mince matters in speaking of the stand the United Exhibitors had taken against the Mastbaum interests in Philadelphia. He said Mastbaum had ruled the exhibitors with an iron hand and exacted tithes from them with a threat to drive them out of business if they did not accept his terms for rentals. In many cases he did control certain productions, which they were obliged to get from his exchanges.

At last the exhibitors and producers have woke up and he no longer controls the output, excepting Metro, and the exhibitors were able to get their films direct from other exchanges at a lower price, minus the 10% he demanded on their bookings. He also said that out of one hundred and fifty-two licensed exhibitors, the United Exhibitors' League had one hundred and nine as members.

All the officers elect were introduced to the members and each one made a few remarks, pledging their support to the league and its president. Sam Spedon, of the Moving Picture World, was introduced and made a brief address.

As the meeting was called for 1 P. M. coffee and light refreshments were served to insure beginning the order of business promptly at 2 o'clock.

WASHINGTON STATE JOINS TAX PROTEST.

The Washington Theater Managers' Association held its regular monthly meeting on February 5 at its headquarters in the Central building, Seattle, Washington. The only business outside of the regular routine was the action taken with reference to a communication from the North Carolina exhibitors' organization and also to a letter from the independent producers. The North Carolina association outlined its plans for protesting the admission tax and asked that the Washington exhibitors co-operate with them. This organization decided to do so by asking each of its members to send in a report of the effect of the tax to his congressman. In reply to the independent producers the secretary was instructed to write that the Washington exhibitors would co-operate with them in so far as they were able.

Manhattan Exhibitors In Session

Discuss a Number of Propositions, but Decide None—State League Meeting to Be Held March 5 and 6.

THE regular meeting of the Manhattan local exhibitors league was held at its rooms in New York City on Thursday afternoon, February 21. About thirty members were in attendance. Meeting called to order 3 P. M. The president, John Manheimer, said, after the roll call: "The primary object of this meeting is to meet Senator S. A. Cotillo of the Harlem district. Senator Cotillo had prepared a childrens' bill for introduction in the Senate and he has something to say about it and matters touching upon it." He had no sooner said this when he received a telephone message from the Senator saying he would be unable to attend. The chairman then explained that the Senator's bill was the one segregating children under twelve in seats set apart for them in theaters, under the chaperonage of a matron, to be paid a salary of twelve dollars a week. This bill does not meet with general approval owing to the matron's salary, which would probably be more than the income received from childrens' attendance in most houses. A motion made decided upon notifying delinquent members of their arrears and requesting them to pay up to still further strengthen the treasury of the league, which is free from debt and in very good shape.

During the discussion of outstanding accounts, collectable from the Madison Square Garden ball in 1916 and a reference to the per capita tax due the New York State league, it was announced that the State League would hold its annual convention in New York City, March 5 and 6.

The committee on new quarters for the league reported that the proposition of the Screen Club to rent part of their club house had not been accepted, but they were considering a location at 50th street and Broadway.

The committee to confer with Producers-Exhibitors Affiliated representatives reported that it had come to no decision, but the matter was still in abeyance. On motion a committee was appointed to confer with other local leagues on transportation, or delivery and collection of films. Chas. Waring, J. Hocheimer and Wm. Hilkemeier are the committee. It is to investigate the propositions submitted to the league on transportation.

Mr. Hilkemeier told of a resolution that had been offered in the Board of Aldermen to increase the license fee of all theaters operating under common show licenses from $25 to $500, according to seating capacity. Such a rule would reduce the seating capacity and necessitate alterations that would work a hardship upon the smaller exhibitors. It was decided to leave this matter to the executive committee to investigate and act upon, as it saw fit.

Carolina Exhibitors Meet Exchangemen

Lay Foundation for Co-operative Booking Agency—Prominent Producers Represented.

REPRESENTATIVE exhibitors from all over North and South Carolina, in called convention at Greensboro, Tuesday, February 12, laid the foundation for the Carolina Co-operative Booking Agency, which, according to the outlines furnished the World representative, will embody features never before practiced by a community booking office.

Exchangemen representing the principal producing organizations doing business in the Carolinas are working hand in hand with the exhibitors of North and South Carolina toward the formation of the Carolina Co-operative Booking Agency, which will be built up along new and progressive lines in accord with a true analysis of the rights of the exchanges as weighed against the needs of the exhibitors making for a harmonious transacting of all business incident to the renting of films to the members of the booking organization. Mutual, Fox, Paramount, Universal, Pathe, Metro and other producers' representatives present at the meeting are as enthusiastic as are the exhibitors themselves over the prospect of a sincerely co-operative organization through which both exchanges and exhibitors will receive a square deal as administered by an executive body composed of some of the broadest-minded exhibitors in the territory.

Plans in detail have not yet been perfected, but it can be stated that the office will be in operation within the next sixty days, with headquarters in Charlotte, N. C. Tentative arrangements call for organization and incorporation within the next two weeks with a working capital of sufficient size to enable the office to give the required evidences of good faith to all exchanges with whom it will deal. Every member of the exchange who receives service through it will own one share of stock in the office for each theater under his control, this insuring an even distribution of controlling power, with no monopoly, except such as the larger owners of theater holdings are entitled to. From those present at the Greensboro meeting more than eighty shares were subscribed promptly, and a final organization meeting will be called to convene in Charlotte within the next ten days to perfect the organization and open the office.

Present at the Greensboro convention was Joseph A. Golden, secretary and treasurer of the Producers' and Exhibitors' Affiliated of New York, projecting his direct plan of distribution of the products of Herbert Brenon, Ralph Ince, Frohman Amusement Company, Rialto Pictures Company, the Lillian Walker Company and the Triumph Company, but his proposition was not closed for the circuit at that meeting, and will probably be acted upon at the Charlotte meeting.

Percy W. Wells, president of the North Carolina League, is enthusiastic over progress toward the formation of the booking office and states that during his investigation of systems in vogue in different so-called co-operative booking circuits he has not seen a plan which involves such adequate regard and specific attention to the rights of both producer and exhibitor as the plan which is being evolved for the Carolina office. Most of the agreements, says Mr. Wells, which the booking offices would try to put over on the exchanges are lopsided and take into consideration only the exhibitors' side, whereas, he contends, to make such an organization a permanent success, entirely different fundamental principles must be adopted which not only will enable the exhibitor to obtain a square deal, but will guarantee to the producers adequate income from their product so that it will not become necessary for them to serve such organizations at a loss and saddle an extra profit on outside exhibitors to break even. The exchange managers in this territory realize that the Carolina plan will enable them to transact their business, covering a wide territory, through a directoral board which is composed of broad-minded business men who will be willing and anxious to look at both sides of the question.

It is contemplated opening a supply house in Charlotte in connection with the booking office, a member of the league who conducts such an establishment in this territory having offered his entire plant to the organization at cost inventory.

CINCINNATI EXHIBITORS ELECT OFFICERS.

The annual election of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce was held recently at the League's quarters in the Chamber, with the following result: President, F. L. Emmert; first vice-president, A. G. Hestesheimer; second vice-president, J. A. Ackerman; treasurer, Otto Luedeking; sergeant-at-arms, Frank Willenborg; managing secretary, H. Serkowich. The new administration takes charge at once.

Indiana Branch of American Meets

Twenty-five Members Listen to Reports and Discuss Plans for Future Action.

MEMBERS of the Indiana branch of the American Exhibitors' Association met in Indianapolis Tuesday, February 19, and discussed the activities of the association for the year 1918. Although very disagreeable weather prevailed about twenty-five exhibitors from various parts of the state were present.

Frank J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Ind., president of the association, opened the meeting with a brief summary of the work done by the association during the past year, including the various phases of legislative work, and told of some of the things the association should do in 1918. Mr. Rembusch was followed by Ray Andrews, secretary, who gave a report of the financial condition of the association.

Following the reports by the president and secretary and a general discussion of the various questions affecting the exhibitors at this time a committee was appointed to arrange for a meeting on Tuesday, March 5, for the purpose of devising ways and means for the permanent advancement of the association. Much of the time was spent in discussions regarding co-operative booking between exhibitors, and those attending the meeting went on record as being in favor of the plan.

Mr. Rembusch pointed out what a great change had taken place in the industry, and added that in his opinion there never was a better time than the future for good prospects for the exhibitors. He said he thought the multiple programs offered will eventually cause the price of film service to come to reasonable figures again. Mr. Rembusch pointed out that it will not be long until the people of Indiana will be electing representatives to the state legislature, and he urged the exhibitors of the state to start immediately to try to pick out good candidates.

Exhibitors Continue Reel Tax Fight

Organized Theater Men of Alameda County, Cal., Place Case in Hands of Federal Officials.

THE organized exhibitors of Alameda County, Cal., are keeping up their fight against the reel tax imposed upon them by local film exchanges and their case has now been placed in the hands of Federal officials. A committee headed by Allen E. King has been busy for some time getting documentary evidence in shape, and this has been placed before Collector of Internal Revenue Justus H. Wardell, of San Francisco. The claim upon which the most emphasis is placed is that a tax of 15 cents a reel has been levied and collected on films made and released before Congress placed any tax on the footage of moving picture films. A large lot of receipted bills, showing this to be the case, has been gathered by the East Bay exhibitors, and the claim is made that about a dozen local film exchanges have been collecting this tax.

Upon the receipt of this evidence Collector of Internal Revenue Wardell sent notices to the film exchanges against which complaints had been filed, asking for a statement of their side of the matter. A meeting of film exchange managers was accordingly held and a committee of three, consisting of William J. Citron, of Fox; J. W. Allen, or Paramount, and Louis Reichart, of Metro, was appointed to call upon the Federal official. The latter has not intimated what action he will take in the matter.

OHIO EXHIBITORS FORM STATE RIGHT COMPANY.

Exhibitors of Cleveland and Northern Ohio have taken the first steps toward the formation of a company to exploit state right features. This action came following the two-day stay in Cleveland of C. C. Pettijohn, of the American Exhibitors' League, and Harry Rapf, film producer.

The exhibitors will organize a stock company and operate along the lines of the First National Exhibitors circuit, except that it is probable that they will give the actual distribution of their films to some independent exchange to handle on percentage.

Their plans call for one feature a week, the minimum price for the entire United States to be $25,000 and the maximum price $50,000. The Cleveland company, therefore, will be able to put its features out at from $1,800 to $3,000 each.

Nearly a half-dozen sessions were held during the week ended February 16, at which there were good attendances.

Sixth Annual Oklahoma Convention

American Exhibitors' Association in Convention Re-elects All Officers—Would Put Deposits in Liberty Bonds.

THE sixth annual convention of the motion picture exhibitors, now known as the Oklahoma Branch American Exhibitors Association, convened at the Lee Huckins hotel, Oklahoma City, February 5. Sixty-two exhibitors from various parts of the state were present, Oklahoma City, Muskogee and Tulsa being represented by 100 per cent. membership. The roll call of officers showed all to be present—A. B. Momand, Shawnee, president; S. H. Jones, Altus, vice-president; H. W. McCall, Oklahoma City, second vice-president; C. D. Jackson, Stillwater, treasurer, and L. W. Brophy, Muskogee, secretary.

The officers were re-elected for the coming year by acclamation. Representatives of the various film companies were present and made short talks at the open meeting. Hoyt Morrow, the representative of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, gave an interesting talk on its plan of manufacturing and distributing film.

Fourteen new members were admitted to membership. The convention went on record as being opposed to the deposit system and agreed to give preference to film companies that show a disposition to be fair.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted and a copy wired to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo:

Be it Resolved, That the American Exhibitors' Association, Oklahoma State Branch, in convention assembled, do hereby give consent and authorize the United States Government to request that the film companies convert into Liberty bonds the vast amount of exhibitors' money now held by said film companies as advance deposits for film service, such bonds to be held by the film companies as security deposits on film service furnished to the exhibitors by the said film companies to the end that this money, which is now lying idle, may be used in the prosecution of the war. Oklahoma members of the association who are now receiving interest on advance deposits in excess of the rate paid on Liberty bonds agree to accept the reduction in interest to the amount paid on such bonds.

We further pledge our continued support of the Government in all war measures. Our screens are open to all patriotic movements and our theaters open to Four-Minute Men and other duly authorized speakers.

L. W. BROPHY, Secretary.

St. Louis Exhibitors Prospering

Biggest Business in Three Years Follows Cracking of Cold Wave and Lifting of Fuel Ban.

THE breaking of the cold wave in St. Louis ushered in an era of prosperity for the moving picture houses that is unparalleled by anything since the early days of 1915. Many other things contributed to the boom—the strike of 3,000 carmen was settled; the Fuel Administration lifted all bans and orders save the lightless Thursday and Sunday proviso, and snow which had covered the ground for more than eight weeks without a break disappeared.

Frank Tate, head of the Cella-Tate syndicate of more than fifteen houses, said the rush to the pictures was both unprecedented and unanticipated. Joseph Mogler, president of the Exhibitors' League, declared that every house in the city is reporting unusually brisk business.

D. M. Thomas of the Fox Company, Jack Weil of the World, and Manager William Sievers of the First National all declare that the distribution of films increased more than 33⅓ per cent. over the winter average.

Would Charge Footage Waste to Director

Head of Film Company Declares That Is the Remedy for What He Calls Incompetency.

By S. S. Hutchinson, President of American.

REDUCTION of output seems to be occupying manufacturers to some extent just now. Level-headed manufacturers have seen this crisis coming for over a year and have prepared for it. Every producer who has taken the precaution to look ahead and figure out the situation for himself has known that reduction was bound to come. No company can afford to work without profit and as the motion picture film is not usually an article which increases in value with the holding, it cannot pay to make too many just to shelve for a possible market.

For one thing, conservation in the use of the film proper is important. When you hear a director solemnly assuring you that he must waste thousands of feet of film in order to produce one picture, you may safely assume that he does not know how to make a picture and is puting up a bluff to conceal his ignorance. You might as well expect your architect, in figuring on lumber for a new house, to tell you that while only 50,000 feet of lumber will be used in the finished product, you must order 100,000 to allow for artistic temperament in the wastage.

If the producers charged up the wastage of film to the director the abuse would soon be remedied. A wastage of film is a tacit admission of incompetency on the part of the director—he admits that he has not once had a clear outline of his picture in his mind—he has been fishing for ideas all the time.

If we had a little more horse sense in the picture business to offset the artistic temperament that we seem to think is essential perhaps we would not find it necessary to hold so many useless conferences in large hotels to discuss the motion picture situation. We know what the situation is—any level-headed business man knows enough to retrench when retrenching is necessary.

The material used in the manufacture of films is necessary just now as a war product. Cotton and nitric acid are too valuable to be wasted at the artistic whim of a vague director who has to try out thousands of feet of film before he knows what he is doing. Such a criminal waste of valuable material should not be allowed in any studio at this time. The industry should voluntarily reduce production from a patriotic motive, if nothing else, and thereby release necessary war products.

There is no necessity for a waste of material at any time. If manufacturers would emply less time in arguing over nonessential details of the situation and put a business head to work ferreting out the leaks in the industry and cementing them up there would not only be a decided gain in finances but a higher standard for pictures.

Bernard J. Durning

Director of "Aliens" at Edison Studio Rose from the Ranks and Has Made Good.

BERNARD J. DURNING, director of the Edison new six-reel picture, "Aliens," starring Shirley Mason, has risen from the ranks of studio employment, instead of stepping from the theatric boards to the realm of the camera and the megaphone. He was brought up and educated in the Bronx, where he attended Fordham University. Upon leaving college he accepted a minor position with the Edison Company and worked for years mastering details.

Bernard J. Durning.

As assistant to Edwin S. Porter, the celebrated director who started Famous Players on the high-road to success, he acquired a most valuable experience. He was also a valued assistant of John Collins, then became production manager of the Edison studio and held that position for three years, whence he was promoted to director nearly a year ago.

The studio training has made Mr. Durning a master of technique, acquainted with every angle of the game. Instead of trusting to luck and other folks' knowledge, he is enabled to guide his subordinates intelligently and to suggest improved methods. As an instance, he invented and carried into execution an entirely new idea in the lighting of the night scenes in "Aliens." Some very fine silhouette effects were the result of painstaking labor and refusal to be daunted by obstacles.

On the art side Durning is a close student of costuming, pose, design, perspective, composition and harmony. In the actual direction of the players he subordinates everything else to dramatic values. Using the quietest methods, he interprets the story and gets them to live it. There is no blind "registering" of emotions, but a clear understanding of what is to be done and a careful upbuilding of climax. Those who have seen the portions of "Aliens" already assembled express the belief that its creator will take a deservedly prominent place in the ranks of the leading directors.

Col. Wm. Fox Honored at Dinner

Gold Ball Room of Astor Hotel the Scene of Brilliant Testimonial to Motion Picture Man.

MORE than a thousand men gathered in tne Gold Ball Room of the Astor Sunday evening, February 24, to do honor to William Fox. In the balconies were scores of handsomely gowned women who listened to the speeches, gazed upon their relatives and friends while the males dined and, later, joined in the dancing that followed an evening of feasting and speeches.

The purpose of the dinner, as announced, was the culmination of a desire on the part of motion picture and vaudeville magnates to do honor to Mr. Fox; but the ultimate outcome was shaped to acclaim largely his unselfish philanthropy and tireless activities as expressed in the great success Mr. Fox attained in the recent "drive" for funds in aid of Jewish charities. After conspicuous service in a "drive" for funds to give succor to Jews in beleagured Palestine, Mr. Fox, a few weeks ago, personally headed an intensive "drive" to get new members for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropic Societies.

How well Mr. Fox succeeded, as "Colonel" of the team which enrolled the greatest number, was told by men of prominence in the Jewish commercial and philanthropic field in glowing tributes to the guest of honor during the speeches that followed the dinner. Felix M. Warburg said that Mr. Fox's activities in Jewish charities dated from his boyhood, when he was himself an object of tender care by a Jewish institution while he was in a hospital. He resolved then to do his share for the unfortunate some day, and during his years of struggle to fortune he never forgot his resolution.

It was remarkable that none of the speechmakers made reference to Mr. Fox's achievements in the vaudeville field, while the dais raised above the ballroom floor, on the Broadway side of the room, was peopled by representative vaudeville magnates. The references to Mr. Fox's showmanship were all made applicable to his moving picture activities, while the only man on the dais who is strictly and exclusively concerned in moving pictures was Adolph Zukor. Of the thirty men scheduled to occupy the dais, to right and left of Toastmaster Wilton Lackaye, the following showmen have made moving pictures only a part, even though a prominent part, of their business activities: William A. Brady, Benjamin S. Moss, Sylvester Z. Poli, Lee Shubert, John J. Murdock, L. Lawrence Weber and Nicholas M. Schenck.

Arthur Brisbane sent, from Washington, a letter read by Joseph Johnson, which was, perforce, substituted for a speech by that brilliant journalist that the guests regretted could not be delivered. That part of Editor Brisbane's letter that referred to Mr. Fox's activities in the field of motion pictures is given as an index of a somewhat revised, if not entirely altered view, of the screen's opportunity for great usefulness. Mr. Brisbane wrote, in part:

"Better than the spoken word, infinitely better than the word written, the lifelike moving picture talks directly to the brain. Men have used the spoken and written word for a few centuries only. They have used their eyes as men for a quarter of a million years and for millions of years before that as animals.

"The eye tells the mind instantly. The eye sees an entire picture, and all sides of any truth, moral or scientific. To put good thoughts, noble actions, important truths, into pictures that move, is to prepare food for the human brain—and there is no more important work than that.

"Besides being educational, the moving picture offers the nation relaxation, at a time when it is needed, when the mind is tired and anxious. The moving picture in its power of instant presentation is as much of an advance upon the printing press, as was the printing press upon the illumined manuscript, and the old hieroglyphics. Mr. Fox is one of the few who have come through the rush and struggle of a new field of adventure with colors flying and success assured. Those who appreciate the importance of the work in which he is a leader honor modern progress when they honor him."

Diners who have become accustomed to theatrical feasts in New York expected a generous flow of sarcastic heralding from Rennold Wolf, who acted as "advance agent" for Mr. Fox in presenting witty side-lights, done in false colors, to illuminate the guest of honor's past. None were disappointed. Raymond Hitchcock made a particularly witty speech, and George M. Cohan mixed humor with sincere tribute.

Judge Victor J. Dowling approached nearer to real oratory than did any other speaker—if we may except the concluding remarks of the toastmaster. Mr. Lackaye was efficient in office as well as witty in his "asides," and in the end made a few remarks on the subject of patriotism that breathed the best instincts of loyalty to the cause of democracy. Judge Dowling concluded his speech with a graceful tribute to Mr. Fox and then presented a gold tablet, suitably inscribed, to commemorate the event as well as to bear lasting record of the showman's public service.

The diners rose to their feet when Mr. Fox was introduced; when Judge Dowling was presented, and again when the Judge, in referring to Jacob H. Schiff, paid tribute to the venerable leader of Jewish advancement in the United States. Mr. Schiff sat next to Judge Dowling, on the dais, and rose to acknowledge the applause that greeted the mark of courtesy. Three interludes of delightfully artistic accomplishment were provided by Signor Amato and Mme. Alda, of the Metropolitan Opera House, who each favored the diners with solos, enthusiastically encored, and also gave the duet from "Tales of Hoffman" as a final favor to the assemblage.

F. I. L. M. CLUB ENTERTAINS AT CLARIDGE.

On Saturday evening, February 23, the F. I. L. M. Club held a banquet and dance in the ballroom of the Hotel Claridge, New York City. A most delightful menu was served from nuts to coffee. During the serving of the meal several artists, furnished through the courtesy of the U. B. O., provided an entertaining program. Dancing began about 10 o'clock and continued until 1. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Friedman, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Connors, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Wells, Miles T. Gibbons, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rayo, Arthur J. Silverman, Anna Uswold, John J. Daley, B. Woody, S. Zierler, Rose L. Lueedman, Francis Harowitz, Charles H. Moses, A. Starlight, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Janis, Pearl E. Tucker, L. Zalondek, Mrs. Herbert F. Titlar, Sam Spedon, Robert H. Silverman, C. B. Price, J. M. Chadwick, Mr. Hammel and Joseph Klein. Everyone received an appropriate favor of modern headgear, scuttles of coal and balloons of all colors and sizes.

HELENA, MONT., TO HAVE $200,000 PICTURE HOUSE.

The new Marlow Theater, Helena, Mont., representing a $200,000 investment, is scheduled to open this month. The house will have a seating capacity of 1,300 and will embrace every conceivable convenience for the comfort of the patron. The playhouse will be one of the most beautiful picture theaters in the state, and will be devoted to motion pictures, vaudeville and road shows.

C. W. Eckhardt will manage the theater for the Ansonia Amusement Company of Butte, which has the lease on the house. Mr. Eckhardt has been connected with the Ansonia Amusement Company for a number of years, having managed the Orpheum and Princess theaters in Butte for this company.

VICTORY THEATER TO BE REBUILT.

Schwind Realty Company, Dayton, Ohio, owners of the Victory theater in that city, which was recently destroyed by fire, will rebuilt the house. Plans are now being drawn for the new structure. It is estimated that $100,000 will be spent on the new theater.

Visit to Rothapfel's Home Town

By F. H. Richardson

Personally Conducted by the Motion Picture Impresario, a Party of Picture Folk See the Famous Home Theater

ON WEDNESDAY, February 20, it was the writer's privilege to witness the very remarkable home-coming of a very remarkable man. It was a thing well worth viewing because it illustrated the possibilities of a combination of pluck, stick-to-itiveness and real ability.

Ten years ago, in a very small theater in a very small town in the coal regions of Pennsylvania, a man, unknown to even local fame and entirely without capital or influential friends, started business as an exhibitor. A more unpromising surrounding or theater clienetele could hardly be imagined. The theater was up one flight of stairs at the rear of a plain, ordinary saloon, where beer was served to all at six schooners for a quarter, the embryo exhibitor graduating into that position from a job behind the aforesaid bar. The then none-too-clean, all-too-small little "theater" was all he had to start with.

But in addition was that intangible something we call vision. The man was a dreamer of dreams. He was an idealist, with the vigor of purpose necessary to accomplish his dreams against the sneers of an unbelieving world. That was a brief ten years ago. Today we find this man part owner and managing director of two of the leading silent drama theaters of the country, one of which probably occupies space on ground having higher monetary value per square foot than that of any other land occupied by a theater, dramatic or otherwise, in the entire world. I refer to Samuel Rothapfel of the Rialto and Rivoli theaters, of Broadway, New York City.

In considering the above it should be remembered that the writer is not one accustomed to handing out unearned bouquets. He has, in fact, rather vigorously opposed Mr. Rothapfel in certain matters in the past. Also he was one of the "unbelievers." Honest confession is good for the soul, and I am willing to make mine. Mr. Rothapfel has amply proved his case, and today stands in the mind of the writer as the leading and pioneer exponent of artistic presentation of the photoplay of this and—so far as I know—any other country. Ample proof of this is found in the fact that the Rialto theater has upon several occasions done the almost unbelievable total of, in round numbers, $21,000 in a single week, and, on the basis of "the proof of the pudding is in the eating," it must be considered that friend public would hand no manager that sum of money within seven days unless that manager was delivering the goods.

Kindly understand the foregoing is no mere verbal bouquet. The writer has, as before intimated, opposed Mr. Rothapfel in the past. He did so honestly and conscientiously; also he did so on what then appeared to be perfectly good grounds. Today the writer is thoroughly convinced that Samuel Rothapfel deserves his hearty support, as well as the support of every man who has the best interest of the silent drama at heart; therefore as an honest man he can do no less than say so. My compliments to Samuel Rothapfel! May it never again be my duty to oppose him in any particular, for to oppose the man who has actually accomplished such really wonderful results would indeed be unpleasant.

And now to my story. At the invitation of Mr. Rothapfel the following party journeyed to Scranton, Pa., on the date mentioned: Mr. Rothapfel, Mrs. Rothapfel, Florence Turner, Miss Valentine Grant, soon to be seen in the new superproduction, "The Belgian"; Lois Meredith, of the Vitagraph; Elinor Masters, of Bluebird fame; Mary Lawton, dramatic reader and actress of note; Sidney Olcott, director, who needs no introduction; Larry Trimble, director for the Hepworth Company and particularly for Miss Florence Turner; Fred Thompson, director, also requiring no introduction; Sheldon Lewis, of "Hidden Hand" fame; Phillip E. Bosen, assistant to Larry Trimble, and expert photographer; Pat O'Malley, who was with Sidney Olcott in Ireland and the East; Frederick Coburn, famous amateur photographer and expert cameraman, and F. H. Richardson, Moving Picture World. Clara Kimball Young, Virginia Pearson and Marguerite Clarke had expected to come, but weather conditions had thrown their work so far behind that it was found to be impossible.

At Scranton the station platform was a literal sea of humanity, through which a lane was only opened by strenuous methods. At the Strand theater Mr. Rothapfel introduced the various ones to an audience which filled literally every available square foot of space, including the lobby, and overflowed to the center of the street. Each one was accorded a hearty reception. Rothapfel himself was given an ovation lasting several minutes, Scranton being but a few miles from his old home—Forest City—and claiming share in him as the favored son of that section.

After a brief reception the party motored over roads varying from awful to terrible (ice and snow) through Carbondale, sixteen miles away, where the main street was lined with a mass of men, women and children, waiting for a glimpse of Rothapfel and his company, and on to Forest City, where is located the little theater in which he first blossomed forth as an exhibitor about nine years ago.

It is indeed a far cry from the "Home Theater" of Forest City to the Rialto and Rivoli of Broadway. To reach the former you scramble down a short hill from Main street, walk up a flight of stairs, pass through a "lobby" extending across the rear of the building and through swinging doors into the little theater, just at the right of the screen. The entrance, which also is the exit, and the only one, is not in the screen wall, but in the side wall at the right of the screen. The ceiling is twelve feet high at the screen end. The floor slopes upward toward the rear. The room is maybe fifty feet long by thirty wide. It is all the very most ordinary of the ordinary, yet we are told Mr. Rothapfel actually did create in these unpromising surroundings and with these almost impossible crude things something sufficiently out of the ordinary to attract at least local attention, and to encourage him to seek larger fields. And it is only after viewing the start, knowing the comparatively short lapse of time and the tremendous difficulties to be overcome and the reality of today, that one arrived at a competent understanding of the man Rothapfel and what he has accomplished.

I think every child and most of the grown-ups for many miles around were on the job to welcome the returned wanderer. Mr. Rothapfel's home-coming must have been highly gratifying. The whole landscape was smeared up with humanity, all intent on seeing the friend of other days and present hero of Broadway.

After a brief period for inspection and picture taking we were motored back to Carbondale, where was a combined welcome home for Rothapfel and Red Cross benefit ball, which packed the armory drill hall to standing capacity, some even draping themselves on the iron trusses supporting the roof. Rothapfel was again the center of attraction. He introduced the others to recurring waves of applause. From the Red Cross viewpoint the affair was one huge success. From Mr. Rothapfel's point of view it surely must have been the same.

And so we all went back to old Broadway next day, stepped back onto our various treadmills and again began the grind, but with another picture to add to that wonderful collection in the halls of memory, and with an added respect for the man Rothapfel and the work he has done.

WAR TRADE BOARD READY FOR APPLICATIONS.

Of interest to exporters of motion picture films is the announcement of the War Trade Board that it is now prepared to receive and consider applications for the export to Holland and Sweden, for domestic consumption, of motion picture films when in exchange, foot per foot, with films of similar manufacture.

Holland and Sweden have already concluded temporary agreements of a limited character with the United States, and it is in view of this fact that this step, in which Great Britain and France join, has been taken.

SCENARIO WRITERS JOIN WORLD FILM.

Rosalie Ashton and Beatrice Morse, collaborators on magazine and screen stories, have left Goldwyn and are now members of the scenario staff of the World Film Company. They are the authors of "The Undertow," "The Chastening," "The Brigadier-General," "Humility," "Rounding Off the Corners," "The Trail That Leads Nowhere," "My Little Sister," and others. They are now engaged on a story of the Orient for Montague Love.

Howard-Wells Plan Broader Activities

Louis Goodman Buys Into Company and Is Chosen General Manager.

LOUIS GOODMAN, prominent local attorney and newspaper man, becomes general manager of the large and constantly increasing theatrical activities of the Howard-Wells Amusement Company, with head offices in Wilmington, N. C., and has become financially interested in that corporation to the extent of a sizable figure.

James Howard and Percy W. Wells have conducted a theatrical business in Wilmington for the past twelve years, which had its inception in a small tent on North Front street and has been constantly enlarged until they now control all of the five theaters in Wilmington, operate a theater at Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C., and are becoming largely interested in states rights productions for their territory. They are also launching a portable outfit with which it is planned to give one-night stand picture shows to small hamlets and villages throughout the state. It is planned to put out at least a dozen such touring "companies" at an early date.

Mr. Goodman, who assumes managerial reigns over these extensive holdings and projects, has had experience with a road attraction and also newspaper experience which will be valuable to him in his new position. The former Howard-Wells organization remains the same with Mr. Wells, president; Mr. Howard, secretary-treasurer; D. M. Bain, publicity and booking manager, and Carl B. Rehder, manager of screen and program advertising.

Strand Places Dedicatory Tablet

Patriotic Act of Twenty-two Employes in Joining the Service Commemorated in Bronze—Ceremonious Unveiling in Theater's Lobby.

ON MONDAY, February 18, in the lobby of the Strand Theater in New York City, was unveiled the bronze tablet dedicated to twenty-two of its former employees who volunteered their services in the United States Army. The full orchestra of the theater and about two hundred guests and spectators assembled in the lobby. The exercises were started by the orchestra, playing a prelude, after which Doctor Wilson, publicity manager of the theater, introduced Sam Spedon, of the Moving Picture World, who made the unveiling speech. Just before he withdrew the flag that covered the tablet he said: "This is a simple ceremony accorded by the management of this theater to a few patriotic employees, men from among the people who have served the management faithfully and are now serving our country. Here in the lobby of this theater, one of the many theaters of the people, we dedicate this tablet. May it and this theater long remain as a monument of the people, for the people."

The orchestra followed the unveiling with "The Star Spangled Banner." An address was made by the Rev. George Waring, chaplain at Governors Island, and a prayer was offered by the Rev. M. Blum, rabbi in the Police Department, which brought the ceremonies to a close.

Film Fires Mainly Due to Smoking

So Declares National Protective Association as Result of Investigation of 157 Cases.

SMOKING is the main cause of fires in motion picture exchanges and theaters, according to an investigation made by the National Fire Protection Association. This association has made a tabulation of 157 reported fires involving these and found that in 42 cases the conflagrations were due to causes common to all risks, but 67 were due to special hazards of the motion picture business.

Of the first named 22 of the fires were due to smoking and 12 to lighting. Of the last named, 13 fires were started by the ignition of films during the operation of the projection machine; 9 were caused by electrical troubles incident to the operation of the projection machines, and 7 fires were caused by other exposure of films to the arc light of the machine.

In its report the National association recommends that smoking should be absolutely prohibited in film exchanges and booths in all sections of the country; that lights in rooms where films are stored or handled should be protected by wire guards or vaporproof globes; that the use of fireproof valves should be insisted upon, and that employes should be informed as to the extreme combustibility of the films which they handle.

"FLOOR BELOW" LAID IN NEWSPAPER OFFICE.

In "The Floor Below," Goldwyn's next production starring Mabel Normand, a number of scenes are laid in a busy newspaper office. Types known to all newspaper workers are found there, and some unique characters as well. Mabel Normand herself plays a part entirely new to her. She is the copy girl, who trudges back and forth with the work of editors and typesetters. By turns she is a slave to duty and an ally to the spirit of mischief, adored by the men with whom she works when she is not causing them to swear at her for her pranks.

By far the most amusing character outside of Patricia O'Rourke (played by Miss Normand) is Stubbs, a grizzled veteran who is none other than Melva Morgan, who edits the woman's page. He answers questions of the lovelorn, suggests recipes for food conservation, advises mothers how to cope with growing girls and fulfills generally the exalted function of a feminine mentor. In reality he is gruff, very masculine and a misogynist. This fills Patricia O'Rourke with glee, as indeed it did Miss Normand when the photodrama was under way.

BEN BRODSKY RETURNS FROM ORIENT.

Ben Brodsky, well known through his long connection with moving picture enterprises in the Orient, arrived in San Francisco a few days ago from Japan with a wonderful collection of films made in that country by the Ben Brodsky Moving Picture Company. During the past year he has toured Japan with a company, covering about six thousand miles and touching the leading points of interest. Full cooperation was had from the management of the Imperial Japanese Railways. Mr. Brodsky will probably take the films to New York before returning to Japan.

Fairbanks Runs Rodeo in Bay City

Rolls Up $35,000 for War Community Fund, Doubling Los Angeles Record—"Why Not?" He Asks.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS gave San Francisco a taste of pioneer days when he invaded the Coast metropolis at the head of a band of Indians, vaqueros and cowgirls, paraded Market street, stampeded a crowd to Ewing Field and thereby enriched the coffers of the War Community Fund to the extent of $35,000. Before coming here he received glowing reports from Mary Pickford as to the manner in which people might be expected to turn out, and in this was not disappointed, as the streets were jammed with humanity during the parade and Ewing Field was not able to accommodate all who desired to gain admittance. So great was the overflow that at the last minute a performance was planned for the following day and this likewise was a rousing success, even with but limited advertising. Before the rodeo Fairbanks whooped it up a little in the suburbs of the Greater San Francisco, appearing at the Auditorium Theater, Oakland, with Dustin Farnum, William H. Crane, George Primrose, Winifred Kingston, Edith Chapman and others of stage and screen fame, rolling up $2,000 for the fund.

The Fairbanks party was met on its arrival here by Mayor James Rolph, Jr., who also wears boots, rides wild horses, shoots glass balls and will be the next Governor if the professional politicians do not hogtie him. The introductions were effected while "Doug" was balancing himself on his hands on the hood of an automobile and kissing the stars on the American flag painted on it. Before his departure he expressed a desire to come back and stay longer; he lauded the climate as the most perfect he had ever seen and expressed astonishment that the city was not encircled with moving picture studios. He secured more than twice as much money here as he did at the Red Cross benefit event recently held at Los Angeles, but would say nothing about this other than "Why not?"

To Stop Exportation of Stolen Films

New Government Rule Requiring Examination Before Shipping Will Operate to Film Men's Advantage.

THE stealing, duping and pirating of motion picture productions, along with their subsequent exportation to other countries, have long been one of the troublesome problems of the film industry. The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry now believes that it has hit upon a certain means of eliminating this menace.

The United States government has just ruled that all films consigned to foreign countries must be submitted to examination 72 hours before sailing time. The announcement of the Collector of the Port of New York reads: "Any special article difficult of ready examination on the pier, such as concerns films, motion picture machines, phonograph records, musical instruments, etc., must be submitted for examination at room 123, Custom House, at least 72 hours before departure."

The National Association is arranging to furnish the Custom House authorities with official lists of all lost and stolen films and the proper concerns rightfully controlling them. All films submitted for exportation will be checked up by those lists and, of course, stolen, duped or pirated productions will be quickly detected. Thus the new government ruling, which, at first, might have been looked upon as a hardship, will prove of tremendous value to the whole industry.

Shuts Off Birmingham's Sunday Shows

Mayor of Alabama City Serves Notice on Exhibitors and They Move for Referendum.

MOVING picture theaters in Birmingham, Ala., will not be allowed by the city commission to operate on Sunday after April 14, according to an announcement by Dr. N. A. Barrett, president of the commission, at its meeting on Thursday, February 14. Petitions immediately were put in circulation by the theater men seeking a referendum on the proposal.

Theater managers must secure an election before April 14 unless they wish to close down on Sundays, according to an interpretation of the order issued Thursday morning by President Barrett, at the request of counsel for the moving picture men. Dr. Barrett said that unless the election was held by April 14, the theaters would be closed on April 21, and that the date set was the absolute limit. Mr. Coleman, a lawyer for the theater managers, thanked the commission for its stand and said that the show owners were entirely pleased with the situation. Petitions are now being circulated, and the picture men feel confident of winning the hard-fought battle.

The agitation was started in Birmingham over a year ago, resulting in permission for the shows to run for a certain length of time, to ascertain what objections could be found to Sunday operation. After a fight before the city authorities, it was decided to allow the shows to run until further complaint was made, which complaint was presented to the commission a few weeks ago by the Protestant Pastors' Association of Birmingham.

The city commission is required, under the five commissioner act, to submit any question to a vote of the people when petitioned to do so by 1,500 qualified voters of the city.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of February 24 at New York's Motion Picture Houses.

THE STRAND.—Mae Marsh in a screen version of Frank L. Packard's novel, "The Beloved Traitor," was at the head of the Strand program the week of February 24. The actions shift from the fishing banks to the studios of New York's Bohemian art circles. Goldwyn made the picture. "The Man Eater," one of James Montgomery Flagg's "Girls You All Know" series, was the special feature. "Around Central Arverne, France," .nd the Topical Review were also shown.

THE RIALTO.—Billie Burke in "Eve's Daughter," a Paramount picture adapted from Alicia Ramsey's play of the same name, was the leading player at the Rialto. Lionel Atwell and Florence Flynn, of the original company, are in the cast. A scenic of Yellowstone Park, the Rialto Animated Magazine and a Drew comedy, "Before and After Taking," completed the picture program.

THE RIVOLI.—"The Sign Invisible," a "First National" attraction, produced by Edgar Lewis, with Mabel Julienne Scott in the principal role, was the picture feature at the Rivoli. A Paramount-Sennett comedy, "It Pays to Exercise"; a scenic and the Rivoli Animated Magazine were included in the program. The Rivoli Chorus, Greek Evans and pupils from the Luigi Albertieri Ballet School were the other features.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET THEATER.—Olga Petrova in "The Light Within" the first half of the week. Dorothy Dalton in "Flare-Up Sal," the latter half.

BROADWAY.—"Tarzan of the Apes" is still standing 'em up at the Broadway.

. LYRIC.—"Revelation," featuring Mme. Nazimova.

IMPOSTOR ASKING WAR TAX.

Collector of Internal Revenue Charles V. Duffy of Newark, N. J., is in receipt of a warning from Commissioner Daniel C. Roper of Washington to the effect that impostors are representing themselves as revenue collectors and attempting to collect the war admission taxes from motion picture houses. Exhibitors should heed this warning, and pay no money to unauthorized persons.

Shaw Making Pictures in South Africa

Former Edison Producer Now Associated with Joe Fisher in Active Opposition to Trust.

ERNEST PALMER, representing the Harold Shaw Films Productions, of Capetown, South Africa, has arrived in New York again to familiarize himself with American conditions, after an absence of several years. His immediate purpose concerns showings, in this country, of the productions now under way at the Shaw Studios, at Sea Point, on Table Bay, near Capetown. Mr. Palmer brings an interesting account of Mr. Shaw's activities and, in an interview with the World representative gave an excellent idea of manufacturing and exhibition conditions in that far-off land.

"The war restricted conditions more than ever in South Africa," said Mr. Palmer, "and this fact has given Mr. Shaw an opportunity to produce and distribute his productions to an advantage. Joseph Fisher, who is the biggest factor in opposition to the South African Film Trust, is interested with Mr. Shaw in producing features and will attend to the matter of exhibitions when productions are ready for release.

"It might be imagined that a producer would be handicapped by the lack of professional screen players in South Africa, but Mr. Shaw proposes to obviate that natural drawback by producing subjects that will lend themselves to native types and talents. His wife, Edna Flugrath, is his leading woman and will be supplied with roles that will give her the principal interest in the screened stories.

"Mr. Fisher has established himself as a successful independent exhibitor through his showmanship and reliability, and has become one of the most popular picture magnates in South Africa. He opposed the Trust by clean methods, and has arrangements whereby he places feature attractions in the town halls, community managed, in all of the principal cities. Town halls where Mr. Fisher shows films include Johannesburg, with a seating capacity of 2,700; Capetown, 1,600; Durban, 3,000; Kimberley, 750; Pretoria, 600; Port Elizabeth, 800; East London, 750; Maritzburg, 800, and Bloomfontein, 700."

Mr. Palmer declared that Mr. Shaw's studios will be equipped with every modern appliance, even though the start was made with only an abandoned carbarn. The building has been entirely reconstructed, and added to, that the equipment may be complete. It is ideally located in a suburb of Capetown, right on a trolley line. The grounds are provided by nature with a great variety of "locations," with Table Bay, and a broad stretch of beach in front, while Lion Head Mountain rises inland at only a little distance.

"When I left Capetown, Christmas Day," said Mr. Palmer, "the studio was nearing completion, and by this time Mr. Shaw's first production, 'The Rose of Rhodesia,' made in his new location, will be all completed and probably exhibited. Mr. Shaw is managing director and chief producer of the Shaw Films Productions, and his success may be indicated in his first South African picture, 'Winning a Continent,' which he made for the South African Film Trust, where it was locally shown, and then sent to America. It has been exhibited here under a different title.

"Mr. Shaw, like myself, is an American," continued Mr. Palmer, "but it has been some years since he directed for Edison and the Universal in this country. Going abroad he first went to England, where he created for the London Film Company 'The House of Temperley,' shown at your Strand here in New York, believed to be the first really great production made in England. While with the London Film Company Mr. Shaw displayed a genius for developing new talent, and in South Africa he will depend largely upon this aptitude for developing players in roles supporting Miss Flugrath. With him, as photographer, is Henry Howse, an English expert."

In the letter of introduction which Mr. Palmer brought to the World from Joseph Fisher, the writer said: "We have done an exceptional business in South Africa with the much-discussed film, 'Enlighten Thy Daughter,' after it was barred from exhibition in the Cape Province. This very fact greatly boomed the film in other parts of the country, with the result that hundreds were turned away at every exhibition. We are now touring 'The Submarine Eye' and 'Parentage,' both of which are drawing packed houses. 'Rasputin, the Black Monk,' our latest importation, seems destined to become another big moneymaker in our territory."

Readers of the World who seek first-hand information concerning the South African situation will receive courteous responses to letters addressed: Ernest Palmer, The Alcazar, Apartment 56, 215 Manhattan avenue, New York. His telephone number is Academy 1710.

William Russell Back on the Job

Stalwart Player Getting Ready for Production of "Adrienne Gascoyne," His First Independent Work.

WILLIAM RUSSELL, action star of the motion picture drama, athlete as well as film favorite, is at work on his first production with the new William Russell Productions organization at his studios in Southern California. Mr. Russell, who arrived on the coast from New York, only a week ago, jumped right into hard work on the first of his new productions, under the working title of "Adrienne Gascoyne." It is the name of the principal feminine character—a fascinating young woman, half buried in diamonds, who decides in the long run that kind hearts are more than tiaras, and true love more desirable than tainted millions.

William Russell.

The drama is based on a story of the same title written by William Hamilton Osborne, New York lawyer. While master in chancery of New Jersey Mr. Osborne wrote "The Red Mouse," a striking speaking stage success, dramatized as "The Prosecutor," and other plays and stories.

Mr. Osborne's story, "Adrienne Gascoyne," is one of the strongest he ever wrote. It deals with the efforts of a pair of South African crooks, Adrian Gascoyne and his wife, to win a fortune in America out of the old and exploded crucible scheme of making diamonds.

SOME AMUSEMENT COMPANY SUES MASTBAUM.

Stanley Mastbaum, the Stanley Booking Company, of which he is the head; the Metro Pictures Corporation of New York and the Metro Pictures Exchange of Pennsylvania are accused of forming an illegal combination in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act in a bill in equity in the United States District Court in Philadelphia by the Some Amusement Company of that city. The complaint charges the defendants with having formed a local "trust" and with using illegal methods and threats against exhibitors who refuse to enter into contracts with them. The court is asked to compel Mastbaum and the Stanley Company to relinquish their stock holdings in the Metro corporations. No date has been set for a hearing.

Chicago News Letter

"Birth of a Race" Promoters Under Fire

Brokers Arrested for Non-Compliance with State Law Which Bars the Sale of Unlicensed Stock.

THE article in my Chicago letter of the issue of February 23 on the plan of selling stock for "The Birth of a Race" has since been followed by a brisk campaign in which all the dailies of the city have joined. Attorney-General Brundage, of Illinois, and his assistants have investigated the Birth of a Race Photoplay Corporation and ascertained that the organization had failed to take out the state license which permits the sale of its stock here. It also was found that a number of other stock selling organizations were violating the law known on the statute books as the "Blue Sky Law." Each of the violators will be prosecuted to the limit, the attorney-general states.

F. W. Sherwood, a broker who was caught in the act of selling stock of the Birth of a Race Photoplay Corporation, was arrested by the attorney-general's order on the charge of trading in unlicensed stock, and Giles P. Cory, of Giles P. Cory & Co., who has been a broker on La Salle street for seventeen years, was also arrested on a similar charge. Mr. Cory was immediately released on cash bail and awaits trial.

These arrests created a sensation among the purchasers of the stock of the Birth of a Race concern, and the attorney-general's quarters were besieged by telephone and personal calls. Gradually it developed that the printed matter distributed by the firms engaged in the sale of the Birth of a Race concern's stock bore the names of prominent men, national and local, who were represented as being personally interested in the big production. Among those listed were former President William H. Taft, Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, the Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, Julius Rosenwald, and many others. When these men denied being connected with the enterprise, the stockholders became still more uneasy, but they quieted down considerably when it was learned that the big film, "The Birth of a Race," is already under way and that the cost of production had already been secured by the parent concern.

An investigation of the past record of F. W. Sherwood, who was arrested for selling unlicensed stock, served to throw discredit on the methods used by the stockbrokers who had charge of the sale. Under the name of F. W. Snook, Sherwood is said to have been convicted of embezzlement in Milwaukee, some time ago, and sentenced to Waupin penitentiary for two and a half years. Buyers of stock accuse Sherwood of having used his supposed Masonic connections to secure business. In answer to a telegram sent Waterloo (Wis.) chapter, Royal Arch Masons, the secretary replied that F. W. Snook was expelled December 20, 1916.

Developments during the past week revealed that the Birth of a Race Photoplay Corporation was organized under the laws of Delaware, July 12, 1916. The stock issue was 100,000 shares, each share having a par value of $10. The entire issue, with a value of $1,000,000, was turned over to Edwin L. Barker, the president, and his associates. Under the laws of Delaware there is no requirement to furnish a statement of the corporation's finances, not even to the stockholders.

In return, Mr. Barker gave the corporation the rights to the script of "The Birth of a Race," good-will, etc. He then turned back to the corporation 80,000 shares of the stock, to be sold to finance the production of the picture. Of the remaining 20,000 shares held by President Barker 9,500 were sold or given as bonuses to various persons who have served the corporation without monetary remuneration. The 10,500 shares then remaining have been tied up in trust arrangements, so that they cannot be sold to the detriment of the corporation.

Of the 80,000 shares set apart to finance the production 50,198 have been sold, realizing about $350,000, netting, after deducting the cost of overhead expenses, advertising, etc., $264,393. Of the latter amount $232,662 has been expended on the production of the picture, up to the present time.

The 30,000 shares remaining of the 80,000 have been sold and subscribed for, and upon them partial payments have been made to Giles P. Cory & Co., fiscal agents of the corporation, sufficient to supply enough money to complete the film, it is said, even if no further payments are made.

Orville W. Lee, secretary of the Birth of a Race Photoplay Corporation, furnished the foregoing financial data.

On page 1111, of this publication, issue of February 23, there appears an interview with William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, which is making the production of "The Birth of a Race." There it is stated that "Director Noble expects that an additional three or four months will be necessary to complete the production." This does not tally with statements made here by people connected with the concern, who have given out that only a few weeks are required for its completion.

Illinois Quota Considered Too High by State Committee.

The meeting of the organization commitee of Illinois exhibitors appointed at Fraternity Hall, Wednesday afternoon, February 13, to represent the state of Illinois on the direct-from-producer-to-exhibitor plan, was held Friday afternoon, February 15, in the quarters of the M. P. T. O. Association, in the Mallers building. All the seven members of the committee were present, and considerable discussion was centered on the plan of distribution, with the result that a sub-committee, comprising Louis H. Frank, of Chicago, and W. D. Burford, of Aurora, was appointed to get legal advice and report.

The quota of 188 names for the state of Illinois was considered too high by the committee, and after the question was thoroughly discussed, it was finally agreed that it be held over for still further discussion before a representative meeting of exhibitors from the entire state. This meeting will be called just as soon as a concrete plan has been decided upon by the organization committee.

Joe Hopp Badly Hurt.

Joseph Hopp, president of Chicago Local, M. P. E. L. of A., sustained severe injuries by being struck by a street car at the corner of Division and Dearborn Monday evening, February 18. Mr. Hopp was returning from a meeting of his lodge at Medinah Temple, and was waiting for a car at the time. An automobile ahead of the car caused the driver to bring it to a sudden stop and this made Mr. Hopp start back suddenly. He slipped and fell forward, the front of the car striking him on the nose. He was carried to a nearby drugstore, where he received first aid, and was then taken to the American Hospital. While doctors believe that he has not sustained any serious injuries, he is suffering much pain in the left side, which was badly bruised. He also sustained a deep gash on the nose. Mr. Hopp was able to bear removal to his home the night of the accident, and was again taken to the American Hospital Tuesday morning, where the doctors examined him and were still uncertain as to whether he had been hurt internally or not. Mr. Hopp's numerous friends in the city are thankful that his injuries are not more serious, and they await with the deepest interest his speedy recovery.

Kahn Organizes Emerald Exchange.

Albert L. Kahn, well known in film circles in this city, having been employed for seven years in various capacities at the Chicago branch of Universal, came in from Kansas City last week, where he now manages the Quality Film Exchange. Mr. Kahn recently organized an independent film exchange of his own in Kansas City, which will be known as the Emerald Film Exchange.

Asher Congratulates Spanuth.

H. A. Spanuth, president of the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation, this city, recently received a letter from Nathan Ascher, of the Ascher Brothers' big circuit, complimenting him on the great success of "The Frozen Warning," in which Charlotte, widely known for her daring and spectacular feats as an ice skater, appears in the leading role. "I consider it to be one of the best box office attractions of the season," wrote Mr. Ascher. "The fact that the Central Film Company is receiving an unusual number of bookings for this production and that it has been playing to capacity houses speaks for itself."

Matt Moore a Selig Leading Man.

Matt Moore, brother of the well-known photoplayers, Owen and Tome Moore, arrived in the city Sunday afternoon, February 17, from New York to join the Selig company now engaged in the production of "The Wild Goose Chase." Mr. Moore is playing the leading part, opposite Hazel Daly. The extreme cold spell of weather, which struck Chicago early last week, has proved ideal for the taking of the Greenland scenes in "The Wild Goose Chase." These scenes are being filmed on the shores of Lake Michigan, bordering the sand dunes of northern Indiana, where great fields of ice and banks of snow are piled up. High up on a mountainous ledge of ice is a large schooner, built especially for this scene, and which was burnt and blown up Wednesday, February 20, to correspond with the realism called for by the story. Over sixty pounds of dynamite were used for the explosion, which has been described by those who viewed it as an awesome spectacle. Harry Beaumont is directing this Selig feature, and Lucius C. Wheeler had charge of all the arrangements for the big scenes taken near the sand dunes.

MacHenry is Shifted to New York.

Joseph S. MacHenry, special representative of the Exhibitors' Herald of this city for some time past, left for New York Saturday, February 23, where he will fill the same position for that publication. Mr. MacHenry is an affable young man of courteous manners, who cannot fail to win favor in trade circles in the metropolis. He has the best wishes for success in his new field by a large following in the Windy City.

Two Weeks for "Unbeliever" at Majestic.

M. E. Smith, division manager of the George Kleine System, visited Detroit recently, where he found a growing demand for pictures of the Perfection brand. He tells me that he succeeded in arranging for bookings of the product in the exclusive Majestic theater, which is one of the finest and best conducted in the United States, under the management of Mr. McGee. "The Unbeliever," Edison's fine production, will have a run of two consecutive weeks there, with a third in prospect. George Spoor's special comedy features will also be given extended runs, and they should prove popular with the intelligent clientele of the Majestic.

HODKINSON TOURING THE WEST.

After an absence of several years W. W. Hodkinson arrived in Denver recently for the purpose of entering into negotiations with the exhibitors there to effect the "tie-in," which is an important part of Mr. Hodkinson's new method of distribution. He was met at the station by a great many of the foremost exhibitors of that part of the country, who, with several of the city officials, escorted him to the Brown Palace Hotel. There a banquet had been arranged in his honor.

Mr. Hodkinson spent only about twenty-four hours in Denver, and during that time he closed his first "tie-in." The territory affected by this arrangement includes Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico and Utah, which will be known as Zone 15. Mr. Hodkinson left for San Francisco, where preliminary work has been done through the mail. Mr. Hodkinson expects to visit several exchange cities on his return east after his visit in California.

FILMS PUT TO EXCELLENT USE.

Motion pictures figured prominently at a Washington's Birthday luncheon at Rector's, with Secretary of State Hugo the guest of honor. It was announced that a campaign for "Safety First" on the public thoroughfares of New York State would be forwarded by moving pictures, to be shown in all cinemas, instructing both the public and the chauffeur in proper observance of the rules of the road.

Apfel Joins World Film

Long-Time Successful Producer Will Direct the Company Headed by Kitty Gordon.

OSCAR C. APFEL, director of J. Warren Kerrigan in "The Turn of a Card" and "A Man's Man," and also of William Farnum, Bessie Barriscale, Dustin Farnum, Thomas Ross, Leonore Ulrich, and other famous screen stars in some of their biggest successes, has signed a contract with the World Film Corporation and has been appointed director for Kitty Gordon. Mr. Apfel with Miss Gordon and a large company is leaving immediately for the South to take exteriors for a production which bears the working title of "Her Great Moment."

Oscar C. Apfel.

Mr. Apfel is one of the really big directors in the industry. He has been connected with motion pictures for many years. For seven years he has grown with the industry, watching the trend of pictures, building productions that appealed more and more powerfully to the film-going public. Now, in World Pictures, he expects to achieve the success of his career.

It is an interesting fact that Mr. Apfel was at one time in his career a "trooper." For forty-seven consecutive weeks he played one-night stands and he lives to tell the tale. He also was one of the bright lights in a musical comedy production, although unable to sing. Upon entering the picture business he first became a director for Edison. Then he was associated with Thomas A. Edison in experimental work on talking pictures. After this he was with Reliance and Majestic and then went to the Lasky Company, where he made all of their first pictures and inducted Cecile DeMille into the fundamentals of the art. After this he was with Morosco, Pallas and then Fox.

For the past few years Mr. Apfel has been on the coast, and declares that he is glad to be back East again.

FILMS FOR 10,000 TEACHERS.

Through an arrangement with Allen J. Feyl, editor of the Atlantic City Press and Evening Union, the Eskay Harris feature film, "Alice in Wonderland," featuring Viola Savoy, will be exhibited February 27 before a convention of 10,000 delegates to the National Educational Association at the Virginia theater, Atlantic City. Motion pictures will be one of the topics for discussion by the educators. "Alice in Wonderland" will also be shown during the convention at the Million-Dollar Pier.

GARRETT BACK ON JOB.

The many friends of Sidney Garrett, president of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., will be pleased to know that he is once more back in the office and on the job. He has been ill with pneumonia for the past month, but underwent a very quick recovery. During his illness business was conducted as usual under the management of H. A. Gillespie.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. HARLEMAN

Players Are Heavy Taxpayers.

MORE than a million dollars will be paid in taxes this year by just a few of our local screen stars. Leading the list is Douglas Fairbanks, whose income tax and excess profits tax, together with other taxes levied by the Government, is alleged to be $450,000. Mary Pickford hands Uncle Sam her check for $230,000.

Charles Chaplin, based on 1917 income, pays the Government $100,000. This "small" figure, it is explained, is due to Chaplin being idle a number of months of last year, when he completed a contract in mid-year and then devoted his time to building his new studio at Hollywood.

William S. Hart, Roscoe Arbuckle and other players will contribute considerable amounts to Uncle Sam's war chest.

Gore Builds Theater at Camp Kearny.

A large motion picture theater—the Sunshine—is under construction at Camp Kearny, near San Diego, by Michael Gore, owner of Gore's circuit of theaters in Los Angeles. He is spending $25,000 in his plans to give the boys the best to be had in picturedom. Twice each week the Pantages and Hippodrome will put on the cream of the vaudeville acts.

The ventilation and seating are to be the last word in theater construction. The building will be completed in thirty days.

Theda Bara a Regimental Godmother.

The latest acquisition to the ranks of godmothers is Theda Bara. The 158th Infantry Regiment, now at Camp Kearny, has adopted Miss Bara as their godmother by unanimous vote.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Douglas Fairbanks will make a film trailer for Herbert Hoover. Upon his return from San Francisco, where he staged two wild west shows for the benefit of the National War Camp Community Fund, the Artcraft star received a telegram from Herbert Hoover, United States Food Administrator, requesting a film trailer for propaganda purposes, which Fairbanks has agreed to make for him.

After seven months of preparation, including the drawing of two sets of plans by architect A. B. Rosenthal and an exhaustive canvass of the large cities of the country for the newest ideas in equipment, actual construction work has been begun on Miller's new theater on Main street, near Eighth. The enterprise will represent, when completed, an investment of about $500,000. It is undertaken by Colonel J. B. Lankershim for Fred and Roy Miller, who have made an enviable record as Los Angeles exhibitors by their successful management of Miller's and the Alhambra theaters and building up of a clinetele of large proportions and staple character. Harry Leonhardt, Pacific Coast representative of the Goldwyn Film Corporation, and associated with the Millers, for several weeks has been traveling through the East gathering ideas for use in the new house, which will be one of the finest in America devoted exclusively to music and pictures. It will be finished by September 1 next, and will, it is promised, be the last word in theater construction, with a specially built organ. The house will have a seating capacity of 2,500.

Monte M. Katterjohn, Paralta staff author, has made an especially interesting addition to the collection of photographs and other mementos which adorn the walls of his editorial sanctum at the Paralta studios in the form of a business card: "Nicholas Lenine, Liberator of the People. We only await the day."

This was given to Mr. Katterjohn by the man who has become one of the leaders in the Bolsheviki government in Russia, and was given to the author in Santa Monica something over eighteen months ago. Lenine worked as an extra in a number of pictures released by Triangle.

One of the interesting features of this play is that its scene is laid in Los Angeles. The hero finds some of the most thrilling details of his career in the places that actually surrounded him. Tom Mix has his favorite horse with him in this play, and it has a distinct part in the development of a clear and interesting plot. Virginia Forde is playing opposite Tom Mix. FEINMAN RESIGNS FROM THE A. KAY COMPANY.

A. Feinman, who for the past year has been doing quite a little bit of publicity work for a number of state rights organizations, has severed his connections with the A. Kay Company with which concern he was last associated in the capacity of publicity and advertising manager. He is at present considering several offers, but has not as yet definitely made arrangements for his next connections.

Mr. Feinman is a young man who is desirous of making good along the lines of publicity and advertising. His connection with the motion picture business dates back to a period of over four years, at which time he was associated with the old firm of Warner's Features, Inc. Since then he has been affiliated with the World Film Corporation, Selznick Pictures, Unicorn Film Service, Exhibitors' Operating Corporation, George W. Lederer Filmotions, and most recently with Oro Pictures, Inc.

LAEMMLE TAKES SAN FRANCISCO'S BUFFALOES.

An across continent reprieve for the nine American buffalo, condemned to die by the park commissioners of San Francisco to save the city the expense of keeping them, left New York February 22 in the form of a telegram to Mayor Rolph of San Francisco from Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, offering to take the buffaloes, relieving the city of their keeping and providing them excellent care for the remainder of their lives at Universal City.

OPTIMISTIC REPORTS FROM OREGON.

F. A. Tipton, traveler for Select, was a visitor in Portland, Oregon, recently after an extended tour through the eastern part of the territory as far as Montana. He says the exhibitors of Idaho and Montana are enjoying the greatest prosperity in the history of the industry and reports new theaters building.

At Pocatello Caruthers & Archinbald are running the Orpheum and Olympia and are doing a fine business. Herman Brown, at Boise, is doing well with his theaters and also with his new house at Nampa, Idaho. At Twin Falls, Idaho, Bob Payse will open a new theater. S. J. Osika's new house at Burley is doing very well.

A new theater has been started at Roundup, Mont., which will be patterned after the Rialto at Butte except that it will be only half as large. An Oregon town that Mr. Tipton found was enjoying good business was Bend, where the Grand, L. C. Rudow, and the Liberty, Ward Coble, are doing finely.

Vaudeville is getting a stronger foothold in the territory, however, says Mr. Tipton. Pantages acts are arranging to play Boise, Twin Falls and Burley, Idaho.

The days are past when exhibitors depend on set programs, thinks Mr. Tipton. He reports the exhibitors paying extra money for the shows they want.

CUPID SLIDES FROM A CLOUD.

Winifred Allen, star of several Triangles, "made" the front pages of hundreds of newspapers February 20, when she flew from Massapequa, Long Island, to Governors Island, New York harbor, in Lawrence Sperry's airplane to become the bride of the birdman, a lieutenant in your Uncle Sam's naval service. Miss Allen has made her home at the Algonquin, and the interiors of her last Triangle, "From Two to Six," were photographed in that hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Sperry flew to their future residence in eighteen minutes, mostly at an altitude of 5,000 feet. The screen queen had made many trips with Lieutenant Sperry previous to the one on Tuesday, when he proposed to her, was accepted and made the trip to the clergyman without touching ground.

So next morning this walrus with the seventy-five centimeter cranium went down and extracted the rainy day fund and hocked three shares of Onion Specific. Two weeks later he elected himself Chief Gallywumpus of the Gee Whiz and Gosh Darned Film Co. A friend showed him the difference between a strip of film and a piece of scenery. So having grabbed this dope, he nominated himself for election in the "Who's Who in the Film Industry" and arranged with six trust companies to back up their auto trucks in front of his door every Saturday morning to collect a couple of million bones for a free ride to the depositories. Oh, this Napoleon was sum guy. So . . . one month later he was back at the plumbing business and lived happily ever after.

How It Is Done at the Strand

A Discussion of Methods Which Have Actually Been Worked Out Successfully.

By Harold Edel, Managing Director.

THE importance of the news pictures in a motion picture entertainment is perhaps not fully realized by some exhibitors. This fact was brought to my attention particularly on a recent visit to a smaller theater in an outlying district of Manhattan when the pictures were thrown on the screen in every sense of the word.

A remark passed in the Strand theater by one of its steady patrons and reported to me by my head usher is an example of just how important a part the news pictures play, not merely as part of the evening's program, but as a genuine attraction. It was on conclusion of the news films that the patron remarked to his friend: "That's great! The news pictures are the chief reason why I patronize picture theaters." The evening in question presented one of the best bills the Strand has ever offered, and yet this patron stated that as far as he was concerned the news pictures were the chief attraction.

This expression was most gratifying. The pictorial news of the day was the main reason he went to picture theaters. By pleasing him we were satisfying a super-critical person in this particular part of our entertainment. Others in the audience, to whom the news pictures did not figure to such an extent, it is logical to believe, were therefore also pleased with them. Thus it was quite evident that the unusual time and care devoted to the gathering, selection, editing and presentation of these pictures by the Strand management were well worth the while.

Presenting a good news service means more than merely booking and throwing upon the screen the best pictures from the various news weeklies. The Strand secures Pathe, Universal, Bray and other services, but these pictures are just the foundation upon which we build, so to speak. In many cases the Strand management sends its own photographer to take scenes that tend to put over an original idea. For instance, when the cry of ice famine was first raised, I immediately dispatched a camera-man up to the base of the Hudson River, where ice-cutting was under way, only however, after I had tried to obtain films showing this work from other sources. Mayor Hylan issued an appeal for the storage of large quantities of ice. To further press this appeal, the Strand, which is always willing and eager to assist in all patriotic or other worthy causes, had these pictures of ice-cutting taken and with a few straight-from-the-shoulder sub-titles showed a pictorial appeal that was up-to-the-minute and at the same time giving publicity to this important cause. A shortage of ice in mid-summer will probably be worse than the coal famine and the Strand management felt itself duty-bound to help.

When pictures of the Camp Upton soldiers were received, showing the drafted men as they appeared five months after they entered the army, we did not stop at displaying this fine body of men on the screen as they appeared after this training. From our library we found out who issued the best pictures of the men as they appeared on the day they left for camp. Pictures of these men marching past the same spot on Fifth avenue, as that disclosed in the new pictures of the men, were secured. With a few powerful titles we tide up this two sets of pictures, bringing out the difference in the men and the values of camp training probably more effectively than could be done in any other way

Never in the history of the motion picture theater have news pictures meant so much to the public as to-day, when relatives and friends are all eager to see the kind of things to expect under present conditions for their beloved ones. Pictures of the soldiers "over there" give a more intimate knowledge to those who are so far away. Even scenics showing the kind of country evident in and about the places where our boys are bound for are of great interest, from this standpoint alone. In fact, any incident connected with the trouble of our country at this time is eagerly sought. It is only natural, therefore, that the news films are of greater import than ever before.

What I wish to bring out is that, with the receiving of the films from the News Weeklies, work on your news service only begins. In looking over these pictures the best should first be selected, then run off again, whereupon such ideas as above mentioned ought to be created and carried out. Assembling the pictures is an art in itself and should be given great attention. Variety in news and pictorial display should always be kept in mind. Sometimes, in order to bring out a certain idea, we even obtain a cutting from an old feature. Our news and scenics run on the average twenty minutes. The chief punches in the pictures are spread out with a strong one at the finish. Music is then studied out, whereupon the entire result is tried out, and very often some changes and improvements are even then made.

Pathe Turns Over Factory to Uncle Sam

Head of House, Acting on Suggestion of J. A. Berst, Places Full Equipment at Service of United States.

IT is announced by J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, that Pathe in France has extended to the United States Government the full use of one of its factories, with every up-to-date appliance for the developing, printing, etc., of motion pictures and "still" photographs. This offer should render it unnecessary for the Government to build any structures for the work of the cinematographic division of the Signal Corps.

In a letter to Mr. Berst announcing the offer Charles Pathe says in part: "The American cinematographic service will have at its disposition the entire factory and our most complete and devoted co-operation. We are happy thus to give to you so quickly a favorable answer to the request which you have made of us. And we derive additional pleasure from the fact that we thus can aid in a most efficient manner the photographic and cinematographic service of our friends and allies, the Americans."

The many Americans who have visited the vast Pathe plants in France will remember their marvelous completeness and modernity, excelled by none other in the world. The plant is considered a model of its kind. In the various units are not only motion pictures made, developed and printed, but the raw stock and every kind of motion picture appliance, cameras, projection machines, etc., manufactured.

To Mr. J. A. Berst, it is understood, goes the credit for the suggestion which resulted in this new proof of the cordial feeling between France and the United States.

Coast Newspaper Sees a Light

Chronicle of San Francisco First Great Daily in That City Seriously to Review Pictures.

A NEW era in moving picture publicity has dawned in San Francisco, Cal., and it has remained for the San Francisco Chronicle to give this form of dramatic expression its rightful place in the news columns of the local press. In the issue of Monday, February 4, the Chronicle gave reviews of the photoplays at the California, Imperial and Portola theaters, each appearing under the signature of a capable critic. These criticisms were given as much space, as satisfactory a position and as careful consideration as the attractions of the legitimate stage reviewed that day. This is distinctly a noteworthy innovation since local dailies in the past have not considered moving pictures of sufficient importance to send a trained critic to view them and give them a signed review. The press agents of the various theaters have had to write their own criticisms and were permitted to give their offerings just as much or as little praise as they wished, regardless of whether they were good, bad, or indifferent.

The building of the California theater, which has no equal here, even among houses devoted to legitimate stage attractions, and its marked success as a home of moving pictures have also served to attract the attention of the local press and to impress it with the importance of the industry and the popularity of this form of amusement.

BLACKTON TALKING LIKE NATIVE SON.

"I shall never take another foot of film in the East," emphatically asserts J. Stuart Blackton. Talking with a friend the other day on the subject of motion picture production, Mr. Blackton, who has just completed "Wild Youth" for Paramount, and in a few weeks will begin work on "Missing," by Mrs. Humphry Ward, reiterated the statement with added emphasis.

"I required just twenty-one years of worry and expense to drive me to this conclusion," he said, "but you know, it's never too late to learn. I probably would have moved out West long ago if I had had any idea of the many advantages California possesses for the maker of screen entertainment. But when I heard all the wonderful eulogium of the state while I was busy turning out hundreds of films in the East, I though them simply the exaggerated ravings of super-enthuiastic 'boosters.' What a mistake!"

Battle Royal On in Cheyenne Excitement Centers About New Atlas Theater, from Which Moore & Greaves' Watchman Is Ejected at Night.

EXCITING scenes occurred around the new Atlas theater in Cheyenne, Wyoming, on the night of February 5 when Walter J. Bradley and ex-Mayor Robert La Fountaine planned a coup and executed it in order to seize the theater, which they claimed was theirs by right of law, and ousted the night watchman of the Moore & Greaves Amusement Company, who had been placed in the theater to prevent just such an occurrence.

Since October 15, 1916, the Moore & Greaves Amusement Company of Denver has been running the New Atlas theater under a lease, the duration of which was for one year. At the expiration of the lease, according to the Moore & Greaves representatives, Walter Bradley, who was acting in behalf of his wife as administratrix for the Thomas Heaney estate, of which the New Atlas was a part, made a verbal agreement with the Moore & Greaves Amusement Company for the occupancy of the theater as long as they desired to hold the place.

The rent for the months of February and March up to April 15 this year was submitted to Messrs. Bradley and La Fountaine in December, 1917, who returned it, with a request that the occupants vacate at the end of the period for which the rent was paid. Bradley and La Fountaine claimed this date to be February 1, and the Moore & Greaves Amusement Company February 15. Upon this one point hinges much of the dispute.

During the early part of this year Walter J. Bradley and ex-Mayor La Fountaine and associates purchased from the Thomas Heaney estate the New Atlas and have made a statement that at that time they notified the Moore & Greaves Company they were owners and wished possession of the theater as soon as possible to secure it.

Moore & Greaves, who are building a theater in Cheyenne, which will have a seating capacity of 1,400, claim it is unjustly interfering with their business until their new theater is ready, and that they cannot vacate without losing thousands of dollars and giving up many signed contracts which they have in force.

Messrs. Bradley and La Fountaine claim they are entitled to their property and that the revenue which Moore & Greaves is paying is a small amount in comparison to what they can earn with the building themselves. Other smaller matters have increased the jealousies between the owners and the occupants, which has been brewing for some time.

The entrance to the New Atlas by the owners was carried out by the accidental or purposely leaving of the stage door unlocked, and possession was taken about 12:30 the night of February 5. At this point the night watchman was relieved of his gun and according to his story was forcibly ejected from the theater. Also the doors were securely barred and chained. Manager Todd, who was notified at once of the new occupants, was told upon his arrival at the theater that he was no longer manager of the house.

It was at this stage of the fight that Attorney John T. Bottom of Denver was brought into the case for Moore & Greaves, and after laying the case before United States District Judge J. A. Riner secured an injunction restraining Messrs. Bradley and La Fountaine from interfering with their business. The injunction was served by the United States marshal Thursday, February 11. The date for the argument of the case was set for February 15.

The injunction was secured from the United States Distrist Court for the reason that the Moore & Greaves Company is a non-resident corporation. Judge Riner allowed the injunction on a complaint that the building had been leased from Mrs. Mabel Bradley, as administratrix of the Thomas Heaney estate, and that she had never in word or deed given notice of any change in the ownership, also that she had never given notice of anything which would entitle her to eject the occupants from the property. The complaint further states that Walter J. Bradley had notified the occupants that he had purchased the property, but that any further evidence of his ownership was never given.

It is rumored in Cheyenne, although neither side will confirm the rumor, that the fight between Messrs. Bradley and La Fountaine and the Moore & Greaves Company is fostered in Denver by an old fight, which it is said exists between Harry T. Nolan of the Swanson-Nolan Film Company, and George Greaves of the Moore & Greaves Company.

The rumor reports that Mr. Nolan will lease the building upon the owners' possession and has offered a much higher price than is being paid for it at present.

Walter Bradley has stated, though, that he will manage the New Atlas himself when given possession by the courts. Mr. Bradley was for years manager of the Capitol Avenue theater in Cheyenne and has had large experience in theater management.

M. H. Todd, at present manager for the Moore & Greaves Company, will continue as manager of the New Atlas for his firm until an order from the courts ejecting him is served.

The policy under the Moore & Greaves Company has been vaudeville and feature picture plays. The last big picture booked before the possible intervention of the courts is "Intolerance," which was to be shown the 14th and 15th.

Court Refuses Mutual an Injunction

New York Supreme Court Decrees That Rights to Reprints Does Not Apply to Reissues.

JUSTICE WHITTAKER of the New York Supreme Court denied on Wednesday, February 6, the application of the Mutual Film Corporation through its attorneys, Turnbull & Bade, for an injunction in its action against the New York Motion Picture Corporation, the Keystone Film Company, Domino Motion Picture Corporation and Broncho Motion Picture Company, to restrain those corporations from reissuing through other companies than Mutual and from refusing to supply Mutual with reprints of Chaplin, Normand, Arbuckle, Conklin and Hart pictures, formerly released on the Mutual program.

Defendants through Arthur Butler Graham, their attorney, contended that the contract with Mutual did not give that company the right to reissues but to only the original releases and to reprints of those subjects, and the Court sustained that contention.

This case will affect many companies that have changed their releasing agencies or have engaged in recent years in state right distribution of pictures containing stars that have since become famous.

NAZIMOVA PICTURE AT PRIVATE SHOWING.

At the invitation of Madame Nazimova a considerable party gathered at the ball room of the Hotel des Artistes, 1 West 67th street, New York, on Saturday evening, February 16, to witness a private screening of "Revelation." Though the assemblage contained many enthusiastic friends of the charming star of the picture, the applause bestowed was of the most critical character, toned with genuine surprise, for the picture proved to be a real revelation of the wonderful versatility of Nazimova. Supper and dancing followed. Among those present were a number of Metro officials, Richard Rowland, Lieutenant Arthur James, Max Karger, George Baker, who directed, and Ray Smallwood, who photographed the picture; Captain Merrit Crawford, A. Capellani, Arthur Sawyer, Harry Lubin, Bert Ennis, Jack Medor, June Mathis, and, not to be overlooked, the Jacobs trio, Al., Harry and Sam. Madame Nazimova and her husband and leading man afterward entertained a number of the party in their apartments.

REGENT THEATER, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Jointly operating the Regent theater, Indianapolis, Ind., are the Indianapolis Amusement Company, Inc., and the Empress Amusement Company, Inc., both of Indianapolis. The responsibilities of president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer of both firms are shouldered by E. H. Bingham, H. E. Cohen and Ben D. Crose, respectively.

The Regent was opened on Thanksgiving Day, 1915, and is a 750-seat house. It is one of the most substantial and up-to-date theaters in the city, and charges an admission price of 10 cents. The lobby has been equipped with Newman display unit frames for posters, which aid considerably in the artistic arrangement of paper. These frames are produced by the Newman Manufacturing Company of Cincinnati.

BERT LYTELL SIGNS CONTRACT WITH METRO.

Bert Lytell, one of the more gifted of the younger generation of American dramatic players, has signed a long-term contract to star in Metro pictures. Mr. Lytell will confine himself entirely to motion picture work. He appeared three times on Broadway this season at the head of his own company. His most recent engagement was as co-star with Irene Fenwick in "Mary's Ankle."

Metro proposes to make Mr. Lytell's pictures a part of their All Star Series features.

With the exception of his appearance as the star in "The Lone Wolf," Mr. Lytell has never played before the camera.

"Turtles of All Kinds" (Educational-Ditmars).

AN INSTRUCTIVE treatise on the turtle kind has been arranged for the Educational Films Corporation by Raymond L. Ditmars, and entitled "Turtles of All Kinds." The picture opens with specimens of the ordinary turtle which lives near the water and has webbed feet. Next comes the tortoise which lives altogether on land, and the Australian turtle which folds its neck sideways at moments of danger. Then there is the queer Matamata from the Amazon; and more interesting still, the American box turtle. The scoop-shelled tortoise of the African veldt is another remarkable variety which nature has provided with a scoop which protrudes from beneath the head, acting as a head rest or a scoop with which to dig a bed in the sand. The last variety exhibited in the picture is the large Galapagos tortoise. This variety sometimes weighs as much as 300 pounds and is able to carry a man's weight on its back. The egg of the Galapagos turtle is shown in the picture to be of spherical shape and about the size of a baseball. The actual hatching of a young turtle is also shown.

"Yellowstone and the Geysers" (Pathe).

A tinted half-reel, picturing many of the famous hot springs and geysers of the Yellowstone National Park. Of the latter many are mentioned by name, including the Riverside, Grotto, The Giantess, Old Faithful, Lone Star and others. An excellent view of the steaming Morris Basin is also shown.

"Bruxton—Devonshire, England" (Pathe).

A half-reel in tints which includes many beautiful views of Bruxton, the well-known resort of Devonshire, England, which lies a thousand feet above sea level. Chatsworth, the residence of the Duke of Devonshire is shown, as well as other fine estates. The small cottages with their thatched roofs are not neglected, and some fine garden scenes are shown.

"Eight Hundred Years of Coal!" (Universal).

An interesting and timely subject found in the 60th release of the Screen Magazine acquaints us with facts concerning the supply of coal to be found in the coal mines of West Virginia. The particular coal seam referred to is the Pocahontas, which is unusually wide and free from impurities. Here we see the actual mining of the coal with modern machinery, the loaded cars coming to the surface, the loading of the railroad trains for shipment to the sea, and the placing of the coal by means of chutes in the vessel's hold. The story of the coal industry of the present day is well told.

"Camouflage—What It Is and What It Does" (Paramount-Bray).

In the 108th issue of the Pictograph will be found an interesting explanation of the real meaning of the word "camouflage," its proper pronounciation, and illustrations of its practice. The fact that nature made use of camouflage before it was thought of by man is evidenced in the case of various animals, colored or marked in such manner as to make them appear at a distance a neutral part of the background against which they are seen. A lesson in concealment or "distortion camouflage" given in the picture and which relies on counter shading to defeat natural light conditions is interesting. Especially is this method employed to make an object lose its appearance of thickness. Methods of concealment and the reasons for using them, as demonstrated in the camouflaging of ships, are well illustrated in the picture. Diagramatical drawings lucidly describe the camouflage adopted by the Germans to conceal the loop-holes in the sand-bag trench breastworks, and that used by the French in retaliation. An interesting number.

Essanay Scenic Series

General Film Company Expresses Satisfaction with Success of Splendid Group of Educationals.

THE SERIES of one-reel Essanay scenics, the last of which has just been released, has proved to be one of the most successful groups of short-length program features in many months, according to the General Film Company, the distributors. These de luxe scenics have been unusually popular with the larger theaters of the country, due to the fact that the camera has caught some of the heretofore unphotographed wonders of nature and science in unexplored districts of North America. Eleven one-reel subjects, comprising a wide variety of scenic beauty spots, have been offered in the series.

"The Bay of Fundy" (Essanay Service).

In a number of subjects a human interest value has been obtained. For instance, in "Salmon Fishing in New Brunswick" the cameraman caught the antics of a notable group of writers—Jack Lait, Grantland Rice, William McGeehan and Maximilian Foster—on a vacation trip in one of the most beautiful of Canadian wilds. Another subject, "The Grand Canyon of Arizona and Canyon De Chelly" follows the trail of tourists through these two natural wonders of the southwest, and added charm was given "A Romance of Rails and Power" by a series of poses made by Virginia Valli, the Essanay leading actress. These poses, which exemplifies the spirit of modern power, were combined effectively with interesting views showing the progress made in electrifying the railroads of the country.

The subjects in the series released to date follow:

"Salmon Fishing in New Brunswick," "Lake Louise," "Banff National Park," "The Great Natural Industries of Canada," "Water Powers of Eastern Canada," "Water Powers of Western Canada," "Through Canada from Coast to Coast," "How Canada and the Farmer Co-operate in Grain Raising," "Agricultural Opportunities in Western Canada," "A Romance of Rails and Power," and "The Grand Canyon of Arizona and Canyon De Chelly."

E. W. Hammons Recovering

Vice-President of Educational Films Corporation of America Rapidly Convalescing After Successful Operation.

A COUPLE of weeks ago we learned with regret that E. W. Hammons, vice-president of the Educational Films Corporation of America, was forced to undergo an operation. For some time Mr. Hammons had been suffering from a refractory appendix and finally decided to have the pesky thing removed. This has been done and he is now on the road to rapid recovery. In fact we have not the slightest doubt that by the time this reaches our readers he will be again at his desk at 729 Seventh avenue.

Mr. Hammons is well known for his redoubtable energy and accomplishment of big things in the field of the educational picture. The Robert Bruce scenics, the Ditmars animal pictures as well as other educationals of like calibre have endeared the Educational Films Corporation to the theater public; and for the placing of these particular brands on the market under their present conditions of regular release he is largely responsible.

The Moving Picture World and its readers are sincere in wishing Mr. Hammons a rapid return to the best of health.

What Some People Say

Views Worth While Expressed At a Recent Discussion by Well-Trained Minds.

FOLLOWING a recent private review held under the auspices of the National Board of Review of a motion picture notable for its quality, an invitation was extended to those present to express their views regarding the trend motion picture production should take in order to attain greater excellence in the field of dramatic art. The audience was representative of New York City in composition and crowded the auditorium where the review was held. Some very interesting expressions of opinion were received.

One suggested that "there be simplicity in acting, not straining for effect; higher ideals in the subject matter of scenarios, clear, healthful moral tone—no off color undertone."

"Have more plays with plenty of good heart appeal, to stir sympathy and leave food for thought," another said. "They could be truer to art by being truer to human nature and real life. Comedy appeals, less vulgar and emotional appeals, less primitive. Intelligent audiences are asking for less punch and more sincerity in the moving picture."

"The aim of the motion picture should be to present life truly and not falsely," was the opinion of a third. "The motion picture is, I believe, capable of giving a larger sense of life through the right sort of emotional suggestions. It can teach the consequences of acts, and the subtitle (through the medium of better English) can be as powerful as the spoken word. More attention should be given to simplicity of stage setting. A person of taste should choose the wall paper, which is the worst offender."

A former member of the faculty of Columbia University, Department of English, was specific in his suggestions. He said:

"1. Conceive the picture as a whole before any work on it is begun.

"2. Let the fundamental controlling factor be art—not expense or the featuring of a star.

"3. Remember that this art combines the pictorial and the dramatic. Use more pictures for their beauty of scenery and atmospheric effect. This was well done in 'Ramona.' What makes the audience sigh with content is a particularly beautiful setting or background. In the theater, good scenery gets a hand before the actors do.

"4. Avoid the tendency to exploit classic themes such as Cleopatra or Thais because of the implication to the public that there will be risque scenes. There is nothing indecent in the classics, and there will not be in the motion picture if the director bears in mind that his lens should have as an ideal the purpose of being a revealer of new beauty and not of being the keyhole to a boudoir.

"5. Put perfection of form or beauty of face (mere prettiness) in the second place, and get people who can act before the camera.

"6. Avoid the rapidly growing list of motion picture conventions and hackneyed devices. They are due to lack of imagination or to a low intelligence on the part of the director."

He concluded:

"You cannot make a photoplay out of a novel by omitting the words, nor out of a play by omitting the acting, nor out of an opera by omitting the music. In each case the beauty of language, the development of action, and the harmony of music must be replaced by and compensated for by pictorial representation, which, in its own way, is as excellent as good literary style, fine acting, or perfect music."

A journalist expressed this view: "Photoplays founded on historical events, or facts or fancy of forgotten ages, meet with less favor than does a picture story concerning a subject in which the general American public is vitally interested—not necessarily the present world war or national problems, but more particularly picture fiction of simple present-day life. The more simple the picture and the more humane its appeal to the average layman, the more popular it is. As the legitimate stage has divorced forever the old type of 'blood and thunder' melodrama, so is the photoplay world educating the public to better appreciation of pretty but plain and plausible themes to the elimination of the 'murder and revenge' variety formerly so popular."

"The motion picture of today is the magazine story of yesterday," said a successful scenario writer. "But as the magazine story has steadily declined in popular favor, would it not be well for the producers to watch carefully to the end that their public may not grow weary as did the magazine readers? For do we not see displayed on the screen today the same repeated and monotonous plot so long worn threadbare in the magazines, i. e., the young American hero rescuing the heroine from the clutches of the villain? The moving picture public is evidently not yet weary of it, but would it not be well to branch into something better before the inevitable happens?

"While the motion picture is eminently suitable for the portrayal of physical action, it is equally suitable for the portrayal of mental action. So many producers rely almost wholly on physical action as to throw the picture into the dime novel class. Mental action is the real essential of a good play in the pictured drama as well as in the spoken drama. Too much action in motion pictures is just as bad as too much action in stage drama. It is the combination of different degrees of action plus mental action that makes the good picture play and has always made the good stage play. A consideration of this fact, I believe, would tend to greatly elevate picture plays."

Items of Interest.

The 61st release of the Universal Screen Magazine represents a straight drive for Uncle Sam. This issue is worthy of special mention for the reason that it deals entirely with subjects of industrial and agricultural interest such as are necessary for the people of our country to know something about at a moment when the conservation of food, the production of more and better quality of food with which to feed our men at the front, the rearing of a fine quality of horse flesh also for work in the big drive, and the preparation of steel which at the present unhappy period of history is "Democracy's Right Arm." The individual subjects contained in this number which is for release March 8 will be reviewed in another issue.

"The Unbeliever," a multiple-reel Edison picture based on the war novelette "The Three Things" by Mary Shipman Andrews, and produced in co-operation with the United States Marine Corps, at the U. S. M. C. Cantonment, Quantico, Va., will be found an excellent feature number for patriotic programs. The three things to which the title of the original story refers are, class pride, unbelief in God, and race prejudice.

The Strand Theater, New York City, exhibited educational numbers of unusual interest and value during the week of February 10. These were "The Rudiments of Flying" and "Our Southern Mountaineers" from the 107th issue of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph, and "The Horse in Action" from the Pathe series on "The Analysis of Motion."

The Rialto Theater, New York City, presented a couple of travel subjects of unusual interest from the Pathe Exchange, Inc., during the week of February 10. "The Forest of Fontainbleau," beautiful in scenic quality, was the first of a double number with "The Trianons" as the second. The latter recalls pages of French history through which walked the beautiful Marie Antoinette and other members of the monarchial decade of France.

JANE PUTS ONE OVER ON MOTHER.

Mrs. Irene Lee, mother of Jane and Katherine Lee, the William Fox "Baby Grand" film stars, was trying to impress upon Jane, aged five, the necessity of telling the truth at all times. Washington's Birthday was approaching.

"George Washington had difficulties enough for ten men" Mrs. Lee told Jane, "yet he never told a lie."

"Maybe thats' why he had so much trouble," piped Jane.

WHY NOT TRY A NUMBER ON THE SCREEN?

The "Fatty" Arbuckle Jazz band is doing well, thank you. With the airy Paramount comedian strumming the ukelele, Buster Keaton picking at the banjo and Al St. John "moaning" the saxaphone, the music is said to be like nothing ever heard before. All three are masters of their respective instruments, and Alice Lake supplies some of the dancing numbers, so that the program is really worth while.

Foreign Trade News

Trade Conditions Abroad

American Films Gaining in France Despite War, Says Cromelin.

"AN ODD war fact," stated President Paul H. Cromelin of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, "is that American films are breaking into the French markets, and also the Italian, in surprising volume. The brands we are handling for those countries show a better sale than before the war. I have before me on my desk the current report of our Paris office, which sells both France and Italy, and it is one to make anyone with faith in American film feel good. The increase in sale is too substantial not to be commented upon.

"I think Inter-Ocean's very experience in French and Italian sales is an item for fuel administrators and others to think over. The cinema theater is held to be a necessity in these war-torn lands, as the sales figures show, and the people insist on motion picture entertainment despite the pinching war conditions. And officialdom, which was first disposed to curtail amusements, now encourages these people to seek the cinema theater, for it lightens war worries, and that is a public service. Well placed officials told me during my trip abroad last year that without the diversion given by the cinemas the people could not have borne their war griefs.

"I am disposed to feel that the German revolt failed of fruition because that government had seen to it that the people had plenty of amusement. There is even a report that the motion picture shows have been subsidized by the State, but we shall not have the truth in the matter until the great struggle is over. Lloyd George voiced universal official sentiment when he stated: 'The people's entertainment must not suffer interference.' The motion picture today is necessary to the happiness and well-being of whole nations. Our own President recognized this to a greater degree than any other head of a nation. Inter-Ocean's British, French and Italian sales reports bear out the farsighted policy of both statesmen."

Foreign Film Business Under Control

President's Proclamation Will Hamper Exports of Motion Pictures—Licenses From War Trade Board Required.

THE importation and exportation of motion picture films have been placed under Federal control by two proclamations issued on February 15 by the President. This action has been expected for some time, since the shipping board, several weeks ago, gave warning that the movement of ocean freight would have to be curtailed so as to provide ships in which to transport men and their supplies to France.

These proclamations are the most sweeping yet promulgated. They prohibit the importation or exportation of "articles of any kind whatsoever" from or to any country with which we are not at war without proper license from the War Trade Board. Under this prohibition, the movement of motion picture films will be controlled by the Government, and it will be necessary first to secure license. The countries with which we are at war are included in the list of those to which license is necessary, but of course no licenses for transportation of anything to or from those nations are being issued.

In announcing the promulgation of the proclamations, the War Trade Board, under whose jurisdiction such matters come, issued a statement of explanation. The purpose and effect of these proclamation, which become effective February 16, it is explained, are to subject to control by license the entire foreign commerce of the United States.

BIDWELL & LARRAIN IN NEW YORK.

Bidwell & Larrain, one of the most important film concerns in Chile, arrived in New York a week ago. Their Chilean offices are located in Santiago, Antofagasta and La Serena. Besides operating an exchange they control twenty-seven theaters, most of them in Northern Chile. Both partners will remain in New York for a few months.

"Export and Import" Closes Big Deals

Important Sales Made for Argentina, South Africa, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Scandinavia, Australia and Japan.

THE Export and Import Film Company, Inc., 729 Seventh avenue, New York, announces that despite the handicaps caused by the war it has in the past few weeks shipped a large quantity of films to foreign countries. This concern recently sold to the International Variety & Theatrical Agency for South Africa "The City of Purple Dreams" and "Brown of Harvard," produced by the Selig Polyscope Company, the output of which it controls for the various foreign markets; the Selig-Hoyt comedies, "Runaway Colt" and "A Bear Fact," and the "Tweedledum" comedies.

It also reports the following sales for Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay and Chile: "City of Purple Dreams," "Brown of Harvard," "Garden of Allah" (Selig Polyscope), a series of ten two-reel Selig-Hoyt comedies, thirty other Selig subjects, "Painted Doll," "Her Sister's Rival" (Russian Art Films), and a series of thirteen "Tweedledum" comedies.

To Australia it has sold "Garden of Allah," "Brown of Harvard" and "The Crisis" (Selig productions), and "Man's Law."

The rights for Great Britain on "An Ocean Waif," "Tweedledum" comedies, "Man's Law," "Loyalty" and "Humility" were recently disposed of by this firm, as well as the Scandinavian rights on eleven five and six reel Metro productions.

Two of these pictures—"An Ocean Waif' and "Black Sheep"—were also sold for Japan.

Benjamin Blumenthal, president of the company, states that he is negotiating several other sales, which will be shortly announced.

THE FRENCH MARKET.

The Paris branch of the Vitagraph Company is about to release a photodrama in four parts, entitled "Pour la France," dealing with war conditions.

The Ivan Film Company seems to be well represented in France. Its productions, which are in demand, are being shown in many of the Paris and provincial theaters.

"Cine Journal," a well-known trade paper published in Paris, will shortly issue a directory of the French film industry. This should be a valuable book of reference for exporters interested in the French market and the colonial possessions of France.

The numerous serials and other pictures produced by Pathé Freres in their American studios find as much favor in France as in this country. Pearl White is one of the most popular stars on the other side of the Atlantic.

"Christus," the biblical drama produced by the Cines Company of Italy, which practically fell flat in this country, is being re-exhibited in France at the present time. Its success in Europe may be judged by the fact that the number of performances in France alone reached 3,000. This is the same picture barred by the authorities of several Mexican states on the ground that its religious theme might "pervert the morals of the people."

The Agence General Cinematographique of Paris controls the French rights on a number of Chaplin ("Charlot," they call him over there) comedies. We also notice that it releases some Bluebird subjects.

"Coach No. 13," a serial in eight episodes, produced about a year ago, has been very successful in Europe and South America.

The Inter-Ocean Film Corporation of New York has launched an aggressive advertising campaign in the French trade press through its Paris branch office. It seems to be devoting particular attention to Paralta plays, which will be shortly released on that market.

Mundus Film Company, with headquarters in Paris and branch offices in Rome and London, acts as distributor in France for Metro pictures, Chaplin and Billy West comedies, and a number of multiple-reel features of American make. It is also the exclusive agent for Simplex projectors in this territory.

"Davy Crockett" (Pallas) has just been released in France by the Gaumont Company, distributor for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in France and her colonies, Switzerland, Belgium and Egypt.

Triangle pictures are released regularly on the French market through the Eclipse Company of Paris.

The Paris headquarters of the Pathe Company are about to release "Les Travailleurs de la Mer" ("Toilers of the Sea"), an adaptation of Victor Hugo's novel of the same name. M. A. Antoine furnished the script and directed the picture. After the rumpus caused by the octopus in "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" it would be interesting to find out how Mr. Antoine tackled the same problem.

L. Aubert of Paris controls the rights on "Kip-Kin-Kop," a sensational serial produced by Armand Vay of the same city. The first and second episodes were released on January 25 and February 1, respectively. The actor who plays the lead in this serial resembles Maciste in build, and the scenario revolves around his abnormal strength.

It appears that exhibitors in France are also having trouble in obtaining musical scores at reasonable prices. A music publishing society has recently been formed in Paris for the purpose of furnishing exhibitors, at a low yearly rate, with specially arranged classic and modern music, on which no rights have to be paid.

Cinematographs Harry, with headquarters in Paris, is an old established concern recently reorganized. According to statements, it is doing business with a capital of 1,000,000 francs (about $200,000 in United States currency). It distributes films and supplies in the French market.

In honor of the American colony a gala exhibition of "Uncle Sam's Fleet" was given in Paris, at the "Colisee," on the 26th of last January. We notice in the announcement published by the French press that the show was authorized by the Secretary of the Navy, "Sir Daniel."

AMONG THE EXPORTERS.

Velasco & Puig, 145 West 45th street, New York, advise that their photographic and developing laboratory has been recently enlarged, and is now located in Brooklyn—37 Third avenue. This concern has handled the translation and printing of the titles for many of the American pictures shipped to Latin America.

O. F. Spahr, of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company of Chicago, reports the shipment of fifteen Motiograph machines to Johannesburg, South Africa. On the same day a smaller shipment was made by this firm to Australia.

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., 18 East 41st street, New York, starts its propaganda throughout the Spanish and Portuguese speaking markets in the March issue of Cine-Mundial. It would not be surprising if the "First National" became an international exhibitors' circuit within a short time.

The Western Import Company, Brokaw Building, New York, is offering the exclusive rights on Mabel Normand's "Mickey" for the different Latin-American markets, with the exception of Brazil.

The David Stern Company, 1027 Madison street, Chicago, has adopted a consistent selling policy in connection with its foreign trade. This firm has already placed several models of motion picture cameras in the Latin-American markets.

The Graphic Film Corporation, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, has just started its foreign campaign through the columns of Cine-Mundial. "Moral Suicide," the latest Abramson production, is its initial offering.

The J. Frank Brockliss office, at 729 Seventh avenue, New York, once again looks itself. Sidney Garrett, president and general manager of this corporation, returned to his desk last Saturday, February 16, somewhat thin, but nevertheless fully recovered from his severe spell of pneumonia, which confined him to the Knickerbocker Hospital almost three weeks and at one time required the constant services of three nurses. The recovery of Mr. Garrett and his return to the office are all the more pleasing to the trade, for at one time grave rumors were circulating on Broadway to the effect that his recovery was being despaired of. During Mr. Garrett's absence his first assistant, H. A. Gillespie, attended to the Brockliss business with the ease and effectivness characteristic of one of his abilities.

INQUIRIES FROM ABROAD.

The addresses of these firms may be obtained from Cine-Mundial, 516 Fifth avenue, New York. We do not assume responsibility as to the standing of the inquirers, and the usual precautions should be taken in all cases. All inquiries are received direct by the Moving Picture World and Cine-Mundial, the Spanish monthly edition of the Moving Picture World. Please mention number when writing:

1. A firm in Colombia is in the market for portable projection outfits for family use.
2. A man in Yurimaguas, Peru, wishes to get in touch with New York film exchanges. Wants to know renting terms. Will deposit necessary funds in Peru and London bank before placing order.
3. A firm in Brazil is in the market for films and moving picture supplies of every description. This firm covers northern and southern Brazil.
4. A man in Chuibdo, Choco, Colombia, is in the market for a projection machine with motor, screen, wires, 16-candle-power lamps and accessories.
5. A firm in Santo Domingo is in the market for a second-hand electric lighting set, from 8 to 10 kilowatts, run by gasoline engine. It is also interested in used theater chairs.
6. A man in Banes, Cuba, is in the market for a motion picture camera.
7. A man in Rosario, Argentina, is in the market for new and second-hand film.
8. A man in Caracas, Venezuela, is in the market for new and used film.

CRANDALL BUILDING BIG PICTURE THEATER.

Crandall's Metropolitan theater, covering approximately 10,000 square feet, is the largest and most handsome theater in Washington, D. C. The entrance is on F street, the lobby extending back thirty feet to a rotunda promenade leading directly to the auditorium proper of the theater, which, running at right angles, covers the remainder of the property to Tenth street. This affords an immense area on the first floor, the plans calling for twelve hundred seats of the orchestra level alone. Extending over half of this space is hung the cantilever balcony and mezzanine. Private boxes and loge seats will occupy the entire mezzanine, and the arrangement of the balcony is novel in that it consists of a series of rises, reached by a system of ornamental fireproof tunnels or promenades. The mezzanine floor will have a seating capacity of over three hundred, while the balcony will seat approximately seven hundred, giving the theater a total capacity of over twenty-two hundred. This makes the Metropolitan the largest theater in Washington.

The house is of fireproof construction throughout, and the general lines and architectural plan is of the Adams period. The front of the theater on F street is of Pompeian art brick with Tennessee lime stone trimmings. The interior decorations will be in rich tones of old rose and mediaeval ivory heightened with gold. Three semi-eliptical stages will be placed at the southwestern end of the building on Tenth street, and the screen will be entirely visible from every section of the theater. A thirty-piece orchestra will occupy a sunken Italian Garden just in front of the stage and separated from the orchestra floor by a long, low marble balustrade. The Metropolitan theater will be strictly a motion picture house conducted along the most exclusive and refined lines.

USING FILMS FOR TRAINING SOLDIERS.

Motion picture films are coming into greater use as agents for visual instruction of newly-drafted men. The Commissions on Training Camp Activities of the War and Navy Departments have secured films showing the relationship between boxing and bayoneting, as well as the methods of using the bayonet. These films are to be sent for exhibition to the various army and navy camps.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Up to the Audience.

A. L. MIDDLETON, of the Queen theater, De Queen, Ark., is trying a novel experiment. He issued a "Red letter" to his patrons. It is too long to be given here, but this is the gist of the idea: He ran with prices up to 20 cents in November, and kept a straight record of the receipts. He ran straight ten and fifteen in December and in January at ten cents. In each case the war tax is added. His proposition is that if he takes in as much money in January as he did in December and November, he will keep the price at ten cents, otherwise back comes the ten and fifteen-cent scale. As he puts it, for the sake of clearness, he would just as soon show to three ten-cent persons as two fifteen-cent patrons. He wants thirty cents and he does not care whether he gets it from two or three persons so long as he gets the money he needs to run the house with. He puts it up to his patrons to come more often at the lower scale, and adds that if it rains or turns cold, that is the very night that his regulars should make extra efforts to turn out. It will be an interesting experiment, but the trouble will be to keep the ten-centers hustling month after month. In a recent newspaper advertisement Mr. Middleton speaks of the Queen as "The small town house with the City Program." If you like that line, put it on your own house name. He sends in two paneled advertisements. One holds too much type, but the other is very well done. In using panels, care should be taken not to fill them completely. Isolate the statements with rule, but make it possible to read the type.

Cico Booking Books.

Cico Toodles' daddys, the Cahill-Igoe Co., offers to send free to any exhibitor one of their booking books, and to send him another when that is gone. Each book carries a week's spaces on a double page for eleven weeks, as shown in the cut, and the week can be started with any particular day on which the exhibitor does start his week instead of arbitrarily starting with Monday. The book is paper covered, 4x9 inches, and decidedly handy, while it should prove a good business getter for the various products of the Cahill-Igoe company.

Third Street's Newest.

C. D. Buss, of the Third Street, Easton Pa., explains his newest idea to follow the features contest. He calls it the Whosit? The essential feature is working in with a newspaper, which supplied a half-page space once a week at reduced price. It will be made up as a miniature newspaper and the cartoon will be some well-known local character. One man, an electrician, is often seen about town with electric fixtures under his arm. The cartoon will show a back view of him, and five prizes will be awarded the successful guessers. The scheme is not unlike the lantern-slide stunt suggested on page 57 of Picture Theater Advertising, and has the advantage over the photoplay star scheme of interesting all the readers of the paper, since the stunt is one appealing to all local people instead of merely to the local fans. Mr. Buss sends in a couple of advertisements for "The Rise of Jennie Cushing." One is copied from the trade-paper advertisements, and the other is the regular mat layout and supplied by the company. The all-type is three columns wide, but could have gone into the two-column measure, and we think it gives much more selling talk than the layout style. Cuts are good for attractors, but the average cut does not make business because it tells so little of the story, and it must be backed up by type talk if it is to return the cost of the space. It is not enough that it is a cut. It must be a selling cut.

Labor Saving.

The monthly program of the Scenic theater, Keene, N. H., is a bit too labor saving. Two pages are given to reprinted poems, both of them good, but nothing is good enough to replace chatty house talk in a program designed to sell amusement. The program proper takes up four pages of black-type names and titles. Using smaller type, the same thing would have gone into two pages with an equal display. It could be shown up even better in a single page of eight-point. It is extravagant to pay money for printing two pages that are not needed; as wasteful to pay composition and impression and paper costs on two other pages for poems having nothing to do with the case. It would be better to cut from a twelve to an eight, with some type talk about the house and coming shows, or give the extra four pages to the outside advertisers, after first giving them a program they will want to buy space in. Display is not a matter of eighteen or twenty-four-point black-face type. It is a matter of relative sizes and distinctness. It would be better to run the calendar in a page and then take the other three pages for a running story of the offerings, setting two columns to the page and using not larger than an eight-point.

Value Criticism.

The Hardwicke Brothers, Clovis, N. M., write:

> We thank you for your frank criticism of our advertising matter in a recent number of the "World." We do not take any exception to it, in fact, we greatly appreciate it. Our experience in the past has mostly been purchased at high prices. When we can get for nothing another's experience, which he has paid for, we consider that we are lucky.
> Recalled to the writer's mind is a "scoop" put over on a circus. As a general rule they knock the bottom out of the show business in a small town. Some time ago when one was here a sign was painted. It was seven feet long on sign cloth. The reading: "OFFICIAL—There will be only one performance on the circus grounds this afternoon. There will be two full and complete shows at the Lyceum Theater —TONIGHT"—was such that it lead people to believe that there would be no circus that night. We got full benefit of all the advertising that the circus had spent to bring people into the town. Don't mean to say full benefit, but at least we got enough to get an excellent patronage.

It is a pleasure to get a letter like that. It is even more pleasant to get samples showing that they mean what they say. We suggested that their program suffered from poor spacing. The new program (unfortunately the colors will not reproduce) has the days divided by neat dashes. It is a small thing, but it improves the appearance of the issue a hundred per cent., and appearance assuredly does have an influence in moulding opinion. This is not supposed to be a department of puffery. It is designed to HELP Exhibitors by pointing out errors and praising that which is good. It sets standards by which others may judge the work of their own printers and by means of which they can improve their own advertising.

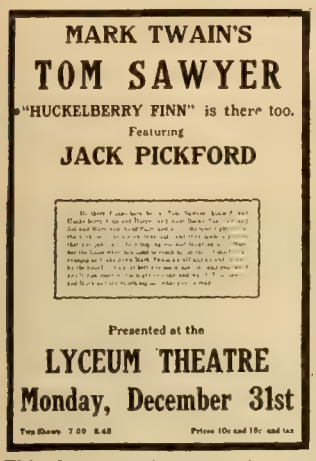
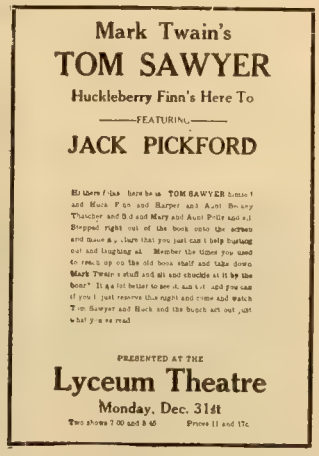
The new advertising sent in is particularly interesting because they sent two papers of the same date and the advertisements are in pairs. Evidently they had no layout cut for the Mark Twain story and sent precisely the same copy to the two sheets. This is what they got:





This forms a nice study in type values. Both advertisements have their good and bad points. That on the left offers a slightly better top. Here the Tom Sawyer is in deeper line than the other, but it is condensed as compared with a normal letter on the right. But to offset this, each letter has been spaced, and this permits the suggestion of width as well as depth. It stands out better than extended letter of the same face, set solid, would have done. A better display is also gained for the following line. Evidently the printer took liberties with the copy to get a better looking line, but he did not impair its value. In both cases the "featuring" is given too large a face. A ten point would have been sufficient, for the word is non-essential and merely makes for smoothness. The solid matter is beter displayed on the right. To get an ornamental panel the other compositor has sacrificed legibility for ornamentation, and it is legibility that counts. The lower bank is better valued on the right. "Presented at the" is far less important than the name of the house, and the date need not be so large, as long as it is plain. Certainly it should not be of equal height with the house name, because the house is more important than the date. Get them interested in the show and tell them the house. The date will be looked for, so it should be large enough to be found without trouble, but it should not be displayed in letters as large as those used for the house name. Taken in all the right hand display is better than that on the left. It is more legible throughout and we like the use of upper and lower case as against the abuse of capitals shown on the left.

The next example gives two displays for "Barbary Sheep." Here the layout mats were used for both advertisements. One is two eights and the other two nines. Neither cut does much to tell the story. They serve merely as attracters and do not perform this service very well. In the example on the left too much dependence has been placed upon the tiny lettering on the cut to get the selling point over. The type is given almost entirely to the local act. The "Come early Saturday night" is partly wasted because it does not connect well with the cut. The lower bank tells its story well, but the message for the film is almost wholly lost through the small hand lettering. The smaller example is better. The top gives a reason for coming Saturday night, because a local favorite will appear. The text below the cut tells something of the story of the film offering, even if the printer did get Hitchens' name wrong without being found out in time. Both advertisements are viciously bad in that the prices and showing times are played up at the expense of the house name. Standing orders should be given the compositors that the house name must be played up. The time table and prices could have gone in an eight point Roman just as well, and in a single line, at that, giving an additional twelve points to the house name.

The third pair shows a cut and type display for Douglas Fairbanks. There is a lot of waste matter in the cut layout. There is no particular reason why house managers should be required to boom Miss Loos or John Emerson. The type talk is much more snappy, and it would have paid to chisel out the cumbering names. vertisement is not quite as snappy looking, but it is well set to display the proper lines and is the most intelligent piece of composition in the six examples. But the word "see" might be reduced to a ten point and the "in" following Fairbanks' name should have been similarly treated. It is never good practice to detract from the star's name with an "in" or "as" on the same line and in the same type. It could have gone in a six point between the title and the name of the star.

Here's a line from their program we like:

> That set of bells we play that makes such loud music is called a UNA-FON. When you hear it in the day time it means that there is a matinee. In the evening it signifies that there is something exceptional being shown; something that will please you. It is also played at the starting of the second show on Saturday night. If you'll remember this, you'll know what's goin' on.

Clovis, we gather, is one of those average towns with a one-street shopping center. When the bells strike up Saturday night the public knows that the second show is about to start. The Hardwicks send in a photograph of their invitation Christmas matinee with most of the kinds in town waiting for the doors to open. Those free matinees at Christmas time should be made a regular feature with every house, town or country.

Features Himself.

Harry Buckley, of the Kossuth, Brooklyn, sends in his program for comment. It is not a pretentious issue, but he makes it work well. The sheet is 5x6, a four-pager, with a special play for the big attraction of the week on the front page. The novelty of the program is the top box of the centre pages. This is headed, "Mr. Buckley says:—" and is used for special messages or to commend some special attraction. In the program at hand, for example, he mentions the hit certain players made at a recent showing and announces that they will shortly appear again in a play along similar lines. Mr. Buckley has hit upon a capital scheme. A box like that can be made a real business-maker if care is taken not to abuse the confidence of the patron.

Steve Stunts.

Steve Farrar sends in what looks to be like a new one for picture theaters, though the idea itself is not new. He had manila cards 11x14 printed up:

We close all day
XMAS
Going to the Casino Xmas night to see
"The Law Decides"
Vitagraph special in 7 reels.

They were distributed to all the stores, doing away with the home-made sign and advertising Steve at the same time. As he points out, this is good for small town any holiday. It might also be adapted to the "We close at —— o'clock on Saturdays" for the summer season. It made both talk and business. Steve got the paper to give him first column, first page for a third of a column argument that the men who keep the nation in good humor and optimistic are doing their bit. There are various pieces of copy along these lines. Steve offered his as news and got the front page. That's the real secret of press work. Get the editor to run it as news and the people will take it with much greater respect than when it appears as a paid advertisement, but it must be stuff that can properly class as news if it is to get through. And another manila card 7x11 gives a list of star features for a two month period with the announcement that he has contracted for the pick of the market. He makes a good strong brag about them, but he sticks to the truth, at that. The card is punched for a nail head and the top line reads "Hang me up." A bottom line adds: "Keep this list so that you will always know the date on which these pictures are to be shown." This is Steve's first look-in in several months, but evidently he is running true to form.

Free Advertising.

An Exhibitor who has been coming in to this department about as long and as often as anyone, wants to know why a company should send out a mat like that shown and expect the houses to use it. We don't know. It is bad enough to be expected to use the brand name at line rates, but here is a case, and it is by no means an unusual one, where the name of the producer completely overshadows the title of the attraction and is repeated in smaller type in the same bank, while two perfectly good stars, in whom the public is more apt to be interested, are not even hinted at. There seems to be a growing disposition to load down the advertising layouts with the name of everyone around the place from the director to the scrub woman. It is all wrong. There is but one thing the Exhibitor is interested in advertising, and that is the name of the star with the attraction in which the star appears. Nothng else matters unless it happens that the play is taken from a well known book by an established author, but even here the author is seldom as important as the star, and the book title should be used as the play title instead of being presented under an alias, as is so often the case. Here are ten agate lines, double column, announcing the producer, for which the Exhibitor must pay space rates if he desires to use a cut in his advertising. The only alternative is to crop and rout the cut, generally spoiling the display. If this advertisement were the exception it would not be worth while talking about, but it is becoming more and more the rule to load a layout with all sorts of truck, and the offense is not confined to any one producing company.

And the same letter tells that the Exhibitor sent to a service bureau the slide of another company, making the suggestion that such a slide, with some selling talk, would be an improvement upon the material supplied, and the service bureau cheerfully replied that the slide "did not have enough color." Can you beat it?

Worked With Schools.

The Triangle Publicity Department is sending out a story of how Michael Warshower, of the Penn theater, Brooklyn, worked with a neighborhood school in helping distress in that territory. The school children were given tickets good any time except after six o'clock on Friday, Saturday or Sunday. These they sold to their parents and friends, and half of the face value of the ticket was given to a relief fund for the needy of the neighborhood. More than $500 was realized by this means, and Mr. Warshower is repeating the experiment with another school. School teachers come more intimately in contact with the needy of their neighborhood than any other class of persons, and they can better appreciate the need for relief. Evidently Mr. Warshower knew this and capitalized his knowledge to make patronage and do real good at the same time. It is such things as this that make the picture house something more than a theater. Make your house a local institution, too.

For a Patriotic Subject.

Metro supplies the stills of a lobby display used by Charles Englebrecht, of the Regent, Arlington, N. J., for Draft 258. The photograph shows the detail of the essential feature. The floor was sanded, and a pot swung over an electric light fire. The entire lobby was draped in the national colors, but not overdressed. The display did not cost much to get up, for most of it was borrowed, and the chief expense was for putting it up, yet it served as well as a much more elaborate display, because it was gotten up with taste.

Beat the Rest.

W. J. Hayes, of the Strand, Erie, Pa., claims the distinction of being the first manager to pay the Amusement Tax. He arranged with the collector to audit his books November 30th, and paid the check then instead of waiting until December 1. Then he got a quarter column press notice on the fact and was able to explain why he did not get three cents out of each five raised. As a news item it was more convincing than a page advertisement would have been, and the prepayment of the tax gave the space a real news value. That is real press work. Less than a quarter of the space was given to the payment of the tax, but it was read for the news and the reader kept on down to the bottom where he would not have read the mere announcement of taxation. Giving a real news twist to the story is the most certain way to gain attention.

Telling It.

"Who gets the war tax?" asks the Garfield, Chicago, and it answers its own questions with "YOU do, for it is spent to insure peace, protect your interests and end the war." That makes the opening of a reader on any program.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully adressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addrssed to this department. Questions should be treated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Working in Captions.

SOME companies trust more to their leaders than they should, particularly in making comedies. It is only the other day that a member of the production force of one of the large companies announced that they were starting in to make comedies and explained, "We don't care so much about the action if the titles are good." In other words, they merely illustrate their leaders with action of a sort. This is done a great deal, but the brands cannot hold their own against the type of comedy in which spirited action is made better by pointed leaders. At the same time, since they are in demand, and the synopsis only is wanted, it is best to give the leaders in the synopsis. If you take the old story of the man who concludes that he is not wanted at a party after he has been thrown out three times, you write the action and the leader in the synopsis in somewhat this fashion:

> Jim makes a third try to enter the hall. At the door Bill meets him and remarks, "You're wearing out your shoes coming upstairs and the seat of your pants going down." He gives another heave and down Jim goes for the third time. As he comes through the swinging doors he lands flat on the sidewalk, gets up and starts for the door. He turns and shakes his head, remarking. "I'll be darned if I go in there again. They ain't cordial enough." He goes on up the street—&c.

Here you work in two leaders to a single run of action and the editor who handles the stuff is more apt to buy such a story than one with better action and newer idea but for which he or one of his staff must supply the titles. Of course if you can make the action funny, as well, you stand an even better chance, but with some markets the leader seems to be regarded as above the action.

That Synopsis Polisher.

(Concluded from last week.)

On the other hand nineteen needs no further elaboration. This is a single scene. The main incident is given. Any reconstructor can get a powerful scene from what is given. More is unnecessary.

Twenty-three calls for further elaboration. Legree is the second most important character. It should be told that he is the antithesis of Henry. It will pay to take the space for him.

> She is bought by Simon Legree. Legree is one of the most brutal slave owners of the South. He is a new type to Cassy. Henry and Gerald were polished men of fashion. Even in their excesses they were not without refinement. Stuart was of a different type, a home-keeping planter, but kind hearted and decent. Legree is little above the beasts, a coarst, sensualist, a brutal, merciless master, ill-dressed, unversed in the niceties of society and contemptuous of its tenets. He takes her to his plantation up the dreaded Red River.

Now we have a better idea of Legree and can understand what he means to Cassy who through all her vicissitudes has retained her niceties of thought. Knowing the man and the woman we can understand without elaborate explanation, their attitude toward each other. We can sense the situation and mentally supply the action for the scenes.

In twenty-six more explanation is needed. Without a better understanding of Tom and Lucy they might be a pair of slave sweethearts. It is not shown that Tom refuses to flog Lucy because he will not flog another and not because she is his sweetheart. It might even suggest itself that Cassy's interest in Tom is due to other causes than compassion. In this story Tom is but a minor character, but he figures prominently in one or two leading scenes and therefore he must be made real.

> An incident in the cotton fields serves her importantly at a later time. Lucy, one of the slaves, is exhausted. Tom, an aged negro, helps her by placing in her bag some of the cottton he himself has picked. Cassy warns him that he is likely to get into trouble through his kindly deed, but he persists. He is overseen by Sambo, Legree's negro slave-driver, who tells his master, and that night Legree declares Lucy's bag to be under weight and orders Tom to flog her. This Tom refuses to do and angrily Legree himself mercilessly flogs the negro, who persumes to read him a lesson in morality. That night the compassionate Cassy, who still has the run of the house, slips in to minister to Tom, etc.

Now we know more about Tom. The rest follows easily. A study of the script will show that paragraphs 28 to 41 contain about three-fifths of the whole story. All that has gone before is in preparation for this. All coming after is more or less in the nature of anti-climax. The story should preferably end with the ending of forty-one. This is the object of the story. When it is attained, the story is done. But to end here would eliminate the final union of Henry and Cassy. This need not, however, be wholly eliminated; indeed, through a rearrangement of the factors, the desire to rejoin Henry may be used to motivate the entire story.

To accomplish this end will be simple. Following twenty-five, reintroduce Henry into the story by having visiting planters tell Legree that they have heard that Henry bought his child and is looking for Cassy. They do not know that Cassy is near nor that she is the property of Legree. It is just the table talk of a couple of planters who have dropped in on business, but Cassy has noted the address, and now her aim is not merely escape, but escape to Henry. She withdraws what little complaisance she has shown Legree and it is this which leads to his sending her to the fields. All that follows bears upon her escape to Henry, and when, at the end of forty-one, we see Cassy and Emmeline leave the plantation, we do not have to ask if she will rejoin Henry. We know that she will and we know that he wants her. As they pass down the road the scene fades and the story is ended. The climax is reached. The rest is not told—it is foretold.

It will be seen that Mr. Harrison, once he warms to his plot, makes it real. But he does not, at the start, interest the reader. He is too busy with his facts to be interesting. It would be better to tell the facts first and then, with the full story in mind, write the introductory paragraph and clean-copy. Then he migth get:

> Raised as a white girl, to be sold into slavery on account of her quadroon mother, Cassy is sold into still worse slavery when the man she has learned to love is led into dissipation and loses his estate. She is sold to one of the lowest, most brutal slave drivers of the Red River district, but he cannot break her will and in the end she brings about his death through playing upon his superstitious fears, and at last finds peace and honor with the man she loves and the child she has borne him.

In all previous polished contests some sales have been reported as the result of the studies. We hope that in time some readers will be able to report that they have gotten ideas from "Uncle Tom's Cabin" that have proved available, but no sales can be hoped for until synopses are better written. Mr. Harrison's synopsis is by no means a sample of the average. He is far above the average.

Manufacturers' Notice.

T IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its ditor.

Important Notice.

Owing to th mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat boklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Would Have to See It Work.

George H. Sullivan, Fall River, Mass., presents the following:

Enclosed find diagram of wiring of a new projection machine installation in Marcus Lowe's Savoy Theater, this city. It may help some reader of the department. I have, as you will see, placed a short-circuit switch on each machine. The handles of these switches are joined by means of a small cable running through pulleys on the floor (suppose you cut a grove in the floor for the cable. Yes? No?—Ed.) so that it is impossible to close both switches at the same time, thus preventing possible blowing of fuses. This is exactly opposite to the G. E. blueprint, and I would like to have your comment on it. It works fine—better than any plan I have seen in all my experience. Would recommend it to all brother operators. There is now a report system in use here. Reports must be made out every month in regular theaters and it places a man on his metal to get a good report. (The brother said a blank was enclosed, but nothing doing. What kind of report is it? Presumably as to condition of equipment. If so, it will serve an excellent purpose.—Ed.) As you know, this state has a pretty stiff examination but they go to a school and get by the State House (if you mean they get by without adequate knowledge of both theoretical and practical projection, then there is something lacking, and very much lacking in the Boston examination regardless of how "stiff" it may be. I'd like a tintype of the school man who could get past the Vancouver examination.—Ed.) and get a card, then we get them and if a wire burns off on a job and friend manager has to give rain checks (wire checks would be better.—Ed.) because friend school man issued the bulletin: "Of course I can't run without wires," he raises an awful howl. And as a rule if these men succeed in getting into a union they stop right there, on the theory that the union will always get them decent wages anyhow. But this report card isn't going to allow him to stop "if" the manager is on the level. It has many good points which you will recognize. It will, I think, in time, be a big asset to our local as well as to our employers. You can reproduce the blank, explaining same, also diagram of series connected lamps, explaining same in your own language, which positively is understood by even the worst of the craft.

Now, how in gahena can I explain something I haven't seen. Shame upon you, Brother Sullivan, for hoping me all up and then failing to enclose friend blank. Get busy and send along the blankety blank blank. Glad to look it over and to publish if it is even half as valuable as you seem to think it is.

As to the connection, why I would have to handle it myself in order to make intelligent comment. That it will work is a cinch, and I cannot see why it won't work very well, except that two arcs in series are just a bit unstable. I think it would be best that you, yourself, explain to us the advantages you claim for the plan. My best to the Fall River men. May take a spin up through your neck of the woods next spring. I'm not promising but—maybe.

Reduction in Condenser Diameter.

Ralph W. Martin, Los Angeles, California, writes:

My Dear Richardson: I have just read in the department, issue of Oct. 6, optical dope by Chas. A. Young. Of course the whole matter as there presented is nothing new to the department, but the discussion is very thoroughly handled and clearly illustrated, the drawings in particular being very commendable. However, except in a few unimportant details there is not much to comment on theoretically, for the aperture lens idea in two other phases of possible application is already advanced to the stage of practical experiment. The gist of Brother Young's scheme can be summed up as suggested by your final remarks to the article, to wit: Can such a "sub condenser" be properly mounted without interfering too seriously with present gate construction? Referring also to Griffiths' article in issue of Sept. 29, the matter he treats of is admittedly a little off the path of present practical problems, but there are two items you mention in the final comments which, I believe, are worth further thought and study, viz.: First, the value and possibility of a corrected condenser. I have always believed in the value of a corrected condenser, as expressed in repeated convictions that spherical aberration wastes a considerable volume of the available light. As to it's possibility, the corrugated lens being exploited by the incandescent projection lamp development is worthy of study and experiment.

Second, concerning the further reduction of condenser breakage, I believe a present possible step in that direction could be made by endeavoring to have the arc lens reduced to 3½ inches diameter, thus greatly reducing the volume of glass; also allowing of a deeper meniscus form. There is only 3½ inches of the present arc lens utilized anyhow. An adapter could be made for the 3½ inch lens, so that no alterations in the regular mounts would be necessary.

I am not agreed with the tendency, lately observed (Sept. 1) to reduce the diameter of the condensers to anything as small as 2½ or 3 inches, advance the illuminant closer than 3 inches to the lens and thus shorten the Y distance. I don't believe this scheme will lead to any good until the light source can be made of very small area, and that is not yet. I will be glad to hear at the earliest of Lester Bowen's findings from his tests of the aperture lens I sent in.

Brother Bowen has made no report, except verbally, and that too indefinite to be of much value. He merely said it "certainly did increase the screen illumination." I am wondering just how far there might be value in condenser diameter reduction. This has never been very much experimented with, so far as I know, with the arc optical system. As condenser diameter is reduced the arc can be advanced, within limits, of course, Y distance shortened, and that without loss between aperture and objective. Exactly what the possible screen effect of a 2.5 or 3 inch diameter arc lens might be, with a sixty ampere d. c. arc, I do not know. But the ordinary practice in England is to use a 3½ inch diameter arc lens. As diameter is reduced the lens automatically becomes thinner and the danger of breakage from high temperature decreases; also it seems to me annealing possibilities increase. The Pathescope illuminates a six to seven foot picture quite well with a small incandescent or Nerst—don't remember which—because the lamp is right up against the condenser, the same being but two or two and one-half inches in diameter. It seems to me there are possibilities here, within limits, of course. Under all conditions I am inclined to doubt the advantage of a greater working condenser opening than 3½ inches. That idea has long been in the back of my mind, but up to now I have hesitated, fearing to yet further confuse what is an already pretty badly complicated problem.

Regular Plutocrats.

Richard A. Whitlock, Middletown, New York, sends four perfectly excellent dollars for a Handbook and says:

Own a Power's 5 and a few thousand feet of film. Learned to run a projector in a small town in Florida. Manager was a friend of mine and allowed me access to the operating room. There were two operators (Umph!—Ed.). The Chief (Umph again! Ed.) ran a ten-cent store in daytime and operated at night for nine dollars a week. His assistant was allowed to get away with two real dollars every Saturday night, whether he earned them or not. The assistant was about fourteen years young. They would allow me to run the machines after a time. I never learned much but intend to increase my scant stock of projection lore now.

Probably nine dollars a week was not really quite so small as it seemed in the village where it was paid. Maybe friend exhibitor really had more of a struggle to pay it than the average city theater has to pay three times that sum, but it looks funny allee samee; also the two-dollar-a-week "assistant" is, I think, in a class all by his lonesome.

How Things Are Going.

M. M. Moon, Sherman, Texas, from whom we had not heard in quite some time, knocks at the front door with the following:

It is nearly four months since I let you know how things down here are progressing, therefore guess it is time I loosened up. All our regular men are working, and as luck had it we all missed the first draft call. But one or two relief men enlisted, which, of course, gave us some trouble for a time. We have just presented our new contracts to the managers. They call for $25 for six days, which the men should have had long ago, for I feel sure in saying there is no better bunch of operators anywhere than we have right here. I believe our managers realize this fact and will sign up without any controversy or "rag chewing." I feel that our Sherman theater managers are just as live and progressive as are our own men. The proof of this is their success in business. The non-progressive exhibitor soon falls by the wayside and drops down and out, just as does the square-head, non-progressive, lazy operator. It is the law.

My own boss, Mr. Batsell, has just purchased a new $6,500 photoplayer and had it installed in the theater. It helps some, of course, but it is two new projection machines we need more than anything else. He says the main reason why he has not purchased new projectors is that no one in Dallas handles the Simplex. (Huh; there is no law against buying in Fort Worth, or even direct from the manufacturer, is there? And Brother Moon certainly is entitled to new machines; also it is directly in your interest that they be installed without delay.—Ed.)

The main reason for my letter is to answer a question you asked. Question: Suppose we project a given subject at 60 feet per minute and then project the same subject, under precisely identical conditions, except that the speed be increased to 70, will or will not the screen brilliancy be the same in both cases? My opinion is that increased speed would have no effect upon screen brilliancy, but flicker would, of course, be reduced, and this might give an appearance of greater illumination. But this would merely be an optical illusion. Is your personal address still 22 East 17th street, New York City?

My personal address now is 1733 West Ninth street, Brooklyn, N. Y. You are approximately correct in your reply to the question. It has, however, just occurred to me that a minor equation enters into the matter. Insofar as the projection machine itself be concerned, it would pass exactly the same light percentage at any speed of projection. But the film itself cuts a certain amount of light, and since we are passing more film in a given time at 70 than at 60, would not the extra film act to reduce the light total? Strikes me it would, though maybe I'm wrong. My best to the Sherman men; also to friend cook and that perfectly w-o-n-d-e-r-f-u-l Moonlet.

An Exhibitor With Ideas.

J. O. Merchant, Alice, Texas, desires information, as follows:

Am a constant reader of the department and get valuable ideas from other exhibitors, as well as from our worthy editor. Have third edition of the Handbook; also Advertising for Exhibitors and Technique of the Photoplay. Find them all to be invaluable. But as you, Brother Richardson, have said in the department, there is a later and better method for matching up the optical system than the one in the Handbook, I am writing to find out what I need in my own individual case. Have a house 30 feet wide by 80 feet long (80 foot throw), equipped with Power's Six A, lens level with center of screen. Use 60 amperes 60 cycle a. c., through Ft. Wayne compensarc. Want new lenses throughout. Prefer meniscus bi-convex. Kindly supply necessary data so that I may make my purchase at once.

Referring to screens, will say that I have an airdome at Falfurrias. Last spring I built a plaster screen therein, according to Handbook instructions. Can truthfully say I get the prettiest picture I ever saw on an airdome screen. Enclose photo of screen, but was unable to get back far enough to show all the vines I have growing around as a frame. The vines run from the ground—there is no stage—to bottom of screen at an angle of 45 degrees. From edge of screen vines extend at same angle back six feet from screen, then turn square across to walls on each side, leaving an opening, also framed in vines, for fire-escape doors. You will note piano platform on right, with vines to top of balustrade at its front. Might add that I built the piano box myself, and after the hardest storm we can open the same and blow dust off the piano. If you want specifications for such a box will gladly supply them. The shadows you see in picture are from rafters. Was getting ready to roof the place in for winter use when photo was taken. Have lights of all colors, except red and yellow, strung on poultry netting under the vines. These lights are an imitation of fruits and flowers. It makes a very pretty effect. Can leave them on while picture runs, as they are low c. p., and they are partly hidden by vines, but usually cut 'em off. Lens system is wanted for picture about ten feet wide.

Makes me feel good to get a letter like this from an exhibitor who has brains and ideas; one who appreciates what we have been trying to do for him and is neither afraid or ashamed to say so.

The screen arrangement looks good to me. Must be very pretty indeed. Before publication I wrote, asking what kind of vines were used and for information concerning the exit signs. The vines are a mixture of at least a dozen varieties, mostly alamo, honeysuckle (very fragrant), cypress and moon vines. The exit signs, which I was inclined to criticise from the photograph, are unlighted. They are simply white letters on green background. Neighbor Merchant says: "I depend upon the same people for patronage all the time. All of them are thoroughly well acquainted with the building and exit signs are really unnecessary except for purpose of complying with law.

As to the lens system, using 60 amperes a. c., referring to chart in March 17 issue, with meniscus bi-convex condensers you need either a 6½ meniscus and a 7½ bi-convex, with a little less than 21 inches from apex or front condenser to film, or else a 7½ meniscus and a 7½ bi-convex, with a little more than 21 inches. Better choose the first named, as you might not be able to get the necessary distance from condenser to film with second. Really high class projection lenses cannot be had at this time. The Marlux, Crown Optical Company, Rochester, New York, are well spoken of by operators. You will need about a 7½ E. F. lens, and that will mean a long back focus. Better get lenses not less than 2 inches in diameter. Tell dealer you want a projection lens not less than 2 inches in diameter, to give a ten foot picture at 80 feet. Be sure and get your condensing lenses as close together as you can without actual contact—say 1/32 to 1/16 of an inch apart. By all means send in full specifications of piano box, with sketches illustrating such parts as seem necessary.

Tension Control.

L. Z. Nighswonger, manager and owner Palm theater, St. Cloud, Florida, sends in subscription for a year and says:

> As to the enclosed subscription, why it is just like a letter from home to read the World. I am enclosing photographs of a device I have evolved for the control of takeup tension on my Power's projector. Its operation is simple, but very effective. Roller 4, figure 1, rides on the film between the lower sprocket and magazine valve, as shown in figure 2, being held in with some pressure by weight 2, figure 1. The brackets which carry weight 2, pulley 4 and pulley 3 are all attached rigidly to a single spindle. Groved pulley 3 rides on the takeup drive belt, as shown in figure 2.
> It will readily be seen that by this arrangement any desired tension may be given to the takeup drive belt, merely by varying the position of weight 2, or by increasing or decreasing the amount of the weight. It will also be seen that when the takeup belt is given a tension to exert a given pull on the film, that pull must perforce remain the same throughout the run, since if it decreases then the weight will move down, since the film will no longer support roller 4, and this will lower pulley 3 and tighten the belt. I believe the operation will readily be understood from what I have said, when supplemented by examination of the photos. If you desire to examine the device I have an extra one which I will send on. Patent has been applied for and will cover the camera as well as the projector. Am preparing to place them on the market > and will soon be able to supply those who wish to supplant their cumbersome friction takeup tension. Cost, ready for machine, will be ten dollars. The device is so made that it is attached merely by removing the two screws holding the lower fire trap, set the device in place and replace the screws. If you believe my invention will be valuable to the industry will be glad to have the matter given publicity through the department. If not, then chuck it in esteemed waste basket, and no harm is done. In closing: may the Moving Picture World enjoy that prosperity which is its just due. It is the best paper ever.

The operation of the device is self evident. Its chief point of doubt lies in the sharp bend the film makes over the lower magazine fire trap roller. If this roller failed to roll (and they sometime do that little stunt) it would very soon wear flat and there might be damage to the film. Also roller four ought to be countersunk in its center so that it will only ride on the film track—not the photograph (maybe it is, but it does not show in the photo). I hardly think it worth while to send so simple a device clear up here for examination. Send it to the Secretary of Local Union 321, I. A. T. S. E., Box 1234, Tampa, Fla., or to Secrtary Local Union 609, Box 200, Miami, Florida, with request that the union have it tried out by all operators running Power's machines, making report direct to me, with copy of same to you.

Many thanks for your kinds words concerning the department and the paper in general. We have an ingrowing idea that it is fairly good, but, nevertheless, it is nice to have our readers endorse our view.

A Coon's Age.

E. E. Bair, Manager, Celina, Ohio, says:

> It has been a coon's age since I have written you. Since I last wrote I have been promoted, first from operator to manager of a theater, and now to manager of the combined theaters of the city; also I have excellent chances for still further advancement, and you know that is what we are all after. Needless to say I receive the Moving Picture World regularly, and never skip the department. Even though I no longer operate, I make it a point to keep always in advance of my projectionist in the matter of knowledge. This because projection is at least half the programme, and it has been mighty handy for my operators to be able to consult me in emergency. Have two new Simplex projectors and am putting on a 12-foot picture at 95 feet, which many are kind enough to say is the best they have seen. I consider it extremely important to maintain this high standard. There is a reason.

Am more than glad to hear of Friend Bair's advancement. Trust he will get still further. We wish for him all possible good things for the new year and hope he won't be so long writing next time. If all managers kept posted as Bair does they would be able to act intelligently in matters pertaining to the operating room.

New Catalogue.

The Victor Animatograph Company, Davenport, Iowa, hands us their new catalogue and revised price list of their equipment, including both the arc and incandescent light source. One device consists of a dissolving mazda lamp stereopticon, the first device of its kind on the market, so far as I know. From the catalogue illustrations it appears to be a serviceable and very compact piece of equipment. There is also a single, portable, mazda lamp stereopticon. Its retail price, including lens and lamp, is $37.50, whereas the dissolver sells for $85.00, both machines complete with current controlling apparatus. With the single machine may be had (extra charge) silveroid or muslin screen, electric arc lamp, acetylene burner and carrying case of either leather or leatherette. It looks to me like a very excellent portable stereopticon outfit at a medium price.

The Victor Animatograph projection machine was fully described in December 15 issue of the department. The above catalogue may be had by prospective customers for the asking, if they address the company, setting forth their needs—for what purpose the apparatus is to be used.

A New Compact Professional Camera.

George R. Stringham, of the Motion Picture Specialty Company, 607 West 43rd street, New York, has presented a new model of professional camera containing many features which are not usually found in the present professional models on the market.

In the first place the lens-hood does not project outside the camera, but by a new method of construction the mechanism and magazines form a perfect self contained lens-hood. As in most compact camera models the magazines are side by side, but separated by placing the lens and most of the mechanism, which is very compact, between the two magazines. This throws the aperture plate well to the rear of the camera, so that access to the gate is gained by opening the rear portion of the camera casing.

Figure Number One shows the camera set up ready for operation. It is practically rectangular in shape, with only such small protuberances as control buttons, etc., projecting beyond the plane surface of the camera. It is therefore easy to place in a case, and when once loaded is ready for operation as soon as it is secured to the camera-head.

The mechanism is integral and easily accessible without removing from the case by opening the side and rear doors.

Figure Number Two shows a rear view of the camera threaded with film, with the cover of the take-up retort removed to show its interior. The turning crank of the camera is situated in the center at the bottom of the right side, at the nearest possible point to the center of any possible movement of the tripod-head, thus minimizing any leverage which the turning of the crank would cause the camera to sway on its support.

The intermittent is a combination of crank movement which gives the claws a D shaped path, the flat side of the D being the downward movement of the claws. This movement is of such a ratio that it permits a shutter opening of fifty per cent., and at the same time it moves the film with a less amount of strain at the starting and stopping points, so that it is possible to take ultra speed pictures at as high a speed as one hundred pictures per second without tearing the film between perforations.

All of the bearings throughout are carefully made of bearing bronze, and the gears are of the worm-drive type with the hardened steel bearing against soft steel. Most of the bearings are made adjustable so that by the aid of a small screw driver any play or wear may be taken up by the cameraman at any time. In fact they resemble the jeweled bearing of a watch, with the added advantage that the bearings are adjustable. The entire mechanism runs so easily that the crank will continue to revolve for several revolutions after removing the hand unless it is held in position.

The magazines are only a little thicker than the width of the film, being made from a thin sheet of fabric impregnated with Bakelite. This substance is remarkable for its durability and toughness. While inspecting this camera in the presence of Mr. Stringham, he took a piece of this substance, and, placing it upon an anvil, struck it a terrific blow with a ball-pein hammer, which left only an almost imperceptible dent in the substance, whereas a piece of unhardened tool steel was deeply indented by a blow of the same force.

The camera case itself is also constructed of thicker sections of this same remarkably tough material. The magazines have no projections on the outside, and may therefore be stacked upon one another on a darkroom shelf when reloading, or carried in the retort case without any loss of space. The spool arbor, or spindle, has a bearing at both ends, and bears two sharp fins so that a roll of Eastman film may be loaded directly into the retort on the wooden spool which is supplied by the manufacturer; the sharp fins preventing the spool from turning upon the spindle. The two bearings at each end of the spindle retain it in a horizontal position, so that the film winds up evenly and smoothly without any tendency to buckle, as often happens in magazines which have only one spindle bearing which may have worn loose, thereby allowing the tension of the film to incline the shaft at a slight angle.

The valve openings of the magazines are velvet lined and tightly closed by a spring until the rear door of the camera is closed. Two catches worked by the closing of this door automatically open these valves and allow the film to pass freely in and out of the retorts without touching the lips of the valve.

The film-race is of highly polished steel, and touches the film on the edge over the perforations only, so that the picture bearing area of the ribbon is untouched by anything which might cause abrasion or scratches at any portion of its travel from the feed roll to the take-up.

The light-hood is a rectangular metal casing, fitting without play in race-ways held in the mechanism frame of the camera. It is moved backward and forward for focusing the lenses by a micrometer screw arrangeemnt, and has ample latitude for focus upon objects placed as close to the camera as it is possible to get them without cutting off the illumination. A small locket or a thumb nail may be focused to cover the entire aperture frame without recourse to supplementary or additional lenses. The use of lenses of different focal lengths is facilitated by special bayonet mounts which permit of the lens being securely fastened within the camera by thrusting it into place and giving it a quarter turn; each lens being so mounted that, when the lens-hood is racked back to the stopping point, the lens is in focus at infinity.

The image on the film may be examined by an erecting microscope which telescopes into a socket in the rear door, so that when the image is examined by pulling out the eye piece at the back it is seen right side up and magnified several times, the entire field of the frame being visible.

Mr. Stringham has completed a change in the design of his next model, so that in dim light or where extremely fine definition is required it will be possible to press a button which will slide the film in the gate to one side and substitute a piece of fine ground glass without opening the camera. By this method it will not be necessary to lose even an inch of film between scenes by opening the camera to insert a ground glass.

Interior masks next the aperture plate may be used, or exterior masks or iris diaphragm, or other effects may be easily attached to the lens-hood as may be desired.

The frame line is also easily adjustable, so that pictures taken with this camera may be matched with those of any other camera even though they do not conform to the standard frame line.

The film runs backward or forward with equal facility, an automatic clutch engaging or disengaging from the proper film boxes, thus allowing the feed roll to run freely, and the opposite magazine to instantly take up the exposed film.

A test made with the camera in which the crank was turned rapidly and then reversed as quickly as possible a dozen or more times failed to cause the slightest binding or any change in the size of the film loops.

The shutter-dissolve is automatic, and may be set for 2, 4, 6 or 8 feet, in addition to which hand-dissolves may be made of any desired length. Unlike most other automatic dissolves the shutter may be made to open or close from any desired shutter opening, so that a partial dissolve may be made, then a complete dissolve, or back to the wider opening, as may be desired.

Dials set flush in the camera case indicate the length of dissolve and the shutter opening without any previous calculation. In addition to these dials there are also a speed indicator and a footage counter which may be easily reset to zero.

For trick work the change from eight pictures a turn to one picture per turn may be made without stopping simply by pressing a button.

In addition to all of these improvements which are self-contained within the camera the designer said that he could add almost any other device required by any cameraman at a small additional cost. Indeed, the camera might almost be called a tailor-made one, as the limited facilities of the shop have so far only permitted these cameras to be made to order.

Government Still Listing Photographers.

The War Department is desirous of making a census of photographers in this country, with reference to their individual ability in the different lines of photographic work, and to this end have gotten out a blank form that is to be given as wide a distribution as possible. This blank requires, in addition to the usual name, address, date of birth, etc., information as to one's experience and proficiency in some twenty-seven different lines of photographic work, as well as one's familiarity with foreign languages and one's military, aviation and aviation photography experience, if any. While filling out this particular blank does not constitute an application for enlistment or service in the Photographic Division, it is of the same form as that to accompany application for enlistment in the Photographic Division of the Signal Corps; and, those desiring to enlist can obtain information necessary at any recruiting station. Copies of this census blank can be obtained by applying to the Photographic Division, Office Chief Signal Officer, War Department, Washington, D. C., or they may be secured from this office, where we have a supply on hand for distribution.

Some of the questions as to experience that must be answered on the census blanks are: Motion-picture operating, feature films; motion picture operating, news films; motion-picture developing; motion-picture printing; motion-picture toning, tinting, finishing; motion-picture assembling and cutting; motion-picture titling; motion-picture protection; motion-picture storage; still work, outdoor; still work, press photography; still work, commercial; still work, studio; still work, studio, laboratory; still work, newspaper laboratory; still work, commercial amateur finishing laboratory; color photography; enlarging; developing; printing and finishing; retouching; camera repairing or construction; foreign languages known; military experience, if any; experience in aviation photography, if any.

Manufacture of Sodas for Photographic Purposes.

One of the most interesting books which has come to our desk in some time is a 56-page exposition of the Solvay Process, distributed by the Solvay Process Company, of Syracuse, N. Y. This firm was incorporated in 1881, for the manufacture of soda in its various forms, and for dealing with the raw materials and by-products of such manufacture. In view of the extensive use of sodium salts in photographic processes, and their great importance to the science of photography, the volume takes an added interest. The Solvay process was originated in 1861 by two Belgians, Messrs. Ernest and Alfred Solvay, and was the outcome of extensive research to discover a means of producing soda ash commercially and efficiently at a lesser cost than was possible with the earlier LeBlanc process. The fine quality of the volume—published under the title "Solvay Alkali"—and the valuable information it contains will make it eagerly sought from the Technical Service Department of the Solvay Process Company.

Those interested in the chemistry of photography will read this booklet with much interest and find it worth preserving in their library.

Goldwyn Journeys South of Equator

Company Closes Negotiations for Distribution of Product in South Africa and South America.

FOLLOWING quickly upon the entry of Goldwyn Pictures into Australia comes the further announcement of the distribution of this brand in South Africa, Argentine Republic and Porto Rico. Negotiations have been closed for distribution in these lands through Arthur Ziehm, of Goldwyn's export department, and signalize the further extension of the company's activities in foreign territories.

Goldwyn Pictures are to be shown in all of Africa south of the equator in association with the African Film Trust, Ltd. This organization controls the South African territory, owning up-to-date theaters and representing many of the leading cinema producing organizations of the world in that field.

Contracts for distribution in the Argentine Republic, Uruguay and Paraguay have been signed with Messrs. Saenz & Gonzalez, a comparatively new but powerful organization in Argentina. This company has tremendous financial resources at its disposal and after long consideration closed with Goldwyn for its productions because of their peculiar fitness for the South American market.

In India, Burmah and Ceylon Oriental audiences will see the Goldwyn productions as a result of a contract just signed for exclusive distribution in this territory by K. D. & Brothers, the largest film concern in India.

Agencia General Cinematografica of San Juan, Porto Rico, has closed negotiations with Goldwyn for the distribution of all Goldwyn productions in Porto Rico, Venezuela and Santo Domingo.

Goldwyn's entry into two of the great European nations and in still other parts of the world is to be announced shortly.

In less than six months from the date of its first release in the theaters of North America, Goldwyn has girdled the globe and finds its productions being shown in virtually all civilized lands, with the natural exception of Germany and lands allied with the Germans in the world war.

Last week announcement was made that all Goldwyn productions would be released in Australia in association with J. C. Williams on Films, Ltd., the cinema branch of the great Williamson theatrical enterprises.

KINGSLEY WILL HEAD GENERAL IN CLEVELAND.

C. G. Kingsley has just been appointed manager of its Cleveland exchange by General Film Company. Mr. Kingsley is rated as a most successful exchange man. He served under the Fox banner in Boston, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Detroit, and is thoroughly familiar with the Cleveland district. He also was connected with Paramount for a time. Previous to entering the film business Mr. Kingsley was advance man for a number of important theatrical productions, obtaining experience which made him an all-around showman.

Music for the Picture

The Classification of Your Library.

MANY inquiries have been received requesting a hint or two as to the most feasible and practical method of classifying an orchestral library used for picture settings. We have made a careful study of this problem and submit the following plan, feeling that it may meet the urgent need of comprehensive cataloguing.

Mr. Herman Meyer, leader of the orchestra at the Adelphia theater, Broadway, New York, outlined his idea in a recent interview.

"I first lay out my music upon the shelves in piles, listed under the headings of Grand Opera (S), Comic Opera (A), Selections (N), Overtures (O), Ballets and Suites (B), Concert Waltzes (V), Marches (M), Popular (F), and Concert Numbers (C). Under the Popular are to be found One-Steps (P), Two-Steps (T), Fox Trots (G), Song Waltzes (L), while the Octavo size Concert numbers are separate and a letter (D) placed opposite them. The alphabetical letters in brackets are used for cataloguing purposes to save writing the complete wording. Each piece is numbered, and as I buy new music it is given the sequential number. For example, if I have 40 Grand Opera pieces, the new one will be marked (S-41); 254 Marches, the new one will be (M-255), and so on. These markings are placed upon the outer folders containing the music, and each pile is arranged according to its numerical rotation, starting from No. 1, which is at the bottom.

In conjunction with this I have catalogued alphabetically my entire library in three ways; first, according to composers; second, according to movements, and third, according to character. Under the name of each composer is listed his works, for example:

GREIG—At Home—C-168
A Dream—C-116
Anitra's Dance—N-14
Arabian Dance N-15
Morning—C-99
Etc.

"Cataloguing according to movements gives me at a glance any number required under a given tempo; for example:

ANDANTE—Andante—Mendelssohn—C-133
Arioso—Frey—C-259
Awakening of Spring—Bach—C-118
Berceuse—Danby C-12
Broken-hearted Sparrow—Bendix—C-67
Etc.

ANDANTINO—Astarte—Mildenberg—C-132
Au Matin—Godard—C-29
Beneath the Holly—Seredy—C-149
Consolation Liszt—C-13
Enchanted Hour—Mouton—C-89
Etc.

"All the movements receive the same treatment, and by looking in this book I get any number that may seem suitable, at a glance.

"In classifying them according to character, by which I mean Dramatics, Pathetics, Semi-pathetics, Light Hurrys, Large Hurrys, Agitatos, Intermezzos, etc., as well as Oriental, Japanese, Chinese, Russian, Spanish, etc., I compress into one book all the music required for 'atmosphere.' It is also listed according to the alphabet. Example:

DRAMATICS—Adagio Cantabile—Strauss—C-269
Aria—Schumann—C-154
Cavatina—Bohm—C-37
L'Arlesienne—Bizet—O-29
La Reine de Saba—Gounod—S-48
March Toryenna—Berlioz—M-1161

RUSSIAN—Chanson Triste—Tchaikowsky—N-46
Cosatschoque—Dargamisky—C-192
Gondoliera—Moskowski—C-184
Kamenoi Ostrow—Rubenstein—C-177
Kol Nedrei—Old Song—C-204
Moskouskiana—Moskowski—N-79

"Of course those numbers which in themselves are classified as waltzes, waltz lentos, marches, two-steps, one-steps and fox-trots, do not enter into this catalogue, because they are perfectly listed on the shelves. Moreover, I have them in a little loose leaf memorandum book, kept for the purpose of checking up my settings to avoid repetition.

"When I first broke into the game my house manager used to come down and complain about the repetition of a number which he thought I had played the previous week. He could not hum the number for me, but insisted that I had played it. I had no proof to the contrary, but was sure that he was in the wrong. Frequently, upon investigation, after getting him to tell me the particular scene, in which the mooted piece was played, I found that it was one very similar in character and melody.

"To preclude any argument on the subject I procured a loose leaf book and entered therein every selection I possessed, listing them according to the shelving plan. I then bought a rubber date stamp and, when my setting was made up, I stamped each piano part and the corresponding number in my book with the current date. In setting up my next picture, if I came upon a piano part marked a recent date, I discarded that piece and chose something else which had not been used. I have made a practice of never repeating a number in less than eight weks. My house manager cannot further complain because I have the proof to produce, if necessary. Of course, it means a large library to carry out this plan, but the results are well worthwhile, and from the leader's standpoint, peace of mind is large compensation in itself."

Music at the Rivoli.

For some reason we were disappointed in the music rendered during the week of February 11-18 at the Rivoli theater. Rothapfel, the genial director-general, has always been fastidious regarding his music, but, no doubt, his double duties somewhat hamper him. "Man cannot live by bread alone." No, he must get some sleep at least once a week.

Instead of the usual overture to open the program, Mr. Rothapfel offered a pair of dancers in an Esquimaux dance of aboriginal character. The idea was fine, in that it prepared the atmosphere for the scenic which followed; the lighting effects were exquisite, and the back drop, representing Artic ice-floes, was most realistic, but the dance proved amateurish and too modern to carry out the idea behind it. The absence of the overture was felt by the audience.

Miss Gladys Rice, soprano, resurrected the old favorite, "I Hear You Calling Me," which she rendered too slowly for proper interpretation. Her voice is sweet and pure, with remarkable enunciation, but lacks the warmth of feeling that must enter so largely into a song of this order.

"The Unbeliever," a feature of more than ordinary merit, received a wonderful setting. Opening with a fan-fare of trumpets and snare drums a picture of the U. S. Marines is thrown on the screen doing military drill, which draws forth much applause. During this drill the orchestra plays a snappy march, then as the picture proper fades in, "Semper Fidelis," a song dealing with the motto of the Marine Corps, is introduced. At the title, "Vive La Belgigue," the Belgian National Anthem is used, and gives a wonderful effect. When the German officer is shot by the Prussian conscript the first eight bars of the Prussian National Air gives a rousing climax. The use of "Semper Fidelis" as a THEME could not possibly be improved upon, because of its meaning, "Always Faithful." It not only signified the motto of the Marines in which the hero enlisted, but characterized his attitude to a nicety.

The Criterion Male Quartette, programmed as the Rialto Quartette, did not show to the best advantage. Although their number was beautifully accompanied there was a tendency to fall away from the pitch, and the ensemble work was careless.

Mr. Arthur Depew closed the show with the March from "Tannhauser." Mr. Depew's work is too well-known for its excellence to draw any comment, except that of the highest praise.

Leaders' Service Bureau.

Questions Answered—Suggestions Offered.

Q. "I have a fifteen-piece orchestra and conductor. Recently I visited New York and noticed the large orchestras all played overtures previous to the showing of the pictures, with all 'house lights on'—a very pretty effect. If I attempted this, do you think I have enough men in my orchestra to make a good showing? How would you dress them?"

A. You have sufficient in your orchestra to adequately handle any of the standard overtures and it would be well to fall in line with the up-to-date presentation of pictures. We would suggest that you have your orchestra dressed in Tuxedos at both afternoon and night performances.

Q. "I note cue sheets are available for 'The Two-Gun Man' in 'The Bargain.' Will the other Hart reissues have cue sheets too?"

A. We have been assured by the W. H. Productions, Inc., that they intend to have cue sheets on all their releases.

Q. "My orchestra is composed of saxaphone, piano, violin and flute. At times they sound quite empty and thin. What change would you suggest to improve my music?"

A. The saxaphone is out of place with the flute in such a small combination. Would advise using cello instead.

Q. "I have not paid the 'Music Tax' and don't intend to. I only use a pianist and she 'fakes' most of her stuff. Can the 'Society' make any claim against me if she plays from memory any of the 'Society's' copyrighted numbers?"

A. Yes. If she plays from any of their selections over eight measures you are liable to prosecution. If you will refer to our lists in recent back issues you will find over five thousand selections from which to choose.

Q. "Where can I get a first-class leader capable of taking charge of about ten to fifteen men? I want one who knows something about fitting pictures."

A. If you will write further, telling us whether you desire "Union" or "Non-Union" leader, and what you are able to pay for same, we will be pleased to supply you without any agency charge.

Q. "I have piano, violin and drums in my house orchestra. When the violinist breaks a string, he buys a new one; when the drummer breaks a drum head, he gets a new one; but the pianist is always fussing about the piano being out of tune and his not willing to have it tuned. Who should pay—the pianist or the manager?"

A. It is the usual custom for the manufacturer of a piano to keep the instrument tuned for one year, after which, the duty devolves upon the house manager.

"Q. "My drummer and his wife (my pianist) have quarreled. She refuses to play with him, and when I suggested letting her out, he said he'd quit too. What would you do, fire 'em both, or just use piano?"

A. It is neither good judgment nor good business to hire a family to play in your orchestra. Would suggest firing both and hiring strangers.

Q. "My clarinet player is always off key. Is it the instrument at fault, or the man back of it?"

A. It could be both, but, in any instance, it is the player who should be held responsible.

Music Suggestion Synopsis.

CAST-OFF, THE (Foursquare—6 Reels).—Theme for heroine—Andante and Dramatic.

Suggest "Souvenir," Geehl; "Three Songs from Eliland," Fielitz, or "Visions," Tschaikowsky.

During the first reel two steps and light music can be used. Later a little Light Opera music will be necessary, developing gradually into the heavier stuff. In the last reel pathetic music will fill the bill. Close with the THEME, played softly. We cannot give any information regarding a possible cue sheet.

HEART OF ROMANCE, THE (Fox—5 Reels).—Theme for heroine and hero—Andante.

Suggest "Arioso," Frey; "Intermezzo," Whelply, or "Romance," Rubenstein.

A human story with little dramatic interest. Light numbers will predominate. Cue sheets can be obtained from Fox exchanges.

HIDDEN PEARLS, THE (Paramount—5 Reels).—Theme for the hero—Moderato and of Hawaiian Atmosphere.

Suggest "Aloha Oe," native song; "Admiration," Tepers, or "Luana Waltz," Rogers.

This is big stuff all through, and will be difficult to fit. The atmosphere must be held throughout, and as a consequence proper music must be used. The following list of selections may be helpful:

"Leo Idoles"—Valse Lento—Allier.
"Chanson Indine"—Andantino—Bemberg.
"An Indian Legend"—Andante—Baron.
"Kahola Honolulu"—March—Lake.
"Granada"—Two-Step—Jose Lou.
"Hawaiiana"—One-Step—Kaiulana.
"Mele Hula"—Dance—Tyers.
"Call of the Woods"—Moderato—Tyers.
"Maori"—Andante—Tyers.
"Lola's Dream"—Andantino—Tolani.

JACK SPURLOCK, PRODIGAL (Fox—5 Reels).—Theme for hero—Fox Trot.

Suggest "Bedouin Girl," Romberg; "Free and Easy," Berger, or "Hi Ho Hum," Isel.

This is a five-reel comedy requiring light music. Many One-Steps and Fox Trots are necessary. A Valse Lento can be used in reel three, and a light "Hurry" in reel five. Close with the THEME. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Fox exchanges.

JILTED JANET (American—5 Reels).—Theme for the heroine—Allegretto.

Suggest "Legend of a Rose," Reynard; "Musidora," Leigh, or "Serenade," Frommell.

The humorous phase of this picture stands out strongly, and should be treated with daintiness in keeping with Janet's personality. A couple of "Misteriosos," one light "Hurry," and a few Valse Lentos amid a number of Allegros and Intermezzos will play the picture. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Mutual exchanges.

KEYS OF THE RIGHTEOUS, THE (Paramount—5 Reels).—Theme for heroine—Allegretto.

Suggest "Coquette," Johnstone; "Serenade," Lange Miller, or "A Little Story," Lack.

Open with a Pastoral, followed by THEME. Light stuff and "Adagio Pathetique," by Godard, fill the first reel. The entire plot is semi-dramatic. Note the direct cue for "Evening Star," Wagner, in the second reel. One Agitato and one "Hurry" are needed to go with many Andantes, both dramatic and pathetic. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paramount exchanges.

LES MISERABLES (Fox—9 Reels).—Theme for Jean Val Jean—Plaintive Andante.

Suggest "Serenade," Titt'l; "Souvenir," German, or "Visions," Tchaikowsky.

There are nine reels to this picture, and the leader will do well to see it, if possible, before attempting his musical setting. The first reel is intensely dramatic (note gunshots), closing with a Religioso. The second reel can be played throughout by the first movement of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony." The third, fourth and fifth are also dramatic, with a couple of pathetic spots to fill in. The sixth and seventh lighten up a bit, while the last two reels abound in big stuff. Many overtures are necessary. Grand Operatic numbers can be used and many Dramatic Agitatos and "Hurrys." Cue sheets can be obtained from the Fox exchanges.

MORGAN'S RAIDERS (Bluebird—5 Reels).—Theme for heroine—Allegretto.

Suggest "Chanson Sans Parole," Tschaikowsky; "Love in Arcady," Wood, or "Moonlight Dance," Finck.

This is a civil war story abounding in patriotism. Choose Southern melodies such as "Dixie," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching," etc.

MY WIFE (Mutual—5 Reels).—Theme for heroine—Allegretto.

Suggest "Capricious Annette," Borch; "Caressing Butterfly, Barthelmy, or "Idilio," Lack.

Light music will predominate in this picture—use melodious stuff. In the fourth reel there is a Pastoral, Dramatic Tension, and Agitato needed. Some pathetic stuff follows. Finish with the THEME. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Mutual exchanges.

OUR LITTLE WIFE (Goldwyn—5 Reels).—Theme for heroine—Moderato.

Suggest "Eleanor," Deppen; "La Coquette," Onivas; "Romance," Mericanto.

This picture is light, and must be treated with Intermezzos, Allegros and Allegrettos. Use dainty stuff. "La Boheme" selection will fit well for some scenes. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Goldwyn exchanges.

PETTICOAT PILOT, A (Paramount—5 Reels).—Theme—Adantino.

Suggest "Esperanza," Johnston; "Au Matin," Godard, or "Consolation," Liszt.

This is a story of Cape Cod life. It is a simple and human plot that requires like musical treatment. "Scotch Poem," MacDowell; "By the Sea," Faunot; "Barcarolle," Tchaikowsky; "A Norfolk Folk Tune," Wood, will fit. Note the need of a hymn at the end of the second reel. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paramount exchanges.

GEORGE BALSDON'S GOOD SEND OFF.

Before starting on a six months' leave of absence, to serve in the Y. M. C. A.'s foreign department, George Balsdon, late manager of Vitagraph's exchange in the Mecca Building, was given substantial evidence of his popularity in the trade. Officers and executives of the Vitagraph presented him with a handsome gold watch and chain, and members of the F-I-L-M Club slipped upon his finger a solid gold Masonic ring to remember them by. Mr. Balsdon's knowledge of the picture game will serve well our boys in France, and he will come back to a job with the Vitagraph.

LEO F. LEVISON JOINS SELECT.

Leo F. Levison has been chosen by Select Pictures Corporation to become manager of the company's exchange in Pittsburgh, succeeding Harvey B. Day, who has resigned that post in order to go into business for himself. Mr. Levison entered upon his duties as branch manager February 19.

In the Pittsburgh territory there is not a more experienced man than Leo Levison, who has for some years been one of the most prominent exchange managers in Pittsburgh. In order to accept his present position Mr. Levison resigned as branch manager of Pathe in Pittsburgh. Prior to his connection with Pathe Mr. Levison was employed by other concerns, among them the World Film, over whose Pittsburgh branch he had charge during 1914 and 1915.

LEIGHTON OSMUN WRITING FOR METRO.

Leighton Graves Osmun, author of numerous motion picture successes, as well as novels and short stories, has joined the scenario department of Metro as a staff writer, and has made his first contribution, "Treasure," an original story brimful of action, in which Edith Storey, Metro star, will shortly be seen. Mr. Osmun is another of the well known authors won over to the screen and before being engaged by the Metro Pictures Corporation had established a reputation with the Famous Players-Lasky Company.

Besides writing "Treasure" as a vehicle for the talents of Edith Storey, Mr. Osmun assisted in the preparation of the continuity of "The Claim," in which Miss Storey has the stellar role. "The Claim," an elaborate Metro production, has been completed and is soon to be released.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard

MARY and Jack Pickford have scored heavily in their latest pictures—"Stella Maris" and "The Spirit of '17." Take the first named. Do you not call it distinctly high class? How on earth they made Mary up as Unity to look so unlike her real self is beyond us to fathom. So much has been written, all so favorably, that I can only say Amen. One thing was quite impressive, and it relates to a title—the name rather of the young director all by its lonesome, and why not! "Marshall A. Neilan" in big, bold type—splendid tribute, for he deserves this and more in giving us a flawless picture, and weren't the double exposures fine? Mary Pickford has proved herself not only versatile to a degree, but a little artist to her finger tips. What a corking villain-ess Miss Ankewich makes in her dope scenes. Conway Tearle held our sympathy all through and no other ending would have fit.

* * *

I'd put "The Spirit of '17" 'way up, because it has featured the old soldiers of '61 and the youth too young to enlist. Then the Boy Scouts show up well here. Dandy play for everyone to see about now. Jack Pickford and the grizzled vet, L. N. Wells, were some pair. Atmosphere fine, cast ditto, with Edythe Chapman as the lad's mother and Helen Jerome Eddy representing the uneasy miners' element. Those dear old G. A. R. men "marching forth to war" on spies caused gulps in the throats of the older ones present. One criticism I'd make, as it concerns Old Glory. Why was the flag (seen on its pole near the soldiers' home) allowed to be so faded and torn? We saw it lowered at sunset, but why its condition? Directors these days should look after this detail. Julia Ivers has made an excellent scenario from Judge Brown's story. Much could be eliminated, especially the wild auto ride of the slacker to the mine and his too sudden conversion. I have not seen a better impersonation of Grant than in the cut-back shown. Good, too, to get the Boy Scout pledge on the screen.

* * *

At last I can conscientiously enthuse a bit over Mme. Petrova, for whom Mrs. L. Case Russell has written a strong play in "A Daughter of Destiny," a pretentious picture, in which the star shines pre-eminent all through. There is a big plot, timely, too and shows up intrigue at its height. Thomas Holding caught the feminine fans, for he was certainly a good looker in princely togs, and to the end he was consistent. The court etiquette seemed true to life, according to what we read, and it reflects credit on Director George Irving. There were wonderful close-ups.

* * *

One scene got the house applause—West Point dress parade done for the prince when he visited America; another when the American ambassador, father of the star, entered the council chamber and announced the entrance of the United States into the war. Petrova's gowns were stunning, also in perfect keeping, and if this, her first picture under her own management, is any criterion we will not want to miss those to follow. I am anticipating seeing her in No. 2, "The Light Within," before many days.

* * *

In "The Other Man" we had a treat in the finished work of Harry Morey, Grace Darmond and other Vitagraph players. Play excellent and compelling. Story not so new and in other hands might not get over so well. Here we have degeneracy and regeneracy admirably presented. Florence Deshon was a dandy vampire whom you felt like hissing. Jessie Stevens is by all odds the handsomest and most motherly of all in her line on the screen. Her smile is fascinating.

* * *

Olive Thomas gave a fine performance in "Betty Takes a Hand" and made the best of it—in fact, saved the play, which had many familiar earmarks and told nothing new. Charlie Gunn, he of the expansive smile, was acceptable as the lover. Rarely do I see title errors in a Triangle picture, but just what good excuse had they for putting "Gardner" on the title in referring to the gardener?

* * *

Another "Jewel" of a play is "The Co-Respondent," splendidly directed by Ralph Ince, played by Elaine Hammerstein, Wilfred Lucas, George Anderson, and others of repute as screen players. What got many of us strong were the newspaper scenes—so accurate in all details. This is an excellent play running from small town to city life and goes way ahead of the stage version.

* * *

We are getting good repeats Sunday nights like "The Apple Tree Girl" with Shirley Mason, an Edison picture and rightly named "Perfection." If for no other reason the golf game will carry it and it was "some" game. As the little heroine said, "I don't know anything about golf," but some golf fiends across the aisle made many audible comments which led me to believe that it was O. K., and how they did applaud those drives! Miss Mason is evidently an expert on the links and showed great skill in winnning the international contest for supremacy.

* * *

I saw another Edison picture yesterday—"The Customary Two Weeks," a little preachment for young men about to adopt a business career, as it discloses proper square-deal methods how not to knock your competitor and how to persevere along honest lines. "The Closed Road" on the same program was new to me, and we are always glad to see House Peters. This is a criminological drama of mystery. Every clue and all mental traits of the characters have a bearing on the plot. Safe to repeat often.

* * *

A difficult part indeed is that of Alice Joyce in "Woman Between Friends," ably presented by the Vitagraph company and well directed by Tom Terriss, who inherits much native ability from his father, the lamented William Terriss of London. They have made a good screen version of the absorbing story by Robert W. Chambers. What a striking contract between Marc MacDermott and Robert Walker, who does not quite fill the bill somehow. Alice Joyce is ever a delight to the eye, and it was good to see Mother Maurice again. This ought to be a box-office success, as the plot is new and so well worked out.

* * *

"Wolves of the Rail" is a typical Hart picture, full of red blood and thrills—minus horseplay. Everyone likes "Bill" Hart over here, especially when he does the regeneration act. Melbourne MacDowell films well and made a dignified president of the railroad involved. He was human and dead game at the close.

* * *

The Whartons were fortunate to secure Florence Short for "The Eagle's Eye." Press agents dwell on the fact that she played Passion in "Experience," but of still greater interest is it that she plays Nancy Hanks so beautifully in the Lincoln picture, "The Son of Democracy."

* * *

What an interesting picture "The Studio Girl" is with the reliable Constance Talmadge well supported. Johnnie Hines was some boob, and the old ladies were good types of the small town "prunes and prisms" dames. Quite a laugh was created by the title "she never smiles on Sunday." Earle Fox was well cast in this comedy and rarely have I seen such attention to detail as shown in the interiors of the prim old New England sitting rooms. Charles Giblyn knows his biz sure. Will you ever forget the escape of the prospective bride, who hid herself in the auto robes while the owner sped toward home? Then the planting of her on a train headed for Broadway instead of Cliff Haven, her home, and of how she made herself "comfy" in the hero's studio. Splendid treatment here of a risque situation.

AUSTRALASIAN INCREASES TRIANGLE TERRITORY.

Millard Johnson, of Australasian Films, Limited, has closed a blanket contract with the Triangle Film Corporation whereby the productions of that company made up to and including December 31, 1917, will be distributed in the Orient, with the exception of Japan and Siberia. It means a marked increase in the Triangle activities of the Australasian, which heretofore has distributed the products of the former concern in Australia. The execution of the contract will be under the direction of E. R. Gourdeau, the Australasian agent, who has offices in Java, Singapore, Shanghai and Manila. It is understood the Australasian has an option on all productions of Triangle that may be issued subsequent to the beginning of this year.

GENERAL PROMOTES SIMRIL AT ATLANTA.

R. M. Simril, for a number of years a salesman with General Film Company, has just been appointed manager of the company's Atlanta office. He was at one time manager of the old General Jacksonville office, but more recently has been traveling out of the Atlanta office, of which he now assumes charge.

Rambles 'Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

WITH the clear understanding that his occupancy of the post will not be his permanent location, Lee Kugel has taken charge of the publicity department of World-Pictures. While his theatrical interests would keep him sufficiently busy to absorb his voltage, Mr. Kugel is of the belief that his services to World-Pictures may best be expressed in the establishment of the department along Kugel lines and then leave the work in charge of his permanent successor. Therefore, in fullness of time, there will be a job ready for a publicist who looks upon film press-agenting in something of this general light:

1.—To write daily paper and trade paper material with the two different classes of readers in mind.

2.—To write always in the thought of helping exhibitors to sell tickets to the general public.

3.—To realize that a large film producing plant creates interesting NEWS every working day.

4.—To write and distribute this news in paragraphs and stories in such form as the press agent himself might print if he were holding down a newspaper desk.

5.—To remember that trade papers know news just as quickly as do the daily papers; but the two classes of papers use different kinds of news.

6.—To remember that motion picture makers are in the photograph business and to act accordingly; illustrating their printed story just as the film illustrates the scenario, with reasonable allowance for a broad comparison.

7.—To help fill the theaters with ticket-buyers and not fill the newspapers with words; roll-tickets and press clippings to synchronise.

The Rambler sat longer than the ethics might properly allow, listening to what Mr. Kugel had to say on the vitally important subject of publicity for films. He brought away more than this skeleton formula can indicate, in the appreciation of a hungry mind that absorbed manna from a fount of intelligent enlightenment.

Changes in Universal's Bluebird exchange give occupation elsewhere to Sam B. Kramer, the energetic young man who "put Bluebirds across" in the Greater New York district. His brother, Earl W., remains as office manager, with Sam Zierler assistant to General Manager E. M. Goldstein.

The traveling man who had his name tattooed on his arm to serve as identification when he wanted a check cashed has nothing on the Harlem youth who has been gaining admission to local theaters through a somewhat similar device. When the youth tried to pass the doorman at the Metropolitan Opera House he was trapped. The guardian of the Golden Horse Shoe, through long years of service, knows by sight everybody who is anybody in our town, including all the critics. When the young man moved the strap of his wrist-watch and disclosed the tatooed name "Eugene Kelcey Allen," he was turned over to the cops.

Affluence Item: E. K. Lincoln, who is in California making a feature picture with W. Christy Cabanne, is disclosed by T. E. Letendre as a very busy person. What, with megaphoning and compiling his income tax, Mr. Lincoln must acquaint himself with many state laws, for he has a farm in Pennsylvania, a studio in New Jersey, a residence in New York, kennels in Connecticut, an estate in Massachusetts, and a job in California.

George Loane Tucker has been styled, by Goldwyn's press staff, "the apostle of silence." Among other things, we are told that quiet self-possession is his chief reliance. No one has ever heard Mr. Tucker raise his voice. His suggestions and comments are made in low, even tones. The Goldwyn studios are more quiet than Fort Lee itself. It requires thought to direct pictures and noise kills thought. All conversation proceeds in whispers, "Props" wear rubber heels and the soft pedal is always on furniture moving.

Therefore, "The Silent Drama."

Beulah Land Is Discovered.

Beulah Livingston, personal representative for Mme. Olga Petrova, has removed from the Times building to the little green frame house, which used to be the home of Jenny Lind at 125 West Fortieth street. Miss Livingston has converted the house into studio-offices. Agnes Smith and Mrs. Allison Smith, well-known newspaper and magazine writers, will also make their office headquarters there.

Tom North "covered" the opening of the Showman's League club rooms as representative of the Pathe Sun. Many of the carnival men present said, one to the other: "I knew him when"—and then proceeded to tell a few things about the Gentry Pony and Dog Show, from Bloomington, Ind. In those days the Hendrick Hudson was only a rooming house.

Two Sides to a Triangle.

Among the admirable traits Alma Rubens displays is her fondness for children, a little girl next door to where the Triangle star lives in Los Angeles being her especial favorite. When showing the little girl some pictures the other day Miss Rubens came across one of Elijah about to start upon his historic journey in the fiery chariot. The child seemed to be especially impressed by the halo around Elijah's head, for she eagerly interrupted Miss Ruben's discussion of the picture to ejaculate: "Oh, look! What a funny place he has to carry his spare tire."

Wallace MacDonald, of Triangle, claims that the best ushers in the world are the girls at Clune's Auditorium, in Los Angeles. Recently MacDonald attended one of Harry Lauder's performances, carrying with him a nice dollar umbrella. After the entertainment he found himself in the street, minus said umbrella. Upon returning, with his troubles, to the head usher the obliging girl disappeared into the check room to quickly reappear with MacDonald's umbrella all done up in a nice silk cover with a new gold handle on it.

Congratulations to World Film.

Lee Dougherty, pioneer of film pioneers, has signed with World Pictures as film editor. "Doc" helped Biograph over the rough places in the early days by faithful and intelligent work, and among his many other services to filmdom picked David W. Griffith as a winner, and prevailed upon Biograph to give the then rising young director full scope for the development of his ability. His title of "Doc" came not alone from a contraction of his moniker, but because, Biographically speaking, he was the one who cut, switched, vamped, glued, trimmed, edited, pasted, sheared, and "doctored" the pictures as no one else even to this very day can so expertly do.

Harry I. Garson has secured Detroit rights to "Tarsan of the Apes" and will exploit the sensational attraction in theatrical style. He has leased a legitimate theater and will offer the show at advanced prices, advertising it along lines adopted by Harry Reichenbach in "putting it over" at the Broadway, New York, where "Tarzan" is still running and establishing records the while.

Nazimova in "Revelation" at the Lyric is giving opportunity for W. C. Thompson to demonstrate his skill as a publicist. "Bill" has stood the Barnum & Bailey test since he left the Herald's city room years ago to initially exploit the Hippodrome for Thompson & Dundy, and qualifies for anything in the amusement game that printer's ink can serve—and that means everything.

Gus McCune, one time press agent for F. F. Proctor's enterprises, manager of the Fifth Avenue theater, and later a dabbler in the film game, is on the road to fortune via a new route. He is making bronze tablets for commemorative purposes and has twenty salesmen on the road, contracting with communities, large commercial firms, factory workers, fraternal societies, and other organizations to provide tablets for men who have joined the colors. And his factory cannot turn out the bronze slabs fast enough to fill the orders. Two of his tablets were lately placed on the lobby walls of the New York Strand and Rivoli.

Drawing Aside the Veil.

There he stood, in full bloom of splendid manhood, awaiting the tug of the string that should disclose to his surprised eyes the bronze that shall remain to do him honor so long as the Rivoli shall stand—and not change management. Rialto-Rivoli Rothapfel must have enjoyed his proud hour as he listened to the things that were rightfully and justly said in praise of his showmanship in putting the "pick" in motion pictures.

Before Rothapfel's day the public had no choice of spots and very little choice of pictures; but Rialto-Rivoli Rothapfel changed all that and honor is due him. He is sure to have further praise and find many laurels decorating his commercial and artistic brow. It was noticed that, as he spoke, in response to Adolph Zukor's praise, that he faced North-west by North toward another corner of Broadway, at about Fifty-next street, or so, where there have long been signs on old buildings stating that it would be a Capital spot for a theater.

Speeches there were at the unveiling. Mr. Johnston's—snappy and dapper; Mr. Zukor's—sedate and well chosen; Mr. Rothapfel's—modest and discerning, and Hamish MacLauren, with the lovely words: "The guests are now invited to Churchill's, where luncheon awaits."

Praising the last mentioned speech John F. Flinn declared: "Sincere and right from the stomach." Jim Beecroft beat all of his trade paper rivals by speechmaking a toast to Mr. Rothapfel at the lunch table. Beecroft's was the only oration during the meal.

Pete Schmid, however, committed a nifty aside when he read the title page of a souvenir map of the War grounds served with the lunch. "Map of the Western Bottle Front," read Peter. Shortly after that Mr. Rothapfel committed himself to making Fritz Tidden his official mascotte for life, promising him a pass, engraved on silver, to all of his enterprises. With his palm crossed with silver, Mr. Tidden may now foretell the future of pictures he reviews with greater accuracy.

He Is Discovered.

Charles Fuir, the well-known publicist and magazine writer from the film colony in Los Angeles, paid a flying trip to New York last week and was given a hearty welcome from the eastern motion picture people. Mr. Fuir was formerly identified with daily newspapers published on the western coast, and before returning to Los Angeles expressed his regret that he had failed to meet Charles Ulrich, the veteran newspaperman now identified with the Famous Players-Lasky organization, who was at one time a dramatic critic for various California papers.

"Mr. Ulrich was not in when I called at his office," said Mr. Fuir, "and I am sorry that my limited time in New York prevented meeting him as I would have greatly enjoyed reviving 'the old days' in dramatic journalism."

Rambles 'Round Filmtown

When Prince Charles, the Tarzan ape who shakes hands with patrons at the Broadway theater, was arrested for wandering out of his dressing room and trying to enter the Knickerbocker Hotel, the chimp was presented with twenty packages of spearmint gum by Harry Reichenback. The story broke on the front page all over town.

Silence Saves Precious Life.

Two men in a contest to the death struggled on the verge of a dizzy cliff while Edith Storey, Metro star, was saved from a plunge of some 600 feet over a precipice into a rocky abyss. Although Miss Storey was acting out of her turn she became absorbed in the situation and edged closer and closer to the point she had unwittingly selected for her plunge to destruction.

Director Frank Reicher saw Miss Storey's peril. She had arrived within a scant yard of the edge of the declivity, the press agent declares, when Mr. Reicher put into operation his presence of mind. To speak sharply to his star would, undoubtedly, make her jump one way or the other. Should she jump inland, all would be well. To jump backward would spoil the Storey.

Silently Director Reicher gave the imperilled screen queen the signal to "hold the pose." Then he advanced to her, took her hand and led her back to a place of safety. Two days afterward Mr. Reicher motored out from Hollywood and showed his star what she had missed. "The Claim" is scheduled for release March 18.

Arnold Daly surprised his audience at the second performance of "The Master," Wednesday evening, at the Hudson theatre, by appearing before the curtain at the end of the second act and announcing that he would retire permanently from the stage unless his present venture finds support at the hands of the public. Mr. Daly added that he might continue to produce plays, and that he also would teach acting, but that his own performances would be confined to the motion pictures.

"I have as much indifference and contempt for people who pays $40 a seat for feminine pulchritude and jazz band comedy," Mr. Daly added, "as they have for me."

"I am afraid 'Tarzan' will be a big moneymaker for exhibitors," says one of the critics who particularly poses as the personal friend, counselor and chaperone of the motion picture showman.

His Fears Will Be Realized.

Paul Gulick, Universal's publicist, has opportunity, for the first time, to mention Kenneth Harlan as Mae Murray's leading man in announcing that the actor has been called to the colors and is now in active training. Mr. Gulick also points to the fact that activities at Universal City have been, in a measure, increased through Director Ida Mae Park and the Mary MacLaren company going to work. Incidentally, Miss MacLaren is not to be confused with the screen queen who has had so many men make love to her that it took five reels to detail all of the incidents. Miss MacLaren, according to Mr. Gulick, is still in her "teens."

Lillian Walker motored, driving her own car, to Sunnybrooke, her vacation farm, near Saratoga Springs, last week, returning prepared to begin work on the first of the Lillian Walker Productions, Feb. 25. The product of Miss Walker's artistic achievements will be distributed through the newly organized Producers' and Exhibitors' Affiliated. Mabel Frank, publicist for the popular screen queen, after giving the dimensions of Miss Walker's farm declared that in the latest stock-taking it was found that 300 chickens, several cows, a number of farm horses and an attractive kennel had recently been added to the place. War gardening at Sunnybrooke will begin early and Miss Walker, being now a voter, is receiving all sorts of seeds from her Congressman. This much has Womans Suffrage done for the screen.

When Metro Mimeographs.

"Viola, dear," cooed a friend of Miss Dana's, "what on earth is the matter with you."

"That's it," replied Viola, "the matter is on earth, but the cause is on the sea."

Miss Dana's friend, who, by the way, is the daughter of a prominent Hollywood society leader, confessed that she was nonplussed, so to say. When urged to explain, even at the risk of utterly ruining a brace of perfectly gorgeous chocolate sundaes, Miss Dana vouchsafed as follows:

"It's my 'sea legs,' you see."

Lounge lizards, fringing like flies over the soda counter, moved closer in hope of both an earfull and an eye-ditto. When all were in range of the camera the rest of the thrilling story was told.

"You know, my dear, I'm a Metro star, and we have just returned from taking scenes on a ship that rolled and rocked for three horrid days off the Golden Gate," said Miss Dana. "That was three weeks ago, and the reason I rocked and reeled so, coming in here from my Six-Reel Saxon, was because I'm not yet accustomed to walking on land."

"And," as though in after-thought, "I'm not the only one. Everybody in the cast has 'em. But the bow-legged ones have 'em the worst," said Miss Dana, as she turned to her sundae.

P. S. Exhibitors are welcome to use this when Metro's "Breakers Ahead" comes on schedule. Surely, it will sell some tickets.

Mae Murray, formerly of Broadway, New York, and now of Broadway, Los Angeles, has become a farmerette, on the word of Universal H. Hodes. She has planted her one-acre plot in Russian caviar, intending to throw the eggs she raises at Carl Lenine (which may not be his Christian name) and Bolsheviki Trotzky when they make their debut in pictures—taking it for granted that they surely will. The Rambler will always make room for paragraphs that help the exhibitor to present his films, with potent appeal.

Hyatt Daab Hits the Nail.

"Rarely in my experience," says Frederic Arnold Kummer, whose story, "The Belgian," Sidney Olcott lately picturized, "have I found authors who were satisfied with the way in which their works have been reproduced upon the screen. I have had pictures of mine produced from novels, plays or brief synopsis, in which I knew nothing whatever about what was being done, from the moment my original manuscript was delivered until I saw the final work on the screen, and I was quite positive that had I, as the author, been consulted as the work progressed, the final result would in many instances have been vastly better.

"This ought to be a self-evident proposition. The man or woman who creates a story must inevitably approach its screen use with a deeper and more intelligent interest than some one who may have been engaged for a few hundred dollars to put it, let us say, into continuity form."

Hit squarely upon its head, the nail sinks instantly to its full length. The Kummer complaint recalls objections other authors have made to the manner in which their works have been shed upon the screen. It is reported that William Shakespeare has never expressed an entirely satisfied opinion of any work from his pen that have been made into pictures.

When William Fox produced "Les Miserables" it was reported that Victor Hugo would raise an awful fuss about some details to which he might reasonably be expected to offer objections, Even so great an author as Maeterlinck may not have been consulted by Artcraft while "The Blue Bird" was being produced; Tolstoy, it is said, had no part in directing "The Resurrection" while Famous Players-Lasky were producing it, and Mark Twain's stories, such as have been pictured, have never been approached with that deeper and more intelligent interest the famous author might be expected to evidence.

Hy Daab is right. Only stories written by authors who can have access to the studios and assist in the direction should ever, under any circumstances, be produced.

Rambles 'Round Filmtown

Richard Rowland, president of Metro, will enact an important role in "Pay Day," the five-reel drama Mr. and Mrs. Drew will present in due course. It has been Mrs. Drew's desire to offer her ideas of dramatic construction, as a contrast to her abilities as a comedy scenaroist and "Pay Day" will be an expression of this commendable desire. The scenes in which President Rowland appears have already been photographed, his private office being used as the setting.

"Y" Certainly.

Fruitful was the paragraph in this department, last issue, referring to a shift in the Goldwyn Educational department. Here is the result:

"When Kenneth Macgowan went to the studio I succeeded him as director of publicity, and very recent inquiry convinces me that I am still on the pay roll—as such.

"Also let me call to your attention the fact that Goldwyn likes to have its name spelled with a 'y' and permit me to sign myself, Cordially, D. S. Perrin, Director of Publicity."

Screenings from the Screen Club.

That great noise in the vicinity of the Screen Club last Wednesday evening resulted from the good time that was had by all who responded to the following announcement mailed by Jack Harvey, chairman of the Entertainment committee, the outcome being 100 on the job:

On the evening of Wednesday, February 20, there will be a little party at the club house. Singularly enough, it will be Knocker's Night.

Later on there will be a Booster's Night, but, as some one remarked before Mr. Kipling did, "that is another story." It is assumed that in the membership there must be a goodly number in whose throats great knocks are generating, on whose chests weighty matters press.

On Wednesday all the bars will be taken down. Did we say all? Aye, all but one. Come on over and have some fun, because we are going to have it anyway, and you may as well be in on it.

There will be a novelty entertainment, there will be corncob pipes and tobacco at which you may rail—strange how the rail stuff does creep in—and the admission is nix.

The hour is any time before eight-thirty. All ropes and chains with which formerly it was customary to restrain screeners from departing homeward have been destroyed. So just explain this to your wife, will you? Thanks.

One of the World boys who was present assures The Rambler that the occasion proved to be a real party. According to the way it was laid out for me your most pessimistic reviewer of pictures cannot hold a hammer to the professional player or director when it comes to saying unkind things about a picture. Half a dozen subjects were screened for the entertainment of the boys, but not one of them contained anything much to praise, if one could judge by the remarks of the five-score seated on the parlor floor. A projector had been set up here through the courtesy of Treasurer Will C. Smith and of the Nicholas Power Company, of which concern Mr. Smith is general manager.

One of the first pictures shown was a four-year-old Universal, one in which Lee Moran officiated as Janitor. When the janitor in the cellar took hold of a big valve and started turning it to shut off the water some one yelled: "Hey, you're turning the wrong way!" The remark was greeted with a shout. That was the beginning of the knocks.

At 8.30 the party was in full swing in the grill room. A fourteen-cylinder piano-player with a caliope attachment aided and abetted by an acrobatic drummer, staged a rollicking accompaniment for a bunch of old and new songs. Roland Blaisdell as the result of a drawing was declared the "distinguished guest of honor" and was duly installed as king, after being garbed in a royal robe, topped with a crown and provided with a scepter. He was escorted to the great chair of state and armed with a big stick—of a size corresponding to that which the cartoonists put in the hands of T. R.—and which when placed in contact with the suspended steel yielded a mighty noise.

The first act of the king was resented by the Bolsheviki. In investing him President Joe Farnham had informed the king that he was the boss of the job, or in more elegant words to the same effect, and that he was to be disobeyed only at the price or dire punishment. With monarchical disregard of his subjects' feelings, the king ordered every one to have a drink. The smiles on the faces of the Bolsheviki faded into consternation as the order was qualified by the rough riding king, "at your own expense." The indignation was mitigated in a measure by the work of the entertainers, whose services were forthwith commanded. Messrs. Stover and De Lacy, the latter at the piano, gave "Gone Are the Days" with a rousing encore; Jim Lackaye and Dan Mason told stories.

The boys then filed upstairs behind the king. The first picture ostensibly did not meet the wishes of the gathering. There was a revolution and a successful one. There was a crowning following each picture attempted. Later downstairs there were more songs, a bite to eat and a bit of impromptu entertainment provided by Messrs. Lackaye and Mason, who again were called on for some of their noted stories.

The occasion was so thoroughly enjoyable that President Farnham has announced a "royal" dinner, with Screener Mario Majeroni as chef, for Saturday, March 1.

THE RAMBLER.

State Rights Department

Conducted by C. S. SEWELL

First National Gets Two Big Productions

Will Distribute "Tarzan of the Apes," Made by National Film Corporation, and "Fall of the Romanoffs," a Herbert Brenon Picture.

TWO important deals have just been completed, under the terms of which the First National Exhibitors' Circuit secured the distributing rights for United States and Canada to "Tarzan of the Apes," produced by the National Film Corporation, and the United States right to "The Fall of the Romanoffs," a Herbert Brenon production.

The arrangement covering "Tarzan of the Apes" does not constitute an outright sale of the picture, but is primarily a distribution agreement by which the First National exchanges control the bookings, the National Film Corporation aiding in the booking and exploitation. Under this arrangement any theater owner in the country can secure the picture in competition to even the franchise owner of the First National. That is, the booking of the picture is open, and can be secured for first, second or third run by any theater manager who sees the value of the picture to his house, and in order to get the picture himself the territorial representative of the First National Circuit will have to outbid the other.

"Tarzan of the Apes" has for the past four weeks been enjoying a successful run at the Broadway theater, New York City, at prices ranging up to $1.50 at night and one dollar for matinees, and the run in this house has been extended up to April 2, when the picture will be released throughout the country. It is said that in making this arrangement with the First National offers which combined would have amounted to more than three hundred thousand dollars were refused, as the present owners desire to continue their interest in the production.

It is proposed that on April 2 sixty prints will be shown in sixty of the principal cities for a run of one week or longer, and extensive exploitation with newspapers and booksellers will be arranged for this period, and immediately following the opening other prints will be furnished the smaller cities.

Exhibitors can secure this picture either on percentage or a flat rental for the opening periods, and exploitation and advertising will begin in each city as soon as the contract is closed. Harry Reichenbach at the National offices in New York will co-operate with the First National in designating the first run accounts.

"The Fall of the Romanoffs" was also shown for a successful Broadway run, and since that time more recent developments in the kaleidoscopic and stormy Russian situation have been added by the Iliador Pictures Corporation, bringing the story up to date. This production has already been shown over Loew's New York circuit, and the Canadian rights had been sold before the present deal was negotiated. The release date awaits the completion of a large number of prints on which the Rothacker plant is at present engaged, and will probably be set early in March.

"Moral Suicide" to Be Shown Soon.

"Moral Suicide," the forthcoming production of the Graphic Film Corporation, of which Ivan Abramson is president and director general, is described as a seven-reel drama in which the elements of love, devotion and faith meet and conquer passion, hate and greed after a daughter has been driven to the danger of despair by her father whom she greatly loves, a son brought to the bar of justice and compelled to battle for his life, and an honored name dragged in the mire of shame; and it is said to be full of effective characterization and human touches.

It is interpreted by an excellent cast headed by John Mason, who plays the part of Richard Covington, an old California millionaire, and includes Anne Luther as his daughter, Leah Baird as an adventuress who entagles Covington in her net. Jack McLean appears as Covington's son, Alan Hale as a New York gambler in league with the adventuress, and Claire Whitney, Sidney Mason and William Lampe are also cast in important parts.

"Moral Suicide" is now being assembled, and will be shown at an invitation performance in the near future; after which Mr. Abramson will begin work on a new picture which he has already written, and in which Marion Davies will appear in the principal role.

"Mickey" Now the Subject of a Song.

Arrangements have been made by Western Import Company with Daniels & Wilson, music publishers, to release a song called "Mickey," dedicated to Mabel Normand. The words, based upon the Mack Sennett feature, "Mickey," were written by Harry Williams, and the music by Neil Moret. The refrain will be used as the theme in the music score for the production, a trade showing of which will be given within the next few days in New York.

Few Sub-Titles in "The Master Crook."

It has been the endeavor of the producers of the "Master Crook" to eliminate as far as possible the use of subtitles, consequently not more than thirty are employed, all of which are spoken by the characters in the picture, in contrast to the average feature production which usually employs a much larger number. As a result it is claimed that inasmuch as this is a mystery story the mysterious element is deepened, and this innovation has the effect of allowing those who see the picture to invent their own explanation of the scenes, or in effect to construct their own subtitles.

Another novelty in this production is a scene in which Edmund Breese, the star, plays the part of himself as he appeared in the stage production, "The Master Mind." Still another scene shows the narrow escape of the detective as a taxicab is hurled over a cliff. This is said to be one of the most thrilling incidents of the production.

A full line of mystery posters has been prepared for use of exhibitors in connection with this picture.

Cast of "Bandit and the Preacher."

Besides William S. Hart the cast of "The Bandit and the Preacher" also includes the following well known players: Robert Edeson, who attained prominence on the stage, appears as the preacher. Rhea Mitchell, who has been featured in several productions, including "Whither Thou Goest," is the dance hall sweetheart of the bandit. Gladys Brockwell, who has been starred in several of the Fox Film Company's productions, is the vampire, while Hershall Mayall, who is well known for his work in several pictures, including "Civilization," appears in the "heavy" role.

McElroy-Day Buys H. P. Wolfberg Pictures

New Concern Takes Over Office and Complete Stock, Including Five Feature Productions—Wolfberg to Continue Operating Under Old Name.

A NEW film concern known as the McElroy-Day Attractions has taken over the former business and film stock of the Harris P. Wolfberg Attraction, Lyceum building, Pittsburgh. Harvey B. Day, one of the best known managers in that section of the country, has resigned as head of the Pittsburgh branch of the Select Pictures to undertake the new project. He has formed a partnership with Mr. McElroy, a prominent film man of St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Day has assumed the active management of the exchange, which has established its main office in the former Wolfberg quarters in the Lyceum building.

Messrs. Day and McElroy are now offering the following feature productions heretofore handled by the Wolfberg Attractions: "The Mad Lover, "Today," "The Deemster," "The Crisis," and "Hate." Additional big subjects are to be acquired from time to time, it is announced, and systems will be introduced to make them most effective for the exhibitors. The success of the McElroy-Day Attractions seems to be assured under the management of Mr. Day, who is a pioneer in the exchange end of the film business, and a veteran showman.

Through his long connection with the trade, Mr. Day has a large following throughout Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, and Kentucky, the field of operations of the new exchange. He was one of the first to exploit big features in Pittsburgh, having booked "Quo Vadis" and other feature productions handled by George Kleine. He later became manager of the local Fox exchange, thence was transferred to the home office, and still later appointed district manager for the Eastern branches. Two years ago he resigned from the Fox organization to become personal representative of Stanley V. Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, where he remained more than a year.

Mr. Wolfberg has announced he will continue in the film business, and will open an exchange in Pittsburgh in the near future under the old name of the Harris P. Wolfberg Attractions. He has already acquired the rights for "The Eyes of the World" and "A Soul Redeemed," and negotiations are now under way for several other subjects to be exploited in the middle west, with Pittsburgh as headquarters. A plan to penetrate new fields in motion picture distributing is already well under way, and additions to sales force have been made.

Mr. Wolfberg recently lost the services of J. L. Ellman, publicity director, who has been called to the army. Edgar Wolfberg, brother of Harris, enlisted several months ago, and is now a member of the aviation corps now in training at a southwestern camp.

Mr. Wolfberg is optimistic concerning attendance during the spring and summer. He has been in close touch with the exhibitors, who state they look for rapidly increasing attendance, following the severe winter. Pittsburgh, he says, reports heavy business, while cities in western Pennsylvania and Ohio last week indicated large gains.

Service Bureau for Petrova Pictures.

Petrova Picture Company has established a special Service and Accessory Department for the benefit of exhibitors. In order that theater managers may obtain the greatest benefit from advertising each production, it has been decided to furnish an exploitation service covering individually each of the eight Petrova special features.

The new department will become effective in sufficient time to give the exhibitor aid for "The Life Mask," slated for release in March. Single and double matrices, together with electros, suitable for reproduction in newspapers or programs, and photographs, press sheets, etc., will be supplied. As a special aid a limited number of exclusive and beautiful photographic poses will be loaned to exhibitors as a lobby display during the Petrova presentation. Inasmuch as the supporting cast changes according to the requirements of each production, the Service Department will cover more particularly Madame Petrova herself, and Thomas Holding, who has been engaged to portray the leading male role in all of her pictures. This service is in addition to the accessories and advertising aids furnished by First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Quick Sales on "Crucible of Life."

Following the private premiere given "The Crucible of Life," recently, several bids for the various territories were received by Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, who are sponsoring the film. The quick response by state right buyers is attributed to the result of an innovation accomplished by inviting all of the leading state right purchasers to attend the showing of "The Crucible of Life," given primarily for the benefit of the reviewing press. That the idea met with enthusiastic response is evidenced by the fact that several buyers made the trip to New York to witness the showing.

Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin announce that "The Crucible of Life" has been disposed of for Australia and New Zealand to Mr. George Meyer, prominent English dealer in feature films, who was present at the showing and dinner. In addition, arrangements has been made for the foreign distribution with J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., of New York. This contract was consummated by H. A. Gillespie, president of the Brockliss organization, who also witnessed the private premiere of "The Crucible of Life."

Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin are more than satisfied with the results achieved and have decided to pursue this method in the showing of all of their future productions.

No Interior Scenes in Hesser Picture.

An unusual feature of "The Triumph of Venus" is the fact that it has been filmed without the use of a single interior setting of any kind. The entire action takes place in the open air—as consistent with the action of the story, which is laid in the Greece of many thousand years ago, when gods and goddesses were supposed to often visit the earth and mingle with mortals. Many of the ancient deities are characters in the production—Jove, Juno, Mercury, Minerva, Hebe, Apollo, Mars, Diana, Cupid, Vulcan —while Venus, the goddess of love and beauty, is the keynote of the dramatic action.

Scenes on Mount Olympus, the abode of the gods, are varied by woodland settings on the Island of Milo—with nymphs sporting in the waves, the fiery abode of Vulcan beneath the earth, rushing torrents, in which swimming nymphs play—these are some of the scenes in this spectacular seven-reel production, which was written and directed by Edwin Bower Hesser and is controlled by the Victory Film Mfg. Co.

Regan Joins Jester as Assistant Director

"Tommy" Regan, who has been for several years in the motion picture business, acting as assistant director with Pathe, Mittenthal, Pokes & Jabs, and the World Film Company, has been engaged by the Jester Comedy Company as assistant director for their productions featuring Twede-Dan.

Lillian Walker in Government Film.

Lillian Walker is "doing her bit" for Uncle Sam by appearing in the Government motion pictures taken at Camp Upton by one of New York's own regiments, the 308th.

This film, intended for war propaganda, is made by the Government, and is to be shown at every cantonment, both here and abroad. It was exhibited for the first time at the Camp Upton Circus, February 12 and 13.

Miss Walker plays the part of a soldier's wife, and, with one other exception, is the only woman in the picture. A large number of soldiers of the 308th regiment, together with many of the officers, appears in this film, which shows in detail life at camp, and gives an idea of what it means to be a soldier in Uncle Sam's army. A little love story featuring Miss Walker is woven into the plot.

The latter gave her time and talent, considering it an honor to render service for her country.

Miss Walker's new company has a temporary office in the Longacre building, and work will shortly be begun on her first starring vehicle since the formation of the Lillian Walker Productions, which are to be released through the Producers and Exhibitors' Affiliated. At the present time she is "vacationing" at her farm, "Sunnybrook," Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Society Girl in "Moral Suicide."

During his stay at Palm Beach, Fla., where he went to take the exterior scenes of "Moral Suicide," Ivan Abramson, president of the Graphic Film Corporation, met with one of the many accidents that frequently befall the photoplay director. One of the cast became seriously ill. In his dilemma Mr. Abramson turned his attention to the many young ladies wintering at Palm Beach in the hope of finding one with sufficient dramatic ability to relieve the situation.

After many trials he chanced upon Miss Helen Price, of Glascow, Mo. That his selection of Miss Price was a fortunate one was proven by the ease, grace, poise, and seeming experience, with which she played the role.

After Mr. Abramson had offered the young lady a contract, which she now has under consideration, he learned she is the great granddaughter of Sterling Price, a Major-General of the Confederate army and one time Governor of the State of Missouri. Mr. Abramson declares that in all his experience he has never before met anyone, without previous experience, who indicated the histrionic talent possessed by this young society girl.

Mystery in Petrova Play

Suspicion of Murder Cast on Three Principal Characters.

AN innovation in the type of film story in which Madame Olga Petrova has appeared during the past few months will mark the release of her third picture, "The Life Mask." Adapted for the screen by Mrs. L. Case Russell from a widely read novel by the anonymous author, it is a mystery drama of much originality. Through a peculiar chain of circumstances the guilt for the murder of a wealthy financier is thrown on all of the leading characters. The unraveling of the tangled skein only occurs at the very end of the picture.

The plot deals with an unwilling marriage forced upon Anita Courtland. Clay Woodruffe, her husband, is injured through a fall, and during his illness drives the young wife to the point of desperation through his brutal and inhuman treatment. One evening while sitting up with the patient Anita has a dreadful nightmare. When she awakens her husband is dead. Then follows a rapid chain of circumstances in which suspicion is cast upon herself, the nurse and three other inmates of the house.

W. H. Secures Barriscale Feature.

W. H. Productions Company announces it is about to release a series of feature productions with Bessie Barriscale, which will be handled on a state rights basis, and that complete advertising matter will be furnished covering each production, viz.: two styles of ones, threes and six-sheets, and a twenty-four-sheet stand, a lobby display composed of 8x10 photos and 11x14s, and a sixteen page campaign book.

"Accidental Honeymoon" on P. & E. A. Program.

Another addition has been made to the list of pictures published in our last issue, which will be released by the newly formed Producers' and Exhibitors' Affiliated on its direct sales plan. This is "The Accidental Honeymoon," a Harry Rapf production, written and directed by Leonce Perret.

Robert Warwick, who is now a captain in the United States Army, appears in the leading role, which is a continuation of the character in which he appeared in "The Mad Lover." The story also embodies several other characters which were seen in this production.

Arrow Announces Foreign Expansion

"Raffles" Sold for United Kingdom—"Weavers of Life" and "Souls Redeemed" for South America—Special Bureau Established for Latin Countries.

Arrow Film Corporation announces its foreign department had sold the United Kingdom rights of "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," in which John Barrymore is featured, for L. Lawrence Weber, and, according to W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow organization, the film brought a record price.

The Arrow corporation also announces the sale of the South American rights of the two Edward Warren productions, "Souls Redeemed" and "Weavers of Life." The Indiana rights of these two films were also sold this week.

According to Mr. Shallenberger the disposal of "Raffles" is the first of a series of big foreign rights sales now being negotiated by Arrow. "We have been greatly widening our foreign service," said he, "but we have been doing it quietly and thoroughly. For months past we have had representatives traveling in all parts of the world studying film conditions and getting a first-hand knowledge of the exact requirements of the various markets. We have collected a vast amount of valuable data that has proven of immense value not only to us, but to the producers with whom we are associated as well.

"In line with our expansion in the foreign field we have established a special South American bureau, which will devote its energies exclusively to business in this field. We have been paying special attention to South American film conditions, and have just completed a fifteen months' research campaign there. Mr. Luis O. Tornero, who is widely known in film circles in the Southern Hemisphere, has been appointed special representative for the Arrow organization, and is now on his way back to Buenos Aires. He is to make another tour of the big film centers of South America, taking with him, among others, prints of the two big W. H. Clune productions, 'Ramona' and 'Eyes of the World'; the two Warren productions, 'Souls Redeemed,' and 'Weavers of Life'; three Arrow productions, 'The Woman's Law,' 'The Deemster,' and 'Right Off the Bat'; the Mayfair production, 'Persuasive Peggy,' and the two-reel comedies made by the Jester Comedy Corporation."

Modern Features Buys "Mother" for New York.

Under the terms of a deal just consummated, the Modern Feature Film Company, on which Charles H. Streimer is general manager, secures from the General Enterprises the New York City and state rights to "Mother," the six-part George Loane Tucker production featuring Elizabeth Risdon, who, at the present time, is appearing in the stellar role of "Seven Days' Leave" at the Park theater, New York.

General Enterprises announces that with this sale eighty-three per cent. of the territory for this picture has been disposed of, and that the following territory remains open: New Mexico, Colorado, Utah and Wyoming, eastern Pennsylvania, Washington, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North and South Carolina.

Musical Setting for "Crucible of Life."

General Enterprises, Inc., has made arrangements, with William J. McKenna, noted song writer, who will furnish an original and appropriate musical setting for the "Crucible of Life," featuring Grace Darmond, Jack Sherrill and Frank O'Connor. McKenna has so devised the music cues that they may be used with equal ease by a small or large orchestra. Patriotic melodies, both old and new, have been cleverly introduced throughout.

In addition, arrangements have been entered into with the F. B. Haviland Publishing Company of New York, whereby they will provide all exhibitors showing "The Crucible of Life" with a full orchestration of "My Broken Rosary," which melody forms the dominant theme of the special music. It is claimed this is the first time that such an arrangement has been made for the benefit ofthe exhibitor.

Mr. McKenna is the author "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" "Mandy Lee," and other song hits of the present generation. He also collaborated in writing the Metro serial, "The Great Secret," and has to his credit many successful vaudeville acts.

Whartons Use Novelty in Advertising.

The Whartons, who are producing Chief William J. Flynn's twenty episode story of the Imperial German Government's plotting and intrigue in this country under the title of "The Eagle's Eye," have issued a clever novelty as a method of advertising the picture. It is a device which apparently makes the flesh of a body disappear, leaving only the bones exposed.

Burstein Gathers Plates for Five Reeler.

Louis Burstein, president of the King-Bee Films Corp., in addition to bringing the latest King-Bee, "The Orderly," announces his purpose in coming to New York from his Hollywood studio was to attend a meeting of the Board of Directors of the King-Bee Films Corp., and to secure plates for the costumes that are to be made for the first King-Bee five-reeler, a de luxe comedy entitled "Old King Sol," featuring Billy West.

King Bee Changes Two Titles.

Two of the King-Bee comedies, "The Barber" and "The Prospector," have been changed to "His Day Out" and "The Stranger." The comedies are the same only the titles have been changed.

These comedies, starring Billy West, are the two latest two-reelers to be released by the King-Bee Films Corp.

Only Newspaper Advertising for Serial

No Publicity to Be Carried in Magazines for "The Eagle's Eye"—First Episode Released February Twenty-seventh.

It is claimed that a definite determination of the value of a National advertising campaign in daily newspapers for a motion picture production will be possible when the final results are available on the nation-wide drive in behalf of "The Eagle's Eye."

In point of numbers the newspapers employed in this campaign is said to be the greatest that has ever been used to exploit a motion picture. Newspapers are being used exclusively. Other campaigns have usually been carried in both magazines and newspapers. As a consequence attempts to arrive at a fair conclusion of the worth of the space employed in the newspapers have been hampered by the claims of the magazines.

About half the space contracted for will be used before the first episode of "The Eagle's Eye" is released, and the remainder will be used in behalf of the following episodes.

The smallest contract which has been placed with any newspaper calls for 1,000 lines. In larger cities, and especially in those where the Foursquare exchange, which will do the distributing of the serial, has branch offices, the space used is greater. The text of the ads is based upon Chief Flynn's revelations of the activities of the German Government's spies. The copy is designed to take advantage of the publicity which has been given the German menace in this country, and the widespread knowledge of Chief Flynn's work as the head of the Secret Service.

Ample space has been given for a good display of individual advertisements, and the schedule of insertions has been arranged so that they will be co-incident with the showing of the episode to which they apply in the territory covered by the newspaper.

It is further contended that in previous campaigns the space has been used for the advertising of a certain brand of pictures, and that never has a National campaign of the magnitude been made for a single picture. In this instance there are none of these conflicting elements. Every line will be devoted exclusively to "The Eagle's Eye."

The first episode will be released during week of February 27, and the remaining nineteen will be released at weekly intervals.

Interwoven in the expose of the truth of the plot in which Count Von Bernstorff and his aides, Captain Franz Von Papen, Captain Karl Boy-Ed and Dr. Heinrich Albert, are shown is the beginning of the romance of Harrison Grant, the president of the Criminology Club, and Dixie Mason, the Secret Service operative.

King Baggot plays the part of Harrison Grant, and opposite him as Dixie Mason is Marguerite Snow. Count Von Bernstorff is impersonated by Bertram Marburg; Captain Von Papen by Paul Everton; Captain Boy-Ed by John Wade; Dr. Albert by Frederick Jones, and Franz Von Rintelin by Wellington Playter. Florence Short as Madame Augusta Stephen and William Bailey as Heinric Von Lertz complete the cast.

Work on Keeney Picture Progressing.

Considerable progress which has been made within the last fortnight on "A Romance of the Underworld," produced by the Frank A. Keeney Picture Corporation under the direction of James Kirkwood, includes the filming of four of the big episodes. One of the most dramtic is the courtroom scene, as the result of a murder trial is awaited. Another is the interior of a "dope den," with its Oriental luxury and languor, and its suggestion of morbid unreality.

Mr. Kirkwood also ushers his company into a cabaret palace, where there are scenes of wild revel, with a battle between two stars of the fistic arena. Then, too, there is a visit to the tombs and the Criminal Courts building. The interior scenes are now being filmed in the Biograph studios.

Pettijohn Brings Encouraging Reports.

C. C. Pettijohn, who has just returned from a tour of the Middle West in the interest of the Producers' and Exhibitors' Affiliated, reports that the direct sales plan of this organization met with the hearty aproval of the exhibitors, and that the last territory to be rounded up on this trip was western Pennsylvania, where the specified eighty-eight days was guaranteed.

Harry Rapf, who accompanied Pettijohn on the early part of the trip, returned several days ago, also with enthusiastic reports.

It is announced that during the six weeks since operations commenced, 1,885 days of the necessary 2,700 have been guaranteed by exhibitors in various states, and that within a short time the number of producers associated with this plan will be raised to ten, which has been fixed as the maximum.

Raver Has New Sales Scheme.

Harry Raver believes the present time of stress warrants a sharp reduction in profits all along the line, and states that in determining the price for which his newest production, "The Master Crook," with Edmund Breese, is to be sold, it will be based on the actual studio cost of production to which will be added a twenty per cent. profit.

In this connection, Mr. Raver further advises: "I shall be glad to show these figures to any buyer who wishes to examine them. Each territory will pay a percentage of the whole without any frills added. Positive prints will be supplied in any quantity at laboratory cost, as will the advertising accessories. I am satisfied with the twenty per cent. margin, and believe the man who buys territory for 'The Master Crook' should feel the same way about it, and not seek to hold the picture for high rentals, demanding an excessive profit just because I charged him a low price. I do not fear the loss of prestige or a depreciation of the quality because of the war-time price, for I know its stars will draw, and the picture itself will please to the point of playing return dates."

Jester Comedies to Enlarge Studio.

Jester Comedy Company has made arrangements for extensive alterations in their studio at Cliffside, N. J., and also for the building of an additional wing in order to increase the floor space of the interior studio.

At the present time the combined outdoor and indoor studio measures seven thousand five hundred square feet, and with the new addition it will raise these figures to twelve thousand five hundred square feet. The laboratory also will be enlarged, which will give it a capacity of two hundred thousand feet per week—just double of what it is now.

Buys King Bees for Japan.

David P. Howells, of 220 West 42d street, has just closed a deal with the King-Bee Corporation for the Billy West-King-Bee Comedies for the East Indies, Philippines, Dutch East Indies, and Japan.

Mr. Howells returned from a trip recently, and sold these comedies on a yearly contract to "K.-D. Brothers," who control fifty houses in Bombay, India, and Nikkatsu, of Tokio, Japan, who book several hundred theaters in the Orient.

Clara Williams in "Carmen of Klondike."

Clara Williams, who appears in the leading role in "Carmen of the Klondike," the Selexart picture, which is to be the first release of the State Right Distributors, is a Westerner, having been born in Seattle, Wash., where she remained until she was seven years old, when her family moved to Los Angeles. While she was attending school the manager of the Santa Barbara stock company admired her work in amateur theatricals, and offered her, her first professional engagement as "Lady Isabelle" in "East Lynne." After a season with this stock company, Miss Williams joined Richard Jose, with whom she toured the country in "Don't Tell My Wife," after which she appeared in vaudeville, and, after one season, joined the Colonial stock company playing in Chicago and St. Paul. While with the stock company in St. Paul she appeared in "The Awakening" with such great success that she became the star in the road company of the same production.

Her screen debut was made as leading lady with William S. Hart in "The Bargain," after which she appeared with him in "Hell's Hinges." Miss Williams' first star vehicle on the screen was "The Criminal," a story written for her by C. Gardner Sullivan, and directed by Reginald Barker. In "The Paws of the Bear," another picture directed by Mr. Barker, Miss Williams co-starred with William Desmond, after which came a long list of starring vehicles as one of the Ince-Triangle players.

Sterling to Distribute "Natural Law."

As briefly announced in our last issue, the Sterling Pictures Corporation, with offices at 729 Seventh avenue, New York, has acquired the Canadian and United States right, with exception of Greater New York, to the France Films production, "The Natural Law."

This picture is founded on a play of the same title, produced by John Cort, which was successfully presented at the Republic theater, New York, and later shown throughout this country and Canada. Marguerite Courtot, Howard Hall, and George Larkin are the featured members of the cast, and the story deals with a girl artist who is loved by two men; one, a famous athlete typifies youth, the other a physician, a man of high ideals, typifies maturity. She heeds the call of youth, and encounters misfortune. The youth also suffers, but his suffering makes him a man.

In addition to this production the Sterling Pictures Corporation are also handling George Loane Tucker's pictures, "I Believe" and "The Hypocrites," based on Henry Arthur Jones' play of the same tile.

Gerard Picture Will Be State Righted.

Arrangements are being made for the presentation of "My Four Years in Germany" in a theater on Broadway for an extended run, and special music of an elaborate nature is being composed for it.

Following this showing, it is announced that this production, which is based on Ambassador Gerard's book of the same title, will be distributed on a state rights basis. The final assembling, cutting and titling is in progress, and the picture will probably be ten reels in length when completed.

Ambassador Gerard has written a second volume of his experiences in Germany, entitled "Face to Face with Kaiserism," which is being published in New York, and will probably be run in installments in one of the leading newspapers.

Novel Test With "Zeppelin" Film.

America, called the "melting pot of the world," with its conglomeration of nationalities, affords an excellent field, according to Frank G. Hall, president of the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, in which to gauge the value of a motion picture production for the foreign market.

If a distributor is desirous of finding whether a picture will interest people of the Latin-American countries he has only to screen his production in the southern section of California, or in Texas or Oklahoma. If he should want to know whether Orientals will like his subject he can show it to Chinese or Japanese in the settlements of San Francisco or, for that matter, in New York City.

"The Zeppelin's Last Raid," declared Mr. Hall, "has been sold in many foreign territories. We desired, however, to know how it would appeal to the peoples of the Orient, whether the Chinese and Japanese liked spectacular subjects or whether they preferred straight drama, like our 'Those Who Pay.'

"In order to obtain this information we booked 'The Zeppelin's Last Raid' in the Verdi theater in San Francisco, a theater conducted solely for Orientals. It gave us just the information we sought for. The production was a gratifying success and proved to us that spectacles embrace strong appeal for peoples of the Oriental nations."

Gardner's "Cleopatra" Sold for Canada.

Upon receipt of a wire from the Cleopatra Film Co., that the film was ready, Chas. H. Haystead, general manager of the Arrow Features Syndicate, Toronto, Canada, came to New York, looked at the film, and within a short time closed for the sole Canada rights. Four companies will be sent through the Dominion of Canada on tours over the Small and Walker circuits.

The delay in releasing this picture has been occasioned by adverse weather conditons, which prevented the making of many new outdoor scenes. Miss Gardner and her company completed their work last week, and the Cleopatra Film Company now announce the subject ready for shipment. Hundreds of enquiries are now being handled by an enlarged office force, and exploitation of the picture is now in full swing. An attractive line of pictorial matter has been designed for this film. The scenes, of course, offer exceptional opportunities, of which the artist has taken advantage.

The lithograph campaign was taxed to its utmost to secure the proper ink, owing to war conditions. Purple, being one of the most difficult colors to secure, was most in demand, for many of the scenes require a tinting that closely resembles the work of a celebrated artist. After weeks of careful experiment the chemical laboratories of Columbia University were able to produce a satisfactory purple ink.

Two Film Companies Move.

Increase of business and the necessity for securing additional office space caused two companies located in that haven of the motion picture business, the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh avenue, to move to larger quarters in the same building, during the past week. Foursquare Pictures, of which M. H. Hoffman is president, moved from the seventh to the fifth floor; while the Graphic Film Corporation, of which Ivan Abramson is president, moved from the seventeenth to the seventh floor.

Detectives Used in Filming "Life Mask."

A novel procedure was pursued by Frank Crane, director of "The Life Mask." In order to assure the suspense throughout and maintain the mysterious element as to the proper character upon which to affix the guilt for the murder of Woodruffe Clay, ten of New York City's best detectives were called into consultation. The story of the "Life Mask" was gone over, and the expert advice and assistance of the operatives given on various technical points. The results achieved are said to have exceeded the expectations of all concerned.

Pioneer to Handle S. R. D. Features.

The Pioneer Film Corp., with offices at 130 West 46th street, New York City, will be the distributors through the New York territory for the productions of the State Right Distributors, Inc., who recently announced the Selexart picture, "Carmen of the Klondike" as their initial offering. The New York premiere of this production will take place at the Strand theater during the week of March 3.

The locale of the story is in Alaska during the period of the great gold rush, and sets forth the life of the gold seekers who penetrated the frozen North in search of fortune.

Another Moon Comedy Finished.

The latest Moon comedy, "An Eventful Night," contains many novel and highly amusing situations. It is a clean and wholesome picture, and can be billed as an antidote for melancholy. The theme is diverting in that its chief ingredients enbrace a caricature of the Kaiser, a cake of limburger, a pot of sauerkraut, some German-made frankfurters, and a policeman by the name of Wiggins around whose activities the story revolves. In executing an order which he has received from police headquarters to get the German spies operating in Dopeville, Wiggins falls a captive to the charms of a stunning girl, who shortly after meeting the officer hands him a doped cigarette. A few puffs put the policeman in the land of the unconscious. In dreamland he sees nobody but spies, and it is around this part of the comedy that the spectator is introduced to some original and humorous bits.

This comedy is two reels in length, and is released by the Sunshine Film, Inc., of 122 East Twenty-Third street, New York.

Quality Is Chaplin Aim

THE New York offices are in receipt of a lengthy telegram from T. L. Tally, the Los Angeles member of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, who has been keeping in close touch with Charlie Chaplin's work on the first of his eight million-dollar-comedies to be released through First National exchanges. Mr. Tally has nothing but praise for the famous comedian's new plant and company. He states that the release date for the first production will be delayed about two weeks, the intention having been to complete the first negative about the end of February.

Syd Chaplin, who is his brother's first aid in all business matters, says that the great daily expense under which they now operate would have spurred them to the completion of the first picture before this time were it not for Charlie's determination to give the circuit a picture of real quality regardless of expense. "Since the world has placed such high value on his services, my brother is convinced that a new and higher type of comedy is expected and he has determined that it shall not be disappointed," Syd says.

Immediately on its completion the first "Signature Protected" release will be rushed to New York by messenger, who will drop the negative at the Rothacker plant in Chicago. After the circuit officers have seen the production the laboratory work will be rushed with all possible dispatch, as it is intended to release simultaneously throughout the United States and Canada.

Both Chaplin and the First National appreciate and sympathize with the exhibitors' eagerness to get going with the new comedies, but all concerned agree that the quality of the first is too important to justify jeopardizing it by too much haste.

Metro to Make "Pals First."

Metro announces the acquisition of "Pals First," which was seen on Broadway during the present year with Thomas Wise and William Courtenay in the leading roles, as a vehicle for Harold Lockwood, as a Metro All-Star Series picture. This is the second story by Francis Perry Elliott to be used as a play for Lockwood, the first being "Love Me for Myself Alone," which was released under the title "The Square Deceiver." Lee Wilson Dodd wrote the stage version of "Pals First" as a melodramatic comedy in a prologue and three acts.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

Marie Walcamp Stars in "The Lions Claws"

Large Supporting Cast Will Be Used By Jacques Jaccard, Who Is the Author As Well as the Director of this Universal Serial.

THE next Universal serial, "The Lion's Claw," has been started by Jacques Jaccard, one of the most widely known of serial directors, whose last continued production, "The Red Ace," has gained popularity. Marie Walcamp, star of "The Red Ace" and "Liberty," will be the featured player. Miss Walcamp's supporting cast will include such capable players as Edwin August, Ray Hanford, Thomas Lingham, Nigel De Bruilliere, Harry Von Meter, and Rex De Roselli in principal roles, and parts of lesser prominence will be played by Gertrude Astor, Alfred Allen, Frank Lanning, Charles Brindley, Sam Polo, Leonard Clapham, Sam Appel, and others who have been identified with other Universal serials. The large collection of animals at the Universal Zoo will also have a prominent place in the production.

Jaccard, himself, is the author of the story. The locale of the play is the interior of Africa, much of the action taking place at the British military post on the Upper Nile. Nearly every setting, both interior and exterior, must be especially Santa Barbara. Langley has traveled extensively, and is an authority in matters of detail such as architecture, costumes, and customs of the lesser traveled places.

It will be necessary to build several African towns, and models of these have already been made in miniature to a proportionate scale, with not the least detail lacking.

So thoroughly has Jaccard planned the production that the stage settings which are to appear in the last episode were designed before the introductory scene of the first episode was filmed, and every costume, fixture, and "prop" required for the entire serial was arranged for.

Mack Wright is assistant director of the Jaccard serial company, and Milton Moore, who photographed the "Liberty" serial, is in charge of the cameda work on this production.

The first of the eighteen episodes of "The Lion's Claws" is scheduled for release April 1.

Members of New Universal Serial Company, "The Lion's Claws"; Marie Walcamp, Star; Jacques Jaccard, Director.

Second "Huck" Finn Coming, March 4.

The very spirit of youth and fun and American boyhood is found throughout the entire five reels of Jack Pickford's latest Paramount picture, "Huck and Tom," to be released March 4. This is the second of the Tom Sawyer pictures from Mark Twain's books, although each in itself is a complete release. Director William D. Taylor, a fervent admirer of the great American humorist, found that there was too much material to be contained in a mere five-reel photoplay, and has divided the subject matter into two productions.

Altogether the picture is fascinatingly interesting, and brings out some of Mr. Pickford's best work. The supporting cast, including Edythe Chapman, Robert Gordon, Clara Horton, Alice Marvin, George Hackathorne, and others, is especially well chosen.

Essanay Making Poker Comedy.

Such a novel idea for a short farce comedy was conceived by one of Essanay's scenario writers that George K. Spoor ordered production of it under the direction of Arthur Berthelet, director of "Men Who Have Made Love to Me," the Mary MacLane feature.

The picture is to be called "The Lie That Failed," and deals with the attempts of two hubbies to have an evening of poker against the opposition of their wives. Playing the leading roles in this picture are Robert Connes, the well known stage and screen star, and Virginia Valli.

Navy Pictures Please President Wilson

Prizma Pictures Entitled "Our Navy" Summoned for Exhibition at White House.

NAVY Night at the Press Club of Washington, D. C., which happened on Feb. 8, was made the occasion for the exhibition of the twelve-reel collection of views made by Prizma, Inc., presenting practically everything there is to know or see in connection with the American navy. The title of this series of views which recently had a run of several weeks at the 44th Street theater, New York City, is "Our Navy." Secretary Daniels was present at the showing and in an address delivered at the conclusion of the exhibition expressed his pleasure and gratification at having witnessed the most remarkable, realistic and life-like pictures of life in the navy that he had ever seen. A private showing was arranged for the White House on account of President Wilson's inability to be present at the Press Club exhibition. Several members of the Cabinet and their families viewed the pictures with the President, who was much pleased with the splendid and dignified manner in which the navy was presented on the screen.

New Title for Alice Brady Story.

It has been decided to call the production which Alice Brady is making for Select Pictures at the West Fifty-sixth street studios "The Bride's Revenge," this title replacing "Ruthless Russia," the working title by which the production has hitherto been known.

While "The Bride's Revenge," as a title may have a somewhat melodramatic flavor, the producers feel that it is peculiarly suited to the new Brady picture inasmuch as this story is a strong and gripping tale of love and adventure in modern Russia, just before that unhappy land was plunged into chaos by revolution and internal strife. The scenes are laid in Petrograd, and the spirit of unrest and mood of the moment is reflected in the byplay of incident and happening with which the picture abounds. "The Bride's Revenge" is in no sense of the word a war picture, a political picture, or a picture of the revolution. It is a love story, told against a background of high and colorful adventure, with many tense and gripping moments during the course of its five reels.

Minister's Son in Judge Brown Story.

Another intimate and amusing study of boy life is furnished in the latest Judge Brown Story, "The Preacher's Son," a General Film release. This is the sixth of the series of stories of youth, and it picturizes in a delightful fashion the amusing mix-up in which a minister's son finds himself. As in the case of the other Judge Brown stories, all of the members of the cast, with one or two exceptions, are boys drawn from real life. They fit the parts for which they were selected, and carry out the humor of the story in an admirable manner.

"Thief or Angel," another boy story, will be the following release in this series.

Pathe Announces First Bessie Love Picture

THE first picture in which Bessie Love figures as a Pathe star will be "The Great Adventure," a Pathe Play to be released on March 10 in five parts. It is adapted from Henry Kitchell Webster's well known book, "The Painted Scene." In it Miss Love gives a charming characterization in the kind of part in which she excels, that of a lovable young girl who, by her innocence and sweetness, dispenses sunshine upon those about her, and is an influence for good.

In the cast are such players as Chester Barnett, Donald Hall, Flora Finch, Florence Short, Walter Craven, and Jack Dunn. Several of these have appeared in Pathe pictures before. Chester Barnett only recently was leading man to Gladys Hulette in "Over the Hill"; Miss Finch was in the Gladys Hulette picture, "Prudence, the Pirate," and Mr. Dunn had a prominent part in the Pearl White serial, "The Iron Claw."

Miss Love appears to excellent advantage in "The Great Adventure." All who have ever seen her on the screen have been impressed with the rare charm and artless manner, which, united with her talent, have brought her within a few short months from a schoolgirl to the ranks of the real box office stars. Miss Love is a dispeller of gloom. She has arrived as a star of sunshine and sweetness. Her present subject shows her in such a role.

Gaumont No. 9 Full of News.

Fourteen different news subjects, all interestingly pictured, are shown in Gaumont-Mutual Weekly No. 9, which was released on Sunday, February 24. In keeping with the spirit of the times the great number of these subjects deal with matters pertaining to the great conflict.

The training of the American army has been rapid, but scientific, and has progressed so rapidly that no apology for our soldiers is necessary, even when comparing them with soldiers of other countries who have had a life-long training. Many of the pictures show that the boys are having an enjoyable time in camp. Other pictures show what is being done outside of the training camps in connection with the war. Women are taking the places of male laborers; the famous Bellevue unit of Red Cross nurses, ready to start for France; the pleasant lives led by the Germans who are so fortunate as to be interned in this country, and, of course, many news events not pertaining to the war.

Foreign subjects show the graves where rest the first American soldiers who fell on French soil; French soldiers in the trenches and on the fighting line, and a remarkable engineering feat which has made possible a drawbridge so nicely balanced that it can be operated by one man.

Triangle Films Stirring Rodeo.

One of the most thrilling rodeos ever seen in a Triangle "Western" was held for Roy Stewart's newest subject, "Faith Endurin'," which Cliff Smith directed. Scores of spectators were present to see the troupe of Triangle cowboys ride outlaw horses and mules at the ranch studio, Hartville. Buff Jones, of trick rope fame, especially engaged for the occasion, performed some unique rope spinning "stunts." Steve Rounds, Triangle cameraman, had a hairbreadth escape when a bucking broncho mounted by Billy Patton, one time Texas ranger and trick circus rider, headed straight for the camera. Rounds gamely held his post until the animal was within a single jump of him, then leaped to safety, carrying the camera. He had been "grinding" all the time, and is said to have secured some exceptional shots. Roy Stewart rides an outlaw mule, and does some fancy roping.

Sensational Story for Charles Ray.

Teeming with romance and replete with sensationalism, "The Family Skeleton" provides Charles Ray with a diversified role. The production was directed by Victor L. Schertzinger, and will be released under the Paramount trade mark on March 11. In the cast are Sylvia Bremer, Andrew Arbuckle, Billy Elmer, Otto Hoffman, and Jack Dyer.

Billie Burke Takes Florida Scenes.

Billie Burke has returned to New York after having spent two weeks in Florida taking exterior scenes in "Let's Get a Divorce," her latest picture for Paramount release. Locations were photographed in and about Miami and St. Augustine, and some exceptionally beautiful backgrounds were obtained. In the story Miss Burke is reared in a convent, and these scenes were filmed in the big convent at St. Augustine. The company was favored by splendid weather.

Famous Organist at Fotoplayer.

Gentlemen: It gives me pleasure to congratulate you upon the remarkable success and finished products of your organization.

I have had several opportunities recently of examining not only your wonderfully clever, compact, and expressive Fotoplayers, which, by means of their double rolls, are so easily manipulated and quickly adapted to the exigencies of the moving pictures on the screen, but also of becoming acquainted with the colossal organ with its wonderful console and amazing array of stop-keys, etc., in the Tiovli theater, of this city, as well as the Robert-Morton type of "A Real Organ" in your San Francisco warerooms.

Clarence Eddy.

In all these instruments, I was impressed with the thoroughness and uniform excellence of workmanship, the unusual finish of every mechanical detail, the admirable promptness of manual and pedal actions, and the great individuality of voicing exhibited in every stop.

To say that you have kept pace with the wonderful artistic development of the photoplay is only to express one phase of your accomplishments.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed.) CLARENCE EDDY.

Barclay Finishing "All Stuck Up."

Don Barclay is nearing the completion of his second Essanay comedy, "All Stuck Up," in which the famous "Ziegfeld Follies" comedian plays the role of a paper hanger's assistant. His first comedy released on February 16 is called "Check Your Hat, Sir?" and the scenes are for the most part laid in a cafe.

Ivan Abramson, Anne Luther, Claire Whitney and Leah Baird, Members of the "Moral Suicide" Company at Palm Beach, Florida.

Mary Miles Minter Mutual Leader March 4

Will Be Seen in "Powers That Prey," a Will Ritchey Story Produced by Henry King—Screen Telegram Makes Its Bow.

MARY MILES MINTER, the optimist of the screen, will be seen in a comedy-drama vibrating with action and excitement in "Powers That Prey," released by Mutual March 4. The play, based on a story by Will M. Ritchey, was produced by the American under the direction of Henry King, and is a story of newspaper life involving the conflict of a scrupulous editor and an unscrupulous politician.

Scene from "Powers That Prey" (Mutual).

Miss Minter is cast in the role of Sylvia Grant, the pampered daughter of Burton Grant, editor of the Daily News, who is fighting the attempted stealing of a franchise by crooked politicians working in the interests of a railroad.

The inside workings of a newspaper plant are realistically shown, and the actual process of getting out a newspaper is tinctured with delightful comedy that relieves the tension. Included in the cast are Alan Forrest, who plays lead; Clarence Burton, Lucille Ward, Emma Kluge, and Harvey Clark.

The first issues of the Screen Telegram, the Mutual's twice-a-week news release, is scheduled for March 3 and March 6. The Screen Telegram supplants the Mutual Weekly, which has been for long the news reel of the Mutual.

Elaborate and comprehensive plans have been perfected for the gathering of real, live, up-to-the-minute and interesting news features. An extensive system of foreign camera correspondence has been arranged, which will serve war news from some new angles.

The last picture taken of Capt. Vernon Castle, who was killed at Fort Worth, Texas, February 14, in a heroic attempt to avert disaster to an approaching machine while teaching a cadet to fly, will be shown in the first issue of the Screen Telegram.

Billie Rhodes appears in a Strand comedy, "Waltzing Around," released March 5. Billie gets her chum's husband in bad when she volunteers to teach him how to step through the latest dances so that he can surprise his wife with his accomplishment at the next club dance. Believing he is philandering with another woman she trails him on several suspicious clues, and finally runs him to earth in her own parlor, where Billie is showing him the intricacies of the "Honolulu Wiggle."

Artcraft and Paramount Booked at Rothapfel Houses

With One Exception No Other Brand Will Be Shown at the Rialto and Rivoli Theaters Until April 3.

AT the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation headquarters in New York last week it was announced that, with one exception, the Rialto and Rivoli theaters have been booked solid with Paramount and Artcraft pictures up to April 8. Undoubtedly one of the most pretentious booking arrangements of its kind, it is readily felt that this deal involves the greatest array of stars for successive presentation ever consummated.

It a letter received by Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, from Managing Director S. L. Rothapfel, the latter expresses his feeling of entire security in making this arrangement and states that from past experience he knows it will mean excellent business at both houses.

Involving a period of fourteen consecutive weeks' bookings, both parties to the agreement have expressed satisfaction in the arrangement which will insure a high-class presentation on Broadway for these films as far as the producers are concerned, as well as big box-office attractions from the two theaters' standpoint.

"Woman and the Law" (Fox).

An actress who, before entering on her stage career, was known as one of the prettiest and best dressed women in Washington, will be seen when Peggy Hopkins shimmers on the screen in the R. A. Walsh Fox drama, "Woman and the Law." For several seasons she has been ranked among the star dancers of the musical stage. Her dancing in the Follies has brought her into prominence.

Norma Talmadge in Red Cross Drive.

Norma Talmadge, Select star, who is taking a rest at Palm Beach, enacted a new role the other day when she mounted a block and auctioned off a number of valuables to a crowd of several thousand persons.

The benefit, which was a single event in a carefully planned Red Cross drive, was held in the form of a garden party at the Joseph Riter place on the Lake trail, and was attended by many of the most prominent men and women in the country. Hundreds of trinkets had been sent in for the sale and Miss Talmadge shared honors as auctioneer with William Randolph Hearst, Mayor John F. Hylan of New York, and the Dolly sisters.

"By Right of Purchase," the star's latest picture, was completed two days before she left for the South, and now is being cut and titled.

"Up the Road with Sallie."

Constance Talmadge has completed the second Select Picture which she has been making in California, "Up the Road With Sallie," and is now ready to begin work on a new production.

"Up the Road With Sallie" is by Frances Sterrett, with the senario by Julia Crawford Ivers, and directed by William D. Taylor. It is one of those delightful stories with just enough adventure, romance and comedy mixed with bits of pathos to make an ideal evening's entertainment. As a story it was signally successful, and there is every reason to suppose that on the screen it will prove a highly attractive offering.

Norman Kerry supports Miss Talmadge. He is of the type that fits admirably into a part that necessitates dressiness, and on the screen he carries an air of distinction. Kate Toncray and Thomas Persse are the other members of the cast of principals.

Lockwood's "Landloper" Nearly Ready.

Metro's screen presentation of Holman Day's romantic story, "The Landloper," which is Harold Lockwood's next starring vehicle, is reaching the final stages in production under the direction of George Irving. All the interior scenes, as well as a large number of exteriors, have been filmed. With the completion of the Palm Beach episode, which is now in the making at the famous winter resort, the picture is finished in so far as work before the camera is concerned.

Universal "Shoots" 3,800 Marines.

The 3,800 United States Marines who were shot by one Universal camera in a living reproduction of the anchor and eagle emblem of our "Soldiers of the Sea" are shown as one of the interesting features of Universal Current Events No. 41.

Jack Conn, editor of the Universal Current Events, is particularly proud of this "shot" not alone for the patriotic appeal or interest, but in the fact that a special tower, 200 feet in height, had to be erected before the picture could be taken.

"House of Hate" Release Postponed to March 10.

An important announcement coming this week from Pathe carries the news that "The House of Hate," the new big Pearl White serial, with Antonio Moreno, will be released March 10 in accordance with requests received from exhibitors throughout the country, who find this date better suited to their booking requirements than March 3, for which the serial was originally set.

New Series of Jaxon Coming.

The sixth series of Jaxon comedies now drawing to a close has established a new attraction record for these General Film subjects. In view of the constantly increasing demand for comedy subjects of this character arrangements have been made for the release of a new series beginning early in March. "What Will Happen Next?" is the current Jaxon release, and the last of the present series will be "Which Was Lucky?"

Starke and Swanson Triangles Finished

The Former Will Be Seen in "Innocent's Progress" and the Latter in "Smoke," Both Soon to Be Released.

NOT a moment is being lost between pictures at the Triangle Culver City studios. Eight companies are at work on five and seven-reel features, while a ninth is producing a one-reel comedy which is said to offer something novel in the way of a laugh producer.

Pictures now in the editing department are "Innocent's Progress," with Pauline Starke and Jack Livingston, made under the direction of Frank Borzage, and "Smoke," a society drama directed by Jack Conway, in which Gloria Swanson and Edward Peil are seen in the leading roles, supported by a cast including Jack Richardson, Darrell Foss, George Hernandez and a bevy of Triangle-Keystone beauties.

With the completion of "Smoke," Conway immediately started work on "The Servant in the House," probably the most ambitious thing attempted under the new regime. Working with Conway is a carefully selected cast, including Jean Hersholt, Jack Curtis, Harvey Clarke, Claire Anderson, Zeneida Williams, Edward Peil and Anna Dodge.

William Desmond is featured in Director Frank Borzage's latest subject, "The Honorable Billy," which has just been started. Gloria Swanson will make her second appearance in Triangle drama as Desmond's leading woman. This story has an English setting and deals with life in exclusive London circles.

Olive Thomas has again donned the make-up after a vacation of several weeks in the East and is at work at the Triangle studios on "The Siren in the House," a five-reel comedy which Jack Dillon is directing. Again Miss Thomas has a new leading man in Wallace MacDonald. Others in the cast are William V. Mong, Claire McDowell, Ray Griffith and Lee Phelps.

The other picture which has just been started is a one-reel comedy, "Many Happy Returns," in which a young man's unhappy faculty of always selecting the wrong present for his wife is the basis of the plot. Jack Livingston, Jack Richardson, Lillian West and May Walters are in the cast.

Director Cliff Smith has finished the exteriors of his latest Roy Stewart-Triangle western thriller and is now doing the interiors at the Culver City studios. "Boss of the Lazy Y" is a screen adaptation of Charles Allen Seltzer's novel of the same name.

E. Mason Hopper has been working at one of the biggest ranches in southern California on "Another Foolish Virgin," from W. Carey Wonderley's story. Working with Hopper are Alma Rubens, Texas Guinan, Joseph Bennett, Lee Hill and Betty Pearce.

Mary Warren is again playing an important role under Director Gilbert P. Hamilton in "The Vortex." The cast numbers also Joe King, George Hernandez, Myrtle Rishell and R. P. Thomson.

Director Raymond Wells is putting the finishing touches to a drama of life in the Canadian Northwest wilderness, the working title of which is "The Law of the Great Northwest." Margery Wilson, who has the leading role, has the featured part and is supported by William V. Mong, William Dyer, Will Jeffries, Eugene Corey, Louis Durham and Pete Morrison and others.

parents, samples Bohemian life for herself. Several restaurant scenes were staged for this production under the direction of Jack Dillon. Jack Gilbert, well-known juvenile, who recently returned to the Triangle lot, is seen as leading man. Myrtle Rishell, a newcomer at Culver City, appears as Mrs. Mortimer Worthing. Eugene Corey is cast as a gunman in this feature, and on his actions hinge the plot for an exceptionally embarrassing situation for a pretty maid and a chauffeur, which lands the first in trouble and the latter in jail. George Pearce, Anna Dodge and Percy Challenger also have important roles.

Notes from the Fotoplayer.

M. J. Samuels, vice-president of the American Photo-Player Company, and directing head of that organization's headquarters in New York, is visiting the home office of San Francisco. Incidental to the record of war conditions and weather reports, Mr. Samuels has captured several orders for the Robert-Morton in New York State, and made two large Fotoplayer deals in Pennsylvania.

J. H. Merrill, American Photo-Player Company representative in the Rocky Mountain territory, has made sales for the Style No. 40 Fotoplayer during the past ten days in Wyoming and Montana.

The Kerhlein interests, which control the Kinema theater, Los Angeles, were so gratified with results of the Robert-Morton installed in their theater that they have duplicated their organ order for another Robert-Morton to be installed in their Kinema theater at Fresno, California.

Ann Little Back on Coast.

Ann Little, leading woman for Wallace Reid, who appeared with him in "Nan of Music Mountain" and "Rimrock Jones," and who is to be seen again in "Marcel Levignet," which is to be completed in the west, has arrived at the Lasky Hollywood studios. Donald Crisp, the director, is also back at the coast workshop, and filming of the Paramount production will be immediately resumed.

Changes Announced in Bluebird Releases

BLUEBIRD release date changes are announced by Universal for March and April as follows: March 18, "Brace Up," with Herbert Rawlinson, will be the release. The story is by Elmer Clifton, scenario by Waldermar Young, and the picture was produced by Elmer Clifton.

March 25, the release will be "The Wine Girl," featuring Carmel Myers with Kenneth Harlan. This is a Stuart Payton production, written by Harvey Gates.

"The Mollycoddle," featuring Franklyn Farnum with Juanita Hansen, is the title of the April release, a story by John McDermott, scenario by Eugene Lewis and Waldermar Young, and produced by Linn F. Reynolds.

"The Heart of the Desert," from the book by Honore Willie, and featuring Monroe Salisbury and Ruth Clifford, produced by Wilfred Lucas, is scheduled for release on April 8.

This list of Bluebird productions with their release dates supersedes previous announcements.

Lloyd Singles Proving Popular.

The change in policy by which Pathe is giving a one-reel Harold Lloyd comedy each week has proved to be popular. Exhibitors, who formerly complained that they found it difficult to arrange their programs to include them when they were being issued only every other week, have expressed themselves being pleased with the increased output. In consequence there has arisen an increased demand.

Myrtle Lind in First Lead.

In "Nancy Comes Home," Triangle March release, Myrtle Lind, formerly of the Triangle-Keystone beauty brigade, will appear for the first time in a five-reel feature. This society drama, which Robert F. Hill scenarioized from the story by B. D. Garber, shows Miss Lind as the vivacious Nancy, who, neglected by her

Motherhood Theme of Next Madge Evans Production

THE forthcoming World Picture release (March 18), "Wanted, a Mother," in which Madge Evans is starred with George MacQuarrie, is expected to record for this juvenile favorite of the screen a success as big as "The Volunteer," which lifted Madge Evans to a position of popularity. Those who see "Wanted, a Mother" will instantly recognize the experiences of a child surrounded by all the things that money can buy, who needs and should have a mother's love, a mother's care and a mother's training. In the cast are George MacQuarrie, Gerda Holmes, Alec Francis, Lionel Belmore, Tom Evans, Rosina Henley and Harry Bartlett. Harley Knoles directs.

Pretty Soft for Actors.

What Jack Curtis claims was the most perilous event of his career transpired during the filming of the Triangle picture, "The Hard Rock Breed," when he risked his good right hand for the sake of art. It is the scene where J. Barney Sherry is shown as a hard rock man and is swinging a ten-pound sledge hammer with Jack Curtis holding the drill for him.

Ned Finley Back in Old Stamping Ground

Is Busy on Twelve Three-Reel O'Garry Dramas to Be Issued Once a Month by General Film Company.

THE first of the Ned Finley Films, "The Return of O'Garry," a three-reel subject dealing with the new adventures of the popular Royal Mounted Canadian hero made famous by Ned Finley, will shortly be ready, according to General Film Company. This is a romantic adventure story of the great Northwest, which presents new thrills with the popular O'Garry atmosphere. The leading roles are played by Mr. Finley and Marion Henry. They are supported by a strong cast.

Probably twelve of these three-reel stories in which the famous Canadian Mounted police hero will be featured are to be produced in the studios located at Bat Cave, near Esmeralda, N. C., which abounds in scenery typical of the Northwest country. These O'Garry stories will be released once a month by General Film Company.

Scene from "The Return of O'Garry" (Finley).

Sills Supporting Miss Young.

It has been found necessary to make a change in the cast of "The Reason Why," which Clara Kimball Young and her company are preparing to film for Select Pictures. Milton B. Sills, not Conway Tearle, as previously announced, will be Miss Young's leading man.

Mr. Sills is an actor of established reputation both on the legitimate stage and on the screen. He appeared in "The Seven Sins" in support of Shirley Mason, also with Mrs. Vernon Castle in "Patria," and was featured in "The Honor System," the big Fox presentation of prison evils.

At the New Rochelle studio the first scenes are well under way. Robert G. Vignola is directing the piece, and the photography is being handled by Lewis J. Physioc.

Pirate Story Coming March 10.

Lovers of romance and colorful adventure should welcome the Triangle pirate play, "The Sea Panther," a dramatization of Kenneth B. Clarke's story. In this tale William Desmond as a swashbuckling buccaneer captures a pretty English girl (Mary Warren) bound for the American colonies, and dices and duels for her love and life. Much of the action of the play takes place about 1680, and the Triangle research department spent weeks poring over pirate lore in the quest for the "atmosphere" needed for this production. The historic old barkentine Fremont, veteran of more than a hundred motion pictures, will be seen sailing the waters of the Pacific with its piratical crew. Jack Richardson, Arthur Millett, Lillian Langdon, and Lee Hill are included in the cast of this seventeenth century costume play.

Jewel Carmen in Story of North.

The William Fox special feature release for March 3 will be Jewel Carmen in "The Girl with the Champagne Eyes." Most of the scenes are centered about trading posts of the Far North. In the supporting cast are Francis Carpenter, who played Jack in "Jack and the Beanstalk"; Gertie Messinger, the little maid in "Aladdin," also lands her charm to this picture, as do Carmen de Rue and Lloyd Perl.

L. C. Shumway plays opposite to Jewel Carmen. G. Raymond Nye is a capable villain. Others in the cast are Charles Elder, A. Padget, Charles Goreman and Eleanor Washington. The story and scenario are by Bernard McConville, and the play was staged by C. M. Franklin.

Duncan McRae in O. Henry.

O. Henry was at his best when he was able to depict the innermost every day emotions of real human beings. This is well demonstrated in "A Madison Square Arabian Night," a gripping, dramatic story of New York life just released by General Film Company. As is the case in so many of his stories there is a powerful last minute climax which carries a big-heart interest message. Duncan McRae, the well-known actor of the stage and the films; Patsy Deforrest, a favorite O. Henry girl; Miriam Miles and Joe Burke complete the capable cast which has interpreted this story.

The succeeding release in the O. Henry series will be "The Rathskeller and the Rose," featuring Adele DeGarde and Evart Overton.

Ann Pennington in Tomboy Role.

Theatergoers who have been accustomed to seeing Ann Pennington attired in gorgeous raiment and bedecked with jewels will find much to amuse them in the role she plays in "Sunshine Nan," in which the star is introduced as a "tomboy" of the slums. The story was adapted for the screen by Eve Unsell from the novel, "Calvary Alley," by Alice Hegan Rice, and produced for Paramount release on March 11 by Charles Giblyn. In the cast are Richard Barthelmess, John Hines, Helen Tracey, and Charles Eldridge.

World Makes Changes in Scenario Room

Producing Company Will Give Consideration to New Writers as Well as Those Well Known.

IN the cause of increased efficiency, which will enable the World Film Corporation to give exhibitors better and better World Pictures at the minimum of cost, the World has recently made several radical changes in its scenario department and in the production end of the business.

The World scenario department, under the management of Charles Sarver, whose engagement was recently announced, will operate on the principle that the subject matter is 60 per cent. of screen success. In other words, the story is of vital importance in boosting the box office for the exhibitors, and it is for the very best stories obtainable that Mr. Sarver and his assistants are now diligently searching. While the name of the author means nothing to the World scenario department it is realized that established authors have achieved their position through successful work, and the leading authors will be got in touch with and their work purchased if found suitable for World filming. An instance of this occurred last week when two stories by Maravene Thompson, the famous novelist, were purchased in record-breaking time the morning after they were submitted. Likewise, the work of all new authors will be given consideration.

Essanay Opens Australian Office.

George K. Spoor is establishing new branch exchanges in many foreign countries. The new exchange furthest from the United States is the Essanay agency in Sydney, Australia, conducted by Clement Mason. This exchange handles not only all Essanay pictures, including scenics and comedies, but is booking the George K. Spoor Ultra features—"Uneasy Money," "Men Who Have Made Love to Me," and "Ruggles of Red Gap."

Mr. Mason sends a report to Mr. Spoor that his one-reel scenics are particularly popular in Australia, as the natives of that country show a keen interest in the scenery of North America. "Uneasy Money" is proving a profitable booking in Australia, the report also says, and Taylor Holmes has a host of admirers throughout the country. Essanay has also established a booking and distributing agency in Porto Rico.

Three Keystoners in Drama.

Ward Caulfield, of the Triangle-Keystone forces, has deserted comedy long enough to play a dramatic role in "Another Foolish Virgin," in which Alma Rubens and Texas Guinan are being featured. Another Triangle Keystoner who has recently left the funmakers for a serious part is Frank Bonn, well-known "heavy," who has been cast for an important role in "The Veil," the first dramatic production in which he has appeared since he left the speaking stage. Ray Griffith appears for the first time in a Triangle feature picture as one of Miss Thomas' supporting cast in "The Siren in the House."

Mix Features Please Exhibitors.

The announcement is made by the William Fox organization that the elevation to stardom of Tom Mix has pleased exhibitors and that there is a demand for the clean, wholesome plays that Mix is making. The first play that Mix made for Fox after his elevation was "Cupid's Round Up." This was followed by "Six-Shooter Andy."

Another Mix offering is now in the process of making in the west coast studios and will be one of the early April releases. Mix is working under the direction of Lynn Reynolds. In this play Mix takes the part of Tex Wilson, who has a ranch in New Mexico on the border and is supplying horses to the United States Government.

"There is action every minute in this new Mix play," says the Fox announcement. "The picture has not yet been titled. The story gives Mix unusual opportunities to display his daring horsemanship and other spectacular feats."

"The Risky Road" (Universal).

"The Risky Road" is the title decided upon by Universal for the Dorothy Phillips' production previously known as "Her Fling." It is from a story by Katharine Leiser Robbins, and was adapted and produced by Ida May Parks.

The work of producer, star and supporting company has proved exceptionally good, and the picture is to be released as a special production. Dorothy Phillips is supported in "The Risky Road" by William Stowell, George Chesebro, Edwin Cecil, Joseph Girard, Juanita Hansen, Claire De Brey, and Sally Starr.

Regular Fighter Plays Office Boy.

Ted Frenchie, "fighting boy of the movies," who appears frequently at the Vernon boxing shows, is a regular actor now. He played the part of J. Barney Sherry's office boy in the Triangle production, "The Veil," under the direction of Thomas N. Heffron.

"It Pays to Exercise" (Sennett).

The release date of the Paramount-Mack Sennett comedy, "It Pays to Exercise," has been changed from February 24 to March 10. This subject presents an all-star cast of comedians, including Chester Conklin, Alice Maison, Harry Booker, Eva Thatcher, and "Slim" Summerville.

The story is that of a salesman of sporting goods who is so thorough that he insists on demonstrating the apparatus he sells, with disastrous results. Chester Conklin plays the leading role of the salesman, and Summerville is the prospective victim who turns the tables by giving the exponent of athletics a good beating.

Their activities are later transferred to a dentist's office, where unique methods of torture are devised for each other by the feudists, and end in a court room, where the solem-visaged judge becomes embroiled in the melee. The luckless prisoners are saved from judicial wrath by an amusing incident, which convincingly persuades the judge to temper justice with mercy.

Mary Pickford Is Honored by Regiment

SIGNAL honors were paid to Mary Pickford recently when the star had the honorary title of colonel conferred upon her at a big military gathering held in San Diego, Cal., and reviewed the troops, this being the first time that a woman has reviewed United States soldiers. The day began with an announcement that Miss Pickford had adopted the entire 143rd Regiment Field Artillery of the Fortieth, or Sunshine Division, which is also known as the He-Men, and had given her regiment 1,200 Smileage Books in company with Major General F. S. Strong, as well as a handsome standard, with an appropriately engraved silver plate.

Colonel R. J. Faneuf, in an impressive speech, presented "Our Mary" with a silver loving cup from the regiment, and conferred upon her the title of honorary colonel.

With Colonel Faneuf, Lieutenant Colonel Fred Peterson, Captain Harold D. Ferguson, Major Loizeaux, and Lieutenant C. Fulweiler, her personal aid, Miss Pickford reviewed the troops mounted on Dolly Dimples, a magnificent thoroughbred mare, which, she was told, had been brought to San Diego for her personal use. After the review the player received the surprise of her life when she was formally made a present of the animal.

In the afternoon Miss Pickford blew the silver whistle, which started the football game between her regiment and the Grizzlies, as the 144th Field Artillery is known. It is needless to say that the artillerists put up a lively game with the new colonel watching.

In the evening the actress was the guest of honor at the regimental banquet and ball held at the Hotel Coronado, and led the grand march with Colonel Faneuf.

Five Stars Featured by Metro for March

METRO'S Eastern and Western studios will release four All-Star Series productions through the Metro exchanges during the month of March. Emmy Wehlen, Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Edith Storey and Viola Dana in the order named, supported by all-star casts, are the quintet of players who will be seen in these pictures. The first two releases were produced at Metro's New York City studios, and the last two were staged at Hollywood. The list of pictures is diverse, including a society crook play, a comedy-drama, a Western drama, and a sea coast tale.

"The Shell Game," a fascinating society crook play starring Emmy Wehlen, is the first March release ready for showing on the 4th. George D. Baker, who directed this production, adapted the story from "Good Will and Almond Shells," written by Kenneth L. Roberts.

"The Brass Check," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne appear, is scheduled for release on March 11. This vehicle is a society crook play adapted by June Mathis from George Allan England's story. Will S. Davis directed it.

"The Claim," a picturization of Charles Kenyon and Frank Dare's Broadway success starring versatile Edith Storey, the third March release—underlined for the 18th—was directed by Frank Reicher. June Mathis and Leighton Osmun wrote the screen version.

"Breakers Ahead," with Viola Dana as the star, is the March 25 release. Charles J. Brabin and H. P. Keeler wrote this original story, and Barbin directed the production. In this colorful story of the Cape Cod sea coast, Miss Dana portrays Ruth Bowman from childhood to womanhood.

Nazimova's initial Metro photodrama, "Revelation," will be released under the Metro banner after its run at the Lyric theater in New York. This great picture presents the noted star as Jolino, an artists' model, whose reformation is brought about in an unusual maner. It is a screen version of Mabel Wagnalls' story, "A Rose Bush of a Thousand Years."

Universal Shows Lifesaving Under Fire.

The American Red Cross and the Universal have co-operated in the production of a special film of military first aid and lifesaving. Commodore W. E. Longfellow, head of the lifesaving corps of the Red Cross, personally directed and acted in the film, which was produced by the industrial department of the Universal. Commodore Longfellow is recognized as the leading authority on the subjects pictured in this film, which is being shown serially in the Universal Screen Magazine.

Among the many instructive scenes shown in this film are the recently developed methods of carrying the wounded without the aid of stretchers. Rescuers are seen going out in No Man's Land under fire, and bringing in the helpless men single-handed, without exposing either their injured comrades or themselves.

Pictograph Snaps the Polar Bears.

In the 108th release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph, "the magazine on the screen," an organization known as "The Human Polar Bears" is shown taking their daily plunge in the Atlantic ocean. Clad in no more than the regulation bathing suit these men and women were caught by the Pictograph cameraman enjoying a swim off Brighton Beach among the grinding cakes of ice on one of the coldest days that has ever visited the Eastern shore. Tired by the buffeting of the waves they found rest stretched out on a convenient bit of ice that lay on the sand, and then, undisturbed by a forty-mile gale, romped about on the beach.

Also there are tricks shown in "Magic for Home Use." "Bobby Bumps at the Dentist" is an animated cartoon by Earl Hurd. Then there is an exposition of "Camouflage."

Arbuckle Taboos Pies—Except as Props.

No more pies, says Fatty Arbuckle, wherein he has a bone to pick with writers of New Year resolutions who all credit him with resolving to throw more of these articles of food than ever in 1918. Not only will he never again toss the pie, but he will not even dodge such missiles. He is off pies—for every purpose save that of food, and, perhaps, if he consumes the equivalent of what formerly went into "props," he'll get along.

Triangle Players Work in Quarry.

Realism in every detail was demanded by Director Raymond Wells in the production of "The Hard Rock Breed," new Triangle play soon to be released. This drama, adapted by George Elwood Jenks from Frederic Bechdolt's story, deals with the life of men who tunnel through huge mountains, and has as its theme the experiences of a city-bred boss with two factions of laborers. Triangle was fortunate in securing big quarries for the location work, and huge steam shovels are shown in action, as well as hydraulic drills boring into the sides of the mountain to make way for the charge of dynamite which later tears a vast portion of the mountain loose and gives the giant shovel its chance to load the rock on the cars. Several huge blasts were caught by the camera; one tearing away the whole side of a mountain. Jack Livingston, Jack Curtis, Margery Wilson, and J. Barney Sherry are seen in the leading roles.

Billie's Burke's Next Is "Eve's Daughter"

Billie Burke's next screen vehicle to be released under the Paramount trademark is "Eve's Daughter," based on Alicia Ramsey's play. The scenario, by Margaret Turnbull, was enacted before the camera under the direction of James Kirkwood, and treats with Irene Simpson-Bates, a girl surcharged with youth and spirit, who chafes at the galling restraint placed upon her by her wealthy father, from whom she inherits a stubborn will. He believes himself a chosen disciple of the Lord, and dictates the smallest details of the lives of his family. A strong vein of humor runs through the production, and Miss Burke dominates many laughable scenes as the headstrong Irene.

Exploitation Campaign for "The Blue Bird"

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to Reach Out for the Business of Small as Well as Large Communities—Much Advance Publicity.

WHAT may prove to be the most pretentious as well as distinctive exploitation campaign ever accorded a production of its kind has been arranged for Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," produced for the screen by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, and to be released as an Artcraft Easter Special, it was announced last week by Walter E. Greene, managing director in charge of the distribution department. The campaign will be of wide scope, intended to reach the motion picture public of every city and hamlet in the country. This decision was arrived at recently among the executives of Famous Players-Lasky following a private screening of the picture, at which it was unanimously declared a most striking example of the latest development of the motion picture art.

In outlining the plan of action effecting the exploitation of this production, Mr. Greene said: "The fame of Maeterlinck's masterpiece is international. Our campaign, therefore, will directly tie up with the popularity of this subject and treat in a dignified manner, with the wonderful thought so effectively portrayed in the famous Belgian poet's dramatic success, which in its transference to the screen offers, perhaps, the first genuine visualization of Maeterlinck's story. The stage never could do full justice to this subject, and with the almost boundless possibilities of the film art only such a real interpretation could be disclosed.

"One of the distinctive features of our campaign will be, what is conceded by experts, a most effective arrangement for reaching the public in a direct appeal, giving the exhibitor exceptional advance publicity. This drive will be conducted with the co-operation of the Hearst newspapers throughout the country. Through this channel a unique exploitation campaign has been perfected in behalf of the exhibitors showing 'The Blue Bird,' and which insures direct returns for these managers.

"Another feature of the campaign is evidenced in the distribution among exchanges, theaters, and public of a beautiful booklet of twelve pages plus an art cover of unusual attractiveness. This booklet will offer a standard entirely in keeping with that of the subject with which it deals, and will be part of a direct-by-mail advertising drive.

"Arrangements for advance publicity in newspapers all over the country presenting large feature displays are now under way, and figures now compiled indicate that in this particular field alone the results will afford an exploitation service to exhibitors that has never before been duplicated.

"An agreement with Dodd, Meade & Co. also has been planned whereby this company will publish a special motion picture edition of the book, 'The Blue Bird.' Stills from the Artcraft picture will be used as illustrations, and a general promotion plan of the novel throughout the entire country in conjunction with the showing of the film is now under way.

"A firm of big music publishers is cooperating with us on a plan of tying up its song, 'The Blue Bird,' with our photoplay. There will be a special supply of exceptional paper advertising and publicity material and accessories."

Many Close-Up in Kennedy Picture.

Though Madge Kennedy is given an opportunity in her forthcoming Goldwyn picture, "The Danger Game," to reveal herself to her new and rapidly growing public as a player of dramatic roles, this Roy Somerville subject is by no means a gloomy one or one in which the star's eyes and smile are obscured. Indeed, it is proposed to emphasize these attributes as never before, not only in the play proper, but in the introduction of the star.

The manner of introduction in Goldwyn plays is always effective and original, as, for instance, in "Our Little Wife," where a close-up revealed Miss Kennedy's hands patting the back of the husband she had just married. Now it is planned to exploit her eyes and smile in an equally telling way.

"The Danger Game" will open with a close-up of Miss Kennedy's eyes alone, closed. They will open gradually, and slowly reflect the thoughts of Clytie, the heroine of "The Danger Game," as they are shown in various moments during the play. Boredom, obedience, inspiration, concentration will be expressed in the Kennedy eyes as Clytie thinks of the boredom of her idle life in the society of her mother's elderly friends.

Toto Appears as Small Town Showman.

In "A One Night Stand," Pathe releases on Feb. 24 a Toto comedy which is considered to be even stronger than "The Movie Dummy." It shows the little comedian in an exceedingly busy role, that of manager, scene shifter, ticket taker, electrician, etc., of the "opry house" in a small town.

"Bud" Jamison, who formerly was the "heavy" in the "Luke" comedies; Clarine Seymour, Toto's new leading woman, and a number of other Rolin favorites figure in the cast. Hal Roach, general director of the Rolin, directed the comedy, which is in two parts.

Hearst-Pathe 16 Worth While.

In the Hearst-Pathe News No. 16, issued February 20, are some striking scenes dealing with a foreign country and incidents which are rarely seen in this country.

They depict the rush of the natives of Morocco to join the French army. The great picturesqueness of the scenery, the unusual costumes, the life and the action of these scenes make them of a kind to be remembered. Their importance may be judged from the fact that some 225 feet of the issue is devoted to them.

The previous number of the Hearst-Pathe News showed American soldiers of France wearing for the first time gas masks and undergoing training from French officers as to their use. These scenes are all the more interesting since recent newspaper dispatches refer to German gas attacks upon the sector held by the Americans.

No. 15 also showed the review of an entire division of the National army at Camp Gordon in the South. This is perhaps the first time that such a large number of soldiers of the new army have been caught by the camera in review. The "shots" are excellent and most impressive.

Jaxon Players Get a Scare.

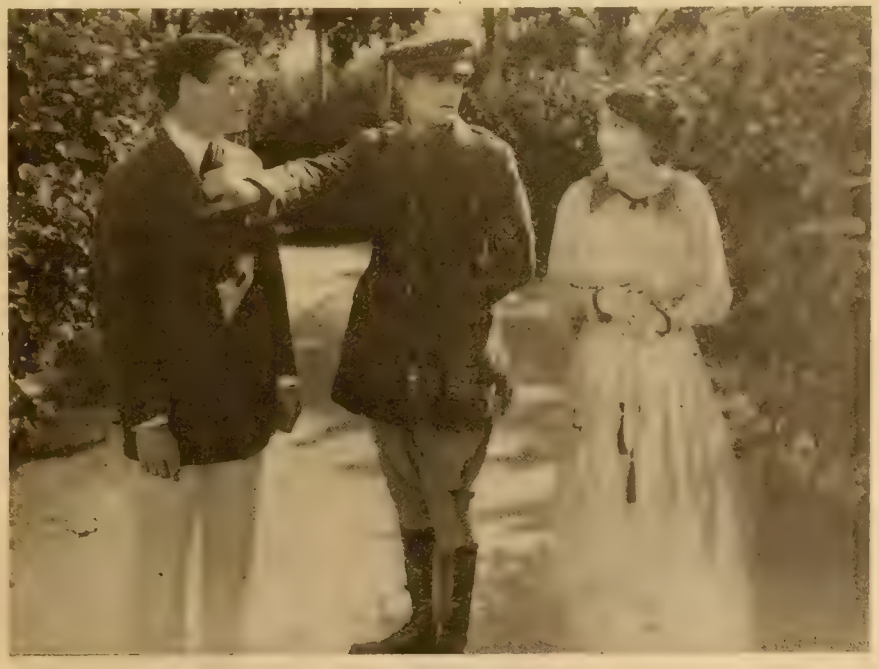
"A Daughter of Uncle Sam" is living up to its name as the thrill serial in production as well as pictorially, as the result of adventures encountered by Jane Vance and her company during the filming of the twelve episodes. The latest accident marking the work of completing the spy expose occurred a few days ago.

The scene was hundreds of feet below earth in a mine located not far from the Providence studios of the Jaxon Film Company. Just as the cameraman and the company of actors had begun the day's work in one of the lower levels of the mine a flood alarm signal warned the actors of approaching danger. Without waiting to learn the nature of the trouble the entire company rushed to the shaft landing and frantically signaled for the car to be rushed to the top of the earth. All escaped without injury.

Investigation revealed that one of the dams guarding the lower levels had given way under terrific pressure, allowing a steady stream of water to pour into the mine.

Roberts Has Role in "M'liss."

Theodore Roberts, Tully Marshall and many other well known players will be seen with Mary Pickford in "M'liss," her new Artcraft picture from the story by Bret Harte. The scenario is by Frances Marion, and Marshall Neilan is director, assisted by Al. Green. Walter Stradling is doing the photographic work on the film.



Scene from "The Life Mask" (Petrova).

With Good Weather Work Is Speeded Up In Fox Studios

WITH improved weather conditions there has been a speeding up of work in the making of William Fox pictures in the east coast studios. In the production which June Caprice is making in the Victor studios under the direction of Harry Millarde, "meatless days" play an important part. The plot hinges around a kiss in the dark and is said to be novel and to give Miss Caprice an excellent chance to display her coy lovemaking. Eventually June spurns wealth and falls in love with a handsome Government representative.

Scene from "Woman and the Law" (Fox).

Peggy Hyland has finished "The Debt of Honor." This is the first picture Miss Hyland has made for Fox. The play has a spy interest and war plot. R. A. Walsh expects shortly to finish "Woman and the Law" at the Biograph studios. This play is based on a recent sensational case in which a woman was acquitted of the charge of murdering her husband. Miriam Cooper returns to the screen in this production.

In the Biograph studios also, Jane and Katherine Lee have begun work on a new picture for Virginia Pearson titled "A Daughter of France."

In the west coast studios Jewel Carmen has completed a new picture which has a part of the underworld for its theme. Discouraged, a girl is about to kill herself when she is saved by a crook. She finally consents to marry the man who saved her life. She knows nothing of his character. Later, believing her convict husband killed, she marries the profligate son of wealthy parents. When her convict husband makes trouble for her he is killed and the way to happiness is open to her.

Under the direction of Edward Le Saint Gladys Brockwell is working on a picture, many of the scenes of which are laid in Paris. Paris Apaches and gamblers figure prominently. In the west also Tom Mix is making a new picture under the direction of Lynn Reynolds.

Universal and Ship Board to Co-Operate

Producing Company to Aid the Government in Accelerating National Interest in Important War Work.

EDWIN N. HURLEY, chairman of the United States Shipping Board and president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, last week conferred with the heads of the Universal relative to the part that organization is to play in helping the Government obtain volunteers for shipbuilding.

Mr. Hurley's request for moving picture co-operation came as the result of his discovery, of the assistance which Universal is now rendering the Fuel Conservation Commission, the Red Cross, Bureau of Public Information, and other Government departmental organizations.

In line with its policy of working hand-in-hand with the Administration, the Universal has already mapped out a plan of action that has been officially approved by the chairman of the Shipping Board. More than this, under the supervision of Harry Levey, manager of the Industrial Department, the film company has prepared a series of films which show where and why men who possess a knowledge of the trades which enter into ship construction are needed.

Mr. Hurley passed upon these pictures prior to his return to Washington, and gave them his enthusiastic endorsement. Among the scenes presented for his inspection were several showing the reclamation of waterfront lands and their transformation into colossal plants for the building of ships for our navy and merchant marine, and the actual construction of vessels.

Views of yards in which work is lagging behind the schedules originally set are shown, and every effort is made to bring home to the minds of men seeing the pictures the importance of the Government having men in the shipbuilding end of the war's activities. The chairman of the United States Shipping Board has granted permission to Universal cameramen to film every phase of ship construction as the work progresses.

Sullivan Writes Story for Hart.

William S. Hart, the Thomas H. Ince star in Artcraft pictures, has just completed "The Tiger Man," his picture which follows "Blue Blazes Rawden." He will shortly begin work on a story by C. Gardner Sullivan.

"Mr. Sullivan," says Mr. Hart, "has big, splendid ideas back of all his pictures. To this I attribute much of the success of photodramas. They are not merely Western pictures, but in every instance there is some motive behind the story that has weight and depth and meaning that makes people think, and creates a profound impression. My authors are responsible for this part of it; it is up to me to put over their big idea in a big way. Mr. J. G. Hawks is another who has the big idea behind his word—indeed, I am more than pleased with their work—each gets wonderful results in his own individual way.

"Take any of my pictures, and if you think back you'll recall that one big idea was at the bottom, no matter how much action and color might be employed in the development. That's the real secret of success. The best actor on earth cannot succeed with stories that have no real weight. I am fortunate in having men like Sullivan and Hawks to write material for me. To this I couple my knowledge of conditions and character, and what I know of acting. Then we give it the finest production, technically and artistically, that can be given, and the public does the rest. But if the stories were not there the decision of the public would most likely be 'thumbs down'."

In "The Tiger Man," Hart has a new leading lady; namely, Jane Novak, the beautiful screen actress.

Universal to Feature War Savings.

War Savings Stamps cartoons will be included in the weekly releases of animated newspaper cartoons shown in the Universal Current Events. This announcement is in line with the policy of the Universal to co-operate with the Government in patriotic endeavor.

Among the War Savings Stamps cartoons soon to be released is the work of one of the country's most prominent cartoonists, Westerman, of the Ohio State Journal. The cartoon shows Uncle Sam as a school teacher instructing his class of youngsters. He is emphasizing the value of thrift through the purchase of the War Savings Stamps.

The Universal recently was fortunate enough to arrange for the showing of cartoons by C. R. Macauley, for many years cartoonist of the New York World, and these cartoons, through the Butterfield Syndicate and the Universal, will also include some striking conceits that will urge the purchase of War Savings Stamps.

Miss Dana Working on Kentucky Story.

A Kentucky story without the traditional feud basis is announced by Metro as the next screen vehicle for Viola Dana following her appearance in "Breakers Ahead." John H. Collins, who directed Miss Dana in "Blue Jeans" and many other of her great Metro successes, wrote the story for her new picture, the working title of which is "The Night Riders." Mr. Collins will direct the production of "The Night Riders" from a scenario prepared by Albert Shelby Le Vino.

"Breakers Ahead," in which Miss Dana was directed by Charles Brabin, has been completed at Metro's Hollywood studios, and is scheduled for an early release.

Olive Thomas in Seventh Triangle Picture

"Heiress for a Day" and "The Shoes That Danced" Are the Featured Plays of Week.

IN the new society drama, "Heiress For a Day," Olive Thomas is featured for the seventh time under Triangle colors. This play, from the story by Henry Albert Phillips, deals with fashionable New York life, and the adventures of a little manicurist who inherits millions. Many of the scenes are staged at the Ritz Hotel, the ballroom of that hostelry having been reproduced by the Triangle decorators. Joe King, a new leading man with Triangle, supports Miss Thomas, and the cast also includes Eugene Burr, Graham Pette, Lillian Langdon, Mary Warren, and Anna Dodge.

"The Shoes That Danced," second feature of the Triangle March 3 program, has been adapted from John A. Moroso's magazine story, and picturizes gang life on the fringe of the New York underworld as it flourished a half dozen years ago. Little Pauline Starke is the east-side heroine who dances all night under the eyes of a detective to save her sweetheart. Wallace MacDonald enacts "The Harmony Lad," a gangster because of environment, who is redeemed by the love of a good woman. As Mother Regan, Anna Dodge is such a type as Ned Harrigan knew. Lydia Yeamans Titus, of the famous Yeamans family, portrays Mother Carey. Dick Rosson is cast as Stumpy Darcy, and appears at a masquerade ball as Charlie Chaplin. The cast also includes Anne Kroman, Edward Brady, and William Dyer. Frank Borzage is credited with the direction of "The Shoes That Danced."

Scene from "The Shoes That Danced" (Triangle).

"A Lady Killer's Doom," the Keystone comedy released for the week of the 3rd, is a burlesque on the dangers and pitfalls waiting for the slacker (William Franey), picturing the final doom of the man who dodges his duty.

"A Discord in a Flat" and "His Hidden Shame" are Triangle one-reel Komedies also deleased for the week of the 3rd of March.

"Headin' South" Is Next Fairbanks.

Douglas Fairbanks' Artcraft picture following "A Modern Musketeer" is finished. It is "Headin' South," and discloses a thrilling tale of two borders, Mexican and Canadian, dealing with the capture of a notorious band of Mexicans who defy all laws and governmental warnings. The scenario is by Chief Director Allan Dwan, and is said to present an extremely unique plot containing a strong undercurrent of fascinating mystery which is expected to create wide comment from this standpoint alone.

"Headin' South" marks the entrance of Art Rosson as a director of Fairbanks pictures. Rosson is a pupil of Allan Dwan, who supervised his work in this photoplay.

A new leading woman appears in Catherine MacDonald. Miss MacDonald's recent appearance on the screen opposite Charles Ray won her considerable distinction, and the fact that she is a typical outdoor girl, having participated in several athletic tournaments, fits her well for her work with Fairbanks. Other important parts in the story are portrayed by Frank Campeau and James Mason. Hugh McClung and Harry Thorpe are responsible for the photography.

Those who believe in "seeing America first" will be more than satisfied with the beautiful scenery that makes "Headin' South" a most distinctive film.

Psychological Study in Beach Story.

The oft-evidenced fact that Rex Beach writes about real people, not puppets, has never been better illustrated than in his newest film story, "Heart of the Sunset," which has been made into a motion picture for distribution by Goldwyn as a Rex Beach special. From the hero and heroine to the lowliest "comedy relief" character there is not a figure who isn't a human being.

Perhaps the most striking example of the author's skill at character drawing is Dave Law, Texas ranger, gentleman by birth and rearing, hot-tempered, happy-go-lucky soldier of fortune, nimble of wit, dexterous, with a brance of 44's, and master at the game of love. College-bred, Dave Law so successfully hides this fact from the woman of his heart that she has promised to become his wife before she realizes he is not the crude fellow he pretends to be.

The character of Law presents an interesting psychological study. Utterly unafraid of anything that walks on two legs or four he becomes a trembling coward in the face of a situation he cannot hope to control—the belief that a Texas "killer" who died a maniac was his father. In the business of love he likewise presents paradoxical attributes. He is a bold, brave fellow made a gibbering idiot by the sorcery of a woman. Herbert Heyes plays Dave Law in the film.

Boy City Films Make Progress.

The halfway stage has been reached in the production of the fascinating Judge Brown stories being distributed by General Film Company. Ten of the twenty subjects which are being filmed at Los Angeles by the Boy City Film Company, of which Judge Willis Brown, noted children's advocate, is the head, have been completed. Plans are well advanced for the filming of the remaining stories in the series.

The stories being distributed or ready for distribution are: "Bud's Recruit," "Chocolate of the Gang," "The Lost Lie," "Tad's Swimming Hole," "The Preacher's Son," "Thief or Angel," "Marrying Off Dad," "The Accusing Toe," "Frank's Indorser" and "The City of Boys."

Universal Reissues a Baggot Comedy.

King Baggot returns to the Universal program in a one-reel comedy entitled "I'll Fix It," which he both wrote and produced. The picture will be released under the Nestor brand on March 18. Baggot has been seen in but few roles of a comedy nature. In the years he was a Universal star he appeared in about two hundred productions, the majority of which were strongly dramatic in theme.

"I'll Fix It" gives further evidence of this artist's versatility, and he portrays the role of the genial busybody who seeks to assist a lady in distress in a manner sure to please his admirers.

In the cast supporting King Baggot are Paul Porcasi, Virginia Dare, and Alice Mann.

Scene from "Up the Road with Sallie," Constance Talmadge and Norman Kerry (Select).

Showing Them How to Make Money

Louis Rosenbluh's Service and Co-operation System Is Calculated to Assist Exhibitors in Booking Pictures.

EXHIBITORS will bear out the statement that exchangemen the world over will tell how great and how much money their particular program will make. There is no record, as yet, of the exchangemen prophesying their productions will flop, or just break even. Any and all pictures make money for the exhibitor is their version, and when the exhibitor reports to the contrary, the exchangemen generally says "impossible"—and forgets it.

Louis Rosenbluh, Standard Pictures department executive of the New York Branch of the Fox Film Corporation, didn't forget it. Mr. Rosenbluh has had long experience in the Greater New York territory, and has been for ten years in close personal touch with his exhibitors. He concluded there was a great deal in the exhibitor's complaints, and started to investigate. He reversed the usual procedure by beginning his investigation in his own office. First he found that exhibitors over-bought themselves, or more often were over-sold.

This condition was remedied by classifying theaters by location, seating capacity, and prices of admission. The result was instantaneous, and complaints fell off. However, he continued his investigation by looking over his advertising and poster departments' records, which showed exhibitors who contracted for attractions costing from $200 to $1,500 a week purchased from 80 cents to $15 worth of paper and advertising accessories. The exhibitor bought good money-making attractions and hid them from the public in their theaters—kept perfectly quiet about it—the extent of advertising was a one and three-sheet or two in front of the theater, and a few photos in the lobby. If the crowds came, he was satisfied; if they didn't come the exhibitor blamed the picture.

Mr. Rosenbluh started a campaign of education of the exhibitors. Every theater naturally has a clientele. Each zone should contribute a certain number of patrons to each house. To get these people in the house requires a systematic advertising campaign, consisting of mailing list, billboard advertising, and the local newspaper. After they come, the environments must be pleasant, clean, and the entertainment must be the best. The public is well educated to the better class of motion pictures, and it has been proven that fans will go any distance to see nationally advertised productions and stars. The individual manager can best build up and maintain his patronage by showing the best; then let the people in your neighborhood know that you are getting the very best for them, and you will get every dollar coming to you from your zone.

Today, the successful Standard Pictures exhibitors buy with each picture ten to fifty stands, several hundred one-sheets, three and sixes—an order for five hundred one-sheets is not unusual.

Mr. Rosenbluh installed in the New York exchange a new department of advertising and publicity for the exhibitor exclusively for this work. This department, by letter, keeps Mr. Rosenbluh in practically daily touch with the exhibitor. The exhibitor is notified in advance of coming new plays with advertising suggestions as to how to get the biggest results. Any exhibitor who books Standard pictures can have this expert advertising and publicity department to take entire charge of his shows. With the results in the past three months, each and every exhibitor who has taken advantage of Mr. Rosenbluh's order has put over his attraction and made money, as well as adding new patrons to his house. This co-operative and service system has worked successfully in every theater in the Bronx, New York, Brooklyn, New Jersey and New England, where applied.

Bessie Love Makes Her Pathe Debut Week of March 10

ESPECIAL interest attaches to Pathe's program for the week of March 10, since it marks the first appearance of Bessie Love in Pathe Plays and the release of the first episode of the big Pearl White serial, "The House of Hate," which will be launched then.

Dainty Miss Love stars in "The Great Adventure," by a well-known author, Henry Kitchell Webster, with scenario by Agnes C. Johnston. The production was made with a big cast, including Donald Hall, Chester Barnett, Florence Short, Flora Finch and John W. Dunn, one that is worthy of the story and star. The delightful comedy drama is of a popular type. The story deals with a little girl who forges her way to the top rung of the theatrical ladder through her innate sweetness, purity and ingenious initiative. Bessie Love has won a distinct place in the hearts of picture-goers.

Pearl White stars in the first episode in "The House of Hate," with Antonio Moreno, the episode being "The Hooded Terror." There seems to be no doubt that "The House of Hate" is the best Pathe serial yet, and advance bookings are pouring in. The punch in Episode 1 comes when the head of the House of Waldon is mysteriously murdered by a black-cowled stranger who has sworn an oath of hate against him and his only heir, a girl who through his death becomes owner of America's largest munitions factory—the Waldon War Works.

Ruth Roland appears in the eighth of "The Price of Folly" dramas entitled "Shifting Sands," with Frank Mayo. Does divorce solve marital troubles? That is the question added in this strong picture.

Harold Lloyd stars in a one-reel Rolin comedy entitled "Look Pleasant." There are many laughs in this corking good comedy.

"Our National Parks"—Mesa Verda Park and Rainier Park are shown in a striking split reel scenic.

International Cartoon and Educational split reel and Hearst-Pathe News No. 22 and No. 23 complete the week's program.

Ella Hall Heads Universal

For Week of March 11 "Beauty in Chains" Will Start Off Program.

THE Ella Hall production, "Beauty In Chains," in which Emory Johnson, Ruby Lafayette and Gretchen Lederer are featured with the little star, starts the ball a-rolling for Universal features in the week of March 11. "Beauty In Chains" is founded upon a Spanish novel written by B. Perez Galdos. The title of the original novel in Spanish was "Dona Perfecta," and this title was retained for the American editions in which the story ran. Elsie Jane Wilson produced the picture from a scenario by E. J. Clawson. The cast includes Winter Hall, Harry Holden, Maxfield Stanley and George MacDaniel.

The Nestor comedy for the week is entitled "I'll Fix It," a King Baggot reissue. In spite of the fact that Mr. Baggot played for more than five years with the Universal, this is the first time he has been released in the Nestor brand.

The L-Ko releases Mack Ambrose Swain in the third of his series of two-reel L-Ko Komedies. This week's is entitled "Ambrose and His Widow" and was directed by W. K. Fredericks.

Universal Animated Weekly No. 15 and Universal Current Events No. 44 are on the program as usual, as well as Issue No. 62 of the Universal Screen Magazine. In this number the Screen Magazine starts upon a serial departure in a news weekly. The present series is entitled "The Making of a Newspaper," and will contain three installments.

The Finley Nature picture for the week is "Geysers of the Yellowstone," and with it is incorporated a split-reel scenic entitled "Flowers of the Orient." These are real flowers, too, and not metaphorical figures of speech.

"The Mystery Ship" serial has reached "The Forced Marriage," its sixteenth episode, and has but two more to wind up its extremely exciting career on land and sea, while the Eddie Polo "Bull's Eye" serial has reached its sixth episode, which is entitled "On the Brink."

Interesting Theme for Walthall.

A phase of life which is little realized and which has seldom if ever comprised the basis of a dramatic production, is shown in Henry B. Walthall's second Paralta play, "Humdrum Brown," which has just been completed and which will soon be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

It is the discouraging feeling which brands the life of an ambitious, aspiring man who finds that there is nothing within the world in which he is living to feed the hunger of his ambition. Mr. Walthall, in the part of Humdrum, is but an ordinary plodding man whose opportunities are confined by domestic obligations to the narrow limits of an unprogressive, unproductive "small town." The story in a stirring, interesting manner, picturizes the struggle for freedom and success of a man bound to do a mediocre existence by chains of misfortune's making, which he is powerless to cast off. Mr. Walthall's work in this Paralta is declared to be excellent; he is ably supported in the principal feminine role by Mary Charleson.

"Humdrum Brown" was written especially for Mr. Walthall by H. B. Daniel, and the production of the drama was directed by Rex Ingram.

Notable Managerial Changes in Pittsburgh

Leo F. Levinson Now Heads Local Select Offices Succeeding Harvey B. Day, Now Connected with McIlroy and Day.

Pittsburgh News Service, 401 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Leo F. Levison has resigned his position as manager of the Pathe exchange in this city to accept the management of the local branch of the Select Pictures, where he succeeds Harvey B. Day. Mr. Levison is a prominent figure in Pittsburgh film circles, and his appointment to head the Select organization here meets with much approval. He is one of the trio of pioneer distributors of big features in this territory, and, it may be noted in passing, that the change at the Select branch involves all three of these well-known film men. They are Sidney Abel, manager of exchanges for the Select; Mr. Day, the former manager, and Mr. Levison. No successor has been named as yet to succeed Mr. Levison at the Pathe exchange, but it is likely that the appointment will be made within the next few days by H. H. Buxbaum, special representative of Pathe, who is now in Pittsburgh.

Romanoff Film for First National Circuit

Pittsburgh.—James B. Clark has issued the important announcement that Herbert Brenon's notable film classic, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," has been secured for release through the exchange of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Westinghouse building, Pittsburgh. Exhibitors of this territory receive the above announcement with much interest.

F. I. L. M. Club Re-elects Officers.

Pittsburgh.—The F. I. L. M. Club, of Pittsburgh, held a banquet and annual election of officers on Tuesday evening, February 19, at the Fort Pitt hotel. Practically the entire membership was in attendance, and there was an enthusiastic discussion of the work of the past year. The F. I. L. M. Club has been instrumental in adjusting many differences between exhibitors and exchange men, and plans were adopted for furthering this co-operation to secure even greater harmony in the trade. All of the old officers of the organization were re-elected as follows: John McAleer, president; Al. W. Cross, secretary; John E. Davis, treasurer.

Universal Interests in One Office.

Pittsburgh.—A merger of the exchange of the Jewel Productions with the local Universal office, and the Independent Film exchange, Film Exchange building, 938 Penn avenue, is now under way, and will be completed by February 23. The transfer is being superintended by Harry M. Berman, sales manager of the Jewel.

Manager McAleer, of the Independent Film exchange, Pittsburgh, has added to his road staff J. M. Duskin, an experienced film man, formerly traveling representative of the Harris P. Wolfberg Attractions.

Schanks Brothers Building Theater.

Irvona, Pa.—An attractive new theater is being erected at Irvona, a suburb of Johnstown, Pa., by the firm of Schanks Brothers, prominent merchants of the latter place. The house is now well under way, and will be ready for opening in the early spring.

Carlton Theater Changes Hands.

Du Boise, Pa.—The handsome Carlton theater, Du Boise, Pa., has been purchased by Joseph Weist and James H. Weist, manager of the Gem theater, Punxsutawney, Pa., from W. H. Hampton. The new owners took charge of the Carlton on February 18.

Juaniata Theater to Be Bright.

Juniata, Pa.—The Juniata theater, Juniata, Pa., is to be reopened in the near future, according to the announcement of Manager Barber, who recently took charge of the house. The Juniata has been remodeled and handsomely improved throughout by the new owner.

Nathan Schaeffer with First National.

Pittsburgh.—Nathan Schaeffer, formerly of the Independent exchange, has joined the road staff of the First National Exhibitors' exchange in Pittsburgh.

Western Pennsylvania Business Notes.

Pittsburgh.—Manager C. C. McKibben, of the Pittsburgh office of the Goldwyn Pictures, reports that Goldwyn subjects are becoming great favorites in theaters of western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, the local exchange making an average of twenty-eight new contracts a week for the regular service.

Ralph T. Meyers, formerly of the Strand theater, East Liberty, and the Palace theater, Homestead, has become traveling representative out of the Pittsburgh branch of the Goldwyn Pictures.

Pittsburgh.—Manager Joseph Spero, of the Bell Film Service, 804 Peen avenue, Pittsburgh, has announced that the Bell exchange will act as the distributing agency for all releases of the United Business Association, of Pennsylvania, of which James Kajiafas is president.

News from Maritime Provinces

From Alice Fairweather Standard, St. John, N. B.

Bad Train Service Keeps Down Business.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—The train service, curtailed by storms and war conditions, has been causing exchange men much trouble. One manager told your correspondent that he was only counting on one booking a week, as it was impossible to depend upon the picture getting to the exhibitor in time and he would not run the risk of disappointing an exhibitor.

Commended for Live Publicity.

St. John, N. B.—In an editorial in the St. John Globe, the clever way in which F. G. Spencer advertised his showing of "Damaged Goods" was commented upon. The Globe stated that the publicity compared with the methods of P. T. Barnum. Mr. Spencer had the endorsement of twenty-eight clergymen and a large number of prominent citizens. Many of these letters were published in the papers and on several days large full page advertisements appeared containing the names of those commenting favorably upon the picture.

Maritime Film Trade Notes.

G. A. Margetts, of the Canadian Universal, expects to have four big Jewel productions in St. John, beginning the first week in March.

The Metro picture, "The Adopted Son," featuring Bushman and Bayne, was given a trade showing recently in St. John.

Thought Patriotic Shows Were Taxless

Cleveland Exhibitors Took It for Granted and Made No Charge for Tax, but Now They Are Sorry, for It Must Be Paid.

By M. A. Maloney, 218 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—About forty Cleveland theater managers are bewailing the results of their efforts to be patriotic, because of a misunderstanding on Tuesday, February 12, when benefit shows were given for the Women's Military Auxiliary of Camp Sherman, Ohio.

The reason is that the exhibitors took the word of the club women and didn't charge any war tax on that day. Now the internal revenue collector says the tax has to be charged as usual.

The benefit was handled, altogether in a bungling manner. The exhibitors who co-operated took things for granted as they believed the club women had acted with authority. Only one of two theaters charged the war tax and the next day they were criticised for having done so.

Collector Weiss says that several such benefits have been brought to his attention and in December he asked for a ruling on them. Under date of December 24, B. C. Keith, deputy commissioner at Washington, notified him that the internal revenue department has ruled that entertainments given for the benefit of men in training camps are taxable.

Poster Companies War Economy Agreement.

Cleveland—Owing to a shortage of lithograph paper, which seems to be getting more serious every week, an agreement has been made between the Poster Rental company and the Buckeye Poster company, both of Cleveland, whereby they will not duplicate stocks of mounted posters which they rent in Ohio.

For several years these two companies have been handling paper for the same film companies' pictures. By the new arrangement certain makes of pictures will be taken care of by the Poster Rental company and other makes of pictures will be looked after by the Buckeye Poster company.

Many exhibitors therefor will be able to get what they want, when they want it and not have to wait until a poster company buys the paper from the film exchange and has it mounted. The arrangement, it is said, will not affect the price of rentals for mounted posters.

Elmer Cox Wakes Up Every Morning.

Cleveland—Elmer Cox is one of the hustling salesmen for the United Theater Equipment Corp. branch of Cleveland. Mr.

Cox has just installed a battery of Powers machines in the beautiful new Liberty theater, Youngstown, Ohio, just opened. In his work there he was guided by personal advice of F. H. Richardson of the Moving Picture World. The new Liberty has 2,000 seats.

Henry Hart Buys the Southern.

Columbus—Harry Hart, owner of the Colonial and Lyceum theaters, Columbus, Ohio, has taken over the Southern, a legitimate house in that city, and reopened it in February with "The Bargain."

Select Exchange in New Quarters.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Select Pictures Corporation is comfortably established in its new exchange at 176 Franklin street, Buffalo. C. R. Rogers is manager of the branch and Thomas Bandes has charge of the office. The Select quarters are in a new building, so that the surroundings are spic and span.

The visitor first enters the exhibitors' rest room, which is large and airy and embellished with oriental rugs, striking pictures of the Select stars. There is a bulletin board on which is posted information as to what exhibitors throughout the country are doing with the Select productions. Among the data shown last week was a half-page ad used by the Strand, Syracuse, to advertise Clara Kimball Young in "Magda." There was also a full-page newspaper story about Constance Talmadge. New Copy is constantly added to the board. Mr. Rogers believes in having late copies of The Moving Picture World and other trade papers on file for the benefit of the exhibitors. The rest room serves as a temporary business office for the exhibitors and is appreciated by them.

Manager Rogers' private office faces Franklin street. Here the new fittings pleasantly conform to the general appearance of the exchange. Back of the rest room is a large shipping and inspection room and on the floor above are the poster room and a modern film vault. There is a rear entrance to the exchange for all delivery purposes.

Manager Rogers is devoting part of his time to covering the city. Asked about conditions he gave a straight-from-the-shoulder reply: "Business is good." His road representatives are S. S. Webster and A. W. Moses. The Select exchange has the advantage of being centrally located in the heart of the downtown business section.

Benefit Performance on Last Fuelless Day.

Buffalo—Only three local theaters were allowed to give performances on the last "showless day."

Shea's theater was permitted to open on that day because it devoted the proceeds of its show to further the work of the thrift stamps and the war saving certificates. After the show Manager Carr of Shea's turned over a large amount to the Greater Buffalo Ad Club. The money will be used for newspaper advertising to further popularize the stamps.

The Academy and Regent theaters, both showing first-class pictures, were also allowed to give shows on the "closing day." The entire receipts of these houses went toward the smokes for soldiers' fund.

Four-Minute Men Reach 65,000 in Week.

Buffalo—In Buffalo theaters last week 65,000 persons listened to the four minute men, who are speaking for the war saving stamp movement. Thirteen speakers made seventy-two speeches in twenty theaters. One of the results was the receipt of many pairs of binoculars for use in the navy for detecting submarines. The speakers appeared at the following theaters and received fine attention: Academy, Regent, Star, Shea's, Majestic, Elmwood, Abbott, Maxine, Savoy, Fillmore, Variety, Lincoln, Garden, Gayety, Olympic, Lyric, Central Park, Premier, Victoria and Colonial.

Bison City Notes.

Buffalo—Harold B. Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, has been showing some big features lately. They include "The Son of Democracy" and "Intolerance."

Crystal Beach—This Lake Erie summer resort has a moving picture theater, which has a new general manager, M. J. McAlpine, who succeeds Henry S. Fisher, resigned. Mr. Fisher remains vice president and a director of the company.

Toronto Exchanges Charge for Closed Days

Exhibitors Get No Deduction for the Fuelless Days as Many War Expenses Now Fall Only on the Distributors—Other Association Announcements.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St. E., Toronto, Ont.

TORONTO, ONT.—Managers of exchanges in Toronto held a number of important conferences up to and including Saturday, February 16, regarding arrangements for payment on film service by exhibitors of Ontario for heatless Mondays, which were to start with Monday, February 18. It was finally decided that exhibitors must pay for the service which they would otherwise be using on the fuelless holidays. Several local exhibitors appeared before the exchange managers to protest against the decision, but they could not change the result. The exhibitors threatened to take the matter to the fuel controller's office in Ottawa until some bright-minded exchange man asked them if they were securing a remittance of rent from theater landlords for the idle days.

The exchange managers pointed out to exhibitors that the theater men had not yet been asked to foot the Canadian and American war taxes and other increased expenses of the past year or two, and that they should be willing to pay for service on the idle Mondays, in view of the fact that the Government had permitted the theaters to remain open on two days while all factories and offices had been closed. All the theaters did big business on these days and the receipts would make up for the losses through coming dark days for the theaters. It was also pointed out that it was unlikely that the Canadian authorities would compel the Canadian theaters to observe the full schedule of fuelless holidays during March because the fuelless days had already been abolished in the States.

Announcement has been made that Merrick R. Nutting is not the new secretary of the Toronto Exchange Managers' Association, as told in the last issue of Moving Picture World. Mr. Nutting accepted the position, but later declined appointment for business reasons. James Travis, local manager of the Mutual, will continue as secretary.

Toronto exchange managers are declaring that they have received a number of temporary cancellations of contracts because of disorganized train service. The service on a number of local lines was stopped altogether for a time and exhibitors in the out-of-the-way places could not get shipments at all.

The Exchange Managers' Association sent out a circular letter to all exhibitors in Ontario affected by the fuel controller's order, to advise them that they would be expected to pay for film service for all fuelless Mondays.

Church Tries to Put Crimp in Sunday Profits.

Montreal.—The Point St. Charles Baptist Church, Montreal, of which Rev. J. S. La Flair is pastor, made a frank attempt to compete with the moving picture theaters on Sunday, February 10, when a free moving picture entertainment was provided in the church "for those who would usually be at the movies." A large display advertisement, addressed "To the Movie Fan," was used on the moving picture pages of Montreal daily papers previous to the date of the "show" which replaced the usual service. There was vocal and instrumental music of a religious nature between reels.

Children Must Be with Guardians.

Toronto.—Immediately after the General Ministerial Association had decided at a conference held in Toronto on Thursday, February 14, that the law prohibiting the admission of children into moving picture theaters, except when accompanied by an adult, was a joke, the Toronto police department got very busy at a number of local houses. The manager of the Teck theater, Queen street east and Broadview avenue, was haled to court because children were found unattended in the theater. He was found guilty and fined $10 and costs. Police officials also warned other exhibitors that children must be found seated with parents or guardians with whom they entered a theater, otherwise they would be summoned. Manager Liscombe, of the Greenwood theater, was one of those warned. Mr. Liscombe declared that he might as well discontinue his matinee performance, because the children always wanted to sit down in front while their parents or guardians took seats in the back of the theater. It was impossible to compel the children to stay where they were put.

Music at Regent and Allen Theaters.

Toronto.—Increased effort is being made by the managers of both the Regent and Allen theaters, Toronto, to feature the musical programs which are being presented.

Blank forms were issued by the Regent theater to regular patrons for suggestions of selections for a popular overture, these suggestions being received up to March.

The Allen theater has also issued request selection sheets on which are listed no less than forty-five different numbers. Requested pieces will be played on Tuesdays or Thursdays of each week. Included in the list are four grand opera selections, five comic opera selections, three violin solos, ten violoncello solos, three piccolo or flute solos, four flute and clarinet duets and sixteen popular song selections. The four grand opera selections are La Tosca, Pagliacci, Madame Butterfly and Natoma. The three violin solos, which are played by Conductor Luigi Romanelli himself, are the Meditation from Thais, Caprice Vennois and Les Farfadets, Op. 12, No. 2.

A new request list to is be issued by the Allen theater each month. The lists are made up in the form of ballot papers with spaces for "X's" opposite the name of each member, and also a space for the word "Tuesday" or "Thursday."

Incidentally, the Regent manager, William Griffith Mitchell, announces that a scenario contest will shortly be conducted by the theater.

Teck Theater Equipment on Sale.

Toronto.—The City of Toronto has offered for sale the equipment and contents of the Teck theater, 1135 Yonge street, Toronto, over which there has been some litigation because the front of the theater was cut off by the construction of a subway under nearby railway tracks. The theater management entered a claim for damage before a board of arbitration, but the assessment commissioner has undertaken to sell all interior fittings, including a Simplex projection machine, opera chairs, generator, piano, exhaust fans, ticket appliances, electric fixtures, etc. Tenders for the various parcels of goods were received up to February 28.

Ben Bloom Visits Toronto.

Toronto.—Ben Bloom, Winnipeg branch manager of the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., was a recent visitor in Toronto. Max Finkelstein, the Winnipeg moving picture legal light, also recently visited Ottawa and Toronto on matters affecting the theaters of Manitoba.

I. Soskin in Montreal.

Montreal—I. Soskin, general sales manager of the Famous Players Film Service in Canada, and his secretary are spending a couple of months in Montreal. This is in line with the firm's plan of studying carefully conditions as they exist with the exhibitor. He is accompanied by Mrs. Soskin and baby.

Nashville Removes Operators' Renewal Tax

City Commission Sets Aside the Yearly Tax of One Dollar on Renewal of Licenses for Operators in Picture Shows.

By J. L. Ray, care Nashville Banner, Nashville, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—At a meeting of the city commission a few days ago it was decided to remove the $1 tax from the moving picture machine operators in this city, formerly required for renewing licenses, and the law governing this matter was accordingly revoked.

There has been more or less agitation on this question for some time, it having been held by the operators' union that the original tax required by each man for the privilege of operating a moving picture machine in the city of Nashville was sufficient to cover the tax. An old ruling provided $1 on the first of each year for renewal, and in 1917 an operator was arrested as a warning to some sixty-odd men to pay their tax.

Constant work on the part of the union representatives resulted in the yearly renewal license having been removed.

Big Run of "The Spy."

Booked by the Knickerbocker theater originally for Monday and Tuesday, "The Spy," William Fox's recent war story, required two more days to satisfy the crowds which insisted on seeing the picture. Local press comments gave the picture a good name, and, coupled with the street advertising by people who had seen the show, many additional admissions were recorded. No advance was made in the price, which is 15 cents, at the Knickerbocker.

Carson Bradford Back.

Nashville.—Carson Bradford, manager of the Strand theater, and one of the south's most popular exhibitors, has returned to his post of duty, after having enjoyed a three-weeks' visit at his beautiful home in Lake Weir, Fla. Mr. Bradford put in most of his time hunting and fishing, but did not fail to take in the moving picture shows whenever he got a chance.

During his absence, J. H. Bradford, Carson's father, supervised the operation of the Strand, which continued its usual high-class program of Metro and Vitagraph subjects. On the way back Mr. Bradford stopped over in Atlanta and Chattanooga to look over the film situation in those two cities.

Memphis Speakers Reach Thousands.

Memphis.—Approximately 42,300 persons in Memphis moving picture and vaudeville theaters heard four-minute men during the week of February 11. The effectiveness of the appeal is shown by their success in obtaining hundreds of lenses for photographic use in the American navy and aviation service. Talks were made at the Orpheum, Loew's Lyceum, Lyric, Majestic theaters Nos. 1, 2 and 3, Queen, Beauty, Empire, Princess, American and Rialto.

New Palace Building Resumed.

CINCINNATI, O.—The coming of mild weather has done more than enabled the moving-picture houses to furnish heat to their patrons. It has given the contractors on the new Palace theater building on SIXTH street a chance to resume operations, much to the relief of the interests backing the company and the theater, as it appeared for a time that it would be a long time before work could be started and that the plans to rush construction through the summer, in order to finish the building before the 1918-1919 season is too far advanced, might fall through. The site has been cleared and excavation work is now going on, with every indication that there will be no further interruption from the weather.

Exchanges Will Help Distribute Camp Picture.

Cincinnati, O.—Local exchange men will cooperate heartily in distributing the great film made at Camp Sherman, "The Remaking of a Nation," showing in full detail the training of the men of the National Army. The film is now said to be the finest moving-picture production dealing with the training of the Army that has yet been made. The picture has already been exhibited in the Northern part of Ohio and will be taken care of in the southern end of the state with the aid of the exchange men of Cincinnati.

Youngstown Exhibitors Show Broad Mindedness.

Youngstown, O.—Full local support to the special performance, showing camp training pictures under the auspices of the Military Training Camp Association, by special permission, on Tuesday, was assured by the hearty cooperation of the following theaters other than the Dome, where the exhibition was held: Liberty theater, C. W. Deibel, manager; Feiber & Shea Amusement Co., L. B. Cool, general manager; Hippodrome theater, John R. Elliott, manager; Bijou theater, Robbins Bros., managers; Rex theater, Robbins Bros., managers; Strand theater, Max Schagrin, manager. This fine spirit, indicating complete absence of any desire to prevent a competing house from being open for a worthy object, when others were closed, made the best of impressions on the public, and helped materially in centering interest on the camp pictures.

New Liberty Theater Opens.

Youngstown, O.—The new Liberty theater, Youngstown's recently-completed moving-picture house, which cost $300,000 and seats 1,800 people, was opened a short time ago, under the management of C. W. Deibel, with the Artcraft production, "A Model Musketeer," featuring Douglas Fairbanks, as the principal attraction. The house is of fireproof construction throughout, with a beautiful interior. A large orchestra furnishes music.

Dayton News Letter.

By P. J. G., Dayton Correspondent.

Gus Chifos Managing Middletown Interests.

DAYTON, O.—Among the visitors registered in Dayton last week was Gus Chifos (he with the broad smile), who called on the Moving Picture World representative and spoke of Middletown in a glowing way. The picture business is not slumping in "The City of Millionaires." Until about three weeks ago Theodore Chifos had but one Middletown theater (the Grand) playing Artcraft, Select, Paramount and Fox Standard pictures. The Majestic theater was then taken by the Chifos interests and opened with Fox Special features, one of the recent successes being Theda Bara in "Du Barry." Gus Chifos is now managing both houses with the assistance of the more mature Theodore, who is rapidly entering the magnate class. Teddy is pleased with the success of his Middletown venture and the work done by his brother in managing the two houses. When asked about the merger of Greek exhibitors in Ohio Gus Chifos stated he did not believe the report as published in several papers.

Alhambra Books Metro.

Dayton.—The Alhambra theater, Dayton, is now playing Metro pictures for the first time in many months. Metro is taking quite a hold in Dayton, in fact more houses are using the service at the present time than ever before (if the writer remembers right). The work of L. C. Pollack of the Metro office is showing up fine.

Clay Brehm Called for Examination.

Dayton.—One of Dayton's most popular managers, Clay E. Brehm, who formerly managed the New York office of the World Film Company, has been called for examination by the Cincinnati draft board. Clay was in Cincinnati last week and offered himself for examination.

Ideal at Dayton Books World.

Dayton.—Starting with last Sunday the Ideal here was the first-run house in Dayton for the World program. Ethel Clayton, in "The Fringe of Society," was the initial attraction, which played to good business for the entire engagement. Business is holding up fine at the Ideal. This house also plays the Pathe program first-run in Dayton, which also seems to register strong with local fans.

"Intolerance" Opens at the Columbia.

Dayton.—D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "Intolerance," opened at the Columbia theater, in Dayton, Sunday, Feb. 17, to one of the largest houses on record at this theater. This fact was not gleaned from the newspapers, but is taken from actual experience.

W. W. Hofferbert Promoted.

Dayton.—W. W. Hofferbert, who for several years has served as operator at the Apollo theater, is to act as assistant to Theodore Chifos in the management of the four theaters he now controls in Dayton and Middletown, Ohio. Mr. Chifos is kept constantly on the jump between here and Middletown, thus making it imperative that some one other than he watch over his Dayton interests while absent.

Monmouth City Council Will Censor Film.

MONMOUTH, ILL.—Monmouth is to have a sort of local censorship under the supervision of a moving picture inspection committee, consisting of five members of the city council, who will be appointed by the mayor. It apparently is not the aim to inspect all films shown in the city. Whenever an exhibitor has doubts as to the propriety of a film he shall notify the city clerk, who, in turn, will tell the inspection committee to view the subject. A majority of the board will decide the fate of the picture. No fees are charged for inspection, violations being a penalty of not less than $25 nor more than $200 for each day the picture is shown.

Theater Notes and Changes in Illinois.

Winchester, Ill.—The remodeled Lyric theater was reopened by Faul & Overton with "Les Miserables."

Litchfield, Ill.—The Lyric theater, which has been dark since New Year's day, has been reopened by George Loen and Lester James.

E. St. Louis, Ill.—The loss of one day's business each week has been given as the reason for no longer paying war tax by Redmon's Majestic theater. Patrons must now bring their pennies.

Springfield, Ill.—Secretary of State Emmerson has issued a certificate of incorporation to the Amusement Exhibition Co. of Chicago; capital, $1,000; incorporators: Henry V. McGurren, Paul Heinze and Thomas F. Graham.

Villa Grove, Ill.—Miss J. A. Stewart & Co. is the unusual name of the firm which has leased the Lyric theater. Miss Stewart is a violinist of ability and expects to feature the musical program at the Lyric.

Stonington, Ill.—W. E. Moore, editor of a local paper, has purchased the Gem theater from G. E. Roadman, who has gone into the real estate business.

Mayor of Indianapolis Censors Film.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Mayor Charles W. Jewett, of Indianapolis, attended a performance of the photoplay "Cleopatra," as portrayed by Theda Bara, at the Circle theater last Monday night and decided that certain scenes in the picture should be eliminated in order to make the film decent for presentation to the public. The scenes which the mayor requested the management to delete were referred to by him as "purely sensual."

Mayor Jewett went to view the picture after a complaint had been made to him by members of the Indianapolis Church Federation.

"Certain situations in the picture were overemphasized," said Mr. Jewett. "With those eliminated the extreme sensuousness of the picture is taken away. From a historic and histrionic viewpoint the picture is a wonderful production, and for lovers of ancient history it portrays a most realistic character of Cleopatra. The parts eliminated were features that I felt were over emphasized."

"Mr. McCormick was very courteous," said Mayor Jewett, "and appeared to be only too glad to co-operate with me in censoring the picture."

January Business at Crumps Good.

Columbus, Ind.—In spite of the fact that below zero weather prevailed in Columbus during the greater part of January the tax paid by Crumps theater for the month was $272.85, with means that 27,285 people attended the photoplay house during that month. The tax paid for November was $242, and for December, usually one of the best months in the year, the tax only amounted to $187.81. The total for the three months is $702.98.

Manager C. E. Rogers believes the increase in attendance was due to the fact that he had raised the quality of the pictures without raising the price of admission.

Some picture of unusual importance have been booked for the near future, and they will be shown in Columbus at the regular rate. Among those coming soon are Theda Bara in "Cleopatra," Annette Kellerman in "A Daughter of the Gods," and William Farnum in "When a Man Sees Red."

Gives Theater Free for Mass Meeting.

Bloomington, Ind.—The free use of the Harris-Grand theater in this city was given by Robert Harris, manager, Allen Railboat, federal fuel administrator for Monroe county, for the big mass meeting Saturday. It has been Mr. Harris's policy for the last several months to give his theater free for all patriotic meetings, and by doing so he has made many friends.

Pick-Ups from Indiana.

Fort Wayne.—The Grand Opera House here was sold last week by Jesse First, of Grover Hill, O., to Charles Westrick, of Roanoke, Ind.

Elkhart.—Friends of William Ormsby, formerly manager of the Orpheum theater here and the Jefferson theater at Goshen, have received letters from him stating that he is not acting in motion pictures in Minneapolis, Minn.

Indianapolis.—A new Fotoplayer has just been installed in the Mecca theater, Massachusetts avenue and Noble street.

Kleine Office Again Exhibiting on Percentage Basis in Kansas City—Goldwyn Prepares a Hospitable Welcome—Changes and Other Notes.

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The Kansas City Kleine office has resumed the role of exhibitor again after several weeks' absence from its house, the Garden theater here. Several weeks ago "I, Mary MacLane" ran for three days, when the picture was "pulled off" by the local censor office. The week was finished with "Uneasy Money." Beginning the week of February 17, this theater put on the following pictures for a week each, on a percentage basis, between the owner of the lease on the theater and the exchange: "Quo Vadis," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Brown of Harvard."

Mother of C. S. Edwards, Jr., Dies.

Kansas City.—C. S. Edwards, Jr., manager of the Kansas City Pathe office, recently suffered the death of his mother. Mrs. Edwards, besides being the mother of one of the oldest film office managers in point of service in Kansas City, is also the wife of one of the oldest film men in Kansas City. Many people from film offices in Kansas City attended the funeral.

Leo Levy Will Travel Missouri.

Kansas City.—Leo Levy, formerly a salesman for the Universal at St. Louis, Missouri, has been put on the Missouri territory of the company. He replaces Edward Walsh, who resigned recently.

W. E. Brennan Enlists in Navy.

Kansas City.—W. E. Brennan, salesman for the Mutual out of Kansas City, has enlisted in the navy. He left for Richmond, Indiana, February 15.

Goldwyn Invites Exhibitors.

Kansas City.—The Kansas City Goldwyn office, Manager Richard Robertson, announces that for 15 days, beginning March 1, that office wlil be "at home" for the exhibitors in this territory, and each exhibitor has received a personal invitation to come to Kansas City to be the guest of Goldwyn during that period. The office of the exchange will be decorated for the occasion, refreshments will be served, and it is possible that an orchestra will be engaged for the showing of the pictures.

Mrs. Roth Leaves Jewel Office.

Kansas City.—Mrs. Jack Roth, assistant to Manager Milton Feld of the Kansas City Jewel office, has resigned her position with that company. Her husband is manager of Frank Newman's Regent theater here.

New Theaters and Changes in Middle West.

Hiawatha, Kan.—E. A. VanBoran, proprietor of the Victoria theater, has purchased the Sixth Street theater from Roy Sweetland. Mr. VanBoran will conduct both show houses.

Colony, Kan.—Preston Bowen recently bought Jud Jones' interest in their picture show and will now have complete charge of the business.

Wichita, Kan.—The name of the Colonial theater, which has recently changed hands, has been changed to the new Regent. The place has been entirely renovated and remodeled.

Little Rock, Ark.—The Southern Trust Company has received an inquiry from Chicago parties wanting to lease for a term of years a theater building to be erected on a suitable site. They want the building to seat not less than 2,000 and to be modern and fireproof in every way.

Little Rock, Ark.—The Liberty theater on Fourteenth street will be formally opened to the public in the near future.

Amarillo, Tex.—J. Ray and C. B. Johnson have bought the Grand theater from C. T. Oliver.

St. James, Mo.—The picture show here will be reopened immediately.

Eufaula, Okla.—John Wilson, who has had the management of the Princess theater, has left for Okemah, where he owns a show. C. O. White is now manager of the Princess.

Snyder, Okla.—The Gem theater is under the new management of J. X. C. Plow, who bought it from C. H. Roberts.

Henryetta, Okla.—M. G. Reynolds, proprietor of the Yale theater of this city, has closed a deal for the Majestic in Dewar.

Norman, Okla.—Messrs. Robert Seawell and Bert Lawton have taken charge of the Liberty theater, having leased it from William Ward.

Dakota Theater Notes.

JAMESTOWN, N. D.—Sunday pictures are not approved in Jamestown, even though they are United States war pictures, and shown for the benefit of the Red Cross. Manager Leen offered the use of the Ruby theater and orchestra to the state Council of Defense, but protests were made and the show was called off.

Grand Forks, N. D.—Patriotic war pictures under the auspices of the state Council of Defense at the Grand theater on Sundays, have met with such approval that the organization has made arrangements for Thursday shows, and during February these performances have been given at the Royal theater and in March they will be at the Fotoplay theater. The four o'clock shows on Thursdays will be free to school children of the city.

Minot, N. D.—Wider use of war pictures in the moving picture theaters of North Dakota, was urged at a meeting of the Town Criers' club, by F. O. Hellstrom, of Bismarck. He declared that this plan will inform the people what the government is doing for its soldiers.

Aberdeen, S. D.—The McCarthy theater company of Aberdeen, has been incorporated with capital stock of $100,000, to operate moving picture shows here and at Watertown. The incorporators are J. J. McCarthy, E. T. McCarthy and W. T. McCarthy.

Fargo, N. D.—The Liberty theater, formerly Savoy, which underwent a course of re-modeling beginning the middle of December, has re-opened with W. C. Clavier, as manager. The new house will be easily located by a seven foot Statue of Liberty, with flaming torch, and the word Liberty in electric lights. Matinee admission will be five and ten cents, and evening prices will be ten and fifteen cents.

Lemmon, S. D.—Ray Scott has purchased the interest of A. N. Clark, in the Star theater.

Canton, S. D.—Proprietor Thorson, of the Empress theater has engaged Reynders & Crapp for the management of that house.

La Moure, N. D.—E. W. Ellison has sold his interest in the Rex theater to B. W. Heed, who is now sole owner.

Among Nebraska Exhibitors.

McCook, Neb.—C. W. Martin has sold his interest in the Strand theater.

Lincoln, Neb.—Manager Cinberg has made a reduction in his admission prices. The night patrons of the Magnet theater hereafter will pay ten cents, and the matinee-goers will be charged only five cents.

West Point, Neb.—The Ideal theater has been sold to Harry Plattner.

New Orleans Mecca Theater Burns and Is Rebuilding—Lafayette Theater Brightens with Films—Two New Exchanges—Other Notes.

By N. E. Thatcher, 3801 Canal Street, New Orleans, La.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Fire of unknown origin recently destroyed the Mecca theater, in one of the exclusive residence districts in the city, and recently opened under the management of Frank R. Heiderich, Jr., who, for years, has been connected with the Lyceum theater in St. Charles street. After having been thoroughly remodeled to the extent of making the theater, which was the old Tracedora, a new one, the Mecca had been running only about six weeks. In that time a remarkably fine business had been secured, and the people of the neighborhood regarded the burning of the structure as a personal calamity. Manager Heiderich carried $2,000 insurance, but this is sufficient to cover but a small portion of his loss. The day after the fire Mr. Heiderich had contractors on the ground and arrangements were at once made for the building of a much handsomer and more commodious theater.

K. A. Bugbee Opens Independent Exchange.

New Orleans, La.—Karl A. Bugbee, former manager of the Southern Metro exchange, has opened an independent office at 342 Baronne street, and his quarters are fitted up in sumptuous style. He already has built up a large business on the Billy West comedies and he is preparing to handle some of the best independent feature releases. In view of the very pronounced disposition of the exhibitors to turn to independent features, Manager Bugbee has every confidence that he will build up a lucrative business.

New Life for Lafayette Theater.

New Orleans, La.—The Lafayette, one of the most pretentious and well-equipped theaters in the city, but which, on account of the shift in the amusement center, has had a precarious existence during the past several months, has been taken over by Messrs. Perrin and Davis, and it is to be operated as a popular motion picture theater. About a year ago the Saenger Amusement Company leased the theater for use, pending the opening of the magnificent new Strand. Recently the house has been dark, until a few weeks ago "Maciste" was shown for a week with reasonable success. Mr. Perrin, a prosperous real estate operator, is convinced that the theater can be made to pay, and Mr. Davis is a manager of wide experience, having made a pronounced success of the Magic theater, one of the largest suburban houses in the city. Arrangements are now being made for regular service.

Select Office Opens on Poydras Street.

New Orleans, La.—The Select Pictures Corporation has opened an exchange here in charge of J. D. Taylor. Business of the company for this section will hereafter be transacted at 716 Poydras street. It had been announced that the Select service was to have a place in the regular program of the new Liberty theater, but Manager Boehringer became impatient at delays and decided to use other releases.

A. J. Xydias Adds Another Link.

Meridian, Miss.—A. J. Xydias, one of the most successful of the Mississippi exhibitors, having built up large patronages for the Lomo and the Gem theaters at Hattiesburg, Miss., was a visitor in New Orleans two weeks ago to make preliminary arrangements for the opening of a new theater at Meridian, Miss, to be the second link in a chain of houses which he contemplates establishing in the larger cities of the state. At present there is but one motion picture theater in operation in Meridian, and Manager Xydias believes there is a very profitable field waiting an experienced showman in that city. The population of Meridian is about 20,000 and, making allowance for the colored population, it would appear to be a very good field for at least two good motion picture houses.

"Nation" Film at Popular Prices.

New Orleans, La.—Josiah Pearce and Sons have arranged for the first showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at popular prices in New Orleans, and the big production began an indefinite showing at the Tudor theater on February 24. An extensive preliminary advertising campaign was put on, and the resulting business was very apparent.

St. Louis News Letter

By Mary Moore, 6035 Kingsbury Block, St. Louis, Mo.

Manager Ansell Is Trying Super-Features at Five Cents.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—What exhibitors have claimed to be the "impossible" is being attempted by Manager Ansell of the Variety theater, in the downtown district. He has reconstructed his theater and will show "super-features" at the flat rate of five cents. As a matter of fact the "five-cent house" has almost disappeared in St. Louis, and Ansell's venture is being watched with interest. He has contracted for some costly pictures with some of the larger film offices here.

William Sievers Will Distribute First National Films.

St. Louis.—William Sievers has resigned as secretary-treasurer of the New Grand Central Theater Company to become active manager of the Grand Central Film Company, resident agency of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. William R. Karstetter has been appointed to succeed Sievers in the New Grand Central Theater Co.

Joseph Walsh Becomes Exhibitor.

St. Louis.—Joseph Walsh, familiarly known as "Joe," who, for years was treasurer of the Standard theater in St. Louis and probably one of the best known theater men in this city, has taken over the Chippewa, Broadway and Chippewa, as his first venture into the moving picture field.

St. Louis Business Jottings.

St. Louis.—E. L. Hammerstein has succeeded J. L. Lurain as traveling representative of the Standard Film Corporation here. Hammerstein was formerly a branch manager at Cairo, Ill.

Every film office in St. Louis donated a feature picture during the week for the benefit of the St. Louis Maternity Hospital benefit, which is booked to continue from March 8 to March 17. Manager Weil of the World office engineered the soliciting of the films.

I. N. Shurtleff, formerly district manager for the Pathe, and now general manager for the Hodkinson Enterprises, is in St. Louis in the interest of Paralta features. M. J. Cummings, representing the New York office of the General Film, is also here on Paralta business, as a special representative.

Iowa News Letter

By J. L. Shipley, 615 Locust Street, Des Moines, Ia.

Changes in A. H. Blank Sales Forces.

DES MOINES, IA.—Several changes in the sales force of the A. H. Blank Enterprises are announced. J. C. Collins, who handled "The Melting Pot" and Clara Kimball Young service for more than two years, returns to Iowa as a salesman. Mr. Collins has been with General and Kleine in Indianapolis for the past year. He is well known in Iowa. Harry Weinberg, who has been acting as representative in Nebraska, has been given western Iowa territory in addition. Fred Martin has returned to Kansas in the Blank interests.

Friedman & Cohan Take Another Theater.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—Friedman & Cohan, who operate the Hippodrome theater at Keokuk, announce the purchase of the Nicholas theater at Council Bluffs. H. H. Friedman was in Des Moines last week arranging for service for both houses. Mr. Friedman for the present will look after the Council Bluffs house while Mr. Cohan will hold the reins at Keokuk. Nothing but high-class features are shown at either theater.

Manager Jones's Novel Ideas.

Marshalltown, Ia.—J. Jolly Jones, manager of the Strand theater, Marshalltown, was in Des Moines arranging for service and talking things over with owner A. H. Blank. Mr. Jones recently held an Old Soldiers' Night at the Strand, a feature of the evening being a fiddlers' contest between several of the veterans. He also held a red-headed women's matinee during his run of "Empty Pockets," and states that the titian-haired femininity in Marshalltown accepted his invitation.

Strand at Cedar Rapids Making Money.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Manager A. G. Stolte of the Strand, Cedar Rapids, visited Des Moines exchanges during the past week. Mr. Stolte contemplates the redecoration of his theater in the early spring. He has just completed his first year as manager of the Strand and has turned it into one of the biggest moneymakers in the middle West through his wisdom in the selection of his programs, attention to detail and his live-wire advertising.

"Doc" Jones Assisting at the Royal.

Ds Moines, Ia.—"Doc" Jones, formerly operator at Ruben and Finklestein's New Grand, Minneapolis, and prior to that connected with the Ringling shows for several seasons, is acting as assistant manager to George Venteicher of the Royal theater, Carroll. "Doc," true to his circus training, bills the country round Carroll like a white-top attraction for the big features and is invaluable to Mr. Venticher.

Abe Frankle Will Manage Rialto.

Des Moines, Ia.—Abe Frankle, general manager of the Casino, Majestic and new Rialto at Des Moines, announces that Eller Metzger, present manager of the Casino, will be house manager of the new Rialto when it opens this spring. This promotion is well merited by Mr. Metzger.

Pick Up Notes of Special Interest.

Des Moines.—Charles Yeretsky, who is interested in several Iowa motion picture theaters, has been spending a few weeks in New York taking in the sights of Broadway and giving the Eastern studios the once over.

Des Moines.—Manager S. A. Baker of the Kansas City Hoffman Foursquare office, was a recent Des Moines visitor. Mr. Baker reports business booming with his concern.

Clinton, Ia.—Norman Samish, manager of the A-Muse-U and Family theaters at Clinton, was a Des Moines visitor last week, shopping at the local exchanges.

Des Moines.—Abe Frankle, of the Casino, gave, in conjunction with the Des Moines Register and Tribune, a special Old Soldiers' morning matinee during the run of "The Crisis" at that theater. Nearly two hundred veterans assembled at G. A. R. headquarters and marched to the tune of fife and drum to the theater.

Omaha, Neb.—Charlie Manfrey, manager of the Omaha Fox office, stopped in Des Moines two days on a swing around the Iowa territory. He was accompanied by Mr. Walsh, his Iowa representative.

Des Moines.—The A. H. Blank Enterprises held a trade showing of their new productions, "One Law for Both" and "Sins of Ambition," and the result was immediate bookings in several of the larger cities of these two productions. Manager Van Dyke of the Royal will show both subjects first-run in Des Moines.

Cedar Rapids.—Manager Stanley Mayer, of the Yale Photoplay, held trade showings of "Who Is Your Neighbor?" in Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, Clinton and Davenport last week and several nice contracts resulted.

Des Moines.—Joe Disalvo, proprietor of the U. and I. theater, in the heart of the Italian district in south Des Moines, has inaugurated the policy of big features three days a week and states that, even with increased admission prices, the new plan is working out to his entire satisfaction. The house formerly showed five reels at five cents admission.

Des Moines.—Serials continue to boom in Iowa. Manager Lederman of Laemmle states that "The Bull's Eye" is booking like wild-fire, and Manager Sheridan of Pathe is reaping a harvest with "The Hidden Hand."

North Carolina News Letter

By D. M. Bain, Wilmington, N. C.

Exhibitors in Charlotte Are Not Fortunate.

CHARLOTTE, NORTH CAROLINA—All motion picture theaters in the city are now "enjoying" their third consecutive week of rest, the original closing order promulgated two weeks ago on account of the spinal meningitis epidemic, having been extended for an additional seven days. Reports are to the effect that several cass still exist in the city, and managers are wondering whether or not the ban will be lifted at the expiration of the third week. The closing of the theaters is working a great hardship not only upon the managers but upon the Charlotte exchanges, who are losing their most valuable first run houses on its account. Greenville, Spartanburg and Columbia, South Carolina, it is reported, have been reopened at the expiration of the first two-week period, but Union, South Carolina, is the latest place to be closed.

Fuel Mondays Have Ceased.

Wilmington, N. C.—Monday crowds in North Carolina theaters were greatly diminished last week, upon the annulment of Fuel Administrator Garfield's famous closing order in the South, and managers were uncertain whether they were pleased or displeased at the latest turn of affairs. From everywhere came reports of capacity business in the theaters on the three Mondays that the industrial life of the east was at a standstill, more than double ordinary business being the rule everywhere. Reports received from principal theaters of the state this week are to the effect that both Monday's and Tuesday's business did not equal the Monday receipts of the three previous weeks.

Screens Good Publicity for Church.

Wilmington, N. C.—The use of the motion picture theater screens to advertise the regular Sunday services of the First Baptist Church here has been taken advantage of by Rev. John Jeter Hurt, the pastor, who has executed a regular form contract for the use of all the motion picture theaters to obtain publicity for his church, the largest in the city.

Drouth Conditions Still Hold in Texas

There Have Been 181 Amusement Places Closed in Four Months—Two More Theaters Succumb—Hopeful Signs Are Not Wanting.

By Douglas Hawley, The Times-Herald, Dallas, Tex.

DALLAS, TEX.—Drouth in the drouth section of Texas has resulted in the closing of at least two more theaters during the week ending February 16, but there's a brighter side to the picture. During that same week a new theater opened at Corsicana, and a magnificent pipe organ was dedicated in a magnificent theater at El Paso.

M. L. Levine's $50,000 Ideal theater is the new Corsicana house. The new organ was dedicated in the Alhambra theater, El Paso, to the accompaniment of Alice Brady in the feature film, "Jane Eyre." The Ideal at Corsicana has a hundred-foot lobby, into which attractive shops open. It has a thousand seats and a roof garden as well. The latter is fitted for summer showing of films, and there is a dancing floor. The big new organ can be operated either from the roof garden or the theater proper. Mr. Levine is running pictures continuously, and the house, with its ample stage, is equipped for theatrical attractions as well.

How Drouth Has Affected Theaters.

Theaters at Cleveland and Ratcliffe, Tex., were closed during the week, because of the continued drouth, but a theater at Slayton, also in the drouth country, was reopened for shows at least two days a week. Within the last four months, according to figures compiled by a local branch manager, the drouth has resulted in the closing of 181 places. Some of these, however, have since reopened on the "two-a-week plan" and are managing to at least pay expenses until drouth relief comes.

Some rains have fallen during the past week, and in the sections where they are needed. The border country has had some excellent showers, and the hope is that the drouth will ere long be a memory only. Farmers are busy in the more favored sections of the state with spring plowing actively in process, and indications are for a record-breaking planting—which means potential prosperity.

Will Open Exhibitors' Service Assn. Offices.

Dallas.—E. T. Peter, well known film man who has recently been exploiting "Redemption" in southwestern territory, is inaugurating the Exhibitors' Service Association, with headquarters at Dallas. Offices will be opened at once, and a statement of plans is to be made later, as details of organization are completed.

Sol Harris Recuperating at Hot Springs.

Little Rock, Ark.—Sol Harris, manager Gem Amusement Company, is at Hot Springs for recuperation. Every member of Mr. Harris' family has had some touch of illness during the last winter, he being the last one to fall by the wayside. "I'm going to stay at the Springs till I get 'right'," was the way he put it.

Manager W. P. Florence with the Colors.

Stamps, Ark.—W. P. Florence, manager Brown theater, Stamps, Ark., has joined the army. His brother is operating the theater.

Changes in Vitagraph Staff.

Dallas.—F. E. Garner, formerly Dallas manager for the General, has joined the Vitagraph sales force with Arkansas and Oklahoma territory. J. P. Leuning, formerly with Vitagraph at New Orleans, has come to southwest Texas territory, headquarters at San Antonio.

Important Jottings from Here and There

Galveston, Tex.—M. Frankel has opened the Crystal vaudeville theater here with musical comedy and pictures.

Marshall, Tex.—D. W. Powell is now sole owner of the Grand theater here, having purchased the interest formerly owned by R. Moore, who has entered the automobile business.

Stephenville, Tex.—The Majestic theater here is still closed on account of the prevalence of smallpox. Manager C. B. Caver says he's somewhat like Micawber, only he knows exactly what he wants to turn up, and that's old s. p. to turn its toes up to the spring sunshine and quit operations.

Farmersville, Tex.—When he gets the call for service, D. C. Carnes, manager Princess theater, will be ready as a finished wireless operator. Mr. Carnes has recently returned from Detroit, where he took a full wireless course, in the effort to prove more valuable to Uncle Sam when the time came.

Austin, Tex.—A charter has been granted the Specialty Film Company, Dallas; capital stock, $5,000; incorporators: W. G. Underwood and L. G. Baxley, Dallas, and Wm. Politzer, San Antonio. The gentlemen named have already incorporated the Matinee Film Company. The new organization is for the purpose of handling features not coming under the plans of the original corporation.

La Mesa, Tex.—Jimmie Garrett of the Majestic theater may be "somewhere" en route to France by this time. James has answered the call and is on his way. Partner Rolls is operating the Majestic full time.

Beaumont, Tex.—The Frohman production, "God's Man," featuring H. B. Warner, "made good" from every standpoint, at the Tivoli theater here, according to Manager J. C. Clemons. "It's one of the best productions I've seen," is Mr. Clemons' verdict.

MORE KANSAS CITY NOTES.

By Kansas City News Service.

Hawkeye, Ia.—Messrs. Serg & Burkhart have reopened the Cozy theater with motion pictures.

Thompson, Ia.—Arthur M. Larson, Elmer Larson and Albert Erickson have sold the Princess theater to I. O. Florence and H. Bartlett.

Newton, Ia.—J. C. Starnes has bought the Lyric theater from Larsch & Heki.

Peshtigo, Wis.—Ben Anderson has leased the Star theater and will show motion pictures.

Canton, S. D.—Messrs. Reynders and Crapp have been secured as the new managers of the Empress theater by Mr. Thorson, the owner.

Fargo, N. D.—The Savoy theater is to be reopened under the name of the Liberty theater.

Rochester, Minn.—Claude McQuillen will take over the Lawler theater and present moving pictures.

Kansas City.—The General Film Company announces that the second J. Warren Kerrigan picture, "The Turn of a Card," was received by the local office on February 12.

Aaron Jones, of the firm of Jones, Linik, & Schaefer, Chicago exhibitors, and Nathan Ascher, of Ascher Brothers, Chicago, both of whom are district managers for Goldwyn, visited at the Kansas City Goldwyn office, February 11.

Hunter Bennett, general representative of the United States Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, was a visitor at the local office of the company this week, conferring with B. S. Lucas, Kansas City manager.

Ackerman & Harris Take Oakland Theater

The Macdonough Theater Added to the Hippodrome Circuit—House Has Been Leased for a Long Term and Will Be Rebuilt.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Ackerman & Harris, who control the Hippodrome circuit of theaters, which includes more than twenty combination vaudeville and moving picture houses on the Pacific Coast, and which is growing at a rapid rate, have secured a lease on the Macdonough theater, the oldest and one of the largest playhouses in the suburban city of Oakland. The lease is for a long term of years and the agreement provides that the building shall be modernized, the changes to be virtually the rebuilding of the structure.

The entrance to the theater will be changed from Fourteenth street to Broadway, inclines will take the place of stairways, and there will be a large lobby, restrooms and all modern conveniences. The improvements will cost in the neighborhood of $200,000 and work on these will be commenced at an early date. Sam Harris, general manager of the circuit, states that when the work is completed Oakland will be given exactly the same shows that are offered at the San Francisco Hippodrome. The deal does not concern the present house at Oakland called the Hippodrome, which is conducted by other parties. When the remodeled theater is reopened it will be known as the Palace theater.

Martin Johnson Back from South Seas.

San Francisco—Martin Johnson, and his intrepid wife, reached port a short time ago on the steamer Moana from the South Sea Islands, where they spent a year securing moving pictures of cannibals and tribes visited by but few people. On the recent trip he discovered a tribe of pigmies and visited islands where he was without protection. The pictures will be taken to New York to be shown to scientists.

"Cleopatra" to Run Three Weeks.

San Francisco—The first week of the engagement of "Cleopatra" at the Cort theater has been so successful that it has been decided to show this production for three weeks instead of two, as originally planned. This is the first time in many months that a moving picture has been shown in a theater usually given over to stage attractions.

New Manager for Alhambra.

San Francisco—Robert Drady, who has had charge of the Casino theater since its opening, has been made manager of the Alhambra theater, succeeding Al Nathan, who will return to Los Angeles. Mr. Drady was born and raised here.

House Organ Being Published.

San Francisco—Manager Lester J. Fountain, of the Casino theater, has commenced the publication of the Casino Weekly. The management in the opening announcement promises to entertain suggestions made by its patrons as to how the shows can be improved and what kinds of moving pictures are most liked.

Triangle Head Visits San Francisco.

San Francisco—S. A. Lynch, head of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, who is on the Coast, was a recent visitor here, spending several days conferring with local manager Ben F. Simpson.

San Francisco Notes.

Wallace Reid and Donald Crisp were recent visitors, coming here to spend a few days.

The Ideal Film exchange has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000 by E. W. Fowler, Joseph Cella and M. A. Nathan.

The Park theater, formerly known as the Halcyon, has been sold to James de H. Curtis, of Sydney, Australia.

Morris Fleckles, of the New York office of the Universal, is here on a tour of the Western exchanges.

"The Planter" has been booked for a full week's run at the Kinema theater, Oakland, which is an unusually long time for a moving picture to be shown there.

Among the visitors of the week have been J. Van Sant, Jr., Eureka; I. D. Stanford, of the Lyric theater, Chico; Frank Besely, of Brown's Opera House, Salinas; N. L. Watton, of Sacramento and Stockton; Arthur Fukuda, of the Universal theater, Hanford; Ed Stark, of the Opal theater, Hollister; John Daly, Chico, and J. J. Wood, of Redding.

Walter Preddey has disposed of a mazda lamp outfit to Alfred Smith, of the Rex theater, Lakeview, Ore.

The New York theater at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets has been reopened by Matthews & McDowell and considerable new equipment has been installed.

E. C. Gainsborg, of the local Foursquare office, has been called to New York, owing to the serious illness of his mother.

The Cory theater on Union street has been sold to Sam Dusenberry by R. A. Cory.

Word has been received from France telling of the safe arrival there of Byington Ford, of the Animated Cartoon Film Corporation. It was feared for a time that he might have been on the ill-fated Tuscania.

The Casino theater has hung a service flag in the lobby containing nine stars.

Northern California Briefs.

Hanford, Cal.—The T. & D. theater is now being conducted under the management of Claude L. Langley, who will soon open a new house at Taft.

Watsonville, Cal.—J. A. Miller is now in charge of the T. & D. theater, A. M. Miller having been transferred to San Jose.

Healdsburg, Cal.—Francis Hartman has sold the M. & M. theater to H. G. Tucker.

Winters, Cal.—E. W. McIntyre has purchased the Winters theater from W. A. Rattenbury.

Orland, Cal.—W. R. Claman has taken over the theater at Anderson and is planning to conduct one during the summer at Cottonwood, Cal.

Oakland, Cal.—The Clement theater on San Pablo avenue has been taken over by L. Wilson.

Oakland, Cal.—The Home theater at Thirteenth avenue and East Fourteenth street, conducted by P. H. Doll, has been closed and the equipment taken out.

Twin City Film Trade News of the Week

Changes Among the Distributing Offices of Minneapolis—Pithy Items About the Doings of the Trade—Among Exhibitors and Theaters.

By John L. Johnston, 719 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—H. J. Robert has been appointed Pathe branch manager here by A. S. Abeles, special representative from New York. Mr. Roberts, formerly sales manager for Fox and an exhibitor in Washington State previously, comes to Minneapolis seemingly with all the qualifications, and he should have no difficulty in making a whooping success of the local branch office. Mr. Abeles will return to New York within a week.

J. A. Kent Gets Appointment from Supreme.

Minneapolis.—J. A. Kent has been appointed manager of a Milwaukee branch office of the Supreme Feature Film, Minneapolis. Hart, Fairbanks, Talmadge and Keenan releases have been secured for distribution throughout Wisconsin, according to Mr. Kent.

Ralph Bradford Promoted.

Minneapolis.—Ralph Bradford, who opened the local Goldwyn exchange and has held down the managerial berth very efficiently since, is due to go to Chicago Saturday next to assume the management of the Triangle exchange there. According to the film fathers Mr. Bradford is to be succeeded by none other than Richard C. Fox, former Artcraft manager and Vitagraph, Elliott-Sherman and Paramount salesman here. Mr. Fox will return to Minneapolis after several months at the Chicago Artcraft exchange. Another change in the Goldwyn roster is to take place shortly. Daniel O. Hoye, auditor, is contemplating a trip to California, where he will enter a new field. H. S. Lavner, publicity representative from New York, has spent a week at the local exchange.

Good Proof of Hart Popularity.

Minneapolis.—The W. H. Productions, marketing its two-reel Hart pictures through the local Standard exchange, has begun vigorous warfare on a certain Minneapolis exchange which recently announced that it would distribute Hart two-reelers said to be identical to the W. H. pictures. The W. H. people have offered to give $1,000 to any charitable organization providing "the certain exchange" can prove that its Hart two-reelers are "the original."

Pithy Items About Filmdom.

Minneapolis.—Manager Benjamin Judell of the Benj. Judell, Inc., exchange, became the proud parent of a boy on Sunday, February 17, according to reports. Ben states that the baby is as husky as Bill Russell and that every effort will be made to keep the youthful Judell from entering the film business.

Dan Michalove, former Minneapolis Triangle manager and more recently manager for the three-cornered program's Chicago office, has been appointed a special representative for his firm and is spending several days in Minneapolis previous to going to New York, his future headquarters.

E. R. Pearson, manager of the Universal Film Service, is in Minneapolis assisting Branch Manager H. J. Fitzgerald in getting the First National exchange started off.

Winfield R. Sheahan, general manager for the Fox Film Corporation, accompanied by W. H. McKinney, of the Chicago office, spent two days with Manager Eddie A. Westcott of the local Fox exchange recently.

Manager Louis H. Coen of the Metro exchange staged a special showing of "The Legion of Death" at the Strand theater, Minneapolis, February 12.

A special showing of "The Light Within," Mme. Petrova's second First National Exhibitors' Circuit film, was staged at the New Garden theater, Minneapolis, February 18.

Earle C. Sly, camera and laboratory man for the Lochren Film Service, Minneapolis, will leave for Camp Dodge, Iowa, shortly, having been certified for National Army service. Mr. Sly hopes to work his way into the Government's cinematograph division.

Charles E. Bell of the Raths-Seavolt Film Mfg. Co., St. Paul, has been appointed Northwest representative for Mutual's new weekly news reel.

Earle Perkins, Fargo branch manager for the Supreme exchange, has returned to Minneapolis for a staff meeting. Mr. Perkins reports improved business conditions throughout Dakota.

What the Exhibitors Are Doing.

Minneapolis.—Benjamin Chapin's first cycle feature, "Son of Democracy," made a tremendous hit at the New Garrick theater, Minneapolis, the week beginning February 17.

Manager Claude McQuillan of the Lawler theate, Rochester, Minn., staged a special matinee on Tuesday, February 12, for the benefit of the local Red Cross. "The Wife He Bought" was the feature offered, and Edna Goodrich, Mutual star, a visitor at Rochester, appeared at the benefit in person. A. L. Kahler and James Kellar assisted Manager McQuillan with the arrangements.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors visiting Minneapolis exchanges recently were: Oliver Whaley, Elko, Bemidji, Minn.; John Gievert, Grand, Rochester, Minn.; C. J. Uptegraft, Princess, Sioux Falls, S. D.; Clara Albright, Princess, St. Cloud, Minn.; Mrs. H. B. Starkey, Opera House, Le Seuer, Minn.; L. J. Roesner, Colonial, Winona, Minn.; H. A. Rolbiecki, Strand, Winona, Minn.; E. J. Conboy, Opera House, Lisbon, N. D.; Thomas Furniss, Rex, Duluth, Minn.; Manager Abrahamson, Zelda, Duluth, Minn.; James Stimson, Ideal, South St. Paul, Minn.; C. J. Waterbury, Chippewa, Chippewa Falls, Wis.; Frank Nemec, St. Cloud, Minn.; W. J. Crosby, Dreamland, Willmar, Minn.; Fred Bolls, Majestic, Stillwater, Minn.; Anton Gilles, Grand, Breckenridge, Minn.; E. G. Anderson, Princess, Aberdeen, S. D., and W. J. Rezac, Lyric, Virginia, Minn.

Seattle News Letter

By J. S. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

Chain Telephone Calls Bring Crowd.

SEATTLE, WASH.—W. H. Smythe, manager of the Strand theater, has introduced a very effective way of assuring a special show of a good send-off. A day or two before opening a week's run of "Parentage," on February 9, he started a series of chain telephone calls, which resulted in a big crowd waiting for the doors to open on the morning of the initial performance, and the advertising that first crowd gave the show has helped to make the entire week's run a big success.

Splendid Preparation for Second Run Film.

Seattle.—The Colonial theater has been trying a form of presentation unusually elaborate for a second-run theater. "The Garden of Allah," a recently featured production, is especially well suited for elaborate presentation, and E. G. Berg, the manager, took advantage of the setting and atmosphere of the story to plan interesting touches that make the theater fit the atmosphere of the story. The lobby was decorated with pictures of the desert stretching all the way across the front, and palms added to the realism. The cashier and the ushers were dressed in the costume of Arabian girls. The house was permeated with Oriental incense, and a special musical program added to the general atmosphere of the lonely desert.

Seattle Metro Now Under Harry Lustig.

Seattle.—The Seattle Metro office is now under the direct management of Harry Lustig, special representative, who, from now on, will make this his western headquarters.

Two New Fox Roadmen Appointed.

Seattle.—Two new road men have been engaged for the northwest territory by A. W. Eden, Fox manager. These are K. L. Burk and Karl W. Heitler, and will offer Standard pictures on the blanket form contract. This manner of booking pictures is proving very popular.

De Luxe Opens Exchange in Portland, Ore.

Rose City Seen as Vantage Point in Film Distribution—A Full-Fledged Exchange Will Be at Service of Local Theaters.

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Bldg., Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, OREGON.—The De Luxe Feature Film Company, the biggest state rights concern in the Pacific Northwest, has finally seen the light and will establish an exchange in Portland. The office will be at the location of the old Pathe exchange at Ninth and Burnside and the room is being fitted up in fine shape.

Louis Rosenberg will have chargee of the new office with the title of manager. He will have a full force of assistants, including a booker, shipper, poster man and a corps of stenographers.

The De Luxe Company is handling the Hart and Fairbanks reissues, the Hart pictures distributed through the W. H. Productions, and the reissues of the Keenans and Talmadges, also "The Whip," "The Garden of Allah" and the coming state righter, "Carmen of the Klondike."

Mike Rosenberg is the general manager of the De Luxe Company. He was in Portland for a few days arranging the lease of the new quarters and expressed himself as very well satisfied with the business conditions and possibilities here. The De Luxe Company was located in Portland a year or so ago, moving to Seattle when the scramble for Seattle headquarters took place.

Harry Hunter Gets Married.

Portland—It leaked out the other day that Harry Hunter, the genial road man for Paramount, had entered the benedict class. His wife is the former Miss Mabel Vaughan, star of "The Fashion Shop," a New York musical revue, and before going on the stage, a model in Lady Duff Gordon's establishment. Mrs. Hunter is an Oregon girl and her proud husband maintains that she is the prettiest girl that ever struck Portland.

The Strand Gets the Money.

Portland—"Wave after wave and over the top!" is the way assistant manager Lacey of the Strand expresses the business at this popular showhouse of late. This photoville house has acquired a lot of "pep," and is a big factor in the Portland show business.

Reissues Are Successful.

Portland—E. J. Myrick, of the Liberty and Columbia theaters, reports that the Hart reissues which have been running at the Columbia are doing exceptionally well. The first of these, "The Bargain," was a record breaker for Hart attractions, which are very popular in Portland.

M. G. Winstock with "Parentage."

Portland—"Parentage," the state rights picture which played at the Majestic during the week of February 15, was brought to Portland under the direction of Melvin G. Winstock, former theater manager here, who is now connected with the Schlaifer interests in Seattle. The picture was exploited by a special advertising campaign planned by Chas. E. Couche, Majestic publicity expert.

Another Fifteen-Cent Recruit.

Portland—The Crystal theater, Mrs. Hudson manager, is the latest suburban house to go to fifteen cents, part of the time anyway. Most of the representative suburban theaters have now gone to fifteen cents for several nights a week if not for every night and there seems no reason why fifteen cents should not be the prevalent price soon.

With Oregon Road Men.

Portland—Ed. I. Hudson, traveller for Goldwyn, was a recent caller and reported a good trip into the Eastern territory.

Verne Schubach, with Universal, who usually makes the Eastern territory, has been assigned to cover Southern Oregon. Sol Baum, manager for Bluebirds, has gone to Seattle to some missionary work in that vicinity.

Joe Baum, salesman for Universal, has taken charge of the big poster department of the Portland office for the purpose of systematizing it.

Cheyenne Trade News Letter

By John C. Fleming, Box 273, Cheyenne, Wyo., with the Wyoming Tribune.

Rushing New Theater.

CHEYENNE, WYO.—Work is being rushed on the new Moore and Greaves theater, which will be the largest picture play and vaudeville house in Wyoming. Immediately upon the decision of the court, which ousted them from possession of the Atlas theatre here, Messrs. Moore and Greaves issued orders to the contractor to rush the new building to completion as rapidly as possible. It is now anticipated that the new house will open about April first or fifteenth. Mild weather in Cheyenne has made it possible for this theater to be built during the winter months.

Green River Theater Sold.

Green River, Wyo.—The Rex theater here has been sold by Mr. and Mrs. Chapman to Charles G. Johnson and W. E. Brown. The Rex will run pictures under the new management.

Sidney Theater Sold.

Sidney, Neb.—Mr. Charles McCreery has disposed of the U. S. A. theater to O. W. Brewer, the deal having been made last week. Mr. McCreery visited Cheyenne and other Wyoming points in search of a future location.

Another Theater for Glenrock.

Glenrock, Wyo.—Work has begun on the excavation for the second theater in Glenrock. Glenrock has one of the largest and wealthiest communities in Wyoming surrounding it and the success of this second theater, which will be running in another month, is a foregone conclusion. Glenrock is situated in the heart of the Big Muddy Oil field, the second largest in the state.

Returns to California.

Cheyenne, Wyo.—Carl Ray, principal owner of the Amuse theater, has returned to his home in Los Angeles. Mr. Ray arranged for the booking of many big pictures before he left Cheyenne. He expects to return to attend to business matters in May.

TO EXHIBITORS.

If you are doing something new and interesting at your theater let our correspondent know about it. It may help others and help you as well.

Helpfully yours,

Maryland Censors Ban "Song of Songs."

THE Parkway theater, 3-9 West North avenue, is one of the most select theaters in Baltimore. One has but to visit it once to realize this fact. And Bernard Depkin, Jr., the supervising manager of the Parkway Theater Company interests, is a most discriminating man when it comes to being particular about screening pictures for his clientele. All this we know from personal experience. Therefore it is stated because of the fact that Paramount's "Song of Songs," with Elsie Ferguson, has been banned from being shown in Maryland, according to the report, and for this reason Mr. Depkin was obliged to replace this feature, which was booked to be shown at the Parkway during the first three days of the week, beginning February 18, with another production of the same producing company.

Nat Glasser Returns from South.

Baltimore.—Nat Glasser, the popular representative of the Select Pictures, covering the Baltimore territory, returned last week from a trip through North Carolina and was very enthusiastic in his report of business conditions in that district.

Liberty Theater Opens at Camp Meade.

The Liberty theater, at Camp Meade, was opened Monday night, February 18, the attraction being "The Princess Pat." Mrs. Newton D. Baker, wife of the Secretary of War, sang with great feeling the stirring, patriotic song, "Uncle Sam." The words were flashed on the screen and the soldiers, numbering three thousand, joined in.

The Liberty theater has a seating capacity of about 2,600 with standing room for about 400. C. M. Barton is the manager, and it is understood that Sunday shows will be in vogue.

Children's Matinees at Schanze's.

Baltimore.—On Saturday, February 23, a new policy was inaugurated at Schanze's theater, Pennsylvania avenue, at North, by Dr. F. W. Schanze, the proprietor, in arranging for special morning matinees for children. On each Saturday morning at 10.30 a. m. a special program will be arranged. At the first performance Madge Evans, in "The Little Duchess," was the feature.

Baltimore Personal Notes.

Guy L. Wonders, manager of the Wilson theater, and vice-president of the American Exhibitors' Association, was on the committee which made a special Smileage book drive at the St. Valentine's dance at the Elk's hall on Thursday night, February 14.

Lou-Tellegen was lavishly entertained while in Baltimore during the week of February 25 at the Peabody Art Galleries, and later addressed the Vagabond Players.

Guy Brandt, who was one of the most popular film men in Baltimore and acted for some time as representative for the K-E-S-E, left civilian ranks some time ago to become a member of Uncle Sam's fighting forces at Camp Meade. He is now a corporal in his company.

Reserve Shows for Pennsylvania Theaters

Philadelphia Triangle Office Has Set Aside Emergency Shows—Will Be at Certain Specified Theaters—Available for Any Manager.

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—W. J. Hagerty, manager of the local Triangle office, just returned from a trip through the territory and found express conditions deplorable. As a means of protection for the exhibitors Mr. Hagerty arranged a circuit of shows so exhibitors would not be disappointed in case the express companies failed to make deliveries on time. These emergency films have been left in the care of certain exhibitors so that any exhibitor in the circuit may, upon the non-arrival of his pictures, use them, it being immaterial whether he books with the Triangle or any other exchange. All the exhibitors visited up the state were extremely jubilant over the new order allowing them to reopen on Tuesdays, thereby assuring them of a much brighter future.

W. D. Neilds Will Run Two Scranton Theaters.

Scranton.—W. D. Neilds, formerly manager of the Victoria theater, in Baltimore, arrived here last week to take charge of the New Majestic and Mt. Carmel theaters. Both houses are showing pictures in conjunction with vaudeville.

Fox "Les Miserables" Goes Big.

Philadelphia.—General Manager F. W. Buhler, of the Central Market Street Amusement Company, is greatly elated over the tremendous success following the presentation of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," the Fox production, now entering its second week at the Victoria theater. Upon several occasions the attendance has been so great that hundreds failed to gain admission.

Will Show New War Films.

Philadelphia.—Motion pictures of the American troops in Europe, owned by and loaned for the occasion by Barclay H. Warburton, will be shown for the first time in Philadelphia at a patriotic entertainment to be held Wednesday, Feb. 20, at the Lu Lu temple, in aid of the Allies' forces.

Jack Delmar Will Supervise the Rivoli.

Philadelphia.—Jack Delmar has been appointed as supervising manager of the Rivoli theater by the Stanley Company.

A. S. Kirkpatrick a Pleased Visitor.

Philadelphia.—A. S. Kirkpatrick, sales manager of the Mutual home office, visited the local branch exchange and was greatly pleased with the reports on increased business in general. Jerome Safron and George Ross report that they have closed with the majority of the leading theaters throughout their Pennsylvania territory for the popular Mutual Screen Telegram.

Robert Vandergrift Found Dead.

Philadelphia.—Robert Vandergrift, a well known film salesman of this city, was found dead in his apartments on last Monday. The case is reported to be a mysterious affair, which is expected to be cleared up soon.

Brad. P. Jones Becomes Benedict.

Philadelphia.—Following the promotion of William Carter from treasurer to the manager of the Stanley theater, announcement is made of the marriage of Brad. P. Jones, his assistant, which took place on Sunday, Feb. 17. A romance which started last November between Mr. Jones and Miss Marie E. Cox, organist of the Great Northern theater, turned out happily for the bridegroom, who is now being congratulated by his friends.

"House of Hate" Announced.

Philadelphia.—Pathe announces that the serial "The House of Hate," is being eagerly sought after here, and especially so because of the fact of the reappearance of the favorite star, Pearl White, who will be supported by Antonio Moreno.

Lightless Nights Continue.

Philadelphia.—Lightless nights, six nights a week, are to continue indefinitely in this city, by order of the fuel committee, although the order for the Tuesday closing of the theaters has been rescinded.

Capital City News Letter

S. J. Mayer Becomes Pathe Manager.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A reorganiaztion of the executive force of the local Pathe office has just been completed. S. J. Mayer, who has for some time been serving as an assistant to D. F. O'Donnell, manager of the exchange, has succeeded Mr. O'Donnell in that position, while the Baltimore branch, formerly in charge of Frank J. Spurrier, will be under the management of a Mr. Ruckert, formerly with the Newark office of the Goldwyn corporation.

Mr. Mayer, who has been in Washington about five months as booker and assistant to Mr. O'Donnell, has been in the business about eight years, starting in with Pierce & Scheck, of Baltimore. When that concern was secured by the General Film Company, he came to Washington to work in the local branch, of which he soon became manager. After being connected, succesively, with the Mutual, the General again, the Universal, World and Vitagraph, he joined Pathe and came to the local office.

Other changes in the office include the promotion of Robert Folliard to the position of booker, and that of Joseph Kushner to assistant booker. H. A. Dixon, branch cashier, is succeeded by M. A. Zama, formerly in the Philadelphia office, and Frank Kinney, assistant cashier in New York, will become cashier of the Baltimore branch.

Getting Permits to Repair Theaters.

Washington, D. C.—At the building inspector's office it looks very much as though spring has actually arrived, for permits are being issued by that office to the theater men to do their usual spring cleaning and repairing. One of these permits goes to Tom Moore for the Garden theater, involving additional renovation to the extent of $200. Marcus Notes gets two permits, one to repair the Empress, the other to remodel the building at 318 Ninth Street, Northwest, for use as a theater. This new project involves an initial expenditure of $11,000. Plans for the new theater are being prepared by Frank G. Pierson. The contractor is D. E. Nicol.

Tom Moore Takes a Holiday.

Washington.—Tom Moore, owner of the Moore string of theaters in this city, with Mrs. Moore and a party of friends will spend a few weeks in Florida.

"REVELATION."

Nazimova in Seven-Part Metro Production Discloses Superb Art and Carries Appealing Story to Triumphant Finish.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ALL those who witnessed Nazimova in the screen version of "War Brides" are aware of the intensity of feeling at her command. It remained for "Revelation" to show the range and perfect control of her art. The seven-part photoplay adapted from Mabel Wagnalls' novel, "A Rosebush of a Thousand Years," and produced by Metro Pictures Corporation, is a fine vehicle for the display of this ardent Russian woman's electric acting. The story has romance, ideality, beauty of thought and dramatic strength. It suffers an unnecessary slacking up of its action, near the close, by the retention of a superfluous portion of the printed story, but most of the picture is of so high an order of merit and is acted with such superb art by the star that it outranks ninety per cent. of representative screen products.

"Revelation" is the story of Joline, an artists' model, who is first shown in a Paris cabaret of the Latin Quarter, dressed as a Bacchante, performing a mad dance, while an unknown American artist makes a furtive sketch of her. The girl offers to pose for him and the resultant picture brings the artist fame and wealth. Joline goes to live with him and deserts her former lover, an Apache named Duclos. The theme is one of suffering and the redemption of a woman's soul. A beautiful legend concerning a rosebush in a monastery garden and the Madonna brings about Joline's reformation. The repentant girl gives her all for the benefit of others, and leaves the artist and her life of gayety and ease. After the breaking out of the war the artist enlists in the army of France, and the two meet again. Joline finds him wounded and unconscious on the battlefield and has him borne to the old monastery, now a hospital, to which she is attached as a Red Cross nurse. The aged prior, who knows her history and understands how complete has been her expiation, helps her to nurse her lover back to health, and unites them in marriage.

The many telling incidents and subtle sidelights that help to give clearness and interest to the story are introduced with uncommon skill. An exception is the pursuit of Joline by the Count after she leaves the artist. Had this been eliminated and Duclos' final scenes been built up, the balance and grip of the plot would have been practically flawless. The first four parts are almost unique in the steadiness of their hold and the diversity and fascination put into a simple story made fine and forceful by its truth to life. As director of the picture George D. Baker's share in such a result is an important one. He has accomplished his task with sympathy and complete appreciation of its artistic needs. Maxwell Karger is credited with having personally supervised the production.

As to Nazimova, a new and brilliant screen star has arisen. Since the making of her first picture she has mastered every detail of photoplay technic. Her own force of character and intellectual equipment have already carried her far in the spoken drama, and she takes her rightful place among the leaders of the silent stage before "Revelation" comes to the end of the first reel. The quick temper, reckless spirit, elfish love of mischief and warm heart of this volatile girl of the studios are indicated with surprising ease and firmness. Disguised as an impudent young porter, she wears the clothing and the manners of the character with a saucy air that convulses the beholder. A moment later, garbed as the Holy Mother, she checks the laugh instantly and excites only profound reverence. She is shown, half mad with jealousy, trying to tear to pieces a model who has come to pose as the Madonna in her place; but the light that looks out of the eyes beneath her nurse's cap is that of a woman who has found her soul through sacrifice and bitter pain. She laughs and weeps, smiles and pouts, sins and suffers, as might the real Joline, and gives refreshing proof that the mission of an actress, even on the screen, is to act—not to pose.

Excellent impersonations are offered by Charles Bryan as Paul Granville, Frank Currier as the Prior, Syn de Conde as Duclos, Bigelow Cooper as the Count, and John Martin as Fra Augustine. Eugene Borden, Philip Sanford, True James, Dave Turner, Fred Radcliffe, A. C. Hadley and Hazel Washburn are also to be commended.

The atmosphere of the Latin Quarter, the monastery and the battlefields of France are reproduced with a perfection of illusion that makes them live again on the screen. Ray Smallwood was the photographer.

"CAVANAUGH OF THE FOREST RANGERS."

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Founded on a Hamlin Garland Novel Has Good Material in Badly Constructed Plot.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

IT is easy to understand that an entertainingly written novel is a tempting bait for a scenario editor in search of new material. Such a find, however, often proves as difficult to land as a four-foot pike without the use of a net. "Cavanaugh of the Forest Rangers," a five-part Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, released February 25, is such a novel. At least, the Vitagraph scenario department and Director William Wolbert have not succeeded in making a well constructed photoplay out of it. The story has good dramatic situations and interesting characters, but the screen version is a patchwork of odds and ends of plot stitched together in anything but a skillful manner. Director Wolbert seemed more intent on securing a good supply of beautiful "long shots" than in turning out a closely knit bit of drama. Fine locations are desirable; so are fine china and damask at a feast; but it is the contents of the dishes that fill the material needs of the guests, and it is the well prepared human interest that satisfies the mental appetite of the screen fan.

Cavanaugh is a forest ranger, who tries to keep the peace between the cattlemen and the sheep herders at the time the government commenced to restrict the number of cattle on a certain amount of grazing land. The daughter of one of the cattlemen, now an outlaw, returns from being educated in the East, and meets the ranger. The two fall in love and Cavanaugh has plenty of chances to protect her from the rough characters of the district. He also befriends her father, and that misguided man expiates his sins by nursing a smallpox victim and dying of the disease himself.

The cast is efficient. Alfred Whitman as Cavanaugh, Nell Shipman as Virginia Whetherford, Otto Lederer as Ed Whetherford and Laura Winston as his wife head the list. Other members of the cast are R. Bradbury, Rex Downs, Joe Rickson, Hal Wilson, and Mrs. Hattie Buskirk.

"RUGGLES OF RED GAP."

Essanay Offers Holmes and Brilliant Cast in Breezy Seven-Part Comedy.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

IF every one who views "Ruggles of Red Gap" will be as well pleased and in as happy mood as I was at the close then Essanay, Taylor Holmes, and his able support will all become so enthused that they will immediately start on another venture that may prove to be still better. And it must be understood that Director L. C. Windom and the adapter of Harry Leon Wilson's story, Charles J. McGuirk, are also included in the list of those to whom praise is due.

Mr. Wilson's story offers so many fine types—both men and women, although the men have much the best of it—that the strength of the comedy is greatly intensified; besides, the strongly contrasted environments of gay Paris and Red Gap, of Arizona, increase the opportunities for mirthful situations.

Ruggles (Taylor Holmes) is the English valet of the Hon. George Vane-Basingwell (Lawrence D'Orsay), brother to the Earl of Brimstead (Charles Lane). The Hon. George is inclined to gamble, and ekes out an existence on a quarterly allowance paid him by the earl. As the comedy opens we find him in apartments in Paris with Ruggles, his devoted slave.

The Hon. George meets Senator Floud (Ferdinand Munier), of Red Gap, his wife (Lillian Drew), and Cousin Egbert (Frederick Burton); the Senator's brother, an irreclaimable American in matters sartorial, who prefers the store clothes of Red Gap to any that Paris can offer, and who never can take his seat at table without first straddling the chair. Senator Floud, who would rather play draw-poker than eat, induces the Hon. George to try his luck, with the result that he loses not only his money, but his trusted Ruggles as well; that worthy having been staked as a bet in the final game on the suggestion of the Senator, who knew that his wife had set her heart on securing the valet's services so that he might redeem Cousin Egbert from his plebeian tastes. Soon afterward the Flouds leave Paris for Red Gap, where the story is chiefly laid, with the despondent Ruggles among their effects. And here I leave the continuation of the story to the screen.

Taylor Holmes and Frederick Burton are the great mirth-producers of the comedy. The types which they represent are in such striking contrast and they are so cleverly sustained that the spectator is always getting double measure when they are brought into close quarters. The quiet, sustained flow of the Ruggles action appeals to the more subtle conception of comedy, while the Cousin Egbert type is all on the surface, and is caught in a flash.

Lawrence D'Orsay's Hon. George is a fine characterization, immaculate in detail. Virginia Valli as the Widow Judson, whom Ruggles makes his own, for better, for worse, realizes all the possibilities of the character. Edna Phillips Holmes (Mrs. Taylor Holmes) makes a dashing Kate Kenner, the leader of the Bohemian set in Red Gap, who wins the heart and title of the Earl of Brinstead, much to the chagrin of the Hon. George, who had selected her for himself. And, by the way, the Earl of Brinsted finds in Charles Lane a fitting double. Mrs. Effie Floud, Senator Floud, and Marie Pettingill, Mrs. Floud's mother, are ably impersonated, respectively, by Lillian Drew, Ferdinand Munier, and Rose Mayo.

The release will be made through the George Kleine System sometime around March 1.

"HIS GENEROSITY."

Metro-Drew Comedy in Which the Male Lead Camouflages Tight-Wad Propensities.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

AN AMUSING situation combined with the best of direction and the inimitable Sidney Drews usually brings about good effects. "His Generosity" is no exception to the rule, but we have to confess that no one but Sidney Drew could get away with as meagre a situation as presented in this comedy and bring home as many laughs. It is a case of the comedian winning, and not the comedy.

Henry Mason was a tightwad—so named by his better half. And so disgusted was she with his repeated refusals to obey the formalities of the tipping system that when she is invited to accompany him on a business trip to New York she refuses. A bright idea strikes Henry, which is the reason for his fearless declaration that if she will only consent he will squander a million quarters. The trip is taken and Polly is delighted with the change that has come over Henry, who has become abnormally generous with his tips. The illusion is dispelled, however, and Henry is forever disgraced when, on his return home, the cabby gives away the secret of the distribution of a number of German coins which Henry had taken the opportunity to get rid of.

"THE GREAT ADVENTURE."

Five-Reel Pathe Play, from Story by Henry Kitchell Webster, Features Bessie Love in Leading Role.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS feature offering tells the perennial story of the young girl who comes to the city to win fame on the stage. But it is trimmed up with new frills and gives some interesting and lifelike glimpses of affairs behind the footlights and in the wings.

Bessie Love appears as "Rags," the country girl with theatrical aspirations. In this instance she does not dare the city alone, but her aunt, very interestingly portrayed by Flora Finch, accompanies her. The aunt has faith in Rags' aspirations, and risks the money she has saved up for "funeral expenses" in the exploit.

The plot is slight in structure, and contains little that is novel. Much of the interest is found in the engaging personality of Rags. She first meets Billy Blake, a chorus man, with whom she immediately falls in love. This part is assumed by Chester Barnett. Billy hears her story, and advises her to hold up a stage manager for whom he is working. Rags takes his advice literally, and appears before the manager with a pistol, demanding that he give her employment. This highly improbable scene carries with sufficient humor to get it over. Various other scenes also have an enjoyable spice of comedy.

In the course of the story, Rags substitutes for the leading lady and makes good. The male star, an actor named Sheen, admires her, and tries to win her. But Rags sticks to her first lover, Billy. The latter rescues her from drowning at the beach after Sheen has proven himself helpless.

"WILD WOMEN."

Harry Carey Appears in Five-Reel Universal Feature, a Cowboy Yarn of Amusing Type.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

ANOTHER "Cheyenne" Harry number featuring Harry Carey in his most popular role. The story this time is an imaginative invention not strictly original, but carried out in an enjoyable way. The hero is surrounded by a bunch of cowboy friends, all ready for any sort of adventure. Their chief adventure in this subject occurs in Harry's bibulous dream, but the boys are all in it, and the "wild" women also, though the latter are not wild enough to be alarming.

The tale commences on the Circle-L ranch, where Harry gets a bid to take part in a forthcoming rodeo. He insists on taking his friends along, and they all leave the ranch much to the disgust of the boss. Harry takes part in the events, which include steer roping, and wins considerable prize money.

Following the rodeo he takes the boys out for a party at a Hawaiian cabaret. They indulge too freely, and, after watching the Hawaiian dancers for a time, all fall asleep. Harry's dream is pictured. In this they are shanghaied by a lumber schooner and put to scrubbing decks by the captain and his mate. A mutiny takes place, the ship takes fire, and they float on a raft to a native isle. Here the queen takes a fancy to Harry, but he prefers her daughter. Just as he thinks he has won her he wakes up.

Others in the cast are Vester Pegg, Martha Mattox, Molly Malone, and E. Van Beaver. The story was written by George Hively, and produced by Jack Ford.

"THE WEAVER OF DREAMS."

Viola Dana's Delineation of Jilted Girl Makes Metro Picture Noteworthy.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

ONE powerful situation in the hands of a competent player like Viola Dana saves many a picture from the trivialities and inconsistencies that otherwise would have trampled it into the commonplace. The recent Metro production, "The Weaver of Dreams," made by B. A. Rolfe, and with Viola Dana in the leading role, is a picturization of Myrtle Reed's novel of the same title. This authoress possesses a sentimentality that goes most popularly in a book, but that needs careful handling to be wholly acceptable in a picture where everything is seen at once, as it were, and vividly where the contrasts are real and sharp, and where what goes before most decidedly affects what follows.

The picture makes an excellent offering. Viola Dana's presentation of the central character, a girl worthy of soul who is jilted by her fiance for a bit of pink and white nothing, will win sincerest commendation. It is praiseworthy indeed, but the plot has its weaknesses, and when dealing with romance one ought to be particularly careful in the small things. Viola finds a pretty pair of silk stockings on her porch one morning, and tells Margery (Mildred Davis) about them. "Oh, yes they are mine," say the bit of pink and white, "Martin (Russell Simpson) and I were shopping, and we left them there by mistake." She fails to ask Viola for them; one thinks they were left there with a malign purpose. Viola begins to think something is wrong. Soon she sees, and knows it. Then there's a dropped letter, and because a dog picks it up and takes it to Viola doesn't make it more convincing. A dog is a present fad in pictures, and ought to go out. Then some of the subtitles, especially the one in which Viola confides to Margery's uncle all her most intimate poetic dreams, hurts. She tells him about the "little voices around the fireplace" and that sort of thing. There are girls who would do that, but it is just a little out of taste.

This uncle is a cripple, and never leaves the house. He is mourning a broken love. Viola, in the picture, has an aunt, a delicately pretty old lady who is cynical, and has for her motto that all men are faithless. Her life has been embittered. Once she had been in a train wreck and had fallen in love with the man pinned down near her, and he had never come for her again. She didn't know his name. At the picture's close we find that these two are the lovers of the train, and find each other. Now this love story is provocative of mirth in the frivolous on their way home from the show.

"THE ROUGH LOVER."

Five-Reel Bluebird Offering of Farcical Type Provides Franklyn Farnum with Dual Role.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS light, farcical subject is a little out of the ordinary run of Bluebird subjects. Franklyn Farnum is cast in a double role, one that of a mild-mannered student, and the other that of a prizefighter. The identity of these very different characters becomes mixed, and a number of amusing situations result. The scenes give opportunity for some good examples of double exposure photography.

Mr. Farnum has no great demands made upon him in either of the roles he assumes, but he succeeds in differentiating them so well that there is never any confusion in the minds of the observer as to which character he is watching. He appears first as Richard, who has but two passions in life; one, his desire to master calculus, and the other to win the love of Helen. The girl returns his love, but wishes he were less fond of study.

The scenes occur on a beach, and Richard is suddenly made the object of attention by a countess with nothing to occupy her mind but an uninteresting, though jealous, husband. She pursues Richard, who tries to avoid her in every way. Finally he dives into the water, and pretends to have been drowned. At this moment, "Breeze" Bolton, his double, turns up. The countess gets after Breeze, who is challenged to fight a duel by the count. Richard again appears just as the duel is being arranged, and is forced into it. His mother, thinking he is dead, is holding spiritual seances, at one of which the prizefighter appears. The situations are complicated in the usual farcical manner, and will undoubtedly please lovers of this sort of entertainment very much.

Juanita Hansen is attractive in the role of Helen; others in the cast are Catherine Henry, Fred Montagu, and Martha Mattox.

"THE SPURS OF SYBIL."

Alice Brady in Five-Part World Feature Directed by Travers Vale Is Heroine of Mildly Interesting Story.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

LOUISE WINTER is the author of "The Spurs of Sybil," a five-part World picture directed by Travers Vale, in which Alice Brady acts an adventurous young woman of wealth, who starts out to earn her own living for one year. Arriving in New York, she engages a room at an expensive hotel and then attempts to find a situation before the hundred dollars in her pocketbook is all spent. She is soon reduced to a backroom in a cheap boarding house and would have fared badly but for a lucky accident that brought her to the notice of a good looking young doctor, who falls in love with her at first sight.

Sybil does not collect any formidable looking spurs during her adventures, but attracts the attention of a pair of rogues—one a worthless young rounder, the other a handsome vampire of middle age, who directs a fashionable gambling hell, and is in danger of meeting the fate so often reserved for heroines of the poor but virtuous brand. The doctor is always around when needed, however, and is rewarded by discovering that the girl he has fallen in love with is not a beautiful but wicked young crook whom he must reform, but a perfectly innocent girl of excellent family and ample fortune.

There is more mildly interesting incident than stirring dramatic action in "The Spurs of Sybil," but it is free of all objectionable features and has its place among the staple products of the screen.

Alice Brady fills every demand made upon her by the character of Sybil, and is well supported by John Bowers as Dr. Ross Alger, John Davidson as Paul Berwick, Iseth Munro as Mrs. Alva Penfield, Justine Cutting as Aunt Annabelle, Eugenie Woodward as Oleander Berwick, Herbert Barrington as a detective, and Richard Clarke as the doctor's assistant. Photographed by Max Schneider.

"THE SHUTTLE."

Constance Talmadge in Select Screen Version of Burnett Novel Is as Attractive as Ever.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

SO skilled a writer as Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett is always interesting, but "The Shuttle" is not her best piece of fiction, and the screen version, made by Margaret Turnbull and Harvey Thew, is not an improvement on the original. It offers, however, an opportunity for Constance Talmadge to play an engaging type of American girl who gets the better of a particularly offensive specimen of the English nobility. The "bounder" has married the sister of Bettina Vanderpoel for mercenary reason, and made her life a torment by his brutality and neglect. The Vanderpoels are very wealthy, and Bettina, suppecting all is not well with her sister, goes to England to visit her. She finds Lady Mount Dunstan living in terror of her husband, and the ancestral estate crumbling to ruin. Bettina puts sufficient American dollars into immediate circulation to start thorough repairs, and her brother-in-law rewards her by trying to destroy her reputation.

Another run-down-at-the-heel English nobleman lives next door to Mount Dunstan, but is of an entirely different stamp. He falls in love with Bettina, but will not tell her so for fear of being taken for a fortune hunter. An epidemic among the poor people of the locality shows Bettina what a fine fellow Sir Nigel is, and, being an American girl and accustomed to having her own way, she sees to it that her wealth does not stand in the path of another international marriage. The story is not an easy one to picturize, and the character of an American typewriter salesman seems lugged in, although found in the book. Rollin Sturgeon has succeeded reasonably well in preserving an English atmosphere to the scenes, and a competent cast do justice to their several roles.

Little Miss Talmagde is quite as charming as ever, and plays Bettina with the same delicate but careful art that distinguishes all her screen impersonations. The supporting company are cast as follows: Rosalie Vanderpoel, Edith Johnson; Reuben Vanderpoel, E. B. Tilton; Mrs. Vanderpoel, Helen Dunbar; Sir Nigel Anstruthers, George McDaniel; Lord Mount Dunstan, Albert Roscoe; Penzance, Thomas Persse; Ughtred Anstruthers, Edward Peil; G. Selden, Casson Ferguson.

FOUR KING BEES.

Billy West Is Featured in "The Rogue," "The Orderly," "His Day Out" and "The Stranger" — Good Slap-Stick Comedies with Many Laughs.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

BILLY WEST in the four latest King Bee comedies, each two reels in length, fully sustains the reputation gained in his earlier productions. Probably the best of the lot is "The Orderly," although "The Rogue" runs it a close second. All abound in slapstick comedy situations and contain a number of laughs. Others in the cast include Babe Hardy, Beatrice Joy, Ethel Burton, Leo White and Rosemary Theby.

In "The Orderly" the action takes place in a sanitarium, and Billy is cast as a disorderly orderly. He indulges in such pranks as putting a bulldog in a patient's bed in place of a hot water bottle; scrubbing the floor by attaching brushes to his feet; placing ice in another patient's bed to reduce his temperature, and giving still another patient a foot bath under somewhat embarrassing circumstances.

"The Rogue" starts out with Billy breaking dishes. He then wanders into the street, is run over by an automobile operated by a pretty girl who takes him to her home, where he lands in soft. Father throws him out of the window, but later in a thief chase he lands back in the house and unwittingly is instrumental in landing the thieves and is acclaimed as a hero.

Billy in "His Day Out" is cast as "A Loose Nut" who has escaped from an asylum. In following a pretty girl he lands in a barber shop and has some amusing experiences with the customers, including the shaving of a tramp by means af a vacuum cleaner, and when he refuses to pay Billy reverses the machine and puts the whispers back on the tramp's face. He also trims the mustaches of all the customers to look like his own, which aids him in escaping detection at the barbers' ball.

In "The Stranger" Billy arrives in the desert in time to rescue beauty in distress from the hands of two bad men. He goes into the mining town, pawns his donkey to buy food, has an amusing experience with hot tamale and chili con carne; gets into the pawnshop again, secures his donkey and again rescues the girl from the hands of the villain, Babe Hardy, whom he subdues after a comic fight, and finally becomes a resident of the town.

There is much rough and tumble comedy in all of these pictures which should bring many laughs, and in "The Rogue" there is some particularly good comedy work with a white mouse.

"The Shoes That Danced," Featuring Pauline Starke, and "Heiress for a Day," with Olive Thomas.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ADAPTED from a magazine story by John A. Morosco, "The Shoes That Danced" is a five-part Triangle production that tells a truthful and absorbing tale of life in New York's lower west side. Picturized by Jack Cunningham, and photographed by Pliny Horne, the photoplay has been ably directed by Frank Borzage, and the cast contains no weak spots. Pauline Starke as Rhoda Regan again gives conclusive proof that she is one of the most artistic and dependable young actresses the screen has. She presents a figure that is instantly recognized, and not one false stroke mars her work. The true-hearted little shopgirl who sticks to the man she loves through thick and thin and forces him to give up his position as a gang leader and turn honest becomes wonderfully human and appealing as impersonated by Pauline Starke. The young woman has personality, fine emotional powers, and is absolutely without mannerisms or any indications of self-consciousness.

Gang life in New York has long been an interesting topic in fact and in fiction. In "The Shoes That Danced" the murder of the leader of the Hudson Dusters by the captain of the Cherry Hill gang starts a police hunt that involves the Harmony Boy in the crime, and he is only saved from a "frame-up" by the devotion of his sweetheart, who dances nearly all night with another man at a masquerade in order to throw the police off the trail. The situations have the force of real drama, and make the picture a high-mark production.

Wallace McDonald as the Harmony Lad contributes a clever study of a familiar type, and acts with much quiet force. Dick Rosson as Stumpy Darcey, Anna Dodge as Mrs. Regan, Lydia Yeamans Titus as Mother Carey, Edward Brady as Wedge Rarker, and William Dyer as Hogan are the remaining players in the excellent cast.

"Heiress for a Day."

Olive Thomas does what is, perhaps, the best work of her screen career in "Heiress For a Day," a five-part Triangle comedy written by Henry Albert Phillips, scenario by Robert F. Hill, and directed by Jack Dillion. The story is the not unusual one of the young girl who is led to suppose that she has been left a large fortune, and who, after "basking in the smiles of society" and running head over heels in debt, discovers she is penniless. In this case, however, the author has not been hard hearted, but provides his heroine with a wealthy husband and a fortune of her own before the end of the last reel. The theme has been so brightly handled and is so full of neat and amusing bits of business that it furnishes good, healthy amusement all through the picture.

Assisting Olive Thomas are Joe King as Jack Standring, Eugene Burr as Spindthrift, Graham Pette as Old Hodges, Lillian Langdon as Mrs. Standring, Mary Warren as Grace Antrim, and Anna Dodge as Mrs. Rockland. Steve Norton was the photographer.

COMMENTS ON UNIVERSAL PICTURES.

A FLYER IN FOLLY (L-KO), March 6.—A very funny two-reel comic, featuring Gale Henry and Hughie Mack. They appear as a married couple, whose dream of true love is upset by an intrusive gas man and other flirtatious individuals. Trick photography is employed in a laughable way several times and a number of the situations are unusually good.

THE SWING OF DEATH (Universal Special), March 9.—Episode No. 5 of "The Bullseye." This instalment is full of eventful action. North inflicts a slight wound on Cody with a gun shot, and later kills the ranch owner, Clayton. Sweeney's gang rustles both sheep and cattle, bringing on fresh warfare between the opposing plainsmen. Eddie Polo, as Cody, makes a daring swing from one cliff to another on a rope tied to a tree. The instalment is a strong one.

MYSTERY SHIP, No. 15 (Universal Special), March 9.—This instalment adds much to the already very strong interest in this novel serial. The action centers about the secret "camouflage" formula stolen from the Mystery Man. Jack is tortured by the spies to obtain information about the formula. Later Gaston and Betty are drugged at a reception and the girl kidnapped by Russell, her former fiance. The title of this episode is "The House of Trickery."

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE ROUGH LOVER, Feb. 25.—A five-reel subject, in which Franklyn Farnum plays a dual role. He appears first as a mild-mannered student and later as a prize fighter. The two characters get their identities mixed. The situations are of a farcical sort and are amusing in a light, enjoyable way. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Christie Film Company.

MUM'S THE WORD (Christie Comedy).—There is a novel farce situation in this film that makes it a good offering. Bobby can sing, and it gives him an advantage with the girls, especially with a particular one even over the rich rival. Bobby is unlucky at poker and will play so he gets deeply in debt and risks his voice for twenty-four hours against a $500 bill. He loses and cannot speak till the time is up. Then the rich rival makes hay, but difficulties ensue and Bobby is up in time to get the girl after all.

THE NIGHT OF HIS LIFE (Christie Comedy).—Youthful bridegroom to be is given a party by his friends the evening before the marriage and he looks for about ten too many minutes on the wine when it is red. Complications ensue that make a lively farce. The liveliness, the personality of the players are the assets of the film. Its story will bear criticism; but it is not displeasing.

IN THE DARK (Christie Comedy).—A farce film that is lively and is played by pleasing actors of which Bobby Vernon and Ethel Lynn hold the leading parts. It will serve as an acceptable offering. It will be liked by most even if it is not remembered a few hours after the show. Anyway, these Christie Comedies take one's mind off all kinds of work-a-day worries.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE (Christie Comedy).—Two or three well used situations are put together in a new way in this farce to make a reasonably interesting and amusing picture. We have the wife's brother, of whose presence she dare not tell hubby, and we have the overheard plot to poison "him," which hubby thinks refers to the man of the house who is potentially worth his insurance and which really refers to the ending of a play the wife is writing.

Fox Film Corporation.

ARE MARRIED POLICEMEN SAFE? (Sunshine), Feb. 17.—A rough and tumble comedy which the audience at the Strand theater, New York, seemed to enjoy. The story of the comedy seemed to hinge around the love affairs of a couple of married policemen who tried to marry other wives and were foiled in the attempt with the appliance of much horse play. Some original business has been inserted in this comedy along with much that is old, and, considerable that is unrefined.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

CAVANAUGH OF THE FOREST RANGERS, Feb. 25.—A Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, this five-part picture is from a novel by Hamlin Garland and was directed by William Wolbert. The material is all right, but it is not well put together. Alfred Whitman and Nell Shipman have the leading parts. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

THE CAVERN OF HORROR, March 4.—The eleventh episode of "Vengeance—and the Woman" shows the escape of the hero and his wife from the cavern and ends with a series of explosions that toss human beings about in the air in the most reckless manner. Lovers of melodrama will be delighted with the stirring events shown in the number.

George Kleine System.

RUGGLES OF REDGAP (Essanay), March 1.—This production can be highly commended as a most enjoyable comedy. It is in seven parts. Taylor Holmes, Frederick Burton, Lawrence D'Orsay, Virginia Valli and other capable players are in the cast. A detailed review appears on another page.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE WEAVER OF DREAMS (Metro), Feb. 18.—A five-reel picture made by B. A. Rolfe and with Viola Dana in the role of a young lover jilted in the midst of her poetic dreams and left to fight her disappointment alone. Her sincere work in the character is the big thing in the film, and it is an excellent offering on account of it. She gives a beautifully delineated picture of human tragedy. The plot and direction, including one or two of the subtitles, are not without the blemish of awkwardness; but these are more than redeemed by the leading woman's splendid acting. See elsewhere in this issue for a longer notice.

HIS GENEROSITY (Drew), Feb. 25.—An amusing comedy with the Sidney Drews featured. Henry Mason, the husband in the story, puts one over on his wife when in a seemingly generous mood he tips lavishly in a New York hotel with a number of souvenir German coins. A full review will be found elsewhere.

REVELATION (Metro).—One of the strongest pictures yet produced, this seven-part version of a novel by Mabel Wagnalls offers Nazimova, the celebrated Russian actress, a part in which she shows the regeneration of a woman's soul with remarkable power. It is gripping from start to finish and filled with laughter and tears. A fine production. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

UNDER SUSPICION (Feb. 4).—Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are featured in this five-reel picture. It is a newspaper-crook-society drama adapted from a story, "The Woolworth Diamonds," and is not as interesting as some of the other pictures in which these stars have appeared. Reviewed at length in last week's issue.

"BROADWAY BILL" (Metro), Feb. 11.—A Harold Lockwood picture in five reels telling a sentimental story for young people mostly. It is a good, well made offering whose chief special merit is that it will more than probably please all the sentimentally inclined, of whom they are no lack. For a longer notice see another page of this issue.

AFTER HENRY (Metro-Drew), Feb. 18.—The title of this Drew comedy refers to the pride that Henry feels in having a portion of the rising generation named after him. He insists upon making each of the babies an expensive present, until his wife interferes. A friend caps the climax by naming her baby girl Henriette. Produced and acted in the effective Drew manner.

Mutual Film Corporation.

MY WIFE (Frohman), Feb. 18.—A five-part adaptation of a formerly successful Frohman play. Ann Murdock plays the stellar role with fine effect. In fact, she is very charming in the part of the young heiress who marries her guardian with the stipulation that she is divorced on the return of her real lover from the war. A full review of this picture will be found elsewhere.

THREE TIMES AND OUT (Strand, Feb. 12).—A prettily staged comedy featuring Billie Rhodes. The story of the comedy hinges around curing a young lady of flirting. This young woman loved to tease her sweetheart, leaving him repeatedly to flirt with other young men. Finally one evening at a ball when she has lured three admirers into asking to escort her home, her sweetheart puts a damper on her fun by enlightening the young men to the extent that she is left at the close of the evening to go home by herself. Very pretty and entertaining.

MISS CINDERELLA (Strand) Feb. 19.—A pleasing comedy featuring Miss Billie Rhodes. In it a young woman believing that a young man with whom she is in love desires to marry her for her money rents a room and poses as a poor seamstress while he is on a visit to her father. The young man, who has never seen the girl, makes good in the matter of befriending what he believes to be a poor girl.

Paramount Film Corporation.

WHO IS NUMBER ONE? No. 15 (Paramount), Feb. 4.—The final episode of "Who Is Number One?" gives a satisfactory and thrilling finish to a serial that has sustained interest. In this number Camille Arnot hearing of the attempted murder of Graham Hale by Raine realizes that for years she has listened to the lies of an unscrupulous man, and decides to return to her husband, Graham Hale. The secret of the story uncovered reveals the identity of "No. One" in the person of Aimee, the daughter of Graham Hale and Camille Arnot, who has been stationed in her father's house by her mother for vengeful purposes.

SOME PROFESSOR (Klever), Feb. 25.—A Victor Moore comedy in which he goes to a school for girls as a demonstrator of chattering calisthenics. Some amusing things happen between the professor and a young man who to be near his sweetheart in the school disguises as a female and secures the position of massaging the floors.

ONE MORE AMERICAN, Feb. 25.—George Beban, as the Italian proprietor of a Marionette theater on the lower East Side, New York, has a congenial role in this five-part Paramount picture produced by Jesse L. Lasky. The story is full of laughter and tears. It was reviewed at length on page 1269 of last week's issue.

IT PAYS TO EXERCISE (Mack Sennett), March 10.—A screamingly funny farce comedy featuring Chester Conklin. The scene of the story is laid to a large extent in theater at which a heavy weight demonstrates the health-giving effects of a certain gymnastic appliance. A full review will be found elsewhere.

MY FIRST (Paramount).—Another installment of the Benjamin Chapin "The Son of Democracy" series, this two-part picture shows Lincoln as a boy organizing a juvenile court and defending a colored lad who is charged with stealing a chicken. The number is full of humor and illustrates the Great President's early love of justice.

A PRESIDENT'S ANSWER (Paramount).—In this number of "The Son of Democracy" series Lincoln is shown saving the life of a young chap who had enlisted in the Confederate Army and had been captured and brought to Washington, where he had killed a guard. The boy was the son of an aged minister, an old friend of Lincoln's mother, and the President could not find it in his heart to let the father's plea for mercy go unheeded.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

IN POVERTY'S POWER (Pathe), Feb. 24.—Episode No. 6 of "The Price of Folly" series. Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo appear as a brother and sister, who find themselves suddenly cast upon the world after losing a mining property in Mexico. They come to a city on the Pacific coast and, through a series of misadventures, both land in jail. There is but little plot to this number, though it will pass as a pretty accurate view of real life, buttered side down.

THE UNMASKING (Pathe), Feb. 24.—Episode No. 14 of "The Hidden Hand." There is an interesting twist in this number, which occurs in the last reel. Dr. Scarley has just taken the will away from Doris, when "The Hidden Hand" enters and takes the will from him. This development may surprise observers who have considered Dr. Scarley and "The Hidden Hand" as one and the same person, unless a confederate has been employed in these particular scenes.

DADDY'S GIRL (Pathe), March 3.—A five-reel subject, by John W. Grey and M. Ramirez Torres, featuring Baby Marie Osborne and a cast which includes many other children as well as grown-ups. She plays the daughter of a young couple who suddenly come into wealth. The father tries the fast life, but the child leads him back to his home again. This has a good juvenile interest, and many natural, homelike touches. The "Kid" show makes perhaps the strongest feature. The plot, while rather slight, is consistently developed.

A GASOLINE WEDDING (Pathe-Rolin). March 3.—A comedy number, featuring Harold Lloyd. He breaks into love affairs of the Marquis de Much Chees, with his usual nonchalance, and carries the girl away in his car. This is not as strong as previous numbers, but is amusing in a characteristic way.

YELLOWSTONE — THE GEYSERS (Pathe), March 3.—One of the most interesting of the "Our National Parks" series. This pictures, in tints, the hot springs and geysers of the famous national playground. Many of the geysers are named and may be easily recognized by persons who have visited the park. A half-reel.

BUXTON — DEVONSHIRE, ENGLAND (Pathe), March 3.—On same reel with above. This is also in tints and gives a series of enjoyable views in the vicinity named in the title. Chassworth, residence of the Duke of Devonshire, is pictured; also quaint cottages and gardens.

THE GREAT ADVANTAGE (Pathe Play).—A five-reel number, adapted from a story by Henry Kitchell Webster. Bessie Love is featured as "Rags," a girl who comes with her aunt to the city to win fame on the stage. The plot is light and not particularly strong, though the picture has good entertainment value in its side-lights on theatrical affairs. The glimpses behind the wings are very interesting. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Triangle Film Corporation.

HEIRESS FOR A DAY, March 3.—Olive Thomas is featured in this bright five-reel comedy-drama, written by Henry Albert Phillips. It is full of humorous incidents and has a pleasing love story. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

SHOES THAT DANCED, March 3.—Pauline Starke heads the cast of this five-part picture, which tells an interesting story of East Side life in New York and is excellently acted and produced. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Mfg. Corporation.

CURRENT EVENTS, No. 41 (Universal), Feb. 16.—Boy Scouts cutting timber for Uncle Sam in New Jersey, San Francisco celebration of new tunnel route, work of the food-saving army, Colonel Roosevelt recovering from operation, war side-lights, and newspaper cartoons, are leading features of this number.

WILD WOMEN (Universal Special), Feb. 25.—A five-reel offering, featuring Harry Carey in his familiar role of "Cheyenne" Harry. He wins some prize money at a rodeo and he and his friends celebrate after the event. Harry has a dream in which they all visit an island populated by natives, among whom are the "wild women." This is an amusing yarn, with entertaining imaginative touches. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

"AMARILLY OF CLOTHES-LINE ALLEY."

Adolph Zukor Presents Mary Pickford in a Story of Real Life in the Avenues and the Alleys and the Events That Followed An Attempt to Mix the Two.

Cast.

Amarilly.....Mary Pickford
Terry McGowan.....Wm. Scott
Gordon Phillips.....Norman Kerry
Mrs. Stuyvesant Phillips...Ida Waterman
Colette King.....Margaret Landis
Mrs. Jenkins.....Kate Price
Bosco McCarty.....Thomas H. Wilson
Johnny Walker.....Fred Goodwins
Father Riordan.....Herbert Standing

The Story: Amarilly lived happily enough in Clothes-Line Alley, and her story would have been simple had she not rescued a society man who gets knocked out on a slumming trip to the Midway, where Amarilly and Terry are employed. She nurses him back to health, and he shows an interest in her that causes a quarrel between herself and Terry. But Terry is made of the stuff the Alley appreciates, and the beauties of the social world are lost to Amarilly. When Terry is made the innocent victim of a tong war going after the Chinese noodles, Amarilly craves. She decides right then and there. She will be Amarilly of the Alley to the end.

For the Program: A vivid picture of San Francisco's Chinatown and the slums.

Another Pickford with a unique setting.

Advertising Phrases: It took half the police force of San Francisco to help the director get the street scenes.

She tried society, but it didn't make good with her.

Feature These Players: Miss Pickford in the title role.

William Scott as Terry.

Norman Kerry as Philips.

Stunt Suggestions: Fill two bottles, one with oil and the other with water. Label the former "Society," and the latter "The Alley." Attach to a card reading "Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley (Mary Pickford's new play), to be seen at (house and date) knew that oil and water would not mix, so she stuck to water—and Terry was on the water wagon, too." Grocers can display package noodles with "Our noodles are as good as the Chinese and cost less. It nearly cost Terry his life to get some for Amarilly of Clothes-Line Alley (Mary Pickford's new play) at (house and date). See how it happened, then buy your noodles here." For the lobby play up the star and the stills, with a suggestion of Chinese decorations, if desired. In the press work dwell upon the fact that the crowds were so dense that traffic had to be stopped before the picture could be made in San Francisco's Chinatown.

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Rotogravure. Photos, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x29. Ten cuts each on star and production. Advertising layout mats. Slides. Press book.

Released March 11.

"HEIRESS FOR A DAY."

Triangle Presents Olive Thomas in a Dashing Little Story of an Heiress Who Expected a Million and Was Bequeathed a Thousand.

Cast.

Helen Thurston.....Olive Thomas
Jack Standring.....Joe King
Spendthrift .....Eugene Burr
Old Hodges.....Graham Pette
Mrs. Standring.....Lillian Langdon
Grace Antrim..... .....Mary Warren
Mrs. Rockland.....Anna Dodge

Directed by Jack Dillon.

The Story: Helen Thurston, a hotel manicurist, loves Jack Standring, one of her patrons and the most sought after bachelor in the swagger set. She cannot hope to win his attention, but she learns that her grandfather has died, leaving her millions. She is pestered with offers of unlimited credit, and she sets out to conquer society, but overplays and loses Standring's interest. But when it is discovered that she has been left but a thousand dollars, the remainder of the estate going to a distant cousin, the creditors threaten her with arrest. It is then that Standring is attracted to her and they elope. Back from the honeymoon, they find that the cousin has failed to comply with the terms of the will and the money reverts to the new Mrs. Standring.

For the Program: A saucy little story of New York's social set.

Poverty won what money could not buy.

Advertising Phrases: Hotel manicurist wins the catch of the town.

Poverty was a blessing very much in disguise.

Feature These Players: Olive Thomas as Helen.

Joe King as Standring.

Stunt Suggestions: Get the stores to make a display of manicure sets with a card and some stills, the card to read: "She polished them up so carefully that now she is a member of his fam-i-lee. Who? Why Helen Thurston, the hotel manicurist who became Heiress For a Day. See the play at (house and date)." Offer a fairly good manicure set as a prize for the best essay on "What I would do were I heiress for a day." For lobby work, if the weather permits, set up a free manicure. You'll find enough facetious young men to supply the material.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangle Magazine. Press sheet.

Released March. 3.

"THE GIRL IN THE DARK."

Bluebird Presents Carmel Myers in a Screen Realization of Charles Edmund Walk's Novel, The Green Seal.

Cast.

Brice Ferris.....Ashton Dearholt
Lois Fox.....Carmel Myers
Ming .....Frank Tokanga
Lao Wing.....Frank Deschon
Strang .....Harry Carter
Struber .....Alfred Allen
Sally .....Betty Schade

Directed by Stuart Paton.

The Story: The strange tale of a green seal, stolen in Thibet, hidden upon the neck of a white child and abandoned, to become in later years the storm centre of a whirlpool of crime and Chinese cunning. The story fairly leaps from one sensation to another until, in the end, the mystery is cleared and the leading characters live happily ever after.

For the Program: Mystery on mystery to a startling end.

Stolen fetish costs lives, but brings happiness.

Advertising Phrases: An intimate picture of the Chinese tongs.

Crowded with action to the brim.

Feature These Players: Carmel Myers as Lois.

Ashton Dearholt as Ferris.

Frank Deschon as the leader of the tong.

Stunt Suggestion: It is simple to make pear-shaped green seals out of modeling clay or of sealing wax softened in hot water and modeled with the fingers. Use these on window cards reading, "Would you kill anyone for a silly little seal like this? Yet a seal like this, stolen from Thibet, cost many lives in The Girl in the Park. If you love adventure, mystery, action, by all means see this clever Bluebird at (house and date)." If you can get any Chinese weapons, use these on the cards to heighten the suggestion. For the lobby have one of the seals displayed on a pad so arranged that when the seal is lifted an alarm bell will ring. Letter as on the window card and watch for victims. Many persons will pick up the seal to examine. If you can get a Chinese dress, tog out a man and arm him with a huge knife. On his back tack this sign, "I must get the green seal. It will be at the (house) tonight in The Girl in the Park, if I do not get it first."

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black-and-white lobby displays. Slide. Player cuts in three sizes. Scene cuts, one and two columns. Heralds. Press sheet.

Released March 4.

"THE GIRL WITH THE CHAMPAGNE EYES."

William Fox Presents Jewel Carmen in Bernard McConville's Strange Tale of a Girl Thief and An Honest Man in Unusual Partnership.

Cast.

Nellie Proctor.....Jewel Carmen
James Blair.....L. C. Shumway
Milligan .....Charles Edler
McKenzie .....G. Raymond Nye
Matt .....Charles Gorman

Directed by C. M. Franklin.

The Story: Nellie was not quite quick enough in the getaway, and when the victim missed his wallet and demanded a search, she slipped it into the pocket of James Blair. But Nellie appeals to Milligan to help Blair escape the horrors of convict life, and Blair gets him away. They have to flee the police, and in Alaska they form a strange trio, the girl-thief, the honest man and the old criminal, but in the end the young folks find love and search anew for happiness.

For the Program: A woman's theft brings about an odd fellowship.

Jewel Carmen gets a man into jail and out again.

Advertising Phrases: She could steal—or worse—so she stole.

A whirligig of chance and crime.

Feature These Players: Jewel Carmen as the girl pickpocket.

L. C. Shumway as her innocent victim.

Stunt Suggestions: Use window cards printed or lettered, "Is it wrong to steal from a cheating gambler? If you cannot decide see The Girl with the Champagne Eyes (house and date) and find out what she did." For a trick lobby display hang a coat against a frame with a wallet sticking out of the side pocket. Through the cloth connect up with an electric bell so that the slightest pull upon the wallet will cause the bell to ring. Letter the card, "Beware of Pickpockets. Jim Blair didn't, and see what happened to him in The Girl with the Champagne

"DADDY'S GIRL."

Pathe Presents the Charming Child Star, Baby Marie Osborne, in the Story of a Little Girl Who Saved Her Daddy From the "Other Woman."

Cast.

Marie Standlaw.....Baby Marie Osborne
Her Mother.....Marion Warner
Her Father.....Louis J. Cody
Mildred Montrose.....Katherine McLaren
William Nordly.....Herbert Standing

Directed by William Bertram.

The Story: Marie's daddy is well educated and well connected, but he is visionary and lazy. He comes into a handsome legacy, buys an interest in the business and goes in for enjoyment. His quiet little wife prefers to stay home with the baby, and they drift further and further apart. Standlaw becomes involved with a rather fast young widow, but Marie has won her heart, though she did not know her to be Standlaw's child, and it is Marie who reunites her parents.

For the Program: The cleverest kiddie in a charming little play.

Love for the child was greater than greed.

Advertising Phrases: See Baby Osborne's Kid Circus with her darky assistant.

Went in for "high" life, but the baby brought him back.

Feature This Player: Concentrate on the child.

Stunt Suggestions: Unless you can work out a kid circus, the story does not lend itself to stunts. Play up the one-sheets.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six-sheet and one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both sepia and in colors, and 22x28. Slide. One-column cuts. Campaign book.

Released March 3.

"EVE'S DAUGHTER."

Adolph Zukor Presents Billie Burke in the Story of a Poverty-Stricken Millionairess Who Finds Real Happiness When Her Money Is Gone.

Cast.

Irene Simpson Bates.....Billie Burke
John Norton.....Thomas Meighan
Courtenay Urquhart.....Lionel Atwill
Martin Simpson-Bates,
William Riley Hatch
Victoria Vanning.....Florence Flynn
Mrs. Simpson-Bates.....Harriet Ross
Edith Simpson-Bates.....Lucile Carney
Kate Simpson-Bates.....Mary Navaro
Rev. James Sunningdale.....Henry Lee

The Story: Though Martin Simpson-Bates is a millionaire, he subjects his family to actual want. When he dies they rejoice in the thought that they are free, at last, but the will proves that he has left each but $15,000. Irene decides to spend her money in having a good time for once in her life and becomes a social butterfly, but the money soon goes and only the steadfast love of her old admirer saves her from the bitter aftermath.

For the Program: A dainty play for the star of daintiness.

The poverty of the greedy rich.

Advertising Phrases: Sought to crowd life's happiness into a few brief weeks.

Was willing to pay the piper in order to dance.

Feature These Players: Billie Burke as Irene.

Thomas Meighan as Norton.

Lionel Atwill as Urquhart.

Stunt Suggestions: If you have any portraits of the star, use these for window work with such cards as "Her millionaire father left her $15,000 and she spent it all on one good time in Eve's Daughter (house and date)." If you have no portraits, use stills. Vary the wording on the signs, but hold to the same idea of the girl who wanted one good time. For a variant attach a five dollar bill and a penny to a card reading "Every time Martin Simpson-Bates made (bill here) he spent a (penny here) upon his family. Do you wonder they were glad when he died? But even in death he fooled them. See Eve's Daughter, with dainty Billie Burke (house and date)." For the lobby display a large money bag (one from the bank, if possible), with the mouth tied to a streamer of crepe and the card, "Even in death Martin Simpson-Bates made his family taste the pangs of poverty. Billie Burke, in Eve's Daughter, found a way to fool him (date)."

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one, three and six-sheet posters. One 24-sheet. Rotogravure. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Scene and portrait cuts one to three columns wide. Slides. Advertising layout mats. Press book.

and were witnesses of the murder of the body snatcher by Injun Joe, who places the blame upon Muff Potter, who is saved by Tom's testimony. It also tells of the further experiences of Tom and Huck with Joe, ending with their discovery of the buried treasure.

For the Program: Another delightful page from Mark Twain.

An epic of boyhood days.

Advertising Phrases: Don't take your warts to the cemetery.

An unexpected treat—another Tom Sawyer.

Feature These Players: Jack Pickford as Tom.

Robert Gordon as Huck.

Alice Marvin as Mary.

Stunt Suggestions: Advertise for a cure for warts. If you use the newspaper do not give any name or address, but merely advertise, "Wanted a good cure for warts. See details——," and name the second day following. Then with the same catch-line add: "Tom Sawyer had a charm that needed a graveyard and a dead cat. Do you know anything just as good and not so strenuous. Send it to us. Five tickets for the best charm, four for the next best and three for the third best, good for Huck and Tom, showing at the (house and date) in which the dead cat cure is used. Entries close——." Name a date about five days before the showing. Display the answers in the lobby, advertising the display, or arrange with the newspaper to print them. Nearly everyone has a pet "charm" for warts. All will be interested. You may be able to arrange with some live-wire physician to treat warts electrically in your lobby at a stated time. As the average wart requires more than one treatment, he will seen the advantages of the proposition.

Advertising Aids: Two styles each one, three and six-sheets. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Eight by ten photos of star. Ten cuts and mats each for star and production, one to three columns wide. Advertising layout mats. Press book.

"THE MIDNIGHT TRAIL."

American Presents William Russell in a Five-Part Comedy Drama of An Amateur Detective, An Expert Thief and a Girl Worth While.

Cast.

Jack Woodford.....William Russell
Alice Moreland.....Francelia Billington
Rev. Robert Moreland.....Sydney Deane
Harry Moreland.....Jerome Sheler
Harvey Faxon.....Carl Stockdale
Benjamin Thurston.....Edward Jobson
Jasper Stride.....Harvey Clark
W. H. Irons.....Clarence Burton
Marie .....Helen Howard
Jim Morton.....Alfred Ferguson

Directed by Edward Sloman.

The Story: Jack Woodford, a young millionaire, knows the Sherlock Holmes stories backward. When he sees Alice Moreland at his lawyer's office and learns that she seeks some jewels stolen from her father, Jack gets the card of a real detective and introduces himself into the Moreland home. He is startled to find that Alice, herself, takes valuables from the safe, and returns them to the rector. The latter's private secretary denounces him as an impostor and the real detective is called in, but before he goes Jack solves the mystery and takes a heavy fee.

For the Program: A comedy of crooks and cross purposes.

It took a clubman to catch a thief.

Advertising Phrases: Millionaire detective wins his first and last case.

He worked for love and was repaid with love.

Feature These Players: William Russell as Jack.

Francelia Billington as Alice.

Stunt Suggestions: Get your book stores to show the Conan Doyle stories and use a card and a still, the card to read: "Jack Woodford studied to be a detective with Conan Doyle, and you will see in The Midnight Trail, at (house and date) that he made it pay. Buy some books and start studying today. Perhaps you can win as rich a reward." For street work have a well-dressed young man go down the street passing out cards reading: "W. H. Irons, Private Detective. See all about me at the (house and date)." The latter line should run at the bottom of the card, the others in the centre.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Unmounted banner. One, two and three-column cuts and mats. Half-column cut. Cut, 4x4 inches. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Slides, Press sheet.

Released February 25.

"THE NAULAHKA."

Pathe Presents Antonio Moreno and Doraldina in a Six-Part Screen Interpretation of the Famous Story by Rudyard Kipling and Wolcott Balestier.

Cast.

Nicholas Tarvin.....Antonio Moreno
Kate Sheriff.....Helen Chadwick
Pres. Mutrie.....J. H. Gilmour
Maharajah .....Warner Oland
Sitahbai ..... Doraldina
Neglected mother.....Mary Alden

Directed by George Fitzmaurice.

The Story: A quaint mingling of the west and east, a story that started in the rivalry between two small western towns, fighting for the new railroad that became connected with the destinies of an Eastern princeling, and the efforts of a gypsy queen to depose the rightful heir. It is one of the best known of the Kipling stories, presented with an unusual cast.

For the Program: The literary production of the season.

A spectacle without superior.

Advertising Phrases: A dream of splendor in massy magnitude.

Kipling's imagination plus pictureland's vast resources.

Feature These Players: Antonio Moreno as the young Westerner.

Doraldina, a dancer who has been a cabaret success in New York the past couple of seasons.

Stunt Suggestions: Get extra sets of lobby displays for window work and use them widely. They will work better than any special stunt. Get the book stores to display the Kipling books and work the library for a card. For street work use a wagon with the 24-sheet, or men dressed as East Indians carrying one-sheets, or lettered cards. For the lobby use a few drapes and burn incense. Make a drive for the literary clubs.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and color. Also 22x28. Slide. Campaign book. Cuts.

Released February 24.

"NOBODY'S WIFE."

Universal Presents Louise Lovely in a Swift Moving Story of a Northwest Mounted Policeman Who Got His Man and a Wife to Boot.

Cast.

Jack Darling.....Hart Hoxie
Sheriff Carew.....Alfred Allen
Dancing Pete.....Betty Schade
Hope Ross.....Louise Lovely
Tom Smythe.....A. C. Kenyon
His wife.....Grace McLean

Directed by E. Le Saint.

The Story: Jack Darling, of the Mounted, is told to get Alec Young, wanted for murder. His only clue is that "Dancing Pete" is his girl, and Pete has been located in Nugget. Dressed as a miner, Jack goes to Nugget, and mistaking the house, comes to the home of the Smyths, where he finds Hope, their sister, whom he supposes to be the mother of the child he sees. He goes to the Wigwam for milk for the child and runs into Pete, who becomes infatuated with him. The sheriff offers such strong objection that Jack realizes that he has found Allen. After a lively campaign he arrests him, then he comes back to find that Hope is nobody's wife, and he rectifies that mistake, as well.

For the Program: True love took a crooked course, but came to placid waters.

Nobody's wife was somebody's darling.

Advertising Phrases: Found long-sought murderer was sheriff of mining camp.

Got his man on six-year-old charge—and a wife into the bargin.

Feature These Players: Louise Lovely as Hope.

Hart Hoxie as the policeman.

Betty Schade as the dancing girl.

Stunt Suggestions: Tie a baby's nursing bottle to a card and letter below, "The Northwest Mounted Policeman was looking for a murderer and he found a baby and an empty bottle, but he got his man and he got a wife, too, in Nobody's Wife—a Louise Lovely production at (house and date)." Have a man in boots and rough clothes go through the streets with an empty nursing bottle. On his back letter a sign, "I'm looking for milk for the child of Nobody's Wife. Look us up at the (house) tonight." Put a cradle in the lobby with a wax doll and announce it as the child of Nobody's Wife.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. One sheet of star. Black and white lobby displays. Slide. Player cuts. Heralds. Press book.

Released March 4.

"THE SHELL GAME."

Metro Presents Emmy Whelen in a Five-Part Dramatization of the Saturday Evening Post Story, Good Will and Almond Shells by Kenneth L. Roberts.

Cast.

Alice Sheldon.....Emmy Whelen
Lawrence Gray.....Henry Kolker
Silk Wilkins.....Joseph Kilgour
Mrs. Wentworth.....Fanny Cogan
Landlady .....Ricca Allen

Directed by George D. Baker.

The Story: Silk Wilkins is a professional confidence man, but when it comes to matching wits with Lawrence Gray, who is not even an amateur at the work, he runs a poor third in a field of two. His pet theory is that everyone is weakly sentimental around Christmas time and more apt to respond to the bait. He intrudes upon Gray at his table in the hotel restaurant, learns the harrowing story of his lost wife and little daughter, and decides to restore to him the daughter. He finds one in a disappointed music student who is turning on the gas and adroitly reunites the supposed father and daughter, but in the end Gray makes it plain he has merely been enjoying Silk's rather bungling work, and the check he gets is for finding Gray a wife instead of the daughter he never had.

For the Program: A confidence man who lost confidence in himself.

A shell game in which no one seemed to lose.

Advertising Phrases: Silk knew the shell game but not shells.

Not all millionaires are come-ons. This one wasn't.

Feature These Players: Emmy Whelen as the little musical student who sought to end it all with gas.

Joseph Kilgour as the bungling confidence man.

Henry Kolker as the millionaire who fooled the confidence man.

Stunt Suggestions: Get some Valencia and some California almonds or any almonds of two shapes of shell. Put a few of each in an ornamental dish or silver tray for each window with card reading: "Silk Wilkins thought he was a clever swindler, but he didn't know the difference between the Spanish and the California almonds. His intended victim did, and he had a lot of fun with Silk over the stupid blunder. See The Shell Game at (house and date) and enjoy a really diverting story with an exceptionally good cast. It is a Saturday Evening Post story." Candy stores and grocers can hook up their almond specialties. Vary with the three walnut shells and a card, "This was the old shell game. The game Silk Wilkins played in The Shell Game at (house and date) was newer, but he didn't realize that a millionaire is not always a fool. One of those plays really worth seeing."

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel for newspaper use. Slide. Herald. Lobby sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts.

Released March 4.

"THE SHOES THAT DANCED."

Triangle Presents a Screen Version of John A. Moroso's Short Story Success of the Same Title.

Cast.

Rhoda Regan.....Pauline Starke
Mrs. Regan.....Anna Dodge
Mother Carey.....Lydia Yeamand Titus
Harmony Lad.....Wallace MacDonald
Stumpy Darcy.....Dick Rosson
Mamie Conlon.....Anne Kroman
Wedge Barker.....Edward Brady
Hogan .....William Dyer

Directed by Frank Borzage.

The Story: One of the best of John A. Moroso's intimate stories of the intimate life of the New Yorkers of the East Side has made a play of unusual interest. Rhoda Regan is a salesgirl, and her sweetheart is the Harmony Lad, a clean-cut young chap who runs with the gang merely because he is popular. A gang murder one night frightens Rhoda and she makes the Harmony Lad promise to run straight. He gets a chance for a vaudeville tryout and is engaged, but the police want him to locate Stumpy Darcy, the gang leader. Rhoda maneuvers to save her sweetheart from the interrogation that will mean the ruin of his vaudeville career and they leave the gang forever.

For the Program: A page from real life. New York's seamy side told by a man who knows his facts.

Advertising Phrases: New York's "gunmen" as they really are.

The shoes that danced brought death to a killer.

Feature These Players: Pauline Starke as Rhoda.

Wallace MacDonald as the Harmony Lad.

Dick Rosson as Stumpy.

Stunt Suggestions: Hook up the shoe sellers with displays of dancing shoes and a card, "The Shoes that Danced were a size too small, but the aching feet were forgotten in the aching heart of the dancer, for she was dancing to save her sweetheart from arrest. With these shoes you may wear the proper size and still have a shapely foot. See the play at (house and date)." For a lobby display you can rig up a black box with a pair of shoes attached by black threads to an eccentric axle run by a small motor and they will appear to be dancing without human agency. Place an appropriate sign in front. For a special stunt offer a pair of small dancing shoes to the person they most perfectly fit. These should be displayed in a store window. The dealer will make you a price on the shoes in return for the people you bring to his store.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Special process art herald. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Slides. Electros and mats. Photos. Triangle Magazine. Press sheet.

Released March 3.

"THE TURN OF A CARD."

Paralta Presents J. Warren Kerrigan in the Story of a Man Who Won a Fortune in the West and a Wife in the East.

Cast.

Jimmy Montgomery Farrell, J. Warren Kerrigan
Cynthia Burdette.....Lois Wilson
Eddie Barrett.....Eugene Pallettte
"Ace High" Burdette...David M. Hartford
William Phelps.....William Conklin
Millie Jarvis.....Eleanor Crowe
Mr. Jarvis.....Roy Laidlaw
"Curio" Johnson.....Clifford Alexander
Slavin .....Albert J. Cody
John Hays Carlton.....Wallace Worsley
Finnegan .....Frank Clark

Directed by Oscar Apfel.

The Story: Picking up some rich oil properties in the West, Jimmy Farrell is induced to enter a game of chance with a well known gambler. He not only wins a large fortune, but the gambler's "shack" on Long Island. Coming East to dispose of his oil wells, Jimmy finds the shack one of the handsomest estates in a colony of millionaires, but he does not take immediate possession, for the gambler's daughter is in possession and she has not yet learned of her father's loss. He serves as her chauffeur, but in time the situation rights itself.

For the Program: A play of admirably sustained suspense.
The turn of the card showed the queen of hearts.

Advertising Phrases: Forced into a fortune.
